EGYPT'S WAR.

troops to be led against Arabi, is so obvious and the skill of Gen. Wolseley so often proved it is certain some sufficient military reason must exist to account for the delay in making and back of the left car. He lived but a short an advance.

Telegrams from the seat of war in Egypt the 12th, stated that the whole British army had commenced a forward movement. Gen. Wolseley had left camp in order to arrange for a general attack. Everything in the way of preparations indicated a general attack and decisive battle. The British line of communication between Ismaila, Nefische, Tel el Mahuta, and Mahsomeh was held by detachments of infantry with one gun and a group of cavalry at each place.

On the 13th a fierce battle took place at Tel el Kebir, where Arabi Pasha has so long been fortifying, between Arabi's forces and the British, which resulted in the complete route of the Egyptians and the capture of their fortifications. In his official report of the battle Gen. Wolseley says: "We advanced upon the very extensive and very strongly fortified position held by Arabi Pasha with 20,000 regulars, of whom 2,500 were cavalry, with seventy-five guns and 6,000 Bedouins and irregulars. My force was about 11,000 bayonets, 2,000 sabres and sixty guns. All the enemy's works and camps are now in our possession. THE LATEST.

At Des Moines, Iowa, the other afternoon, John James, a grocer, was assaulted in his store and knocked down and robbed of $900, by a man named Harris. While the assailant was stooping over the prostrate form of his victim rifling his pockets, customers came in and gave chase. The villain was captured and lodged in jail, and when it became known that Mr. James' injuries were likely to prove fatal. a mob of about 1,000 persons went to the jail for the purpose of hanging Harris. The display was under the auspices of the Land Department of the Union Pacific Rallway, Kansas Division, and occupied a space along the north side of the Agricultural Hall of about seventy-five feet. The different samples of wheat, oats, barley, rye, corn, vegetables, fruit, etc., were tastefull arranged, and the visitor saw samples of this year's crop of such size and beauty as to fairly bewilder him. There were samples of sixty-five different grasses, native to Kansas. The display excelled all others in variety, quality and quantity, except as to wheat, and in this equaled that of the best wheat districts of the Northwest. The youngest veteran who attended the reunion during the State Fair was J. Sullivan, of Shawnee county. He entered the army when he was eleven years and two months old, and served with Sherman all the way on his famous march to the sea.

When captured he had $600 in his possession, the stealing of $150 of which he confessed. He offered $500 to the officer if he would let him escape, but he was jailed. Recently while Wm. Spencer, a Leavenworth druggist, and Miss Sue Aller, daughter of State Senator Aller, were driving in a buggy between Leavenworth and the Fort, their horse ran away and plunged off the south approach to the bridge on the drive over the Kansas Central Railway cut, carrying the buggy and occupants to the track thirty feet below. When help reached them Miss Aller was apparently dead and Spencer barely alive, but the lady soon after showed signs of life. Medical examination showed that there was scarcely any hope for her and but little more for him. The horse was instantly killed by the fall.

The State Board of Agriculture has completed a new computation respecting the oat yield in the State. The revised reports indicate an average yield of thirty-five bushels per acre, which will make a total product of 18,300,000 bushels. The acreage this year is upwards of 500,000, an increase of 54 per cent over that of 1881. One year only has ever exceeded 1882 in this respect. The crop of 1878 was a very satisfactory one, and in 1879 29 per cent more ground was put under oats. but the yield was a light one. The lattter is the year alluded to as baving an excess of acreage. The Springfield (Mass.) Republican says:

"Two years ago the country gave the Republican party another chance. It sees how that chance has been used. It sees the party leadership given to Robeson and Keifer. It sees an extravagant and in great measure incilicient session. It sees tariff reform dodged and Civil-service Reform laughed at. It sees the offensive and despicable tax on office-holders enforced, with new zeal, by the chosen rugleman of the Republican Congressmen. It sees the public money wasted by millions to catch votes in doubtful districts and the public offices handed over as patronage to the Camerons and Logans. All this and the reputable men among the party leaders either assenting or cowell into silence." sent ng or cowe l into silence!"

This is a strong indictment, and coming from such a source extremely significant. It is a frank and fearless Republican acknowledgement that all Republican talk about reform is sheerest bosh. The party is incapable of reform; has not a drop of reform blood in its veins, never has had and never will have. It went into power twenty-one years ago on a platform every plank of which was, so to speak, saturated with reform. What professions and promises they were that floated Lincoln to the Presidency! Such has been the experience of the Republicans of Kentucky. A Washington correspondent informs us that Hubbel's assistance to the Independent Democratic candidate has cost them two if not three Congressmen. That his estimate is not far out of the way is shown by the fact that the Republicans have been sitting in dazed surprise, too utterly flabbergasted even to howl "Fraud!" await, however, Mr. Hubbell's explanation of the cause and extent of the catastrophe, feeling reasonably sure that it will only strengthen him in his belief that it is utter folly to waste money on the Southern Republicans which might be utilized in helping him to wrest the Senatorship from Mr. Ferry, and that the only way to get a Southern Republican into Congress is to count him in at Washington, -N. Resolved, That we, the Democrats of Chase county, in convention assembled, re-affirm our unswering adherence to the timehonored traditions of the party, among which are,

Second, unalterable opposition to a tariff for protection, insisting as the Democracy has always done. on a tariff for revenue only; Third, that gold, silver and greenbacks shall be the only money of the country; Fourth, opposition to sumptuary legislation; and Be it further resolved, That. whereas our county expenses are increasing at an alarming rate, we demand of our county officials a more economical administration of the affairs of the county. WHEREAS, The people living adjacent to herd-law counties are subjected to great annoyance from the incursions of stock from those counties, we, therefore, demand such legislation as will protect the interests of our local stock men.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to a faithful support of the State ticket, as nominated August 30, at Emperia.

Care of Cellars.

Of such importance are cellars, that the loss which occurs in them yearly may be reckoned by millions. Comparatively few housekeepers know how to manage a cellar. It is not enough to keep it clean and orderly. The great lack is in not knowing how to control the temperature. The cooler it is in summer, the better, and the cooler in winter also, short of frost. The next thing to be sought is the uniformity of temperature, not merely to avoid great warmth or frost, but the effect from a change of temperature, which so few understand. How many cellars do we find that are uniformly cool throughout the summer? The reason is, air is allowed freely to enter, and the warmer the weather the more air is invited, keeping up the putrefaction, and making the cellar the foul, disease-engendering place

There is a simple remedy-merely keep the windows open by night when the air is cool, and closed by day when warm. This last is not so important if there is no wind, as the cold air in the cellar, being heavier than warm air, maintains its place, and can only be removed by a current. But the safe way is to close in the morning. This will keep in the cool, fresh air during the day, a little raised in temperature, just suffifresh. As the cellar is not inhabited, the usual carbonic acid gas from respirawithout touching frost. A double foundation wall of the dwelling, with space between for dead air, is a help in keeping out heat and frost, and avoids the necessity of banking the house. So are double sashes instead of single glass in the windows, forming a dead air chamber. Of course the windows are to be well fitted in, so as to exclude the air. Well fitted in, so as to exclude the air.

If there is an outside door, treat it similarly, and use it as little as possible during the heat of the day, especially if there is air stirring. The warmth that comes through the floor of the rooms above has but little effect, as the air below remains where it outers and is the low, remains where it enters, and is the first to pass out with the opening of the windows in the evening. In such a cellar decay makes slow progress, so that with the renewal of fresh air no apartment in the dwelling has purer air. Things are kept sweet and wholesome, and the great loss from spoiling is avoided. The cost to secure this is but a trifle. There are numerous cellars that, with a little outlay, can be made not only secure and profitable, but healthy. Any time is a good time to do it—early in spring the best, as then the cellar can be thoroughly cooled and kept so. But it pays to do it now. Exciting Scene in Mid-Ocean.

A correspondent who was a passenger by the steamship Decca, which left Madras for London on the 1st ult., sends from Aden an interesting account of an exciting scene which he witnessed during a storm in the Indian Ocean. The vesse encountered the monsoon a few days after leaving Colombo, and had a rough time of it until the 17th ult., when the gale came so violent that canvas had to be taken in, awnings furled, and things made as snug as possible.

The correspondent describes what followed: "I came on deck at 6 a m.; it was blowing fiercely, and the spray coming over the sheets * * * There were three of us on deck when the bell struck—a Miss, a Mr., and myself. We were holding on to our chairs, which were firmly lashed to the inner cabin skylight, under the lee of the ladies' saloon. Part of the crew were working hard to get the starboard lifeboat in-board, when a bigger roll to the windward warned us of what was coming. 'Hold on!' some one shouted. We held on. The chairs rushed forward on their lashings. The deck stood upthe fish; then rub inside and out right. In came the sea, over the gunwale, over the taffrail, up to our waists, lifted the lifeboat out of its shackles, carried it overboard, smashing away stanchions and davits, cry of 'Man overboard!'

"The helm was put down, the engine reversed, and back we went on a search—all the more so as sharks had been seen round the ship earlier in the morning. The boat was presently seen some 200 yards off, keel uppermost. Soon after the two men were observed clinging on to it. Then came an exciting two hours, during which we steamed after the boat, which was drifting rapidly toward the east. But turning a ship like the Dacca is a and two of sugar; beat them together and add boiling water until the sauce is of proper thickness, and flavor with lemon and nutmeg.

But turning a simplific a simplification were slow business, and as she hung in the wind's eye, a jib was hoisted to bring her round. By the time this was done the boat, with its pitiful looking crew, was away two miles and more to leeward, and we were rolling heavily and unmanagable. At last the Captain decided to lower a boat, and the order was given, 'Stand by the boat,' and soon after 'lower.' 'Who is going in her?' he shouted.

"The First Officer, Mr. Ingram, sprang over the side, caught hold of the davit ropes and slipped down, but just as he got near her a great roll of the ship lifted him clear of the boat twenty feet in the air. As he came down again the boat had drifted forward, and he was plunged down in the boiling sea for five or six seconds. Up he came again as the ship beeled over, still hanging on, and missed by an ace having his skull smashed against the small boat's side. It was really a terrible sight, and we shuddered as we looked on, the boat all the while being lashed up and down by the violence of the waves. But at last his opportuni-ty came, and he dropped into the stern. At once he was followed by the boat-But at last his opportuniswain, two firemen, and two European sailors, the native crew hanging shamefully back. One of the passengers, a the officer in charge would not accept a passenger's services while men of the crew could be got. At last the boat shoved off and the oars were got out, and in a terrible sea they set out for the missing boat. Directed by the motions of a man aloft, they got alongside her and took the men aboard. Then began a hard row back.

a hard row back. "We lost sight of her again and again, wondering how she could live in such a sea. But still she held on, and got at last under our lee. By the help of a case of oil scattered over the waves, they were comparatively stilled, a ladder was let down, and when the last man stepped on board such a cheer greeted him as told him what we thought of his pluck and that of the gallant fellows with him. Capt. Burkitt was perfectly cool the whole time, and managed his ship with great skill. When the first officer got a change of clothes and came down to the cabin, he received all kinds of congratulations, and his health was drunk in bumpers of champaign. Aboukir.

On two occasions in modern warfare Aboukir has been rendered famous and historical, and now there is a fair pros-pect that it will be famous and historical a third time. Following the railway line which skirts the Mediterranean shore from Alexandria the traveler proceeds through Ramleh, and thence past several insignificant fishing villages, the chief of which is El Mandara, until he reaches the point of Aboukir, at a distance of between thirteen and fourteen miles from what was once the Grande Place of Alexandria. Close to the promontory stands the village of Aboukir, and not far from that somewhat squalid place are the ruins of the ancient Canopus, though few strangers ever take the trouble to find these, notwithstanding that once upon a time they formed a conspicuous feature of the former Delta. From the promontory of Aboukir the bay of the same name stretches in a Northeasterly semi-circle and terminates in a sharp horn at the Rosetta mouth of the Nile. bay is not a pleasant place nowadays for the navigators of big ships. Its waters are clear and blue, and in the more open portions of the bay contain a depth varying from six to eight fathoms; but here and there are treacherous shoals, which, to avoid, require the mariner's greatest skill and caution. Running in shore, not far from the village of Aboukir, there is a formidable sand bank; then again, there is a reef of rocks known as the Culloden reef, and the next obstacle is an island, sometimes called Aboukir island and sometimes Nelson's island. This island is now strongly fortified, and at intervals around the circumference of the bay there is a line of four forts, and, doubtless, several earthworks, which Arabi Bey's men have had time to erect before and since the evacuation of Alex-

"In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a violent bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the city hos; ital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. Wm. Ha I's Balsam for the Lungs. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when, to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and today, I feel in better spirits than I have for three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, and be convinced that consumption can be cured. I have taken two bottles, and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared, and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by all druggists.

How gratifying to the invalid husband to know that willing hands smooth he pillow; willing hands prepare his food and gire him medicine, and that willing hearts are praying for his recovery. God bless the women! Sad it is when the wife is ill; sad it is when her health breaks down. Husbands who love their wives will provide them with Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It is the best medicine in the world for curing all female complaints, and strengthening the female system. There is to be a wedding soon, the way to which was paved with so much delicate ingenuity by the lady in the case that it is worth recording. The gentleman had been an accepted suitor for months, but hid never even remotely alluded to the wedding day, and the ledy, tired with so much waiting, made up her mind to prompt him a little on the first favorable occasion. It happened in this way: They were sitting in the garden, and as was his custom he was making himself agreeable by gallant speeches, in one of which he alluded to her as "darling." He emphasized the name by a tender pressure of the hand, and remarked that "darling" was the sweetest word in the English language for him. "Do you think so?" she asked in a tremulous voice; "there is another name that to me is far sweeter." "What is it, darling?" asked the lover, rapturously. "Just a little word of four letters—wife"—she answered, with a gentle confusion, and there was nothing left for him but to ask her to decide the day when he might call her by her favorite name.—Detroit Post. THERE is to be a wedding soon, the way to troit Post.

My chief prescription for languor, debility, irregularities, painful periods, dyspepsia and other complications of general weakness, ill-health, impure blood, etc., is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. I think it should be called the Queen of Female Medicines!" A MAN in Iowa has invented a new fasten-A MAN in Jowa has invented a new rasten-ing for horse-collars. It is lucky that the horse's collar does not fasten to a button in the back of his shirt, because if it did, judg-ing from human experience, when it flew off after he had broken his thumb-nail trying to crowd it into a new button-hole, he would just kick the stuffing out of anything he was hitched to, even if it was a freight-car.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

"Another velvet season is one of the certainties announced thus early by the mer-chants. The best service is given by the close, short pile velvets, such as the Nonpareil Velveteen, which is not easily marred or crushed. The Nonpareil Velveteen is found in all the stylish new shades, and when made up, with the pile turne i upward, it cannot be distinguished from silk velvet. The difference in the price makes a garment cost about onethird as much as f made of Lyon's silk velvet."-From Harper's Bazar, September 2. To be purchased from all first-class dry goods retailers.
