Thanks to my NESCO Electric COOKER

Cook in Cool Comfort on the Hottest Days

The NESCO cooks with built-in heat that cannot escape to raise room temperatures. The 6-quart model (above) will cook a whole meal for a family of four without causing any more discomfort than one would experience in preparing sandwiches and a pitcher of lemonade. The 12-quart NESCO is made for larger families and offers the same relief from kitchen heat. Either model may be purchased on convenient terms.

THE woman who owns a NESCO can take the afternoon off, even though she has an evening meal to cook. She simply puts the meat and vegetables in the cooker, sets the heat control dial for the proper temperature and leaves the kitchen. When she returns, hours later, the food is piping hot and ready to serve.

Thousands of Texas women have discovered the convenience of NESCO electric cooking. They like the better taste of foods that are cooked in their own nourishing juices. They like the cleanliness of electricity, the absence of kitchen heat and the economy of operation. They find that NESCO brings them all of the advantages of electric cookery at a cost of only two or three cents per day.

IMPORTANT MEASURES SUBMITTED

There are a number of important measures involved in the seven constitutional amendments submitted to the electorate for consideration and final determination in the election to be held throughout Texas next Saturday. Doubtless every reader of this newspaper is familiar with the measures in the abstract and most of the voters have given the subjects careful consideration. The old age pension plan and the prohibition repeal amendment have, no doubt, been more universally discussed than any of the remaining five, yet they do not include all that is of interest to the voters, as important and universally interesting as they may be. There is a campaign cry that was promulgated and fostered by those who have more or less interest in the defeat of some of the amendments that the voters should disapprove all of the proposed amendments. This may be a plan of safety, yet there are some questions involved that deserve careful consideration and mature thought in passing judgment.

It is a fact that some of these amendments were loosely drawn, notably that one allowing the pensioning of citizens who are sixty-five years of age and more. This amendment would allow the legislature to set up the terms and requirements on which such pensions could be granted. The main objection to this amendment seems to be that it would give the legislators a free hand in designating pensioners and that if all citizens who have attained the required age limit should be pensioned, without provision as to need or financial worth, the amount that would be required to pay the pensions would reach into the millions. This would seem to be an overdrawn picture, yet such a condition could arise under the terms of the amendment. Other objections can be made to the other six amendments and points can also be brought out in their favor.

The safe plan is for all voters to carefully consider the subjects involved and vote according to the dictates of their judgment.

A HEALTHY GAIN

A preliminary estimate of the national income by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce for the month of August makes a most encouraging showing and while statistics are usually tiresome, it is interesting just the same to know how business conditions are reflected by this report. In 1934, estimated income payments in the form of wages, salaries and other labor income, interest, dividends, net returns and royalties to individuals for economic services rendered totaled 49.4 billion dollars, as compared with 44.4 billion dollars in 1933, a gain of 11 per cent. Other months and years are given in the report, but they are all in line with these figures.

Work relief payments, including CWA, FERA and the civilian conservation camps accounted for but one per cent of the 1934 increase. These payments were 637 million dollars in 1933 and 1394 millions in 1934. Public works administration payroll disbursements are accounted for in reports of the construction industry because the projects are carried out under contracts. In 1934 the PWA payments in wages and salaries amounted to 302 million dollars or only seven-tenths of one per cent of the total 1934 increase.

This percentage of gain is recorded by all reports and estimates so far promulgated and encourages the hope that the depression and its consequences will soon be but a memory and the business and industry of the country will again be on a normal basis.

A POPULAR SLOGAN

A recent announcement by Senator Huey Long of Louisiana makes it practically sure he will be a presidential candidate in next year's campaign, for the statement that he will offer for the place if a candidate who suits him does not appear, is but another way of saying he will be in the running. While there is no danger, or maybe the word should be likelihood, of his election, the campaign slogan he has already adopted, "Share the wealth," will attract many supporters, notwithstanding, an equal division of all wealth among the people of America would amount to a very meagre sum to each, but it sounds big when quoting figures on the aggregate. Be this as it may, a campaign such as Huey will conduct and having for its base the declaration that wealth in America should be shared equally by all the people will prove alluring, even though a realization of the results of such an undertaking would mean more harm than good to American business and American life. Just the same, a super-heated political campaign is approaching and the country may as well know now that Huey Long will be right in the big middle of it.

HOLDING HIS LEAD

A straw vote conducted in Virginia has just been tabulated and shows a heavy majority in that state favorable to the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt. It will be remembered that Mr. Roosevelt carried Virginia in the 1932 contest by 70 per cent of the total vote cast in that state, hence the result of this straw vote occasions no surprise, yet it is interesting to know that the president has retained his lead and popularity through the trying years since the campaign in which he was elected.

The poll in this straw vote lasted three weeks and favored the president to the extent of 65 per cent at the end of the first week, 88 per cent at the end of the second week and 93 per cent at the end of the third week. Only two of the 99 counties that participated in the poll, both Republican strongholds for many years, voted against his re-election by narrow margins. The city of Richmond favored the president four to one.

A NATIONAL TRAGEDY

The people of the entire nation were shocked and grieved last Friday when the fact was made known by radio that Wiley Post, the intrepid aerial world girder, and Will Rogers, one of the best known and most popular humorists in America, had been killed when their airplane crashed in Alaska. They were on a leisure flight around the world, with the intention and hope of making a new record in aviation. News of the accident was carried by natives to Barrow, Alaska, America's most northern white settlement and the distressing information was at once sent out to all parts of the world.

WORK THIS OLD SAW

He is not Noah, nor Noah's son, nor a Levite, nor John the Baptist, nor yet the wandering Jew, for he was with Noah in the ark. The scriptures make mention of him, especially in John, Mark and Luke, that we may believe he is no imposter. He knows no parents, he never lay upon his mother's breast. His beard is such as no man ever wore. He goes bare-footed and barelegged like a grave old friar. He wears no hat in summer or winter (modern style), but often appears with a crown upon his head. His coat is neither knit nor spun, nor made of linen or wool, bark nor sheepskin, yet it abounds in a variety of colors and fits close to his skin. He is wonderfully temperate. He drinks nothing stronger than cold water. He had rather take his dinner in a farmer's barn than in a king's palace. He is very watchful. He sleeps not in bed, but sitting on a singular kind of chair with his clothes on.

He was alive at the crucifixion. Nearly all the world hears him. He once preached a sermon which convinced a man of his sins and caused him to weep bitterly. He never was married, yet he has favorites whom he loves dearly; for if he has a morsel of meat he divides it among them. Though he never rides on horseback he is in some respects equipped as horsemen are. He is an advocate of early rising, tho he never retires to bed. His prophecies are so true that the moment you hear his voice you may know what is approaching.

Now from such a detailed description, can you guess what it is? Don't read the answer until you have reread this old saw and tried to riddle out the answer, which is: A rooster.—Pathfinder.

TO THE WOMEN OF AMERICA

Recently on the advertising pages of some of America's most prominent newspapers much space was bought to address the women of America. This was not an appeal to them to unite in an effort permanently to banish sweatshop misery in the garment industry or to renew their protests against the more dubious features injected into home by the radio. It was an open letter (so the heading read) inviting the mothers and daughters of America to drink whisky.

Within forty hours a chilling rebuke was administered to the sponsors of this particular piece of high pressure advertising by J. H. Choate, Jr., director of the federal alcohol control administration at Washington. According to newspaper reports the rebuke brought from the advertisers "a positive assurance that further issues of this advertisement had been canceled and no more advertising of this type would be given out."

But the saloon in the United States has always had its back door. So the beer barons, artfully sidestepping, do not, at the moment, specifically invite feminine drinkers—and non-drinkers—to drain the beer mug. In place of "open letter" the power of example is employed. Pictorially graceful young women reclining in hammocks in country gardens find sultriness magically dispelled by tall glasses of somebody's famous beer. Girls radiantly emerging from a cool dip ecstatically declare that there's nothing like a glass of foaming beer to top off a swim.

Millions of decent-minded persons frankly deplore the unscrupulous commercial greed back of this demoralizing booze campaign. What can be done about it? How about "open letters" from the women of America? For instance, to legislators demanding their support, say for the Capper bill, which would prohibit altogether interstate transmission of all advertising of any alcoholic beverage by newspaper, radio or any other means?

The issue is largely in the hands of the women of America. We believe that seeing this, they will meet it.—Christian Science Monitor.

PIOUS CAMOUFLAGE

Ethiopia is fully justified in appealing to the League of Nations to aid her in removing the embargo on arms against her, decreed by the various arms-producing nations.

If there was ever a bit of hypocrisy parading in a cloak of virtue it is this embargo program put in effect by the industrial nations. Even where it is applied to both Italy and Ethiopia its injustice is obvious, but some nations are applying it to Ethiopia alone.

The effect is to aid Italy and to harm Ethiopia. It is as direct a blow at the Ethiopian cause as the providing of soldiers or ammunition for Italy would be.

This situation should awaken American citizens to the injustice and war-breeding effects of such an embargo policy. It is a tragic injustice to every weak belligerent, and it adds to the likelihood of war by tending to keep some nations at the mercy of others.

The United States policy was inspired by organized humanitarians, to be sure, but also by that element of our congressional leadership which is monomaniacal on the subject of private corporations. The series of so-called anti-war bills, produced by the munitions committee of the senate and now lying in a pigeonhole, were inspired, it is safe to say, more by a desire to take profits away from someone than by any reasonable expectation that the measures would prevent wars.

There is no more cruel injustice can be done the non-industrial nations of the world than for the industrial nations to enforce general arms embargoes. The policy leads to conquests and imperialism, to more rather than less war.

It is time that common sense people in America faced these realities, and checkmated the visionaries at Washington.—Houston Chronicle.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

VIEW OF THE NATION'S PRESS ON TOPICS OF INTEREST AND IMPORTANCE

ABUNDANT FEED CROPS

The amazing comeback of agricultural Texas from last season's drought-parched fields to the largest corn crop in a quarter of a century and perhaps the largest supply of feed in the state's history should play an important role in the general business recovery of this region and in a measure of the nation.

Texas with its wide variety of topography, soil and climate can be roughly divided into two distinct regions, the humid and the subhumid, corresponding mainly to the territory east and west of the 98th meridian. Texas farming, largely adjusted to the varying needs of these two regions, gives it its measure of stability and ability for rapid recovery. This year clearly proves the points involved. Corn, requiring a humid climate must have a wet spring, including the whole of June. The grain sorghums, those marvelous drought-resisters which the Texas agricultural experiment station introduced some time about 1910 from torrid Africa and has succeeded by successive selection in adapting to the intense heat and dryness of much of western Texas over most of the summer, defy drought, but also can withstand a certain excess of rain. Thus they have added an important grain and forage crop to a region which cannot rely upon raising corn successfully year in and out. It is the balance between these two great staple feed crops which gives Texas its advantageous position for developing livestock feeding into an important industry. The way to higher returns from excess feed is to convert it into beef, pork, lamb and mutton by giving the animals the highest possible finish.

But there is one other point which Texas farmers should not overlook in a time of abundant feed crops. They should safeguard against shortage of feed and grain in very dry years by storing in every manner possible surplus hay and forage either in barns or in properly built stacks in the feed lot and filling granaries with surplus corn, milo, he-gari and kaffir or cramming the trench silos with nature's bounty. When these practices become standard Texas farming will no longer need artificial government help. Self-help always is best.—Dallas News.

MAIL FRAUDS

The saying that a sucker is born every minute seems to be borne out by the estimate of their number made by a so-called solicitor of the post office department. Writing in a current magazine he says that probably "good American citizens contribute several hundred million dollars annually to swindlers who operate through the mails."

If the estimate is even approximately correct, the sums lost to schemers by those whose credulity is equaled only by their eagerness to get rich quick is surprisingly large, much greater than is ordinarily believed. And, taking into consideration the comparative infrequency with which the newspapers report important successes of the government in capturing mail swindlers the development would seem to indicate that there should be no difficulty in ascertaining where some of Postmaster General Farley's "surplus" might be put to good use. With use of the mails for fraudulent purposes on so gigantic a scale, it should be possible to come up with more of the offenders.

The public itself is, of course, largely to blame for the success of the game. People fall for the most impossible of tales—riches in England, a gold mine in Spain, unheard-of returns on investment of pittance and any other gaudy tale that a smooth tongue can indite. The chain letter craze is a case in point. Trinity Church real estate in New York bobs up now and then as an alluring prospect upon which apocryphal heirs, if they will send some money, may cash in. THE JAPANESE OIL SQUEEZE

As a topic of timely interest coincident with American and Japanese naval maneuvers in the Pacific is the question of the Japanese oil supply. The fact that Japan's domestic production comprises approximately 8 1-2 per cent of her consumption requirements of 3,000,000 tons clearly explains the government's actual preoccupation with this problem, which presents a grave situation in a country whose imperialistic policy has become so active. In the attempt to offset this deficiency in national economy the erection of refineries on Japanese soil has been vigorously encouraged.

The domestically operated companies import in the neighborhood of 1,000,000 tons of crude oil annually, for the most part from the United States, and allocate the remainder of consumption requirements to the Standard Oil Company, the Texas Corporation and the Royal Dutch. But with the yearly increase in Japanese refining capacity it is only a question of time before these foreign enterprises will be squeezed out of the refining field. The rapid extension of soybean oil production, together with the application of German methods of recuperating oil by hydrogenizing coal and lignite, present further potential competition to British and American enterprises.

Already the monopoly operative in Manchukuo has practically struck a death blow to the Standard and Texas business in this area and is likely to be of more far-reaching consequence when the new Manchukuo wells become operative during the course of the next two or three years. Hence, the American companies, which supply 60 per cent of Japan's petroleum products, are facing a tenacious opposition in Oriental markets and are suffering, under the dominance imposed by the Japanese, from restrictive measures of control governing questions of stocks, prices and distribution.

Meanwhile, although it is estimated that the stocks of fuel oil held by the Japanese navy are appreciable, according to expert authority, it is believed that during the first year of war Japan will have available only two-thirds of her peace time oil requirements.—Magazine of Wall Street.

NONE OF OUR OFFICIAL BUSINESS

If this country minds its own business and maintains that clause of the constitution guaranteeing freedom of religious worship it will be doing pretty well, without taking on any outside assignments.

That is probably about what Representative Tom Blanton had in mind when he told the house that if groups in this country did not quit trying to have the United States take official cognizance of religious persecution in foreign lands they would "get us into war."

However much we may deplore persecution and despise the perpetrators, and most Americans thoroughly detest such outrages, it really is none of the official business of this government.

If groups of citizens decide to lend aid and comfort to the persecuted of other lands it is their privilege to do so, but they have no right to involve this government in a dispute with a friendly foreign power over the matter.

One of the first concerns of this government is to maintain peace with other powers. One of the quickest and surest ways of destroying that peace is to meddle in the internal affairs of other countries.—Ablene News.

WHERE WISDOM IS

The manufacturer had the best end of the cause the protective tariff afforded him substantial fits. It has cut off the flow from foreign countries, ceasing tax has aided the manufacturer.

We hear talk of the abandoning the protection on cotton goods manufactured abroad. If one can't benefit the other about them, it is said. But the peculiar conditions which are essential to the best of the country to protect ducers and manufacturers will take care of the processing and care of the other.

The trouble with the arrangement is that it is limited and that it is rating against him in the markets. He should benefit of the protection long as the manufacturer his tariff, but he should receive the benefits of what is consumed in the States, just as he is getting. But he should have the raise cotton beyond the requirement to sell in the of the world what he get for it.

Restricting the production has helped the Record is for it. It is doubtedly has reduced demand for agricultural limited employment of gins and oil mills. A must be found to prevent structure of foreign countries.—Waco Record.

HIS FORMER PRAISE-LIFE

A few days ago another state were to discover the dead body of a man and his wife, both respected in the community which they lived. Natives was amazement and curiosity as to what happened. It was plain to officers man had killed the wife then shot himself.

LOPSIDED INCOME

Another way of real lopsidedness of our structure is to compare that of foreign countries, typically all other countries by taxing much lower. Though a married man, he pays nothing on $50,000, and next to $3000, he is taxed near cent of a $1500 income land, 3.4 per cent of a come and 8.3 per cent income. Nor do foreign as high as ours on the incomes. While the big comes in New York state tax up to 0 per cent, der the new tax bill, taxed up to 84 per cent, of East Canadian incomes only 55 per cent, the German incomes 40 per cent and the highest comes 10 per cent.

The cotton had been in storage at the Brightman warehouse and more than $150,000 had been advanced on it through a 12c loan from the government. DIVIDE THE APPROPRIATION

A report from Houston brings the information that Jesse Jones is favorable to a division of the federal appropriation for the Texas centennial. It says: "A bombshell was thrown into negotiations of the federal commission of the Texas centennial at its meeting here Friday when Jesse H. Jones of Houston, chairman of the reconstruction finance corporation, told the commissioners that Houston and San Antonio should each get $1,000,000 of the $3,000,000 federal fund for the celebration.

Mr. Jones said he will request an audience with Vice President Garner on this matter and will urge that $1,000,000 be used for permanent commemoration of San Jacinto and $1,000,000 to San Antonio for the Alamo.

The commission's previous negotiations had not contemplated allocation of large sums to San Antonio and Houston. Dallas alone had requested $2,000,000.

Mr. Jones said the commission is taking too commercial an attitude in its effort to divide the federal fund. The good of the state as a whole and the need for permanently commemorating the great historical events of Texas, he declared, are far more important than individual projects to satisfy the greed of one group or one city.

IMAGINATION

The reason the women folks like to look at fur coats in August is because they like to be hot on the trail of a bargain. A woman has imagination. Nowhere does it work so effectively and so blissfully as when you put her in front of a really good mirror. She can imagine the snowflakes coming gently, gently down, and Harold Huskytough coming around right end with the football tucked within the protecting basket of his own good right arm while the stands are rocking with the uproar of the throng. She can see herself as she shrieks with the multitude and she can judge for herself whether she will shriek to better advantage in the $98.98 balbriggan fox (dyed bottle-cleaner) or in the $117.59 muskumelon mink (clipped Persian oakum). When the sun is blazing hot, your motor heat goes up, too!

To protect your motor, use Germ Processed Oil, which has 2 to 4 times greater film strength and is less affected by extreme motor heat!

YOUR MOTOR runs lots hotter in Summer. That's why you must have oil that maintains high film strength under extreme temperatures to get safe lubrication. Otherwise, the lubricating film ruptures and the bearings and cylinders suffer damaging wear.

Plain mineral oils have little film strength and oils over-refined by new cleansing methods have even less. As motor heat goes up, these oils rapidly lose film strength.

You'll get better motor protection with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. Timken machine tests prove that it has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil and that heat above 225° does not lessen this advantage.

More proof—supervised road tests were made in identical cars fitted with the new alloy metal bearings used in many 1935 cars. The bearings lubricated with a high-quality plain mineral oil showed 45% more wear than those lubricated with Conoco Germ Processed, the first alloyed oil.

You'll be certain your motor is safely lubricated even at high temperatures if you say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil—the oil with the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away.

METHODIST NOTES

Legitimate business must be sacrificed that we receive a paltry sum in the way of tax.

The abettors of the dog race had more self-respect than to base their argument on the idea that they wished to improve the dogs. All argument was based upon the tax to be received.

A few days ago, when the governor of our state sent the rangers to stop the illegal bookies in our cities, there were many serious minded people who asked where they were to get the thousands of dollars that would be lost in fines. A few paltry dollars would be an anesthetic for the suffering of violated law. All this week men and women are going up and down this state appealing to citizens of Texas to give back the saloons. Their appeal is not based upon any good that come to us by their return. As a matter of fact there is not a person on the face of the earth who can truthfully say that strong drink, licensed or unlicensed, has ever benefited any one. The appeal is made solely upon the ground of axes. The future of our boys and girls is to be set at naught. Their souls and bodies are to be sold that the drunkard may drink, the producer may make his millions and our state may receive a few paltry dollars blood money.

What does the future hold for us, we may well ask? If the dollar mark is to be an indication of our thinking I fear that annihilation is to be the final doom.

The honorees of the occasion were presented with gifts also—the ladies receiving three prong bouquet holders and the men a pair of socks each.

After dinner the younger ones of the crowd enjoyed a swim in the pool, while the others enjoyed themselves watching the swimmers or talking.

About 4 o'clock the table cloths were rolled back from the dinner (that had been left on the table, and everyone who would, ate supper. After the fragments, which would have filled several average dinner baskets, were packed away in the cars, goodbye was said.
