TIMELY TOPICS.

The second annual congress of German numismatists has just been held at Dresden, under the presidency of Dr. Erbstein. At the same time an exhibition was opened of coins now in use throughout the world, which is said to have been the most complete collection of the kind ever seen.

The system of underground telegraphy devised by Dr. Stephan, postmaster general of Germany, is now completed. On March 14, 1876, the first line of cable from Berlin to Halle was commenced, and on June 26, 1881, the system was finished by laying the cable from Cologne to Aix-la-Chapelle. In fifty-eight months eighteen lines have been laid, comprising 5,304 miles of cable. The eighteen lines connect 221 towns, including the most important places of commerce and chief fortifications of the German empire.

Most of the titled houses of England are of comparatively modern date. The real old families of the country are the squires and small landed gentry and yeomen. Their descent and possessions have in scores upon scores of cases been unbroken for 500 or even 800 years, whereas the unlimited power of a prime minister, or sovereign to create a new peer has constantly introduced into the upper house men but a few removes from trade or the professions. Of the entire 41 families whose heads have seats as peers of England, only 77 existed as nobles in 1707, when the union of England and Scotland took place, 341 having been raised to the peerage, exclusive of the last batch, since that date. The Irish peers are of still lower caste, a miserable crew of rascals, mostly dating from the corruption of the union.

The main feature of Mr. D'Oyley Carte's new theater in London, the Savoy, is that it is lit by the electric light. The peculiar steel blue color and flicker, which are inevitable in all systems of arc lights, make them unsuitable for use in any but very large buildings, but the invention of the incandescent lamp has now paved the way for the application of electricity to lighting houses. The arc light is simply a continuous electric spark, and is nearly the color of lightning, whereas the incandescent light is produced by heating a filament of carbon to white heat, and is much the color of gas; the current is easily controllable, and the lights can be raised or lowered at will. The new light is not only used in the audience part of the theater, but on the stage and even in the dressing rooms. To provide against contingency, gas is laid on.

The importation of live stock and fresh meat over the Atlantic was never so active as at present. The Iowa, the Victoria, the Toronto, the Manitoba, the Campania, the Bulgaria, and the Mississippi landed in one week alone, recently, at Liverpool, between them, 6,210 head of live stock for butchers' purposes, while seven other steamers landed 5,082 carcasses of frozen beef and over 600 carcasses of mutton. These carcasses, purchased in America for 7 cents the pound, were sold for 10 cents the pound. The attempts recently made by some London firms to get up a corner case to nothing, not on account of the perishable nature of the article as much as widely distributed competition and the impossibility of getting the ring sufficiently extensive to cover the whole market.

A VENETIAN gondolier descends generally from a long line of ancestors, who were for centuries boatmen. A gondolier costs about $200. The father lays by, week after week a small sum in order to buy his son one, and thus start him in life. The gondolier costs about $60 per annum in repairs. The owner pays a tax to the municipality, according to the station to which he is allotted, and he is obliged to be there not only every day, but every third night. During the summer months he gains $1 per diem; in winter almost nothing. When the gondolier goes home he has to cook and engage in other domestic avocations for his family. His wife, dressed in rags, with her hair in disorder, and a pair of old slippers on her feet, sits on the door step looking to her husband to find her in polenta, and to cook it for her when earned. The food of the family, when they have food, consists of polenta and a handful of small fish, so small, indeed, that nothing remains of them except bones and skin when dried. On feast days, if the gondolier has been fortunate, they eat a little rice. This, however, is an exceptional luxury, for rice is dearer than polenta. And yet these men are able to row without any apparent effort for many hours every day. They are well set, strong and muscular, and their unkempt wives seem to be in the rudest of health. Physically, intellectually and morally, they compare advantageously with the descendants of the dogs.

NEWS IN A NUT SHELL.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD.

The Cream of the Two Hemispheres Carefully Condensed and Classified—An Interesting Budget of Personal and Miscellaneous Information.

Washington.
It was rumored in Washington that E. Root, of New York had been tendered and had accepted the office of district attorney for the District of Columbia, now held by C. K. Williams. The rumor says his commission will soon be signed, thus enabling him to open the proceedings in the Gutzwiller trial.

Personal and Political.
A VENERABLE citizen of Elkhorst, Wisconsin, named William Patterson, fainting in the aisle of St. John's church and killed himself by striking a pew.

REV. DR. Z. M. HUMPHREY died in Cincinnati. The funeral will be held in Chicago, and the sermon will be preached by Dr. Morris of Lane seminary.

The commission of Peter C. Shannon as chief justice of Dakota expires with this month. All the leading lawyers of Yankton have filed in the department of justice at Washington complaints of his arbitrary action, which will prevent his reappointment.

REV. O. B. FROTHINGHAM, the leader of the free-thinkers of the United States, who found himself gravitating toward materialism, has concluded to stop denying the truth of christianity, but is not yet prepared to make a full recantation of his heterodox views.

PATRICK A. COLLINS, president of the Irish land league of America, in a manifesto says the call for a national convention at Chicago is a summons to the entire race and all its friends. All branch leagues are urged to elect the full number of delegates, and to select the best at a wisest men.

General Foreign Notes.
DR. FALK has been selected to represent Wurttemberg in the German reichstag, by a sweeping majority.

A gas house at Hamburg, Germany, was wrecked by an explosion, three persons having been killed and six injured.

By the explosion of gas in a sulphur mine at Gessoluzzo, Italy, forty persons were killed and forty-one wounded.

A DISPATCH from Odessa says the railroad traffic in Central Russia is greatly impeded by the snow, which has prevented sowing winter wheat, especially in the government of Kharkoff.

In the case of Arthur Lefroy of London, who murdered Mr. Gold in a railway carriage, the jurors consulted but ten minutes to agree on a verdict of guilty, and the judge passed sentence of death.

At a conserved banquet at Bristol the Marquis of Salisbury insisted upon the right of Irish landlords for compensation, saying that the sub-commissioners were appointed because of their favoring the governmental policy.

An Irish farmer in County Kerry was dragged from his bed by a band of armed men, and when he resisted being dragged to his tent he was fired at five times, being severely wounded. A land owner named Curtin was taken from his house at Mount Mary, beaten, and compelled to stop proceedings for the eviction of a tenant.

The East.
A GENTLEMAN in Loudon county, Vermont, has given $25,000 to found a home for destitute children.

A COLLISION of Erie freight trains on the mountains near Fort Jervis, New York, caused the death of Conductor George Dorr and Engineer Jerome Grover and Mark Coxson.

The Massachusetts Paper company of Springfield, Massachusetts, have failed, with liabilities at $300,000, because of attachments served by the Kansas City Paper company and others.

ANOTHER river accident is reported, in which ten lives were lost. A small ferryboat, plying between Troy and West Troy, New York, capsized. The accident was caused by the boat being overloaded.

The exercises of the graduating class of the United States naval training squadron were concluded with a successful man battle at Coasters' Harbor island, Rhode Island. The evolutions were witnessed by a number of naval officers.

The West.
THE losses by the recent flood in the region of Quincy, Illinois, are estimated at $3,000,000.

The explosion of four hundred pounds of powder in the Quincy mine on Lake Superior, killed two men and a boy.

JOSEPH MYERS, of Toledo, hanged himself with the same rope used by his father in committing suicide three months ago.

In view of the presence of twelve or more cases of small pox, the board of health of Fort Wayne will establish war boundaries.

THERE are said to be sixty nine cases of small pox at New Orleans, a Washington Territory, and several deaths have occurred.

A BOAT fight for $200 took place Sunday on the grounds of Fort Leavenworth, before 300 spectators, and lasted three hours.

M. C. GORDON, a dry goods merchant of Columbus, Georgia, has failed, his liabilities being over $60,000.

WILLIAM HUGHES, a soldier of the Fifth artillery, hanged himself in the post prison at McPherson barracks, Atlanta.

JOSEPH GREEN, a young lawyer of New Orleans, attempted to fight a duel with Gutzwiller, the son of the leading rabbi of that city, in the lower part, but the principals and seconds were tamed by the police and locked up.

FAMILY PLATE.
How a Bank Cashier Was Moved by a Tale of Misfortune.

A sharp game was, some time ago, played upon a bank cashier of one of the leading banks in this city, the facts of which have but recently come to light. One morning in early spring, with the full influence of budding and blossoming nature upon him, the cashier had taken his seat behind his desk, when he was approached by an attorney at law, whose countenance was sorrowful, and warned the experienced eye of the financier of an early application for a loan. He thereupon hardened his heart and made up his mind to say no. After greeting him in a dejected and subdued manner, the attorney began to make known his business. With tears in his eyes the lawyer told him that the death of a near relative, involving heavy expense, and a failure of remittances, as well as poor paying clients, had reduced him to the necessity of taking a step which only dire ill fortune could reconcile him to. He wished a loan of $400 for a few days only, and he would offer as security a box of family plate and sundry heirlooms which had been handed down from generation to generation. He produced a receipt signed by the secretary of the Safe Deposit company, showing payment of storage fees for nearly a year in advance on a box containing plate of the value of $2,000. The lawyer said to the cashier, as he wiped his tearful eyes: "I put a very low value on this, for I am too poor to pay high storage rates. I never thought that I would come to this, but I must. If it is of no use, I'll pay the loan in ten days, though I am driven to sell my wife's diamonds." The cashier pitied the high bred sorrow and felt for the scion of a noble house in misfortune, and then, thinking of the box of family plate, concluded to make the loan. The key of the box was handed over to him and the borrower, with many and profound expressions of gratitude, walked out with the money in his pocket. The note was placed in the drawer and forgotten. A few months elapsed and the bank changed its officers, and the incoming manager, among other assets, discovered the note with the family plate collateral.

He at once sent for the box, and, opening it, discovered that its valuable contents consisted of eighteen volumes of patent office reports, about twenty old newspapers, a plated cester and cako basket, all of which would sell for about $4. The revelation created much profanity on the part of the new management and a good joke at the expense of the cashier, who had been so nicely done for.

Of course, as the borrower was a man of no property, nothing could be done except to beat the loss as philosophically as possible. But the cashier, who has now retired, has never heard the end of it, and in the bank a loan is spoken of as a "family plate loan."

FOR THE CHILDREN.

A Work Basket and the Many Pretty Things in it.

It was a red and white Indian basket, with a nest for the thimble, and pockets for the spoons and buttons.

Mamma gave it to Nellie when she was 7 years old, and put into it a pretty needle book and pin cushion, from her own basket, and some spoons and a bit of wax, and a thimble, and a pair of scissors.

Nellie said she would "keep it as nice as any thing," and no doubt she meant to, but one day she had been struggling with a piece of sewing, and had broken one needle, and lost another, and scratched her fingers with a third, so she threw down her work and ran away to play with her dear doll.

"I wish she had put me back in the needle book, instead of striking me in this cushion, and with a bit of thread in my eye, too," said the needle. "I shall be twisted away and lost, and she will not even miss me."

"I shall miss you," said the needle book. "My head needle was broken today, and another lost, and now you. My leaves will be empty before long."

"I, too, wish she had put you in the needle book," said the cushion. "I am only meant for pins. They know just how far to go, or if they forget, their heads stop them. But you needles, you sink, sink, sink into my wool and never come out. It is not your fault, I know, but it is bad for me. I had to be pulled to pieces, once, and 157 needles were 'round in my wool. I was covered with blue tears. This red and black cover makes me feel like another cushion."

"You and I were mates, made of the same blue silk," said the needle book. "How pleasant it was when we lived together in the mamma's basket. Each shared in the work. First a spoon, then the wax, then the needle, and the scissors, and the pins. All helped."

"Yes," said the cushion. "I remember it well. Those were comfortable times. But this child, Nellie! One never knows what to expect from her."

"Expect to be destroyed," said the thimble, in a hollow voice. "Look at me! Trodden on, rocked on, bitten, pinched, lost in the ashes, dropped out of the window, played with by a kitten—"

"Oh, that kitten, how she snarls us!" said the spoons, in a rage.

"See the marks of her teeth in my side," said the wax. "Somebody sting her, as the bees do."

"I've a mind to cut off her whiskers," said the scissors.

"Do it do it," then," exclaimed the whole company.

"Scalp her," said the basket. "That's what the Indians do."

"Oh no," cried the company.

"As you please, then," said the basket, and fell into a gloomy silence.

"Were you ever in mamma's basket?" inquired the cushion of the scissors.

"My dear fellow, I've been everywhere," replied the scissors. "I've been in the kitchen, in the cook's drawer, I've cut paper in the play room, and have been left there and forgotten for my pains. I've been taken to school. I've lain rusting in the garden ages. She took me out to cut a rosebud. I was willing enough to go, but when I had cut the bud, she dropped me as though I burned her fingers, and ran away. I should be there now, if Michael had not found me."

"I was left on the window sill one day," said the wax; "and a dear old friend came to see me—a bee. He buzzed round and round me, and said he wished he could take me to his hive. I wished so, too, for I used to live in a hive."

Here there appeared through the crack in the door a soft, furry paw, and then the mate to it; then some white whiskers and a little pink nose; and at last, with a bound, that dreadful kitten.

Half way across the room she stopped in her mad career and made a frantic effort to catch her tail. Then creeping along stealthily like the panther, she sprang at the basket.

"Please, don't," said the needle, but it was too late, the kitten dragged it away by the thread and, after roughly hustling it about awhile, left it in a dark corner, and came back for something else.

The spoons she neatly scooped out from their pockets, one by one, with her little paw, raced and chased them round the legs of the table, till they were hopelessly tangled and knotted.

Then stretching herself out on the carpet she closed one eye and pretended to be asleep, but watched the basket with the other eye, in order to catch it if it should attempt to run away.

As it did not, she made another bound at it, and, alighting on the edge, turned it upside down, spilling out all of its occupants.

This accident alarmed the kitten, so that she hastily retired under the table and stayed there some time still watching the basket.

THE FARMER'S COLUMN.

The Desirability of Giving Stock Proper Shelter—Other Hints.

Now that another winter is approaching and will soon be upon us, we beseech our farmers, especially western and southern farmers, to prepare better modes of feeding their stock, and better shelter for protecting their animals from exposure to wet weather, cold and storms than they have hitherto had.

When cattle, sheep and horses are fed by throwing their feed on the ground, to be trampled over, be it never so hard and clean, more or less of it is necessarily wasted. When the ground is wet, especially if it be muddy, the loss sustained is simply ruinous. The first thing to be provided is dry and convenient racks and mangers, where grain, hay, fodder and straw can be kept clean. Stock will then eat all that is fit for animal food. The refuse can be used for bedding, serving at once to keep them clean and consequently add to their comfort. This done, the manure can be saved to be applied to future crops, and not allowed to scatter in lanes and roads and finally find its way into branches and streams, to be washed off and lost. Along with such feeding places should come shelters, not fences, straw piles, or wind breaks of any kind (though these are better than bleak prairies), but roofs and walls, which will shield the animals from the wind. These can be made, and made to secure future profit, even on prairie farms, where timber of all kinds is comparatively dear. But when there are farms where more timber goes to waste annually than serves to keep up fences and fuel, and where there is an abundance left to build sheds, stables and some good barns, it is absolutely criminal not to have shelters for every kind of live stock. Besides, there is profit in having these shelters. Every body knows, who knows enough to feed a cow properly, that an animal will perish in a long winter when unsheltered, even if given sufficient food to keep a similar animal in good flesh, if it has good shelter. Thus, frequently, animals are lost in March and April, and the food they have consumed is lost with them, for the lack of a cheap shelter. Animal heat is animal food converted into blood, flesh, hide and hair, passing off as these are continually changed. But more than all, the insensible perspiration through the pores of the skin carries away a very large per cent of the heat produced by the consumption and conversion of food into nutriment. No body doubts that it requires more food to keep an unsheltered animal warm, than is required for the same animal if well sheltered. Hence, this excess of food is just so much food (the equivalent of money) thrown away—lost. Now, let our farmers go to work to prepare racks, mangers and shelters for their stock, and save this excess of food, this uselessly wasted money, and have their stock comfortable through the winter that they may come out in the spring healthy, hale and in good flesh. By so doing, they will save twice over the annual cost of building sheds, stables, and barns and keeping them in repair.

Useful for the Perusal of all Good Housewives.
[New York Evening Post.]

"Mamma," called out a little boy the other night, after he had been snugly tucked up in bed, and was supposed to be far on the way toward sleep—"mamma, I'm afraid my blouse hangs by the window, and it puts things in my mind that frightens me!"

"You are not afraid when you know it is your blouse that puts the fears in your mind?"

"Yes, and I can't help it, mamma."

There were two ladies sitting in the room below who heard the boy's words. One said: "What won't a child do to get his mother to come up stairs to him? I really think he ought to be punished for making up such a story as that." The other, happily, was the boy's mother, and she said—without going to him: "If you are afraid of the things in your mind you may get out of bed, light your candle, and take the blouse down, you can look after you put the light out and see that there is nothing at the window to frighten a good boy."

She remembered, as if it were but yesterday, a night, a great many years ago, when she lay a trembling, horrified child, whose mother was dead, and there was no one in the wide world to whom she dared to say that the lights and shadows made by the moonlight coming through a broken sash in the blind were so frightful to her that she could not sleep, but lay holding her breath and almost smothering beneath the covers. She felt sure that her own little 6-year-old boy was suffering from this same unreasonable terror, at which he would laugh in the morning when he would awake and see his blue blouse waiting for him. The child, taking his mother's advice and lighting the candle which a kindly freak of fashion allowed him to have, removed the cause of his terror, put out the light and went back to bed, and in a very few minutes a profound silence indicated that he was fast asleep.

One can easily feel sympathy for what may seem an absurd whim in a child if he or she has paid attention to the literature of nervousness, and knows any thing of the many ways in which strong minded men have been afflicted by hallucinations, or have been annoyed as was the old carpenter who, when sick, called his son to his bedside, and asked him to make a shelf that was in his room perfectly true, and when the son remonstrated, he said, with an expression not to be denied: "Foolish's trouble, that shelf must be changed." It is to be deplored that mothers, and all those who have the care of children, do not possess their complete confidence, and so can encourage entire outspokenness, and be enabled by the knowledge thus gained to prevent a morbid condition of the mind, which it may take years to out-grow.

From a Farmer's Wife.
[Detroit Free Press.]

There are so many ways to make the table attractive and food eatable that I wonder more housewives do not practice the little arts, "John B." got one dinner and it was nice. The very description of it made me hungry and my mouth watered as I read it while waiting a moment for my better half to come to his dinner of mashed potatoes, crisp pork, sweet corn, bread and butter, apple pie and tea. I did not have any extras on, for I had been working all the morning and had no maid of all work to wash the dishes and clean up the kitchen, dining room and kitchen after me.

If "John's" dinner tasted as good to her as to her friends, I am surprised, for when my dinners are ready I am too tired and warm to enjoy them. And if she had to commence at New Year's day and get three meals a day all the year, year in and out, as I expect to do as long as I live, she would not have put such a text into my husband's mouth. I know there are a great many things we can do to make our homes pleasant, and I believe in my own family being made comfortable, even if we can not have things in as good style for visitors as we would like.

"John B." is one of my favorites, but I am going to defend my own class, the farmer's wives, for fully half of us are compelled by poverty to do our own housework with what help we can get out of our children. What's that you say, "Miss Pert?" "That you would not marry a man who could not support you?" Well, stay as you are then. I would not change places with any lazy woman. I don't think it is worse for a woman to work than a man.

A good nap of fifteen minutes after I get my dinner work done, rests and refreshes me so much that I can sew comfortably, if it is pretty warm; but I don't believe in wasting my time in puffing and filling, and making my children look like dolls. I would rather play with them, or read.

"I do not read much on the Sabbath, for I think we are to put away worldly thoughts and work on that day, and bring up our children to keep it holy. A parent's example is more to children than mere words.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATIONS.

By the President of the United States of America, a proclamation: It has long been a pious custom of our people with the closing of the year to look upon the blessings brought to them in the changing course of seasons, and to return solemn thanks to the all-giving source from whom they flow; and although at this period when the falling leaf admonishes us that the time of our sacred duty is at hand, our nation still lies in the shadow of great bereavement and mourning which has filled our hearts, and still finds us in sorrowful expression toward the God before Whom we but lately bowed in grief and supplication. Yet the countless benefits which have been showered upon us during the past twelve months, call for our fervent gratitude and make it fitting that we should rejoice with thankfulness that the Lord, in his infinite mercy, has most signally favored our country and our people. Peace without and prosperity within have been vouchsafed to us. No pestilence has visited our shores, the abundant privileges of freedom which our fathers left us in their wisdom are still our increasing heritage, and in parts of our vast domain some affliction has visited our brethren in their forest homes, yet even this calamity has been tempered and in a manner sanctified by a generous compassion for the sufferers, which has been called forth throughout the land. For all these things it is meet that the voice of the nation should go up to God in devout homage; wherefore I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, recommend that all the people observe Thursday, the 24th day of November, instant, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer by resting as far as they may from their secular labor and meet in their several places of worship, there to join in ascribing honor and praise to Almighty God, whose goodness has been so manifest in our history and in our lives, and offer earnest prayers that his bounties may continue to us and to our children. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 4th day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and sixth. (Signed) CHESTER A. ARTHUR, By the President, JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State.

The Governor has issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation: I, John P. St. John, Governor of Kansas, do hereby designate Thursday the 24th instant, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and earnestly request that laying aside all secular cares, the people of this State assemble at their respective places of worship and devoutly offer thanks to God for the manifold blessings He has so graciously bestowed during the past year, and implore Him to help us to live to merit a continuance of His kind and protecting care.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal, at Topeka, [SEAL] this 12th day of November, 1881. JOHN P. ST. JOHN, By the Governor, JAMES SMITH, Secretary of State.

Petroleum V. Nasbp who has spent a lifetime in maligning the Irish, has just returned from Ireland, converted to land leagueism, and is to lecture with James Redpath in this country in behalf of the oppressed and suffering tenantry of the old country.

The Leader says that "three times in the last seven years that office has been broken into, just previous to election, and its property destroyed or carried off in the interest of some candidate." Now, we venture the assertion, without fear of contradiction, that said candidate was, every time, a Republican; but if it was otherwise, and the Leader will give the name of the candidate or candidates, we will take pleasure in placing the facts before the public.

Mrs. Authur, the deceased wife of the President, was the daughter of the late Captain Herndon, U. S. N. She married General Arthur in New York City, at the Calvary Episcopal church, while he was judge advocate on the staff of General Yates, of the Second Brigade, State Militia. She died suddenly about eighteen months ago, while he was absent at Albany, at the reelection of the Hon. Roscoe Conkling to the Senate. It is reported that an unmarried sister of President Arthur will conduct the affairs of his household during his term of office.

This mutilating of election returns is but the natural result of the teachings of a school of politics with which this county has been cursed from its very organization, growing worse every year, and unless all good citizens, candidates as well as voters, set the stamp of condemnation upon it and wipe it out, it will some day bring calamity upon our people as it has already brought the blush of shame to their cheeks. We refer to that element that intrudes itself into our elections, influencing voters by everything but pure and patriotic means. Last week's Leader.

Now, as "the county has always been preeminently Republican," Democrats need not feel any way badly over this assertion of our contemporary; but we wonder if the Leader man thought of this school of politics when he issued a "Leader Extra" on November 3, 1881—the day of the election—in the interest of S. N. Wood, said "extra" defending said Wood in the Rice county school-bond affair. When the COURANT was first established it opposed that kind of electioneering, together with getting out affidavits against candidates, for circulation on election day; and we are glad to note that no such affidavits have been gotten out since the establishment of the COURANT, while such things were common before that time; and we are also pleased to state that the Leader man has issued but that one "extra" on election day since our advent here.

The Seventh Comet of the Year.

Director Swift, of the Warner Astronomical Observatory, Rochester, N. Y., at 11 o'clock P. M. of the 16th inst, discovered a faint, round, tailless comet in the constellation Cassiopeia, which has a Right Ascension of 1 hour 50 minutes and a Declination north of 71 degrees with a motion slowly westward. This is the seventh comet which has been discovered since the first of May last, four of which met the condition of the fund, have received the Warner Prize of $200, Prof. Swift procuring the first and last award. Inasmuch as the comet of 1812 is expected in the quarter in which this one appeared, Prof. Swift is not sure at present that the stranger may not be the familiar comet which was discovered by Pons. In 1873 Director Swift, at Denver claimed to have discovered an intra Mercurial planet. In May, 1882, he will visit Egypt, under the munificent provision of Mr. H. H. Warner, to observe the total Eclipse, at which time he goes to verify his intra Mercurial planet discovery. Mr. H. H. Warner's generous patronage of science has given astronomical study a wonderful impulse during the past twelve months, and the country is to be congratulated on having so broad minded a man so "substantially" devoted to the upbuilding of her intellectual as well as physical interest.

The following appalling statement is telegraphed from Washington, to the Chicago Tribune, a leading Republican paper: "Could everything be laid bare relating to appointments in Washington, to say nothing of what exists elsewhere, the unsuspecting portion of the people would be appalled. Not only is there incompetence in the public service, but immortality and vice. What would simple minded people probably say were they told that the wages of sin are borne on the pay rolls of the departments; that appointments are made and persons kept in office on grounds that would put to shame the face of virtue; shock every true moral sentiment? Not only do these things exist, but to an extent that few outside of Washington suspect. It is difficult to describe the real state of the case. The ramifications of these things are so extensive that it would be difficult to say with any certainty where they do not reach. They permeate the entire public service in Washington. The readers that would not be shocked at a recital of even part of the truth are few indeed. The truth can not be told."

He Did Not Advise.

A nervous-looking man went into a store the other day and sat down for half an hour or so, when the clerk asked if there was anything she could do for him. He said no; he didn't want anything. She went away, and he sat there half an hour longer, when the proprietor went to him and asked if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous man; "I just wanted to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says, above all things, I must avoid being in crowds. Noticing that you did not advertise in the news papers, I thought that this would be as quiet a place as I could find, so I just dropped in for a few hours of complete isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of paper cambric to brain him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.

Isanity From Kissing.

The "kissing game" in the county, sometimes brings about strange results. Mrs. Thomas Armour, of Schuykill county, Pennsylvania, is insane from being a mere looker on at one of these games. Four years ago she attended a picnic in company with her husband, who took a part in a "kissing game." Mrs. Armour watched the players for some time with pleasant interest, until she saw her husband kiss another woman. From that moment she showed signs of insanity, and has grown worse constantly. She has an intense hatred for her husband, and every other woman, who she thinks will injure her. It was quite different with a Brooklyn woman who attended a picnic and saw her husband kiss another woman. She at once hit him over the head with the cover of an ice-cream freezer. He is now perfectly sane.

RACE FOR CONFEDERATE BONDS.

Col. Blanton Duncan, of San Antonio, Texas, says when the confederacy surrendered in 1865, there was a large sum of money in Europe in the hands of agents belonging to Confederate Government, which, according to agreement, was placed in English hands as trustees. How much Duncan does not know, but he thinks the present demand for the bonds is an outgrowth of that agreement. Col. Duncan was in Europe at the time, and wastold that by warm Confederate sympathizers that Sir Henry Houghton, was selected to be a trustee, and in their hands it was placed so that he could not touch it. He also thinks Jeff Davis' presence in Europe has some significance.

Joint Committee Meeting.

The Greenback and Democratic County Central Committees, together with the candidates on the late Peoples' Union Ticket, will meet at the COURANT office, in this city, at 1 o'clock, p. m., Saturday, December 3, 1881, for the purpose of transacting important business; and it is hoped every committee-man and candidate will be present. Residence and office a half mile north of Toledo. Jy 11-11. THE SUN. NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its thirteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining as always for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S life is for mankind and woman-kind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot indignation on the blistering backs of the post-ively wicked.

THE SUN of 1882 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a plain, simple, unconvoluted way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon all affairs with the fearlessness of an old-time independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal is adopted in this country in the dozen years past has been modeled after THE SUN. Existing important journals already existing have been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper. By liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before. We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bakura. In politics we have feuded opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events; that habit is the only source of THE SUN'S political course. THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of news, scientific and general intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who do not know and read and like THE SUN say each number of which is a Gem of the poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, timely matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and suitable in its kind and entertaining than any book big or little? If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN. Our terms are as follows: For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, 55 cents a month, or $5.50 a year; or including the SUN'S paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.50 a year, postage paid. The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid. For cuts of ten send $1.00 We will send an extra copy free. Address: L. W. ENGLAND, Publisher of THE SUN, New York City.

Mr. Mort. B. Fitts, associate editor of the Topeka Daily Democrat, a paper deserving of the support of every Democrat in this State, was in town, last Monday, in the interest of his paper, and gave this office a pleasant call. Messrs. Clay and Archie Martin, our little cousins, have our thanks for the last rabbit they killed before leaving for their new home in Texas. Our best wishes follow the little fellows; and may they enjoy a long and prosperous life. There will be preaching at the Congregational church, next Sunday, Nov. 27, at 3 o'clock, p. m., by the Rev. John Connicher, charged with burglary, had his preliminary examination before Squire Robinson, on the 15th instant, and was bound over to the next term of the District Court, in the sum of $500; and, in default of bail, was remanded to jail. The prosecution was conducted by T. H. Grisham, assisted by F. P. Cochran; and the defense was represented by A. W. Harris, assisted by Judge E. B. Peyton. A literary society has been organized in this city, one of whose objects is to raise money to fence and beautify the cemetery grounds. This object of the society is a very noble one, and for this reason the society should be encouraged; but, in order to have that encouragement that it should deserve, the society ought not to be too one-sided in its organization. A hint to the wise is sufficient. The society met last night, at Mr. J. M. Tuttle's. Mr. Frank E. Smith and family left, last Monday, for Michigan, where they will make their future home. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were among the first settlers of this county; and Mr. Smith was one of the first men with whom we became acquainted in the county; and we were always glad to see him cross our threshold, for he was ever a welcome guest in our sanctum, though differing widely from us in politics; and our best wishes follow him to the home of his childhood, to which he has just returned. in this city during the present week, giving entertainments each night at Music Hall, to large and appreciative audiences. Monday night they played "Divorce;" Tuesday night they played "The Octagon," and last night they played "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." The Company consists of thirteen performers, each one of whom is well up to his or her respective parts, and for this reason we shall not single any of them out for special mention. We are getting somewhat tired of our Republican friends taking items of news to their organ and then asking us to copy them, or taking them to that paper in time for its next issue, and bringing them to us just in time to be too late for our paper of the same week, thus compelling us to be one week behind in the publication of such news items. Now, if such items are of interest to our readers, it is to our interest that we should have them in our paper as soon as they appear in the Republican organ. Both papers are published on the same day; and items for both papers should be handed to both at the same time. THE CURRENCY QUESTION. Notwithstanding the fact that thousands of our people are worrying themselves almost to death over the vexed question, even to the extent of neglecting their business, their homes and their duties to their families, there are still thousands upon thousands of smart, hard working, intelligent men pouring into the great Arkansas Valley, the Garden of the West, where the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad offers them their choice of 2,500,000 acres of the finest farming land in the world at almost their own prices. If you do not believe it write to the undersigned, who will tell you where you can get a cheap land exploring ticket, and how, at a moderate expense, you can see for yourself and be convinced. W. F. Just received at Campbell & Gillett's a car load of Gliddon's fence wire; also, a car load of Smith wagons. Dr. W. P. Pugh will continue to do a limited practice; and will be found, at all unemployed times, at his drug store. When you come to town, don't forget to go to J. W. Ferry's and see the bargains he has for those who wish to get them. The stock at Doollittle & Breese's general merchandise store is guaranteed to be just what it is represented to be. Call and examine their goods. At the City Meat Market you can always find Rockwood, ready to exchange the choicest cuts of beef, pork and mutton, for cash. He pays the highest price, in cash, for hides and pelts. L. Martin & Co. have prepared for the cold weather by laying in everything needed by an agricultural community, in the line of dry goods, groceries, clothing, boots, shoes, waterproof goods, etc. Mr. A. S. Howard, of the White Rock mills, has received a two-wheeled spring wagon from Kansas City, through Mr. J. D. Minnick, and is now delivering flour to all parts of the city, free of charge. Four hundred and eighty acres of land 8 miles east and 1 mile south of Matfield Green, in this county, is offered for sale for $2,000. VALE.
Farewell, O long, bright, joyous summer days!
Full of a new found happiness were ye,
And strange and marvelous with light to me,
Fain would I hold thee fast with sweet delays.
Fain bid dull, chilly autumn linger still
With lagged feet and dreary face apart,
That I might hold thee, summer, on my heart,
And feel thy tender, love awakening thrill!
But nay; in paradise man may not dwell;
There, after spring and Summer, came the fall!
So shall the darksome shadows follow all
Who bask in sunshine, Summer sweet, farewell!
Yet Eve and Adam were denied not sleep,
And in that peaceful realm there are bright gleams;
Then, oh, sweet summer of my life, in dreams
Thy happy days in pictures I will keep!

FRAUDS AT CHURCH FAIRS.
Tables Stocked by Shop Keepers, Who Get Nine-Tenths of the Profits.
New York Sun.

What a beautiful arranged table, and what handsome articles," remarked a lady to her escort at a fair in an uptown church. The table contained a fine array of fancy articles. There were silver mounted hand glasses, carved dressing cases, lace neckwear, jewelry and other goods. "How the ladies in charge must have worked to get so many nice things contributed. What a marked contrast this table presents to some of the others," said the gentleman. "It will bring the church quite a fund by itself." The couple moved on, and a gentleman who had heard their conversation approached and said:

"You must excuse me, but I can not help setting you right on the subject about which you were just speaking. That table which you so admire, and think will so benefit the church, is what is called a commission table, and will not obtain for the church as much money as many of the plainer ones. The goods are obtained from regular business houses at the current prices. What are sold are paid for, and what are not sold are returned. All that the church receives is the commission given by the merchant. This commission some times reaches as high as 15 per cent, but more frequently does not exceed 10 per cent. From this you can easily see that if a commission table in an evening takes in $50, the profit only amounts to $5. If $10 is taken in at one of the tables where the goods are contributed, the church fares doubly as well. Many ladies like to make a great show at their tables and adopt the commission method. It is much easier to get them this way than to get them for nothing, or to personally make up fancy articles. People are attracted by the greatest display, and, as in the present instance, the lady who has the commission table gets greater credit than the one who has got her goods contributed, and who has been to much more trouble.

"Fairs are usually gotten up for a religious or charitable purpose, and the money expended at them is not for the articles received, but for the benefit of the deserving object. When a man spends $10 at a commission table he thinks his money is expended for this good purpose, whereas nine-tenths of it goes into the pockets of the wealthy merchant, who really owns the articles until they are sold."

For the past three years the system of selling goods on commission in fairs has steadily gained ground. Many merchants sell thousands of dollars' worth of goods in this way. It is considered a regular source of revenue, and is counted by many firms, who, in addition to receiving a fair price for their wares, also get a very good advertisement. Frequently a piano manufacturing firm give a $500 piano to a fair, which is raffled for $1 a chance, there being 500 chances. For this piano the firm gets $250 in cash and 550 chances, to say nothing of the advertisement of other valuable articles which are raffled for in large fairs are often obtained in this way.

Cremated Himself.
Atlanta Post-Appel.

It is learned from parties just from Dawsonville, Dawson county, that on Thursday morning about 2 o'clock the jail in that town was found to be on fire. It appears that on the previous evening a burly negro, charged with burglarizing Hamp Smith's store, was arrested and confined in the jail. The negro's name was Billups, said to have once owned by Colonel J. A. Billups of Madison. During the night the negro conceived the idea of burning out of jail, and so fired the building. The flames ran up between the logs and frame work, attacking the roof and rapidly getting beyond control. Seeing this Billups began screaming for help at the top of his voice and soon alarmed the town. Men turned out and attempted to rescue the tortured wretch, but it was impossible to approach and open the door. The cries of the poor fellow are described as the most heartrending, but no relief could save him. He was literally roasted alive.

An Affecting Incident.
The phenomenal outflow of human sympathy, whose tide has not yet fairly ebbed, shall tend to make us who have helped to swell it kinder and better towards other hearts that bleed, well and good. But if we substitute our share in it for those nearer but equally sacred duties; if we say to the afflicted poor around us, "It is Christ, a gift by whatsoever thou mightest, be profited by me," then we are a wretched set of frauds in God's sight. I call to mind a noble nature with whom it is far otherwise. On a dark day in our president's fate, the first day on which we heard discouraging news from Elberon, General Walker, superintendent of the census, was passing homeward, heavy hearted, from his office duties, for he loved General Garfield tenderly. By chance, he saw within an open doorway a tiny coffin, the coffin of a three year old orator child, whom he had some times stopped to speak a kind word to as she played upon the street. The little maid soon knew his cordial voice, and but a few days before her sudden death she had rushed out from her basement home to show him her new doll, her modest contribution to the census. He passed in silently where the coffin lay and stood beside her little waxen body. I met him there, for the child was a pet of mine, my lowly little neighbor. I held her in some such regard as one might hold a neighborly kitten, little thinking how soon death would endow her image with his own majesty. The general spoke softly and reverently of the little spirit, then told me in few words of a daughter of the same age whom he had buried, and as he named her I noticed the quick tears spring to his eyes. Soon he bowed and passed out as quietly as he entered. An hour later a servant brought to the house of mourning, with a card addressed in his handwriting, a rich and costly floral wreath, an offering as elegant as it made to the child of his nearest friend. They laid it on the plain little coffin, and it rested there with tender grace—as royal a gift in its way as was the queen's wreath I later saw on the stately coffin of the president. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me;" and in the kingdom that day I think Christ wore upon his sacred vestments the perfume of those flowers of charity.

The American People.
No people in the world suffer as much with dyspepsia as Americans, and although years of experience in medicines have failed to accomplish a certain and sure remedy until Green's August Flower was introduced for this disease and its effects, yet so well has this remedy succeeded in every case to effect a cure, that there is not a single case in the United States but recommends the August Flower in all cases of dyspepsia and liver complaint, costiveness, sour stomach, sick headache, and all derangements of the stomach and liver. Go to your druggist and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it. Two doses will relieve any case. Regular size 75 cents.

A Lady Correspondent.

In a recent issue of your paper "Daisy B." writes to know what to do when she has the "blues." Now, I have been troubled with that very unpleasant and essentially feminine complaint in the past, and I am quite sure my experience will help her. I don't believe those indigo feelings come because things don't go right around us, but because matters don't go right within us. Every lady understands this and knows the cause. For years I suffered terribly, and I now see that I might have avoided it all had I known what I do today. I tried taking Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure as an experiment, and it did for me more than I could ever have dreamed it possible to do for any woman. I would not be without it for the world, and I earnestly advise "Daisy B." or any lady troubled as she was, to use the means which I did, and I am sure it will have the same effect.

Piles! Piles!—A Sure Cure Found!
No One Need Suffer.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years' standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments and Electrolysis do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else. For sale by all Druggists or mailed on receipt of price, $1.00. Henry & Davis, Proprietors, Cleveland, O. Woodward, Faxon & Co., Wholesale Agents, Kansas City, Mo.

A Mistake May Be Fatal.
You are not constipated, but if you "let a cough alone" you are in danger of the worst disease on earth. Piso's Cure will cure consumption, but much easier and quicker when in the early stage and only a cough. Sold by druggists at 25c. and $1.00.

"Rough on Rats."
The thing desired found at last. Ask druggists for Rough on Rats. It clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, bed bugs. 15c. boxes.

Leis' Dandelion Tonic is not "Whisky Bitters" or a "fancy drink" that may lead the user on to drunkenness and ruin, but it is a true and reliable medicine, which has been in use for the past fifteen years, and has been prescribed and used by many leading physicians.

AN ENORMOUS TRAFFIC.—Pittsburgh boasts that 849,746 bottles of Carboline have been sold within the last six months. This shows that the great army of baldheads will soon be reduced to a corporal's guard.

This certifies that after using Leis' Manly's Co.'s Dandelion Tonic in my family, I can recommend it as very good for the purposes claimed. JOHN N. NOYES.

Very effective. L. N. S. OSGOOD.

—They were strolling upon the heights that overlook New Brighton. The evening was very mild, but a breeze had been blowing from the west that day and the mosquitoes were thick. Every now and then she beat the air wildly with her hands or struck at some of the pestiferous insects that had settled down for business on her own fair person, while he walked along, apparently as untroubled as Daniel in the lion's den. It made her mad finally, and so she asked: "I wonder why these nasty vampires don't attack you?" "You do them injustice," he answered gallantly; "New Brighton mosquitoes are epicures."

MR. ORLANDO WATHERBEE, says an exchange of notes, propounds "The Spencer Pharmacy," Spencer, Mass., reports: My customers speak very highly of the Great German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, it having always given excellent satisfaction. One of them, Mr. Henry Debecher, has been greatly benefited by its use in a case of severe rheumatism, and he refers to it in terms of highest praise.—Cleveland Leader.

Health and Happiness.
It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood when Scovill's Blood and Liver Syrup will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic Disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, all Nervous Disorders and Debility. It corrects Indigestion, a single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

PERILS OF THE DEEP.
[Chicago Inter-Ocean.]
"During my trip down the River Tago, in Spain," said Captain Boyton to a representative of this journal in a recent conversation by the sea shore, "I had to shoot 105 waterfalls the largest being about eighty-five feet, and innumerable rapids. Crossing the Straits of Messina, I had three fine lookers in a fight with sharks, and coming down the Sonoma, a river in France, I received a charge of shot from an excited and startled Pinnacoon. Although this was not very pleasant and might be termed dangerous, I fear nothing more on my trip than intense cold; for, as long as my limbs are free and easy and not cramped or benumbed I am all right. Of late I carry a stock of St. Jacobs Oil in my little boat—The Captain calls it "Baby Mine," and has stored therein signal rockets, thermometer, compass, provisions, etc.—and I have but little trouble. Before starting out I rub myself thoroughly with the article, and its action upon the muscles is wonderful. From constant exposure I am somewhat subject to rheumatic pains, and nothing would benefit me until I got hold of this Great German Remedy. Why, on my travels I have met people who had been suffering with rheumatism for years; by my advice they used the Oil and it cured them, would sooner die without food for days than be without this remedy for one hour. In fact I would not attempt to cross the Straits of Messina, or any other treacherous spot, without it. I am very enthusiastic on the subject of St. Jacobs Oil, and when we left him he was still citing instances of the curative qualities of the Great German Remedy to a party around him.

IRON TONIC
Indoors and outdoors, it is the most powerful medicine for Dyspepsia, General Debility, Female Diseases, Want of Vitality, Nervous Prostration, and Constipation. (Notice from Dr. Ferris.)
I was suffering from general debility to such an extent that my labor was exceedingly burdensome to me. A vacation of a month did not give me much relief, but on the contrary, was followed by almost immediate and wonderful results. The old energy returned and I found that my natural force was not permanently abated. I have used three bottles of the Tonic. Since using it I have done twice the labor that I ever did in the same time during my illness, and with double the ease. With this tranquil nerve and vigor of body, has come also a clearness of thought never before enjoyed. If the Tonic has not done the work, I know not what I give it the credit. J. P. WATSON, Pastor Christian Church, Troy, O.
The Iron Tonic is a preparation of Pure Ferrous Sulphate, with the most valuable medicinal properties associated with the Vegetable Compound. It is a powerful and reliable medicine for all the purposes where Iron is required. It is sold by all druggists and chemists.
