One Sunday morning in autumn, Father Searle brought his breeches down from the garret, but the wasps had taken possession during the summer, and were having a nice time of it in them. By dint of effort he got out the intruders and dressed for meeting. But, while reading the Scriptures to the congregation, he felt a dagger from the enraged small waisted fellows, and jumped around the pulpit, slapping his thighs. But the more he slapped and danced, the more they stung. The people thought him crazy, but he explained the matter by saying: "Breth-ren, don't be alarmed; the word of the Lord is in my mouth, but the devil is in my breeches!" Webster always told it with great glee to the ministers.

COUNTING THE COST.

"Are you intending to buy a new sleigh this winter," asked a mechanic of Charles Wallace, as he met him on the street. "I have not decided yet. Why?" "I have some good ones on hand, and will sell you one at a bargain. Come and see them." "If I conclude to purchase I will give you a call." "I will give you time—if you have not the money just now; can wait three or six months, if you like; glad to accommodate you."

commodate you."
"Well, I'll think about it." Charles Wallace was a young man just started in life. He had bought a snug little farm, with a cozy cottage and good out-buildings, and brought his young wife there, to help him enjoy his new home. He paid eight hundred dollars down and gave a mortgage for the other thousand dollars, to be paid in yearly installments of two hundred dollars principal, and the interest on the remainder. Ellen had a little money that she earned in teaching school, and months. "That has to be done, Charley, and we must not sell the stock either; it would be like killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

'Have you sent for your parlor furniture yet?" "No, I was in no hurry; we should not use the room half a dozen times through the winter; so I put the wool money into the bank till I needed it." "We had good luck with our poultry; that brought us a hundred and fifteen dollars; but I have to pay some out of that. How large a store bill have we, the gesture is as fluent as ever. But the do you suppose, Ellen?"

"I have no store bill, Charley, or any other bill to pay. I have sold eggs and butter for groceries."

"I owe something for nails; perhaps a dozen dollars or so. Then there is twenty-five dollars yet on the sewing machine. 'Yes; and is there not a balance due on the pigs, or have you paid it?"

"No; ten dollars there! And twenty dollars more on the colt; and say ten dollars to the blacksmith?" "Anything else that you think of,

Charley?" "My boots! Three and a half! Let me see; it seems as if there was something more. Yes, you know I got a meat barrel and a water tub; six more!" "It will take about all the poultry money to pay these bills, and I would pay them right away."

ness are we going to raise the other hundred and sixty dollars?"

"There is the money for the wool, and fifty dollars of the butter money; and I reckon, Charley, you can earn twenty or thirty dollars in three months."

"But, Ellen, you want a new dress or two!

"No, thank you, I am very well off now. You never asked me what I did with the money that you gave me when your checks came for the butter, and as did not need it for household expenses, I thought it best to save it to help pay off the mortgage, for I am in a hurry to get that off our home, so that we can feel independent."

"You are a dear little prudent woman, and I am as happy as I can be to see my way clear!"

"As happy as if you were riding in Jones' sleigh with a lien on it?"

"If you had said one word in favor of it I should have howeth it Ellen I had spring." The next day Jones saw Wallace and urged him to buy one of his new sleighs. "No," he replied, "I am not intending to buy a new one this season."

"If I had done as well as you have this year," said the other, "I would have a handsome turn-out to give my wife a ride in once in a while."

"My wife would not enjoy riding in a sleigh that was not paid for, and I shall not buy one till I can pay for it. I am going to pay for my farm and home be fore I dash out in much style, and my wife feels as I do about it."

That night Jones was in the store, and made the remark that Charles Wallace would be a rich man by the time he was forty, for he had a sensible woman for a wife, and he had common sense himself, -Farmer's Wife, in Country Gentleman Gambetta.

Gambetta remains, in truth, perfectly simple and democratic in his habits. He she furnished the house, as far as she could, without running in debt. She was a sensible girl, and preferred buying fifty sheep to furnishing the parlor.

M. Gambetta at fortytwo has the prematurely aged look of a man who had made in youth heavy drains on his mental resources. Far from appearing like a man in his prime. he looks like one who has passed it some time since. The figure is heavy and obese, although Gambetta's movements face in repose wears a habitually fatigued expression. It is when he speaks that his Italian fervor returns to him. His greatest personal charm now is to be found in his voice, that wonderful, stirring, magnetic voice, whose sonorous qualities seem to belong peculiarly to itself. It has in it the piercing, puis-sant vibrations of a fine brass instrument, making the air thick and yet sweet with sound. Gambetta's intonations are such also that he seems to add something to the "delicate idiom of Paris." He imparts to its lightness and grace an indefinable but noticeable quality of richness and depth.

The French Chamber of Deputies is commonly a much more unmanageable body than the American House of Representatives. M. Gambetta's method of governing the House in a fractious mood was such as one might expect from one of his excitable temperament. His bell and his ivory paper-cutter—an instrument which he used in preference to the gavel-were the weakest of his scepters of authority. When the excited buzz of voices reached a deafening pitch, M. Gambetta's own voice "them!" rung out like a clarion, or thundered like an angry god's. The Legislature should, by al means, meet in extra session to reapportion the Congressional Dis tricts. We want no Congressmen at Large. We have a Governor at large, and that is about as much as we can stand just now.

THE INDIAN RAID OF 1864. WOODHULL, CHASE Co., KAS., Feb. 20, 1882. To the Editor of the Courant:

The pen may be mightier than the sword, that is, when civilized nations are in war; but when the Red man of the West wants blood the pen is not thought of, and, of course, it becomes necessary to use sword, musket, mountain howitz ers, or even an old flint-lock rifle better.

I believe it was in August, 1864. that Cow Creek Ranch was surrounded by Kiowa, Arapahoe and Cheyenne Indians. There was, also, a wagon train about a mile from the ranch, and they, also, were surrounded. There were about twenty hve wagons in the outfit, and they were formed in a kind of circle or corral; and the stock was kept inside of this corral, while every teamster would be under his wagon watching the first providing he would come close enough. All day the skirmish was kept up, and at night it was supposed the Indians would withdraw; but the next day it proved to be altogether different; the I dians still kept up the fight, and it became necessary for the men in the wagon train to dig for water, and they sunk a well in the middle of

I suppose, Mr. Elitor, that you know what a monstrous size a story will be when it reaches its destination. It was reported that there were ten thousand Indians coming. and that they were going to kil everybody in the settlement, and burn Council Grove; and that the noted Kiowa Chief, Santanta, was leading them. The name Santanta was enough to scare the settlers. They had heard of his cruel murders along the Santa Fe trail. He was very treacherous, and the very sound of his name was enough to make one's blood chill. How rap idly the news spread of their approach! Col. S. N. Wood was Brigadier General of the Multia, and be sent an order to Col. W. S. Smith, of Cottonwood Falis, to have his men ready for action. Col. Smith made no delay, but went to work in military style and issued an order for all men able for action to make preparations to march to the front to meet the en-

They were nearly all mounted on their horses before they discovered their mistake. No doubt if the Colonel could have tound out who made the false alarm he would have given him a drum-head court-martial.

That night before tattoo the Colonel issued an order for his regiment to be ready to start back home by daylight. No doubt the Colonel ordered the forced march to save the fields of the few settlers on the frontier and his name as a military man; but things looked the real cause of the seeming ineffigloomy; a mutiny raised in the cacy of the prohibition law. regiment, which could not be suppressed. Finally the regiment Government be removed from broke up, and every fellow went around the traffic as the State's has his own road home; but what became of J. S. Doolittle, A. S. Howand and E. W. The Agricultural Productions of United States.

The annual report of the Commissionr of Agriculture for the year 1880, based on the census enumeration for that year and upon the reports and estimates of the Agricultural Bureau, has been issued. It comprises a large amount of interesting information.

The facts and data respecting the products of the country are valuable, if reliable. At all events they are the most complete and satisfactory attainable. The report shows where the greatest agricultural interests are located and the relative position of the States as to every character of agricultural production. The year 1880 was nearly an average one. The season was about equally favorable to all sections. A compilation from the report gives the aggregate value of the productions of each State, embracing corn, wheat, Horses, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, potatoes, tobacco, cotton, sugar and of all existing live stock, based on the prices pre-vailing in December, 1880. The following tables show the result: MAINE.

-Old customs still prevail to a great extent in the northern and western por-tions of England. In the north, es-pecially amid the great Black Country they are almost universal, while in the Midlands and the south they seem to have disappeared. Many of these customs come within the category of apperstitions. In the north no child's nails are ever cut on a Sunday; no innails are ever cut on a Sunday; no infant's nails are cut until it has attained the age of one year, but are bitten; the inside of a child's hands are never washed until three weeks after birth; infants, before they are carried down stairs, are always taken up stairs, in order to insure their course in the world upward; no child is shown itself in the glass, or its teething process will be painful; cake is always given to the first person met on the road to the christening; marriage should never be performed on a Saturday, but always, if possible, on a Wednesday; the person who sleeps first on a wedding-night will die first, as will the person who kneels first at the marriage expension. kneels first at the marriage ceremony. INDULGENT parents who allow their children to eat heartily of high-seasoned food, rich pies, cake, &c., will have to use Hop Bitters to prevent indigestion, sleepless nights, sickness, pain, and, perhaps, death. No family is safe without them in the house.

The Best Remedy for Chapped Hands Is Hegeman's Camphor Iee. It should be rubbed upon the part affected. If the hands are badly chapped apply every night and protect the hauds by wearing an old pair of kid gloves. Hegeman's is the best and most popular of all the camphor ices made. Hegeman's Camphor Iee is also a cure for sore lips, chapped face and sunburn. It is compounded with glycerine, which renders it more emolient than any other camphor ice, and it will be found a most soothing application to the face after shaving.

Be sure to ask for Hegeman's (formerly made by Hegeman & Co., New York, and now made by the Metropolitan Med. Co., of New Haven, Conn.), and do not be put off with any other compound, which may become rancid and do you more harm than good. Hegeman's Camphor Ice never fails. The Best Remedy for Chapped Hands

The Egyptian Rat Destroyer Is the best preparation ever devised for the extermination of these troublesome vermin and all other insects, bugs, roaches, etc.

There Cripples Are Relieved

Mr. Quigley, of Cameron, Mo., has had a son badly crippled from white swelling of the knee joints. He is now under treat-ment as Drs. Dickerson & Stark's Surgical Institute at Kansas City, and is rapidly recovering. Ten Years' Experience

THOSE trying to break up the baneful Those trying to break up the baneful habit of intemperance will experience great benefit from the use of Leis' Dandelion Tonic. It restores the brain, stomach and liver to healthy action and strengthens the will power. There is nothing that will so quickly efface the ravages of a long course of debauchery. It is recommended by many leading temperance advocates both east and west.

PURE Cod Liver Oll, from selected livers, on the sea shore, by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York. Absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians declare it superior to all other oils.

CHAPPED HANDS, face, pimples and rough skin cured by using Juniper Tar Soap, made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York.

THE Chinese must go, and all Americans should go—and buy a bottle of Carboline, the deodorized petroleum hair renewer and dresser. Since the recent improvement, no preparation ever had such a sale or gave such general satisfaction as Carboine Soid by all druggists.

For the delicate and complicated diffi-culties peculiar to the female constitution, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the sovereign remedy. It aims at the cause, and produces lasting results. Send to Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, 233 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass., for pamphlets.

COCAL SHORT STOPS.

Buggies Cheaper than Saddles.

Why? Because, with improved machinery cow-a-days, a good, substantial buggy can be made for fifty dollars, about the cost of two saddles. Two persons can ride in one buggy and save you one horse, consequently saddles have nearly gone out of existence. For particulars send for an illustrated catalogue, mailed free on application. Address, Enterprise Carriage Manufacturing Company, Cincinnati, Q.
