every package.

Important to Know

To secure Alabastine results you must get Alabastine; it is necessary to see that the package has the word "Alabastine" and the cross and circle printed in red.

When employing the services of a painter ask him to bring the Alabastine in unbroken packages and mixed on the job. This he will be glad to do to convince you that he is giving you what you desire and pay for.

Alabastine Over Painted Walls

Have you had the experience after going to considerable expense to paint your walls, on the theory that they would be washable the same as your woodwork, of finding that after washing them they were grimy, streaked and unsatisfactory? Have you hesitated at the expense of again repainting them?

If the paint is solid on the wall and not scaling, go over it with a coat of Alabastine and be pleasantly surprised as to effects produced and saving effected. Alabastine may even be used over old soiled wallpaper that is firm on the wall not printed in aniline dyes or with raised figures.

You Can Always Get Alabastine There is hardly a town where Alabastine is not carried in stock by dealers who carry paints. If you do not find it and are offered something else claimed to be just as good, write us and we will tell you how to easily secure Alabastine.

is greatly relieved by constitutional treat-ment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE ment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions.

Some More Truths.

WOULD you use a steam shovel to move a pebble? Certainly not. Implements are built according to the work they have to do.

Would you use a grown-up's remedy for your baby's ills? Certainly not. Remedies are prepared according to the work THEY have to do.

All this is preliminary to reminding you that Fletcher's Castoria was sought out, found and is prepared solely as a remedy for Infants and Children. And let this be a warning against Substitutes, Counterfeits and the Just-as-good stuff that may be all right for you in all your strength, but dangerous for the little babe.

All the mother-love that lies within your heart cries out to you: Be true to Baby. And being true to Baby you will keep in the house remedies specially prepared for babies as you would a baby's food, hairbrush, toothbrush or sponge.

Children Cry For

Are You Prepared?

A doctor in the house all the time would be a good idea. Yet you can't afford to keep a doctor in the family to keep baby well or prevent sickness. But you can do almost the same thing by having at hand a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, because it is a wonderful remedy for indigestion, colic, feverishness, fretfulness and all the other disorders that result from common ailments that babies have.

Fletcher's Castoria is perfectly safe to use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria, and mothers recommend it because they have found it a comfort to children and a mother's friend.

If you love your baby, you know how sweet it is to be able to help baby when trouble comes. You cannot always call upon a doctor. But doctors have nothing but good to say of Fletcher's Castoria, because they know that it can only do good - that it can't do any harm and they wouldn't want you to use for baby a remedy that you would use for yourself.

MOTHERS SHOULD READ THE BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

A DAY WITH SALADS.

A salad may be prepared of almost any edible food. Beginning the meal, a mixture of fruit is called a cocktail, and may con-the balls, and the fruit should be ripe but firm. Fill the g'asses with the golden balls and pour over a nutmeg sauce, using orange juice, a dash of lemon, sugar and grated nutmeg for flavor. Cool, and pour over the muskmelons, and serve with a sprig of mint of chervil for a garnish. sauce of ginger sirup with some of the canton ginger added, finely chopped, makes a delightful combination for those who enjoy ginger.

Date Salad .- Cut an orange into sections, using care to keep them whole, removing the connecting tissue; add one cupful of diced celery, one-half cupful of nut meats broken in bits and two cupfuls of diced apple with onehalf cupful of dates. Add a spoonful of lemon juice, and serve with any good, well-seasoned salad dressing.

A most delicious salad combination is apple, pear and celery. Add any desired salad dressing and serve on head lettuce hearts. Shred the apple, celery and pears in uniform strips, marinate with French dressing for an hour before serving.

Salad combinations are not always easy to conform to the recipe in hand. One must use imagination and substitution-a bit of this and a bit of that, much tasting and an eye for garnishing will make a pleasing salad out of odds of foods that would otherwise go to waste.

CAUSE FOR UNTHRIFTY PIGS

Dr. Evvard of Iowa Station Suggests That Round Worms May Be at Bottom of Trouble.

When young pigs are not doing well, it may be that round worms are the cause of their unthriftiness. A 100-pound shote at the Iowa experiment station was very unthrifty. It was killed and examined. John M. Evvard, in charge of swine feeding work, says that in one-half foot of that hog's intestine there were 63 worms that weighed two-fifths of a pound.

To prevent such conditions, keep the plgs growing. Feed well. Keep the lots clean and free from rubbish, Drain the pastures and lots. For emergency cases use santonin and calomel, about five to ten grains each for a 100-pound pig. or 71/2 to 15 grains each for a 200 to 300-pound pig. It may also be well to allow free access to such condiments as air-slaked lime, charcoal, dack coal, powdered sulphur, glauber's salts and common salt, these being allowed free choice style, each being placed in a separate comportment of a self feeder.

HORSE SHORTAGE IS FEARED

Secretary Dinsmore of Horse Associa tion Says Demand for Draft Animal Is Strong.

Reporting the fact that citizens of Denver recently rejected an ordinance which, if passed, would have made it a horseless city, Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse Association of America, says in a recent communication received by the animal husbandry division at University farm:

"We need more good draft horses. The demand for them is stronger and history, and unless everything possible is done to bring about horse quantities of celery, then a generous breeding we will have a shortage in coming years which will materially increase the cost of production and transportation."

FURNISH FOALS WITH GRAIN

When Pastures Begin to Dry Up Young Animals Must Have Feed for Best Development.

As the pastures commence to dry up the proper development of the foal calls for the feeding of a little grain in order to maintain the milk fat and keep the foal developing to the best advantage. Colts that belong to working mares should have a separate feed box and receive a little grain each time the mother is fed. Those on pasture should be provided with a creep where grain can be kept available for the foal at all times. If these methods are followed the colt will continue to gain and will not shrink when weaning time comes.

EWES DISOWN THEIR LAMBS

Trouble Sometimes Overcome by Penning Mother Up With Her Young-Other Plans.

Ewes that will not own their lambs may sometimes be induced to do so by penning ewes up and forcing them to permit the lamb to suck, a few lessons of this sort usually being sufficient. Some shepherds moisten the lamb's head and neck with the ewe's milk, claiming that this will make the swe own the lamb. Shutting the ewe and her lamb by themselves for a few days should prove effective, though a vicious ewe will sometimes kill her own lamb if shut up alone with it.

GOOD ROADS AID PROSPERITY

Instance Cited of Virginia Community Where Great Progress Has Been Accomplished.

That good roads are closely related to prosperity there is no question of doubt. Only a few years ago this section of Virginia had but one macadam road, one creamery, which went to the wall, and a mere handful of pure-bred dairy cattle, writes C. C. Conger, Jr., of Virginia in the Practical Farmer. One not familiar with the many blessings good roads bring about might wonder in what way good roads would affect creameries and pure-bred cows. Let us take, for instance, Rockingham county, and see just what good roads did in this section in the dairy business alone, to say nothing of the prosperity good roads brought about in various other ways. Previous to our good roads the one creamery did some business during the summer months, when the dirt roads were at their best, but business dwindled to nothing during the winter months because farmers could not get over the roads to deliver their milk The creamery finally closed down for the lack of milk. About this time a mere handful of progressive farmers began a movement for better roads, calling a meeting at a little village centrally located in the county. The attendance was good, and a great deal of "good roads" enthusiasm was aroused. It was the first step in better roads that gained impetus by leaps and bounds. Today, in a few short years, we bave a network of fine mac adam roads throughout the entire county. Following good roads came creamerles. They sprang up over night like mushrooms, till today the county is dotted with creameries, the sight of which does not look much like closing down for the lack of milk, par- real joy is added to her satisfaction ticularly during the early hours of the day, when auto trucks are pouring in the style that has been wrought into are smart but less spirited suits of from the country, bringing milk from these practical belongings-style that tweed with plain skirts and mannish every nook and corner of the county. Ask him what brought the creameries. and he will tell you better roads, While milk has slumped somewhat at times in this section, it has never halted the dairy business, and farmers are now reporting fair profits in dairying. The wealth that good roads has brought to this section in dairying alone is astonishing. We are striving for more wealth and prosperity by building still more good roads. Experience has taught us that good roads, wealth and prosperity go

ROAD MARKERS AID TOURISTS

Trunk Highways Designated by Number to Correspond With One on Official Map.

Since the adoption of a standardized system of highway markers by the state of Wisconsin, five other states and England have followed the model plan. Each of the state trunk highways is designated by number to correspond to the number on the official road map. Markers have been placed at close intervals carrying the number shown on the map, making it easy for the tourist to reach the most remote villages in the state.

QUESTION OF TREE PLANTING

Problem Is Worthy of Very Much More Consideration Than Is Usually Given It.

What kind of tree should one plant beside one's home? asks Good Housekeeping. Obviously it should be a fast grower. Also it should be ornamental. Preferably it should give a shade that is lefty and not too dense. A produc tive tree will answer as well as one that is merely ornamental. If a grafted tree is planted rather than a seedling it will produce in a very few years.

Nut trees are both ornamental and productive. The black walnut and the pecan seem to be well suited to this sort of planting. Why not try one or the other, or possibly both, one on each side of the house?

The black walnut is a rapid grower, reaches large size, and has foliage of great beauty. A mature tree will produce a great quantity of nuts. The pecan is also large and beautiful, as well as long-lived. Among the most beautiful and stately of the trees at Mount Vernon are pecan trees planted by George Washington and still in excellent condition. Commonly one thinks of the pecan as a tree for warm latitudes only. Both it and the English walnut will thrive much farther north than is commonly supposed. For planting near the house, then, the black walnut, the pecan or a good shagbark tree would be an excellent choice. The foliage of the walnut is always beautiful and in the fall the leaves of both the hickory and the pe can are symphonies in brown.

ECONOMIC VALUE OF PAINT

Great Mistake to Imagine That the Only Use of the Brush is for Ornamentation.

Observation in most localities leaves the impression that too many A great many property owners seem to assume that the use of the paint the average man, if he can forego the pleasure of having ornamentation about. But painting is not chiefly valuable for ornamentation. It is chiefly valuable for sánitation, greater life, better service.

While paint does, of course, serve to improve the appearance of property, it is far more useful for protection than for ornament. A small amount of money and work expended in keeping a valuable piece of machinery painted will greatly add to its length of life. The same may be said of buildings. Another useful object which is accomplished by painting is the improved sanitary condition of buildings and outhouses. The cost of such work (painting) is small, the necessary equipment is not expensive, and with proper care this will last a lifetime.

Beacons for Motorists. The flashing beacon used on the high seas by the leading nations of the world is now to be used as a highway guide for motorists.

Like the beacon at sea, the city traffic is an unwatched light, automatic in operation for months at a time. Fuel is supplied by an acetylene gas accumulator in the base.

To these beacons and highway lighthouses is applied the national system of colors approved by the committee of standards of the American Association of State Highway Officials, and by other national organizations and many cities in the United States. Red is used for first degree danger, yellow for second degree, and green for traffic danger only.

Two hundred cities are reported to have standardized on this national color signaling, which is that of the railroad systems, and almost as many have made installation of the flashing light traffic beacon as an effective warning for drivers who are partially, or wholly, color blind, and those who find it hard to distinguish the ordinary signal from other city lights.

The flashing beacon is the invention of Dr. Gustav Dalen, winner of the Nobel prize in physics in 1912.—From The Motor.

Advantages of City Planning.

"City planning is merely a common sense set of rules and regulations for the city's growth," declares Charles A. Favrot, an ardent advocate of the proposed "City Planning Commission.

"A city plan shows where homes should be built, where industries should be located, and how traffic should be regulated so as to carry people from one part of the city to another with the minimum delay, while at the same time protecting the city's paving and the lives of its children."

Diamonds in China.

The gold mining bureau of Kwangyinshan, Kirin province, China, has discovered deposits of diamonds in a gold mine now being worked, says Millard's Review. The stones are large and of an appreciable fineness, and specialists have given the opinion that brown falls over it. The spirited hat chic to have hat, shoes, dress, gloven the deposit is worth while as a working proposition.

Do you discriminate at the Jining table-or are you thoughtless?

In thousands of homes, a "line" is drawn at the breakfast table. Tea or coffee is served for grown-ups" and Postum for children. But some parents do not discriminate. Caffeine and tannin, the injurious contents of coffee and tea, seriously retard the development of the delicate nerve tissues in children.

Consequently, instead of rich, satisfying Postum, children are over stimulated by the drugs in tea and coffee; and so may grow up irritable and nervous. Any doctor can tell you that this is a great evil and should be corrected.

Although some parents feel a certain justification for the personal indulgence in coffee, yet the harm to them may pe equally serious. It may take a little while longer for the drugs in coffee and tea to affect an older person, but in many cases the nervous system and allied bodily functions will become weakened. The surest way to avoid such possibilities is to quit coffee entirely and drink Postum instead. The change permits you to get sound, restful sleep.

Postum is the wellknown, meal-time beverage. Like thousands of others you will like it because, in flavor, it is much like a high-grade coffee.

Do away with the distinction at the table. Serve delicious Postum, piping hot, to all the family. One week's trial and it is likely that you'll never return to tea and coffee. Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those v-ho prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

CHAPTER XII.

The Admiral Has His Say.

The admiral's face was naturally at Dyck Calhoun, a steely hardness spare, but his bearing had dignity and every motion significance. He had had his high moment with the French admiral, had given his commands to the fleet and had arranged the disposition of the captured French ships. He was in good spirits, and the wreckage in the fleet seemed not to shake his nerve, for he had lost in men far less than the enemy, and had captured many ships-a good day's work, due finally to the man in sailor's clothes standing there with Captain Ivy. The admiral took in the dress of Calhoun at a glance—the trousers of blue cloth, the sheath-knife belt, the stockings of white silk, the loose, unstarched collar, the fine black silk handkerchief at the throat, the waistcoat of red kerseymere, the shoes like dancing pumps, and the short, round -a seaman complete. I've brought her the Ariadne. She always had the repudidly upheld that reputation. How did you manage it, Mr. Calhoun?"

Dyck briefly told how the lieutenants were made, and how he himself had been enormously indebted to Greenock, the master of the ship.

The admiral smiled sourly, "I have little power until I get instructions from the admiralty, and that will take some time. Meanwhile, the Ariadne shall go on as she is, and as if she raight from the channel to find this were—and had been from the first—a member of my own squadron."

Dyck bowed, explained what reforms he had created in the food and provisions of the Ariadne, and expressed a hope that nothing should be altered. He declared the ship had proved herself, chiefly because of his

"Besides, she's been badly hammered. She's got great numbers of wounded and dead, and for many a day the men will be busy with repairs." "For a man without naval experience, for a mutineer, an ex-convict and g usurper, you've done quite well, Mr. Calhoun; but my instructions were, if you fell into my hands, to try you and hang you." At this point Captain Ivy intervened. "Sir," he said, "the instructions you eceived were general. They could not anticipate the special service which the Ariadne has rendered to the king's fleet. I have known Mr. Calhoun; I have visited at his father's house; I was with him on his journey to Dublin, which was the beginning of his bad luck. I would beg of you, sir, to give Mr. Calhoun his parole on sea and land until word comes from the admiralty as to what, in the circumstances, his 'ate shall be."

"To be kept on the Beatitude on parole!" exclaimed the admiral.

"Land or sea, Captain Ivy said. I'm as well born as any man in the king's fleet," declared Dyck. "I've as clean a record as any officer in his majesty's navy, save for the dark fact that I was put in prison for killing a man; and I will say here, in the secrecy of an admiral's cabin, that the man I killed-or was supposed to kill-was a traitor. If I did kill him, he deserved death by whatever hand it came. I care not what you do with me"-his hands clenched, his shoulders drew up, his eyes blackened with the dark fire of his soul-"whether you put me on parole, or try me by court-martial, or hang me from the yard-arm. I've done a piece of work of which I'm not out of mutiny, sailed her down the seas for many weeks, disciplined her, drilled her, trained her, fought her; helped to give the admiral of the West put ashere at Jamaica, I'll keep my done with clear intent. My object was to save the men who, having mutinied and fled from admiralty control, are subject to capital punishment."

"Your thinking came late. You should have thought before you mutinied," was the sharp reply.

"As a common sailor I acted on my conscience, and what we asked for the admiralty has granted. Only by mutiny igorous and cheerful, but, as he looked did the admiralty yield to our demands. What I did I would do again! came into it, and gave a cynical twist We took our risks in the Thames to the lips. He was a short man, and against the guns that were leveled at us; we've taken our risks down here against the French to help save your squadron, and we've done it. The men have done it, because they've been loyal to the flag, and from first to last set to make the admiralty and the people know they have rights which must be cherished. If all your men were as faithful to the crown as are the men on the Ariadne, then they deserve well of the king. But will you put for me on paper the written word that every man now aboard the Ariadne shall be held guiltless in the eyes of the admiral of this fleet; that the present officers shall remain officers, that the reforms I have made shall become permanent? For myself, I care not; but for the men who have fought under me, I want their amnesty. And I want Michael Clones to be kept with me, blue jacket, with the flat gold buttons and Greenock, the master, and Ferens, the purser, to be kept where they are. Admiral, I think you know my demands are just. Over there on the "Captain Calhoun, eh!" he remarked Ariadne are a hundred and fifty mockingly. #### CHAPTER XIII.

With a deep sigh, the planter raised his head from the table where he was writing, and looked out upon the lands he had made his own. They lay on the Thomas river, a few hours' horseback traveling from Spanish Town, the capital, and they had the advantage of a plateau formation, with mountains in the far distance and ravines and valleys everywhere.

Now his eyes wandered over the space where were the grandilla, with its blossom like a passion-flower, the black Tahiti plum, with its bright pink tassel-blossom, and the fine mango trees, loaded half with fruit and half with bud. In the distance, were the guinea cornfields of brownish hue, the cotton fields, the long ranges of pegro houses like thatched cottages, the penguin hedges, with their beautiful red, blue, and white convolvuluses; the lime, logwood, and bread-fruit trees, the avocado-pear, the feathery bamboo, and the jack-fruit tree; and between the mountains and his own sugar estates, negro settlements and pens. He heard the flight of parrots chattering, he watched the floating bumming-bird.

It was Dyck Calhoun. With an impatient air he took up the sheets that he had been reading. Christmas day was on his nerves. The whole town of Kingston, with its twenty to thirty thousand inhabitants, had but one church. If he entered it, even today, he would have seen no more than a hundred and fifty to two hundred people; mostly mulattoes-"bronze ornaments"-and peasants in shag trousers, jackets of coarse blue cloth, and no waistcoats, with one or two magistrates, a dozen gentlemen or so, and probably twice that number of ladies. It was not an island given over to piety or to religious habits.

But let Dyck tell his own story. The papers he held were sheets of a letter he was writing to one from whom he had heard nothing since the night he enlisted in the navy, and that was nearly three years before. This was the letter:

"My Dear Friend-"You will see I address you as you added. "I mean a captain's uniform." | keep my parole. If I've done you serv- | had from you in the past. You will ice, admiral, be sure of this, it was never read this letter, but I write it as if you would. For you must know I may never hope for personal intercourse with you. I was imprisoned for killing your father, Erris Boyne, and that separates us like an abyss. It matters little whether I killed him or not; the law says I did, and the law has taken its toll of me. I was in prison for four years, and when freed I enlisted in the king's navy, a quota man, with my servant friend, Michael Clones. That was the beginning of

> was one of the mutineers of the Nore, Here followed a description of the days he had spent on the Ariadne and before, and of all that happened down to the time when he was arrested by the admiral in the West Indian sea. He told how he was sent over to the Ariadne with Captain Ivy to read the admiral's letter to the seamen, and then, by consent of the admiral, to leave again with Michael Clones for Jamaica, where he was set ashore with twenty pounds in his pocketand not on parole, by the admiral's demand. Here the letter shall again take up the story, and be a narrative' of Dyck Calhoun's life from that time until this Christmas day.

> "What to do was the question. knew no one in Jamaica-no one at all except the governor, Lord Mallow, and him I had fought with swords in Phoenix park five years before. I had not known he was governor here. I came to know it when I first saw him riding over the unpaved street into Kingston from Spanish Town with his suite, ornate with his governorship.

"Lord Mallow did not see me when I passed him in the street, but he soon should have no freedom; but the admiral had his way, and I was given freedom of the whole island till word should come from the admiralty what should be done with me.

"Well, we had-Michael and I-but twenty pounds between us; and if there was not plenty of free food in the Island, God knows what would have become of us! But there it was, fresh in every field, by every wayside. at every doorway. And one day at Kingston I met a man, one Cassandro Biatt, who had an obsession for adventure, and he came and spoke to me privately. He said he knew me from people's talk, and would I listen to him? What was there to do? He was a clean-cut rogue, if ever there was one, but a rogue of parts, as he proved; and I lent an ear.

"Now, what think you was his story? Well, but this—that off the coast of Haiti, ther was a ship which had been sunk oith every man on board, and with the ship was treasure without count ig-jewels belonging to a Spaniard of high place, who was taking them to Paris. There had been searching for the ship, but none had found it; but he, Cassandro Biatt, had sure knowledge, got from an obi-man, of the place where it lay. It would not be an expensive business, but, cheap as it was, he had no means of raising cash for the purpose; while I could, no doubt, raise the needed money if I set about it. That was how he put it to me. Would I do it?

"Why should I tell Biatt the truth about myself? He knew it. Cassandro was an accomplished liar, and a man of merit of his kind. This obiman's story I have never believed; yet how came Biatt to know where that treasure-ship was I do not know now, while I am very rich because of it all.

"Yes, out we went through the harbor of Kingston, beyond the splendid defenses of Port Royal and the menof war there, past the Palisadocs and Rock fort, and away to the place of treasure-trove. We found it-that lost galleon; and we found the treasurebox of the captain's cabin. We found gold, too; but the treasure-box was kill him. the chief thing; and we made it ours

"How I induced one of the big men of Jamaica to be banker and skipper for us need not be told; but he is one of whom men have dark sayingschiefly, I take it, because he does bold, incomprehensible things. That business paid him well, for when the rent of the ship was met, and the few men on it paid-slaves they were chieflyhe pocketed ten thousand pounds, while Biatt and I each pouched forty Aye, to be sure, Michael was in it! He is in all I do, and is as good as men of ten times his girth and history. Michael will be a rich man one day. In two years his two thousand have grown to four, and he misses no

"I'm bound to say this-one of the Is it that yesterday's dissipation-yes, straightest men I ever met, liar with- I was drunk overnight, drunk in a al, was Cassandro Biatt. He took his new way. I was drunk with the jewels and vanished up the seas in a flourish. He would not even have another try at the gold in the bowels of the ship.

"'I've got plenty to fill my paunch, and I'll go while I've enough. It's the men that don't go in time that get left in the end'-that's what he said.

"And he was right; for other met painful and wonderful days for me. I went after the gold and got some of it, and were caught by French and South American pirates and lost all they had gained. Still another group went and brought away ten thousand pounds, and lost it in fighting with Spanish buccaneers. So Biatt was right, and went away content, while I stayed here-because I must-and bought the land and house where I have my great sugar plantation. It is an enterprise of volume, but it is not beyond my capacity, and all would be well if I were normal in mind and body; but I am not. I have a past that stinks to heaven, as Shakespeare

"Men do not treat me badly here for I have property and money, and this is a land where these two things mean more than anywhere else, even more than in a republic like that where you live. But what can you expect of a chief justice who need not be a lawyer, as this one is not, and has other means of earning income which, though not disloyal, are lowering to the status of a chief justice? And not the chief justice alone. I have seen French officers entertained at Government house who were guilty of inhumanities and cruelties. The governor, Lord Mallow, is much to blame On him lies the responsibility; to him must go the discredit. For myself, I feel his enmity on every hand. I suffer from his suggestive opposition;

I am the victim of his dark moods. "If I want a concession from a local council, his hand is at work against me; if I see him in the street, I get a courtesy tossed, as you would toss a bone to a dog. If I appear at the king's ball, which is open to all on the island who are respectable, I am treated with such disdain by the viceroy of the king that all the island is

"He does not spare me in his recitals to his friends, who carry his speech abroad. His rancor against me wealth I got in the treasure ship, to prevent which he tried to prohibit my leaving the island, through the withholding of a leave-ticket to me. His argument to the local authorities was that I had no rights, that I am a murderer and a mutineer, and confined to the island, though not on parole. He almost succeeded; but the man to whom I went, the big rich man, intervened successfully-how I know not-and I was let go with my permit-ticket.

"What big things hang on small issues! If my Lord Mallow had prevented me leaving the island, I shouldn't now own a great plantation and three hundred negroes. I shouldn't be able to pay my creditors in good gold Portuguese half-johannes and Spanish silver, and give no heed to the existence of the bitt, which, as you perhaps know, is equal to fivepence in British money, such as you and I used to spend when you were queen of Ireland and I was your slave.

"Then I worshiped you as few women have been worshiped in all the days of the world-oh, cursed spite of life and time that I should have been jailed for killing your bad father! Aye, he was a bad man, and he is better in his grave than out of it, but it puts a gulf between you and me which nothing will ever bridge-unless it should some day be known I did not kill him, and then, no doubt, it will

"On my soul, I don't believe I put my sword into him; but if I did, he well deserved it, for he was worse than faithless to your mother, he was faithless to his country-he was a traitor! I did not tell that story of his treachery in court-I did not tell it because of you. You did not deserve such infamy, and the truth came not out at the trial. I, in my view, dared not lest it might injure you, and you had suffered enough-nay, more than enough-through him.

"I did not go to the United States. as you asked me to do. Is it not plain I could not? My only course was to avoid you. You see, your mother knows the truth-knows that I was jailed for killing your father and her divorced husband. Therefore, the only way to do was as I did. I could not go where you were. There should be hid from you the fact that Erris Boyne was a traitor. This is your right, in my mind. Looking back, I feel sure I could have escaped jail if I had told what I knew of Erris Boyne: and perhaps it would have been better, for I should, no doubt, have been acquitted. Yet I could not have gone to you, for I am not sure I did not

"It seems strange to me that I an as near to the United States here in Jamaica, or almost as near, as on in London is to one in Dublin; and yet one might as well be ten thousand leagues distant for all it means to her one loves in the United States, Yes, dear Shella, I love you, and I would tear out the heart of the world for you. I bathe my whole being in your beauty and your charm. I hunger for you-to stand beside you, to listen to your voice, to dip my prison thousand, and Michael two thousand. fingers into the pure cauldron of your soul and feel my own soul expand. I wonder why it is that today I feel more than I ever felt before the rare splendor of your person.

"For I have always loved you, always heard you calling me, as if from some sacred corner of a perfect world.

"For I Have Always Loved

thought of you, the longing for you. I picked a big handful of roses, and in my mind gave them into your hands. And I thought you smiled and said: "'Well done, good and faithful servant. Enter Paradise.' "So I followed you to your home in the Virginian country. It was a dream, all except the roses, and those I laid in front of the box where I keep your letters and a sketch I made of you when we were young and glad -when I was young and glad, For I am an old man, Shella, in all that makes men old. My step is quick still, my eye is sharp, and my brain beats fast, but my heart is ancient. I am an ancient of days, without hope or pleasure, save what pleasure comes in thinking of one who must ever be worshiped from afar. I wonder why I seem to feel you very near to-aloe, and it is in flower. Once only in fifty years does this aloe flower, and I pick its sweet verdure now and this letter that I am writing. It is typical of myself, for only once has my heart flowered, and it will be only once in fifty years. The perfume of the flower is like an everlasting bud from the last tree of Time. See, my Shella, your drunken, reckless lover pulls this sweet offering from his garden and offers it to you. He has no virtues; and yet he would have been a thousand times worse if you had not come into his life. He had in him the seeds of trouble, the sproutings of shame, for even in the first days of his love there in Dublin he would not restrain himself. He drank he played cards, he fought and wen. with bad company-not women, never that; but he kept the company of those through whom he came at last ? punishment for manslaughter.

"Yet, without you, who can tell what he might have been? He might have fallen so low that not the wealth of ten thousand treasure-boxes could give him even the appearance of honesty. And now he offers you what you cannot accept-can never accept-a love as deep as the life from which he came: a love that would throttle the world for you, that would force the doors of hell to bring you what you

"I look out on a world of summer beauty and of heat. I see the sheep in hundreds on the far hills of pasturage-sheep with short hair, small and sweet as any that ever came from the South Downs. I see the natives in their madras handkerchiefs. I see upon the road some planter in his ketureen-a sort of sedan chair; I see a negro funeral, with its strange cere mony and its gumbles of African drums. I see 'yam-fed planters,' on their horses, making for the burning, sandy streets of the capital. I see the Scots grass growing five and six feet high, food unsurpassed for horses -all the foliage, too-beautiful tropical trees and shrubs, and here and there a huge breeding farm. Yet I know that out beyond my sight there is the region known as Trelawney and Trelawney town, the headquarters of the Maroons, the free negroes-they who fled after the Spanish had been conquered and the British came, and who were later freed and secured by the Trelawney treaty. I know that now they are ready to rise, that they are working among the slaves; and if they rise the danger is great to the white population of the island, who are outnumbered ten to one.

Making Extraordinary Mileage a Certainty ~

Car Owners want more rubber on the tread where the wear is hardest; more gum between cord plies to perfect a resilient and powerful carcass. And they want a scientifically constructed Non Skid tread with all angles and contacts to resist skidding and give sure traction. Firestone Cord Tires have met these demands of the car owners.

Cord Tires built the Firestone way could not fail to produce mileage. Every day, from all over the country, comes the word that 10,000, 20,000 or 30,000 miles are frequent and consistent records.

Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.,

Gentlemen:-

I submit herewith the history of a 33x4 Firestone Cord tire. This tire has run 57,000 miles. I have retreaded it seven times. The average mileage to each retreading was about 7,000. I think you will agree this is a remarkable record. It is especially unusual as I know the owner to be a severe driver. However, he gives his tires

Pampa Fair Successful

Pamap, Texas .- The Agriculture Fair that was held at Pampa Texas, Oct. 4, to 5th, was a grand success, the weather was ideal, the sports was above the average, the horse races was worth while for any track, there was good races both days. On the last day the foot races and catching the greased pig was watched with much interest.

The Live Stock from different counties was of the best quality in the Texas Panhandlee, and the judging was very keen, but all reported they were well satisfied, and would be back another year, when more preparation will be made to handle the live stock department.

After all expenses was paid there was a nice balance left to start on the Fair for 1922, as the Executive Committee has served notice that a greater fair will be arranged for the coming year. The Superintendants of every department declared themselves satisfied, and would make better next year as this was the first real fair that has been held in Gray County, and the Fair will be open to the entire Panhandle in 1922.
