Report On Sales, Incentive Payments, Prices For Wool Marketed During 1957

Mills County Ranks High In Wool Sold Under Incentive Pay

By GEORGE G. REESE
County Agent

A new bulletin published by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station showing sales, incentive payments and prices for Texas wool for the 1957 marketing year, reports Mills County near the top.

Mills County ranks 7th, in total pounds of shorn wool on which incentive payments were made, with a total of 611,884 pounds. The average price per pound before incentive payment was 62.7 cents. The average price per pound including incentive payment was 71.4 cents. In the price per pound received by the 486 producers receiving incentive payments, Mills County ranks 3rd in the state. The other counties that ranked 1st and 2nd received 72.4 and 72.3 cents per pound. These figures show that Mills County producers received prices for their wool that were in the top bracket.

The average price received for wool in Texas in 1957 before incentive payments was 56.8 cents per pound; the incentive payment averaged 7.8 cents per pound, making a total of 64.6 cents.

Wide variations in prices paid existed among Texas counties. In 1957, the lowest average price, including incentive payment, was near 30 cents per pound and the highest near 72 cents per pound. These variations exist for several reasons. The most important of these are differences in shrinkage, the quality of wool and the amount and type of vegetable matter present. The most important of the quality factors affecting prices are fineness and length of staple. Differences in price were also noted when sales were completed at different times of the year. The latter was a very important factor in 1957.

Only 57 per cent or slightly more than half, of the wool produced in Texas, was reported for incentive payments during the 1957 marketing year. The remaining 43 per cent was not sold primarily because of an unfavorable market and was carried into the 1958 marketing year.

Texas wool growers received slightly less than $2,000,000 through the incentive payment on shorn wool for the 1957 marketing year.

Mills County producers received $436,761.14 in gross sales for their wool in 1957.

Weather Report

Rainfall recorded here during the past weekend measured 41 inch. This brings the total for the month to 2.27 inches.

Frost was reported on two mornings during the past week. Cold weather has held up the spring growing season considerably to date.

Austin, Texas — With just about three weeks left in the regular session, legislators will be under much pressure—to do many things and do them fast.

Each day that passes without agreement on financial matters heightens the possibility of a special session as soon as this one ends.

Many measures will be trampled under or pushed aside until '61. But as Speaker Waggoner Carr told the House, the problem of raising some new money "won't go away. It has to be faced."

No Easy Out—Like every other tax proposal made this session, the huge "something for everybody" omnibus tax bill recommended by the House Tax Committee brought howls of protest.

It would raise an estimated $151,000,000 a year by raising some old taxes and placing new taxes on hundreds of items. Tabbed for increases are natural gas, motor vehicles, cigarettes, liquor, wine, beer licenses.

New targets include hotel rooms restaurant meals, cigars, chewing tobacco, snuff, aircraft and auto parts, dozens of luxury items (jewelry furs, cameras, watches, silver, etc.), radio and TV parts, business machines, commercial rentals, club dues, construction materials, dance studios, reducing salons.

Officially, the bill is known as the Tax Committee substitute for H. B. 727. Unofficially, it's called a lot of other things.

House members showed no more eagerness to rally behind this broad-based approach than they had for Gov. Price Daniel's less "spread out" plan.

Give Little, Take Little—Two appropriations bills of varying sizes have been passed by the House and Senate. Differences will be adjusted by a conference committee of members from the two houses.

Both bills call for spending nearly $2,500,000,000 during the next two years. House bill is slightly larger. It calls for approximately $333,000,000 from general revenue. Senate would spend only $307,000,000 in general revenue.

To satisfy both houses, the conference committee will try to reach a compromise between these two figures. However it's worked out, it's already clear that spending will considerably exceed the $281,000,000 spent from general revenue fund for 1958-59.

Rough Sledding — Governor Daniel's "abandoned property act" barely squeaked by its first test on the House floor by a 71-69 vote.

Measure would allow the state to take over money and property unclaimed for seven years or more. Estimates of how much it would bring in immediately range from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Many bankers fear such a law would cause people to be afraid to put their money in banks and decide to stick it in a sock instead.

Backers of the measure say the banks and other businesses are holding and getting the benefit of property that does not belong to them, should be used to benefit all the people.

Co-op Bill Shunted Aside—A bill to allow rural electric co-ops more "elbow room" has been sent to the Attorney General for an opinion.

Rep. Alonzo Jamison of Denton, sponsor, protested to the House State Affairs Committee that this would kill the bill. This late in the session, delay is usually fatal.

Highly controversial, the bill would allow co-ops to add new customers after the area of their lines is annexed to a city.

Advertising Bill Advances—A state-financed advertising program for Texas moved close to final enactment despite heated opposition from an advertising man in the Senate.

A NEW MILESTONE—The arrival of James Ralph Massey a few days ago has brought us to a new milestone in life. I am talking about mom and me, of course. For, you see the arrival of James Ralph makes me GRANDPA and mom GRANDMA.

Actually he will be and already is better known by his grandparents as 'Jimmy,' for that is what he will be called, so we have been informed. So in the future if you see something in this corner which has any mention of Jimmy, —there may be a few times, you know,—you will know right off who GRANDPA Koleber is talking about.

I know what you are thinking about. You had the thought right quick, that there are other grandsons named James, or called Jimmy. I know that and I will grant you that some of them are pretty special persons. But, this is different, if you get what I mean.

That reminds me of an incident that happened some years ago while I was in school. After school hours and during Saturdays and vacation seasons I was working at several jobs to make it possible to go to school.

One of these jobs was in a combination Pawnbroker and Army Store in the city. This store was operated by a young man of the Yiddish faith, as most such establishments are.

An uncle of this young man had a young son who was taking violin lessons. Being a violinist was a very important goal for this young man in the plans of his father.

One day the uncle and his young son had just returned from a recital or exhibition in which the contestants were closely graded on a point system. The uncle was telling my boss about it and he made this statement: "My Felix was the best violinist there, but the judges gave the top award to a little boy just for one little point. Felix was still the best."

Someone stopped me on the street the other day and said: "I thought when you got to be Grandpa you would have a big headline in the paper about it."

Let me tell you just what happened.

Don't get the idea that I didn't have things planned. My wheels had been turning alright, for some time, about how I might announce his arrival. The truth of the matter is the little 'feller' didn't take into consideration my plans and timing in the matter of his arrival.

His coming into this world was at 1 p. m. on Wednesday, just in time to get in under the wire before the paper went to press, so it was carried as a normal birth announcement.

The plans I had in mind about a special announcement were then shoved aside and new plans started taking shape.

So you might say Jimmy crossed me up a little in timing his arrival. This will probably be the only time that he will ever cross up his grandpa, as you may well know.

Several have asked me during the past two weeks, who Jimmy looks like. I have repeatedly told each one that this is one field in which I am strictly non-committal at this point. I'll just have to let some other members of the family tell you that.

I'll tell you this, though. He is here and he is all there too. He is all boy, and lets you know about it. In fact he is THE GRANDSON. That's what you have been wanting me to tell you, isn't it?

There are other grandsons, of course, there were some pretty special grandsons, in fact they were THE grandsons, before Jimmy came along. But, that is all over now. Jimmy has moved in.

I might have a pretty rough time proving this point to some of my friends and neighbors up and down the street.

Take guys like D. R. Edgington, J. D. Kight, W. C. Barnett, Loy Long, Ray Duren, R. T. Padgett and a few others might just have something to say about this.

Of course, all grandsons are pretty special. There are a number of them in our community that we know in the younger group that I feel are pretty special and I am looking forward to seeing them grow up together to be men and take a rightful place in their community.

But, I'll say again, the arrival of Jimmy has put mom and me at a new milestone.

Lack of Funds Endangers Big Superhighway Program

Ike's Request for High Gas Tax Isn't Promising

By HENRY CATHCART
Central Press Association Washington Writer

WASHINGTON—The federal superhighway program, scheduled to provide 41,000 miles of roads by 1962, is in great jeopardy due to lack of revenues.

Under the road-building act, the 90 per cent federal contribution to the program was to have come from tax revenues on a "pay-you-go" basis. But revenues have not kept pace with expenditures and inflation.

Federal Highway

It was for this reason that President Eisenhower asked Congress to increase the federal gasoline tax by 1½ cents a gallon.

The Democratic-controlled Congress appears to have turned thumbs down on this proposal, so reducing highway program revenues as to force an abrupt halt in building after current allotments have been spent.

One course remains open. That is for Congress to pass, and the President approve, a pension in the pay-as-you-go feature of the bill. Such a course might be resorted to, but only at a spirited fight on Capitol Hill, for it would further unbalance the budget and act as a stimulus to further inflation.

Mr. Eisenhower might very well veto any suspension in the hope of forcing Congress to approve his tax hike.

POLITICAL MANEUVERING—Selection of Los Angeles as site and July 11, 1960, as the date for the Democratic National convention has politicians buzzing.

Some believe that the choice of cities was dictated by a Democratic belief that Richard M. Nixon will be the GOP choice for Presidency two years hence. On this premise, they contend, Democratic convention in Nixon's home state of California is at keeping it in the Donkey party column.

The date, too, is intriguing. It is more than a month earlier than the 1956 convention date, and obviously was picked because the Democrats want a longer campaign season in their fight to capture the White House from the Republicans.

DECISION DAY—There are reports in Washington that President Eisenhower and his advisors have set April 1 for decision on whether or not to name a successor to ailing Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

The date was not picked capriciously; rather it was arrived at after consideration of overriding medical and foreign policy factors. By that date, informants point out, Dulles' response to the X-ray treatment he is undergoing for glandular cancer will be known and a prognosis determined.

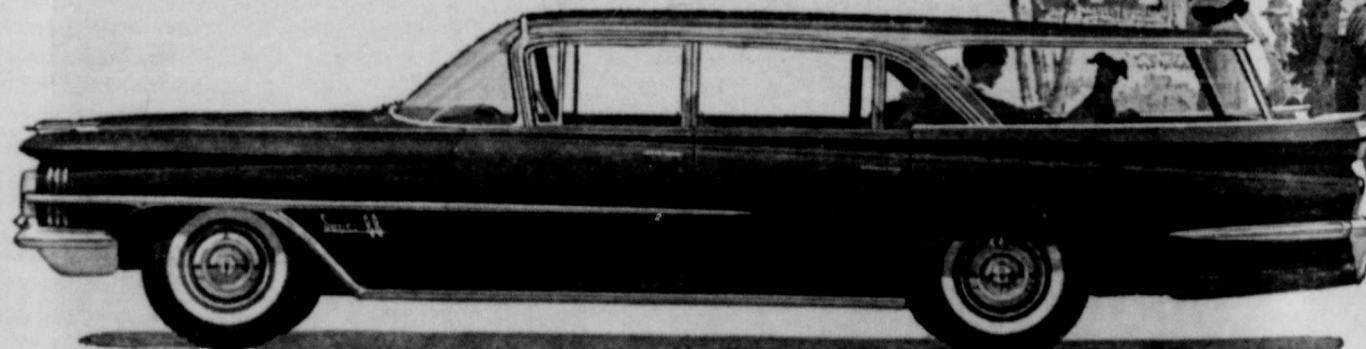

Also, by that date, the position of Russia and the Western powers will have been pretty well determined on the Berlin crisis. It must be recalled that Russia has set a deadline of May 27 for the Western action withdrawing from West Berlin.

Mr. Eisenhower's lawyer and his top aides reason that the two most important factors in the decision are whether the new secretary of state to familiarize himself with this and other vital diplomatic problems.

Thus, if the outlook on April 1 is gloomy for Dulles' active leadership of the State department, an announcement of successor can be expected.

Mrs. V. Z. Cornelius, president, presided over the business meeting. Reports were given by the different committee chairmen.

Mrs. Jim Weatherby gave a report on the District V meeting held in Luling, March 19, and attended by Mmes. Weatherby, V. Z. Cornelius, John G. Berry and R. Glynn Raley. Mrs. Weatherby stated that the Goldthwaite Garden Club scrapbook entered in the State one year scrapbook contest received a grade of 92.

Mrs. John G. Berry was selected to represent the Garden Club at the State Meeting in El Paso May 6, 7 and 8th.

The club voted to donate $5.00 to the Dr. Pence Memorial Fund for Crippled Children.

The resignation of Mrs. John A. Hester was accepted with regret.

Mrs. Raley announced that the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Weatherby was judged "Yard of the Month" and Mrs. Weatherby was presented a collection of cannas from the garden of Mrs. Raley. The Yard of the Month Marker was placed in the Weatherby's yard for a month. Mrs. Ray King was leader for the program "Civic Beautification" and introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Cecil Gray of Coleman, an authority and grower of Iris. She gave a very informative and instructive lecture on the Culture of Iris and also displayed several gorgeous Iris specimens from her garden. Mrs. Gray was accompanied by Mrs. Stone of Coleman, mother of Mrs. King.

Delicious refreshments were served from a table laid with an imported ecru cut work cloth, centered with a Maypole decorated with lovely spring flowers. Other decorations were beautiful arrangements of iris.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

...fishing has been with bad weather practiced every week this year. It continues that way, for at least it never has. A few good days, however, have given some indication that there will be fabulous fishing this year. Even in the cold months there were heavy catches of trout. Specs still are in the redfish and Spanish mackerel are beginning to take.

...never done any fishing, give it a whirl during spring and summer. When really hitting, it is fun all along the Texas coast.

...run in schools. Usually they can be located by trolling by following the birds. You find a school it is to fill the boat with fine eating fish in a very time.

...hit most any kind of fish. They go for live shrimp, but once you find a bunch of fish on the you can throw almost any

...There are several boatmen in the Port Aransas area who are specialists in catching big kings. Last summer the Texas Fishing Club members went to Port Aransas for their annual king tournament. They caught several tons of kings and sent them back to Dallas for the kiddies in Buckner's Orphans Home.

...Most of those fishermen used mullet for bait. They rigged up with line from 18 to 27 pounds, with wire leaders. Their lures were trolled out some 100 or more feet back of the boat, usually two persons were fishing from the boat. When they located a school of kings they kept moving around it, picking up a big fish or two every round.

...Spanish mackerel give a good play, but kings get rough. They are a big, heavy, mean fish, with vicious teeth. You don't handle them with bare hands. Many times you can see kings as they plow through the brine to hit your trailing mullet. They'll knock the bait twenty feet into the air and follow it

...kind of hardware at them with big success. The mackerel is a fighting little fish. Hook him on a spoon with a light line and a good, light action rod and you can have plenty of fun. Here is a fish that really will give your bass rod a good workout.

...It's best to fish for them from a good outboard and in the Gulf waters. You don't necessarily have to get too far from land. Be sure, however, that your boat is powered well enough to move when they do, or to come in safely if the waves get to rolling too high. If you have a good fast boat, you can follow the gulls. They'll lead you to a school of mackerel in a hurry.

...The same waters that produce Spanish mackerel also produce kings. You can get the kings on your bass tackle, or you can troll for them with heavy equipment. It all depends on how much action you want.

...Sometimes you can get kings and mackerel from the same boat. The kings are taken mostly by trolling, however. Some of the boatmen use mullet as bait. Others use lures, like big jigs, spoons, or locally made "Hooties."

...There are several boatmen in the Port Aransas area who are specialists in catching big kings. Last summer the Texas Fishing Club members went to Port Aransas for their annual king tournament. They caught several tons of kings and sent them back to Dallas for the kiddies in Buckner's Orphans Home.

Their lures were trolled out some 100 or more feet back of the boat, usually two persons were fishing from the boat. Many times you can see kings as they plow through the brine to hit your trailing mullet. They'll knock the bait twenty feet into the air and follow it all the way. You have to wind hard to bring them in. When they reach the side of the boat, the boatman socks a gaff into them. When he lifts them to the rail, he hits them across the back of head with a miniature pick handle. Locally it is known as a "pacifier" and sometimes as a "priest."

...Spanish mackerel and kings are good eating. It is well, however, to bleed each as soon as possible. You can clean and fillet them, or get it done at any of the fish houses at the docks. And it is no trouble to get a barrel full.

...In fact, many fishermen who go to the coast now in station wagons take along a plastic 26-gallon garbage container. They fill it with fish and then pack it with chipped ice. After covering the fish with a layer of ice they stuff the top of the container with newspapers or some other insulation, before closing the lid.

...Fish will ride for several hundred miles, so packed, without your having to add more ice. Once home they can be placed in the deep freeze for future use.

...Both mackerel and kings are wonderful for barbecuing over charcoal or for smoking. Which leads to this suggestion. A friend tells of a good way to smoke fish, or wild game. Buy an old electric refrigerator, which you can get for a few bucks.

...Take out the motor equipment. Bore a couple of deep holes near the top of the box. Place your meat on the refrigerator shelves, with cedar or mesquite charcoal in a pan at the bottom.

...The coals should smoulder very slowly from four to six hours, depending on the toughness of the meat. The cooking will be done entirely with the hot smoke.

...It will take some experimenting to know just how long your meat should be smoked for the right taste and tenderness, but my friends say it is well worth your while.

...WEBER CALLS 'EM NAMES —Weber has become name conscious. That well known firm has changed its name. It's no longer The Weber Lifelike Fly Co. of Stevens Point, Wis. It's now Weber Tackle Company.

...And what do you think the company calls its newest lure? They have monickered it the Big Name lure. It's a namesake to the earlier fly casting lure, which for the lack of a name they called the Name lure.

Oh, boy... you name it, they got it!

...Anyway, Big Name is a fuzzy little outfit. It's a jig with a fluffy trailer of genuine marabou feathers covering a well-hidden hook. Looks like a honey for spinning and casting.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

You took all the youngsters went fishing last Saturday stood them side by side, it made a long line of happy kids.

Also if you strung out, end to end all the fishing worms that same youngsters used for it would make a line ten times longer.

This just points up the fact worms get the first call to when a boy goes fishing. Fact of the matter is—the worms are about the most widely used of all natural fish bait.

Worms will run a close second. Then come crawfish, crickets, grasshoppers, beetles, and a wide variety of insects that usually can be used without much trouble, and in your own back yard or near the creek.

There are some tricks about starting, keeping, and using worms in various baits.

Let's talk about the earthworm. Although he likes his moist, the earthworm is a resident of water. Only when he ever gets in the drink, about man's aid, is to be used there when it rains, or dropped there when a piece of bank crumbles off.

Water resident or not, nearly all fish recognizes the worm as something to eat, and acts accordingly.

rich, loamy, clay soil is

the earthworm's favorite kind of habitat. This, because it contains plenty of organic matter which is his food. Most gardens contain the kind of soil that's right for worms, and good gardens are kept well-watered.

A little garden digging normally will produce enough worms for a day at the creek. In fact, many a youngster, forced into hard labor in the cabbage patch, with a spading fork on Saturday morning, has consoled himself with the thought that his efforts will yield bait for the afternoon diversion. About the cabbages, he couldn't care less.

Worms go deep when the earth is dry. Water it, and the worms will be there next day. Or put down some wide boards and pour the dishwasher over them. If there are worms in the soil, they will congregate under the boards in a few days, to eat the food in the dishwasher.

Keeping worms for a short period of time require no effort. Simply put them into a container with some of the soil in which they were found. Add a little water from time to time, but don't drown them. If they are to be kept for longer periods, the worms should be fed occasionally. Here again dishwasher will do. Or use some vegetable shortening mixed with cornmeal, or bread crumbs. Just be sure to keep the container in a cool place.

You can maintain a permanent supply of worms by utilizing a hardwood box sunk into the ground. Bore a couple of holes in the bottom for drainage, and cover these with copper wire screening, so the worms can't escape. Plug all cracks in the box for the same reason. Fill the box with alternate layers of soil and dead leaves. Add worms. Feed occasionally. It is a good idea to cover the box to keep out excessive moisture in the rainy season, and to maintain coolness. Contribute water in small amounts when the weather is dry, and you'll always have

STEERED INTO DEATH—A broken steering wheel encircles the head of George Laureano, 32, Brooklyn, N. Y., as he sits grotesquely in death after the car he was driving crashed head-on into a station wagon at Oakdale, N. Y. The accident also claimed the lives of a passenger in Laureano's car and a station wagon passenger. Eight other persons were injured.

There are two thousand-odd varieties of earthworms in the world, but you don't care about that, and neither does the fish. He can't tell them apart any more than you can, nor does he know their Latin names. All he knows that the thing is good to eat, and he will go for same when it is properly presented, which brings us to another aspect of the subject.

Presentation is one of the most important factors in fishing success. The big secret is to offer the bait naturally... the way the fish is accustomed to seeing it. Thus, as relates to the worm—he can't swim, so he always drifts with the current. If there is no current, he drifts from top to bottom, and stays there, wriggling enough to call attention to himself.

The ordinary cane pole fisherman will ignore this precept. He will rig up a hook, line and sinker, attach a worm, and let the thing dangle there, five or six feet down, until times get better. Sometimes he catches fish, and sometimes, when the fish are in the mood, he catches a lot. But over the long haul he would do much better if he observed the rules of presentation.

Take bream, for instance. The bream (colloquially perch—also bluegill, etc.) is the prize fish of the beginner. He bites readily on earthworms and other baits. And he is mighty tasty in the pan. And at least one authority says that the bluegill, for his size, is the toughest fighter of all game fish. More bream are caught on earthworms than on any other bait.

It shouldn't be necessary to say that for bream a fisherman should use a very small hook. Also just enough earthworm to cover the bend and part of the shank. But I've seen bream fishermen—beginners, obviously—with hooks much too large, baited with earthworms the size of a boy's little finger. That's too much hook and too much worm for a bream, which has a very small mouth.

Use everything small for bream. Spinning gear is wonderful. Here's a place where you can go to the ultra-light tackle, which is coming to be of considerable interest to the masters these days. Take a feather-weight rod such as Conolon is making in a five-foot length. Ideally, you'd use an Italian Alcedo Micon reel. But that's out of the price range of most of us who work for a living. The Japanese are making a little reel that will do, and the price is modest. It's called the Golden Cub.

Fill your reel with 2-pound nylon monofilament, and you've got the right outfit for bream. You want a "perch" hook, and that means a small one. A tiny split shot is enough weight. No bobber is necessary where you have a current that will drift the worm down to where the fish are. If the fish are congregated in one place, say around an old submerged brush pile, about six feet under, then you may want to put on the float accordingly.

Bait sparingly. Drift the worm into the place where the bream are. And you're in business.

The earthworm is also a fine bait for catfish. But here you use different tackle, of course, as well as a different way of baiting the hook. If you're going for catfish, don't think of "ultra-light" tackle. If you think of spinning gear at all, it should be very heavy stuff, with not less than 10-pound test line.

For catfish, you want a larger hook with a gob of worms. All should be hooked through once or twice with the ends left sticking out, so they will wriggle. Toss this kind of bait into a hole where a catfish lives and you're likely to get action.

We started out to write about natural baits and used up all this space dealing with worms. In another column we'll talk about some of the other natural baits and how best to use them.

You took all the youngsters went fishing last Saturday. They were on their side by side, it would make a long line of happy kids. If you strung out, end to all the fishing worms that same youngsters used for the same purpose. It would make a line ten feet long.

Just points up the fact that worms get the first call to when a boy goes fishing. Fact of the matter is—the worm is about the most widely used of all natural fish bait. Worms will run a close second. Then come crawfish, grasshoppers, and a wide variety of other insects that usually can be used without much trouble. In your own back yard or in the creek.

There are some tricks about worm keeping, and using them as bait. The earthworm is a resident of water. Only when he ever gets in the drink, man's aid, is to be used there when it rains, or when a piece of bread crumbles off. Water resident or not, nearly all fish recognizes the worm as something to eat, and acts accordingly. Rich, loamy, clay soil is the earthworm's favorite kind of habitat. This, because it contains plenty of organic matter which is his food. Most gardens contain the kind of soil that's right for worms, and good gardens are kept well-watered.

A little garden digging normally will produce enough worms for a day at the creek. In fact, many a youngster, forced into hard labor in the cabbage patch, with a spading fork on Saturday morning, has consoled himself with the thought that his efforts will yield bait for the afternoon diversion. About the cabbages, he couldn't care less.

Worms go deep when the earth is dry. Water it, and the worms will be there next day. Or put down some wide boards and pour the dishwasher over them. If there are worms in the soil, they will congregate under the boards in a few days, to eat the food in the dishwasher.

Keeping worms for a short period of time require no effort. Simply put them into a container with some of the soil in which they were found. Add a little water from time to time, but don't drown them. If they are to be kept for longer periods, the worms should be fed occasionally. Here again dishwasher will do. Or use some vegetable shortening mixed with cornmeal, or bread crumbs. Just be sure to keep the container in a cool place. You can maintain a permanent supply of worms by utilizing a hardwood box sunk into the ground. Bore a couple of holes in the bottom for drainage, and cover these with copper wire screening, so the worms can't escape. Plug all cracks in the box for the same reason. Fill the box with alternate layers of soil and dead leaves. Add worms. Feed occasionally. It is a good idea to cover the box to keep out excessive moisture in the rainy season, and to maintain coolness. Contribute water in small amounts when the weather is dry, and you'll always have worms. There are two thousand-odd varieties of earthworms in the world, but you don't care about that, and neither does the fish. He can't tell them apart any more than you can, nor does he know their Latin names. All he knows that the thing is good to eat, and he will go for same when it is properly presented, which brings us to another aspect of the subject.

STEERED INTO DEATH—A broken steering wheel encircles the head of George Laureano, 32, Brooklyn, N. Y., as he sits grotesquely in death after the car he was driving crashed head-on into a station wagon at Oakdale, N. Y. The accident also claimed the lives of a passenger in Laureano's car and a station wagon passenger. Eight other persons were injured.

Presentation is one of the most important factors in fishing success. The big secret is to offer the bait naturally. . . . the way the fish is accustomed to seeing it. Thus, as relates to the worm—he can't swim, so he always drifts with the current. If there is no current, he drifts from top to bottom, and stays there, wriggling enough to call attention to himself.

The ordinary cane pole fisherman will ignore this precept. He will rig up a hook, line and sinker, attach a worm, and let the thing dangle there, five or six feet down, until times get better. Sometimes he catches fish, and sometimes, when the fish are in the mood, he catches a lot. But over the long haul he would do much better if he observed the rules of presentation.

Take bream, for instance. The bream (colloquially perch—also bluegill, etc.) is the prize fish of the beginner. He bites readily on earthworms and other baits. And he is mighty tasty in the pan. And at least one authority says that the bluegill, for his size, is the toughest fighter of all game fish. More bream are caught on earthworms than on any other bait.

It shouldn't be necessary to say that for bream a fisherman should use a very small hook. Also just enough earthworm to cover the bend and part of the shank. But I've seen bream fishermen—beginners, obviously—with hooks much too large, baited with earthworms the size of a boy's little finger. That's too much hook and too much worm for a bream, which has a very small mouth.

Use everything small for bream. Spinning gear is wonderful. Here's a place where you can go to the ultra-light tackle, which is coming to be of considerable interest to the masters these days. Take a feather-weight rod such as Conolon is making in a five-foot length. Ideally, you'd use an Italian Alcedo Micron reel. But that's out of the price range of most of us who work for a living. The Japanese are making a little reel that will do, and the price is modest. It's called the Golden Cub.

Fill your reel with 2-pound nylon monofilament, and you've got the right outfit for bream. You want a "perch" hook, and that means a small one. A tiny split shot is enough weight. No bobber is necessary where you have a current that will drift the worm down to where the fish are. If the fish are congregated in one place, say around an old submerged brush pile, about six feet under, then you may want to put on the float accordingly.

Bait sparingly. Drift the worm into the place where the bream are. And you're in business.

The earthworm is also a fine bait for catfish. But here you use different tackle, of course, as well as a different way of baiting the hook. If you're going for catfish, don't think of "ultra-light" tackle. If you think of spinning gear at all, it should be very heavy stuff, with not less than 10-pound test-line. For catfish, you want a larger hook with a gob of worms. All should be hooked through once or twice with the ends left sticking out, so they will wriggle. Toss this kind of bait into a hole where a catfish lives and you're likely to get action.

We started out to write about natural baits and used up all this space dealing with worms. In another column we'll talk about some of the other natural baits and how best to use them.

TEXAS TOPS IN NATIONAL BEEF PICTURE

In the two short years since the infamous seven-year drought ended, Texas cattlemen have prevailed over staggering odds. For not only have they replenished and replaced their drought-depleted herds; they have managed to increase Texas cattle production to 17 per cent above the pre-drought level of 1949.

The bounce-back for Texas cattle has been simultaneous with a general surge in beef production throughout the South. In Texas, however, the story has been as much one of progress in methods of production as in increase which will likely keep Texas out front.

The progress in Texas lies mainly in the large-scale drylot finishing enterprises now flourishing in areas where comparatively few existed before. Local production of feed grains for finishing has also been a prime factor.

In the Panhandle and other parts of West Texas, the discovery that milo would produce so much feed per acre, and that cattle eating this grain would make such efficient gains have brought about much large-scale feeding, and more cattle today are being fed locally in drylot than are going to slaughter right off grass or moving to other parts of the country for finishing.

Cattle for commercial feeding are procured from local ranches and also from East Texas which has shown a marked increase in numbers of cattle produced in recent years. In contrast with the farm feedlot with its average 50-100 head on feed, the Texas-size commercial feedlots often handle from 4,000 to 5,000 head. On a ration of milo, cottonseed meal, cottonseed hulls for roughage and milo bundle feed, steers often show gains of from 2 1/4 to 2 1/2 pounds daily.

Of course, pasture and hay are the backbone of beef cattle production in the South, and improved range and forage conditions have helped bring about the impressive performance gains of Southern cattle. Quality of cattle in Texas and the South have improved to as astounding a degree as have numbers of cattle increased.

The future of agriculture in Texas and the South lies to a great extent in the production of meat animals, and it is significant that Texas continues to stay out front in progress and production of the nation's livestock.

Questions And Answers About Social Security

Question: I am 52 years old and have worked under social security since it began, and I have averaged about $2,400 a year in earnings. Recently, my health has been failing me. What would happen in the event that I am unable to work due to my poor physical condition? I have a wife and two children under age 18. What benefits would be payable?

Answer: A totally disabled person 50 years of age or older who has averaged $2,400 a year may qualify for disability insurance payments in the amount of $84 a month. His wife and minor children would be eligible for a monthly payment in the amount of $77.70.

Question: My son died in 1954, and I was entirely dependent on him at the time of his death. I did not file a certificate of support within the two-year period because he was survived by a widow and children, and it did not seem then that I could ever qualify for payments. Am I now barred from social security payments?

Answer: No. The 1958 amendments provided for an extension

INDIAN INTELLIGENCE

Austin, April 19, 1859.—We stop the press to give the following Indian news:

Mr. Charles E. Barnard and Captain Marlin, just from the Brazos Agency, report that the entire area of frontier country, some distance above Belton, extending from the Colorado to the Trinity River, is overrun by small thieving bands, say from three to ten of Nohonie and Tenewish Indians. These are tribes of the Northern Comanches, a portion of whom felt the retributive vengeance of our government, in the chastisement received from the brave Ford and dashing Van Dorn.

On the 8th instant, a party of these devils, consisting of five men, had a desperate and fatal encounter with William Holden, whom they finally killed and scalped. Holden was armed only with a six-shooter, with which from the evidences of violence near the scene of conflict, he fought like a tiger at bay, killing one of his assailants and probably severely wounding a second.—When found, his body was pierced by twenty-eight arrows.

On account of the late excitement of the frontier counties against them, the Reserve Indians have abandoned their farms and concentrated for protection near the Agency buildings. They are furnishing the United States troops with scouts, and are aiding the citizens whenever called upon in the recovery of stolen property.

Captain Plummer, about the 12th inst., arrived at the Reserve with a well furnished company of troops. Capt. Ford is expected to arrive in Austin today. — Austin Southern Intelligencer.

Special questions on migration will be asked in the April Current Population Survey, according to Supervisor James W.

Professor Lyon found a plant in the interior of Asia, the powdered leaves of which is certain death to garden insects, ants, roaches, bugs, fleas, ticks, moths & etc. A small amount of the powder will preserve a garden of plants, and rid a house of all these annoying pests. It is free from poison and harmless to mankind and domestic animals. It is far more valuable to preserving crops than guano in making them grow. Many worthwhile limitations are advertised. The only genuine is signed E. Lyon. It can be ordered through any merchant.

Similar migration questions asked in the Current Population Survey last year revealed that 33 million people, or 19.8 per cent of the 168 million persons in the civilian population one year old and over, moved from one house to another between March 1957 and March 1958.

Two-thirds, or 22 million, of the movers in the 1957-1958 period changed residences within the same county. One-third, or about 11 million, moved from one county to another, with this group divided about half and half between intrastate and interstate movers.

The West continued to have the most mobile population, 26.7 per cent having moved in the 1957-1958 period. The mobility rate for the South was next highest with 22.8 per cent, while the rate for the North Central Region was 18.2 per cent and the Northeast, 14.3 per cent.

The migration questions will be in addition to the regular monthly Current Population Survey inquiries on employment and unemployment. Current Population Survey information will be collected locally during the week of April 20 by Mrs. Nella P. Casbeer of Lampasas.

Longhorn Caverns Feature Weekend Economy Vacatoin

Families with a yen to "get away from it all" without unduly straining the budget should be posted on the vacation specials in and around the Highland Lakes area of Burnet, Marble Falls, and Lampasas.

Modern motels and new resorts offer a variety of lake-side accommodations. For many families, the beautiful countryside and balmy weather invite camping out in wooded sites within Longhorn Cavern State Park.

Wherever you stay, weekend rates are reasonable and usually include facilities for boating or swimming in one of the Highland Lakes... golfing at a nearby country club... or horseback riding along scenic trails.

One day will certainly be spent exploring Texas Longhorn Cavern, which this year boasts better than ever touring facilities. A complete new system and concept of lighting within the Cavern has unveiled all sorts of new formations and enhanced such famous sights as the Hall of Diamonds and the Queen's Room. Above the ground, visitors may now lounge and sip a cool drink on the new redwood-slatted veranda of the Administration Building, or stroll the freshly-landscaped grounds.

Tours through Longhorn Cavern leave every day every hour.

STATE CAPITAL (Continued from Page One)

Proposed bill would create the Texas Development Board to supervise tourist advertising by the Highway Department and industry advertising by the Texas Industrial Commission.

Sen. George Parkhouse, an advertising man from Dallas, objected, not to the idea of state advertising, but to the way it would be handled. He declared the suggested $100,000 appropriation would be wasted.

But the bill gained final approval in the Senate and next-to-final passage in the House.

Fire-Police Bill Gains — A shorter work week for many city firemen and policemen is near to legislative approval.

Senate has passed the bill finally, and a House committee has recommended passage.

Bill limits firemen's working hours to 72 in cities of 10,000 to 60,000 population, 63 hours in cities of 60,000 to 125,000 and 60 hours for all larger than 125,000. Policemen would work the same hours as other city employees.

City officials have protested the measure would raise local expenses and aggravate an already acute revenue-raising problem.

Texas Derby? — Not given much chance of passing, but exciting some interest is a proposal to legalize horse racing and betting in Texas.

Rep. Homer Koliba of Columbus introduced the measure which was sent to a House subcommittee. Thoroughbred horse breeders pointed out that legalized pari-mutual betting could bring in a lot of tax money.

Opponents, including Dr. W. R. White, president of Baylor University, charged it would bring on crime, poverty and immorality.

Pari-mutual betting was outlawed in Texas in the thirties, but proposals to return it come up frequently, always giving rise to lively legislative debate.

Short Snorts—A youth vs. age battle was abandoned when the House failed to give enough votes to a proposed constitutional amendment to raise minimum age for Senators from 26 to 30, House members from 21 to 25. Opponents countered with a measure to set maximum age for legislators at 60.

Guards are needed by the Texas Department of Corrections, according to Director O. B. Ellis. Men interested in permanent employment by the department should contact J. F. Heard, assistant director in charge of business and custody, Box 32, Huntsville.

Mrs. George Denman Jr., La-Juana, Paul and Garry spent Sunday in Dublin with their parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Black. Mr. Denman is in Allegan, Michigan, where he will be working this week.

U. S. NO OASIS FOR CAMEL—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, former First Lady, is shown (left) in Beer-sheba, Israel, with Duchess, the baby camel she bought for her granddaughter, Nina (right), 16, and planned to raise at Hyde Park, N. Y. But the Agricultural Department has barred entrance of such animals on the ground that they come from countries where hoof and mouth disease exists.
