BRIDGE THE CANADIAN RIVER AT ADOBE WALLS

Monday, December 5, an interesting meeting in which six or eight members of the upper Panhandle took part, was held at Adobe Walls in Hutchinson County, for the purpose of discussing a plan for the construction of a bridge across the Canadian river between White Deer creek on the south and Adobe Walls on the north.

Miami and Roberts County were represented by several car loads of people who left here early Monday morning and, were joined by the Tampa delegation at the Wayside school house, eight miles north of Tampa. From this point they traveled together to the river, following the divide between White Deer and Spring Creek, both beautiful swift running streams heavily fringed with timber.

Here they were met by mounted cowboys, out from the Coble ranch to pilot the cars across the treacherous sands of the river.

A big strong team of mules, hitched to a wagon loaded with hay stood on the north bank to pull out any unfortunate enough to get stuck.

On arriving at the old "Turkey track" ranch headquarters, which was established in 1878, and is now owned and operated by W. T. Coble of Amarillo, the crowd was pleasantly greeted by the Hutchinson County people who had already gathered in large numbers to show by their presence that they were deeply interested in having the bridge built and were ready to help in any way they could with the proposition in view.

Delegates from other towns nearer Miami, with other interested persons, had already arrived. Panhandle sending the largest crowd from the south side, all gallily decorated with badges so that they are easily distinguished. They also, all the band which was stationed in the corner of the ranch front yard, where they played the popular airs of the day, greatly adding to the pleasure of the occasion. Amarillo, White Deer, Plemmons, Spearman and Frytown were also represented.

F. P. Reid, Mayor of Pampa, was master of ceremonies, and after addressing the crowd himself, and explaining the object of the meeting he called on several others for talks.

The story of the Adobe Walls Indian fight of June 28, 1874, which is now so well known by every man, woman and school child in the Panhandle but which never seems to grow old was told to the crowd, and the brave buffalo hunters, praised for their splendid courage in so successfully holding out against overwhelming numbers of savage foes.

Just out side the old picket fence which surrounded the ranch house on two sides, now worn and scarred by time, could be seen several men busily engaged in putting the finishing touch to what proved later to be a splendid barbecued beef.

Dinner was now announced. After a long ride in the open no one needed a second bidding, and soon every one was helping themselves to beef, coffee, bread and pickles which made a splendid and satisfying meal.

After dinner the entire crowd went down the valley leading to the proposed crossing, to the old battle grounds.

When the automobiles got strung out, which very near reached the end of the distance, it was found that there were forty-five.

What a contrast were those up-to-date, high powered cars to the slow moving mule and ox trains which traveled almost exactly the same route nearly forty eight years ago.

SHRINERS HOLD BARBECUE

Miami Shriners and their families are planning to have one big time today. There is to be a big barbecue at the J. O. Burnett ranch, two and a half miles southwest of town, and a calf and pig have been slaughtered to furnish the principal delicacy of the feast. The feast is to take place today noon, and Judge Ewing and Judge Coffee are chefs, who prepare the meat for the big event and the trimmings are to be furnished by the partakers of the feast.

Frank R. Jamison and R. R. Swift, of Amarillo are expected here as guests of the local club, and are to be partakers of the feast.

BAZAAR SUCCESSFUL

The bazaar given by the Presbyterian Ladies Saturday in the old Elite Confectionery was quite successful despite the raw weather. $150.35 was realized from the sale of articles.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY NOTES

The Womens Auxiliary of the American Legion had its regular meeting Tuesday. We are going to send a Christmas box to our adopted soldier boy. So each member of the Auxiliary is requested to bring some Christmas remembrance to our next meeting, December 20th, to help fill the box.

The Auxiliary will have their cooked food sale on Saturday afternoon, December 10th, at 2 o'clock, at Sanders Grocery.

bringing supplies from Dodge City, Kansas, one hundred and eighty miles north to the same objective point.

James H. Cator, of Hansford County, one of the real pioneers of the Panhandle, and who with his brother was camped only a few miles north of Adobe Walls when the fight took place and came in to the trading post the second day after the fight, was found with his wife and family.

Mr. Cator easily found the old foundation of the walls, and pointed out the exact spot where the two Shadler brothers and Billy Tyler, three of the men killed in the beginning of the fight, were buried in one grave.

This spot was staked off Monday and will be fittingly marked in the near future.

Other talks were made at this historic place by Mr. Reid, Mrs. Tom Coble and Judge Grisby, some beautiful tributes being paid to the pioneers of the Panhandle by each speaker.

If the bridging of the river at Adobe Walls can be accomplished it is the intention of the people of Hutchinson County who take great pride in the fact that this noted ground lies in their midst, to establish a tourist camping ground on the site where the fight took place.

W. T. Coble, in whose pasture the ground lays, has very generously offered to donate the ground for that purpose. It is also the intention of the people to erect a suitable monument there in memory of the five men who lie buried here and of all those who participated in the fight.

Building a bridge across the Canadian is a gigantic undertaking, but nothing big or little has ever been accomplished with out an effort. These neighbors of ours on the north west want the bridge. They need it, and the Chief sincerely hopes they get it.

BIRTHDAY DINNER PARTY

One of the most enjoyable events of the season was a dinner party given by Mrs. Oliver Elliott on last Thursday evening at her home south of town in honor of her husband's birthday.

The guests arrived promptly at six o'clock and Oliver was either greatly surprised, or knew all about it, and thought he would bluff the guests away, for on the heels of their arrival he came in driving a small black cat with white stripes down its back. I neither case it failed to have any effect on their staying for they stayed till the wee small hours of the night.

The hostess served a wonderful dinner of Turkey and all its trimmings and a delicious desert of fruit Jello with "bonels" of whipped cream.

Each guest had brought a birthday gift and these were presented to the "honoree" during the dinner hour.

After all had eaten till they could not contain another bite they played "42" and had a good time in general.

Guests as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Hunkepillar, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Liphold, Dr. and Mrs. Cole and Mother Cole, of Pampa. Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Kelley, Mrs. Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Gatlin, Mrs. Gething and son Edward. And every one present wished that Oliver would have at least a half dozen birthdays a year. Best wishes for many more.

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. Benz, 131 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives. Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth, and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. H. B. HELD, 330 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many, many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the common ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

WHISTLE BROUGHT HIM FAME

Restaurant Cook, Harry Keynton Jones, Famous as Author of "Rose of No Man's Land."

From out the bustling kitchen of a popular summer resort restaurant near St. Paul, Minn., there issued during the vacation season a hitting song and whistled ditties that sounded so strangely familiar that American Legion service men of the World War decided to investigate. They found the musician to be one Harry Keynton Jones, a five-foot-ten Cockney, also the restaurant cook.

Jones began his musical career as chef of a Winnipeg grenadier regiment during the war. Later he tended the private skillet of Gen. Sir Julian Byng at Vimy Ridge, and more important than that, he wrote "Rose of No Man's Land," the war song that had a long run of popularity. A penny whistle which he bought and played for the prime purpose of amusing his kitchen police caused his rise to music fame, he declared.

In France he was transferred to the officers' mess. There Lieutenant Colonel McRae, who later wrote "In Flanders Fields," heard the penny whistling, and the two became friends. Some time afterward they together turned out the words and music of the No Man's Land song.

Jones, wounded at Cambrai, was invalided back to Canada. After his discharge from the hospital he began a sightseeing tour of the states, depending upon his cooking ability for ready employment. He now has a song with a New York publisher which he hopes to put forth soon.

HEADS WAR DISABLED SCHOOL

Dr. Arthur Davis Dean, Veteran of the World War and Educator of Wide Experience.

Dr. Arthur Davis Dean, recently chosen by the government as school superintendent of all America's war disabled, is himself a veteran of the World War as well as an educator of wide experience and a specialist in vocational training.

During the war, Dr. Dean, a major in the sanitary corps, worked on the physical and mental rehabilitation of the sick and wounded as they were returned to the United States in almost all the large government hospitals of the country. With nine years' experience in vocational education work in New York state, he served as head of the division of vocational schools in the state department of education from 1908 to 1917, when he became professor of vocational education in Teachers' college, Columbia university. He directed the New York state prison survey in 1919 and investigated the possibilities of industrial and agricultural education in Porto Rico for the insular government.

Dr. Dean was born Sept. 15, 1872, at Cambridge, Mass., and was educated at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a member of Columbia university post of the American Legion.

ONE-ARMED VET ALMOST WON

Ernest Mastro, Second in Swimming Race; Wounded Buddies Winner and Third in Sprint.

The throng of spectators who watched the finish of an exciting sprint during a swimming meet in Madison Square Garden, New York, recently, vigorously applauded the efforts of Ernest Mastro, a little chap who brought up in second place. Their enthusiasm was heightened when the race had finished and they saw Mastro as he was climbing out of the big tank. He had lost his left arm, serving with the American forces in France, and he all but won the event by the sole power of his good right and his abundance of gameness.

However, the winner of the race, William McIntyre, also was wounded in France, the surprised crowd learned later, as was Harold E. Taylor, who finished a close third in the same match. The trio of wounded war veterans are members of the Metropolitan Life post of the American Legion, formed of men and women employees of the life insurance company who served during the World war.

LEGION MAN IS LAWMAKER

Sturgis, South Dakota Legislator, is Author of Measures in the Interests of Americanism.

The first man on the job in the morning, he further surprised legislative circles by never missing a single roll call during the time the legislature was in session. He was a chaplain in the army, he explained, in which well-known organization a man was either on the dot or ahead of it—or he wasn't!

Carroll D. Erskine, preacher-legislator of Sturgis, S. D., has carried what he learned in his country's service with him, the electorate of his state say. He left after 15 years of Presbyterian ministry on leave of absence to serve as chaplain of the Eighteenth Battalion during the World war, seeing 14 months' service. After the armistice, while stationed at Camp Merritt, N. J., he met all transports at the docks and ministered to wounded men being returned to American hospitals. In appreciation of his work the men presented him a jeweled watch.

In the legislature, Mr. Erskine was author of a bill to insure proper observance of Armistice day, and of another requiring all school teachers to take an oath of loyalty to the Constitution. He is a member of the American Legion in Sturgis, and state chairman of the boy scouts. He was born in Binghamton, N. Y., and educated at Lake Forest college, Illinois.

TO OBTAIN DENTAL SERVICE

Veterans, to Receive Treatment, Must Comply With the Conditions Prescribed.

An outline of the procedure for ex-service men to obtain dental treatment has been prepared by the national service division of the American Legion.

Dental treatment will be furnished by the bureau of war risk insurance to veterans of the World war under the following conditions:

1. Where a person has been awarded compensation for dental disability.
 2. When such treatment is necessary for the cure of a condition which resulted from military service and is the reason for which compensation has been awarded.
 3. In emergency cases which are immediately necessary for the relief of conditions endangering the life of the patient or causing great pain.
- Claimants who have not been awarded dental disability, but feel they should have such due to military service, should immediately file claim in the regular manner; whereupon they will receive an order from the district medical supervisor to report to the nearest dental examiner for examination and such emergency treatment as may be required. Approval of the dental examiner's report must be made by the bureau of war risk insurance.

To receive the benefits of the dental laws, claimants must pursue their case through the regular channels, as bills contracted outside of the authority of the bureau of war risk insurance will not be paid, except where sufficient evidence is produced that the case was emergency or that the claimant was ignorant of his rights to dental treatment.

MOTHER SEEKS SOLDIER SON

American Legion Searching for James E. Adie, Shell-Shock Victim—Disappeared in February.

Refusing to believe that her son is dead, although she read recently a newspaper account of the burial in Minnesota of a soldier who bore marks of identification identical with those of her son, Mrs. Margaret Adie, Lowell, Mass., has appealed to the American Legion for help in her untiring search.

The boy sought is James E. Adie, a wounded service man of the World war who disappeared on February 27 last while on his way from Lowell to Boston, Mass., where he was to receive a government examination. The former soldier was suffering from a severe attack of shell shock at the time.

With her husband's death since the war, the mother is in straightened circumstances. Her son's government compensation checks have been arriving monthly during his absence, she declares, but they cannot be cashed without his signature.

To Roosevelt's Memory.

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS
By Bertie Butler

"Business is business," but men are men.

Leaving and working, dreaming,
Telling with pencil or quill or pen,
Boasting, planning, scheming,
"Business is business," but he's a fool

Whose business has grown to another
His fault is not and the Golden Rule.

His love for a friend and brother.

"Business is business," but life is life
Thought we're all in the game to win it.

Let's run sometimes from the heat and strife
And try to be friends a minute.

Let's seek to be comrades now and then,
And shy from our guileless tender.

"Business is business," but men are men
And we're all good pals together.

When we speak of literature, we sometimes forget what an important part "The West" has played in Modern fiction, history and human interest stories.

England appears to want predominance in literature, and had held it over centuries past, and then when we enter America our eastern neighbors claim the same position. However I feel that "The West" has contributed as much or more than the East. Without the West we would have been deprived of such human interest stories as are furnished by Lane Gray, Harold Bell Wright, etc. Without "The West," with its tall rugged mountains; its broad rolling plains; its deep canyons, its big broad men of frontier days, and without their tales of adventure, of bravery and of cunning, the East would still be crowded into the narrow, limited scope of literature, which so often does not interest us of the West.

Phone news items to the Chief.

On December 25th a cut of sixteen per cent has been ordered to take effect in grain rates. It seems a little late for a reduction to take effect, for the farmer's products are already marketed and they will not get any appreciable benefit from it. It appears to me to be simply a diversion of profits between the elevator and commission men and the railroads.

We have received a lot of compliments on the kind of a paper we got on last week and they make us feel mighty good. When you see opinions unaltered it makes us feel as though we were getting somewhere. Remember if the paper suits you and you like it, tell us. And if it does not, cut you tell us that, too. Don't be afraid that you will make us sore. We want criticism.

The Chief was late last week. A gasoline engine, what it takes a motor to get tacked can be a most exasperating thing, and that was the cause of the delay. We are sorry, and will do our best to see that it does not occur again.

We read an advertisement on of efficiency the other day with a caption reading—"No man is big enough to sing a covey." There is much food for thought in the terse statement. Fellows who get the idea that they are the whole show might well remember that the man who can do one thing well is considered a success and that there is still some truth in the old saying that "jack of all trades and god of none."—Clarendon News.

"Beware of trouble makers," says the San Francisco Chronicle. "Mankind is making a sincere effort to so arrange its affairs and habits of that that the nations may hope to live in peaceably with each other. What may come of the effort we cannot yet know. We can only hope and trust. But whoever at such a time spreads suspicion and uncertainty in others continually suggests reservations to protect against treachery, assumes that we are holy and all others unholy, and in all ways seeks to promote enmity instead of friendship, is an enemy to his country and to his race. It is the thought of the people of so many nations and what the people speak in a well that the constituted leaders of the state give heed."

We have a few Christmas greeting cards at the Chief office, at very reasonable prices. Come in and let us fix up some for you.

CHILDREN'S HOME SOCIETY MAKES STATEWIDE APPEAL

Fort Worth, Texas.—The re-organized Board of Directors of the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society, with Central Office in Fort Worth, has announced its plans for extending an opportunity to all the citizens of the State to contribute to the support of the Society's efforts to deal with the problem of the dependent and neglected children of the commonwealth.

The State has been divided into districts for administrative purposes, and trained workers have been stationed at the capitals of these districts. The Panhandle District consists of 42 counties with its district office at Amarillo. The Children's work in the Panhandle District is in charge of Miss Norma Cunningham of that city.

In each district a board of representative citizens has charge of the local work and carries out the policies and program of the State Executive Board. The Chairman of the Panhandle District is E. W. Galbraith, prominent lumber dealer and member of the Galbraith-Farworth Lumber Company.

The annual budget for the next year has been passed down by the re-organized Executive Board to the comparatively small sum of $38,600, of which $4,600 is the budget for the Panhandle.

TEXAS BRANCH SEED LABORATORY RE-OPENED

Miss Pearl Drummond, Seed Analyst, Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, has been assigned to the Texas Branch Seed Laboratory, operated co-operatively by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, College Station, Texas, and the Bureau of Plant Industry. This laboratory has been closed since June, owing to lack of properly trained help.

Miss Drummond arrived on November 22, from the University of Missouri, at Columbia, Mo., where she has been engaged in similar work for the past year and a half.

The farmer, thru the use of this laboratory, may know the quality and value of seed before planting and hence avoid spreading noxious weeds on the farm or the use of seed unfit for planting on account of low germination.

Every farmer should know the germination of such seeds as corn, alfalfa and sorghum before going to the expense of planting it on his land.

Those desiring germination or purity tests can obtain service at this laboratory without cost, if samples are properly labelled and addressed to "Seed Laboratory," College Station, Texas.

ROAD BUILDING

TREES PLANTED IN STREETS

In Congested Centers They Have Been Sacrificed to Alleged Interests of Business.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the characters in an early-day American romance of the time when the "stampact" was causing all kinds of trouble is recorded as declaring that New York never would be a real business city because Broadway and Maiden Lane were lined with trees. The Van Vrooms, the Stuyvesants, the Artavels, and other early settlers of the country saved fine trees about their homes, on the village greens, along the country roads, and in the fields. But one will see no trees nowadays on Broadway, and Maiden Lane has been transformed from the pleasant, tree-bordered region of Dutch homes with flower gardens into the busiest wholesale jewelry district in America, if not in the world.

Beauty and comfort gave way to the inroads of commerce, not only in New York but in most of America's great cities, so that today trees in a business street are a rare sight. There are elm-shaded villages in New England; maple-shaded towns in New York and the Ohio valley, and there are oak-tree streets to be seen in the southeastern states, but for the most part this refers only to small towns or cities—never to the congested centers of population where they should have been preserved. Washington, the national capital, is one of the exceptions, and even there the plantings were not always wisely arranged.

The tree growth in the streets of the average American town or city is ragged and unkempt in appearance while that of the suburb or small village often is not much better, unless the planting has been done under municipal control, and the plantings on a street have been confined to a single kind of tree. The telegraph, the telephone, the electric light, and the trolley car have added their share toward the mutilation or destruction of the good trees that were in existence at the time of their coming.

Faulty methods of pruning have caused disfigurement and ruin. "Success follows the careful planting of good trees which are given adequate protection and timely attention," says Farmers' Bulletin 1299, Planting and Care of Street Trees, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. "Every tree should be trained to its proper form while young, so that severe pruning will not be necessary later. Guards are necessary, too, for several years.

"To the mutilation of severe pruning has been added the destruction of many trees in centers of business because they excluded a little light or made the store less prominent, or were somewhat in the way of using the sidewalk for merchandise."

The bulletin insists that providing shade on city streets is as much a municipal function as providing lights or sidewalks and should, therefore, be cared for by public officials. Probably the most efficient way of arranging for proper supervision, it says, is through an unpaid commission of three or five members which in turn employs an executive officer. Methods of organization are described, and numerous illustrations show how trees should be planted. There are chapters also describing pruning, spraying, transplanting, and other subjects of importance to every town or city whether it has trees or wishes to have them. The bulletin may be had free upon application to the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

CHIC TAILORED FROCK; PRACTICAL TUXEDOS

STREET dresses, including coat dresses, are setting a pace in originality and "chic" that challenges even the costume suit to keep up with it. They have become indispensable and designers find it possible to be more original in these tailored frocks than in suits—for this season there is a great diversity in them. They range in style all the way from those as plain as the severest tailored suits to those that are more fanciful than formal frocks.

The graceful model shown here, with redingote effect in bodice and tunic, opens at the front displaying a dark vestee. Revers on the bodice are bound with braid and the collar has an inlay at the back of white always comes back to such practical models as those two shown in the illustration above. Manufacturers know by experience that sweater-coats of this type are sure of a welcome and the beginning of each new season reveals them in the season's new colors, the knitted ones ingeniously varied in the stitches used and in other details of the making. Usually they are rechristened with a descriptive name and this year we have with us the "tuxedo."

The handsome model at the left of the two pictured is knitted in a heavy ribbed pattern of wool, in a fancy stitch. Knitters have become incredibly ingenious in varying and combining stitches, when one considers that knitwool striped with flat silk braid. A panel of the broadcloth is let in at each side of the tunic and covered with bands of braid and this same decorative feature makes a finish for the cuffs. Another beautiful street dress is made of duvetyn in dark blue with rolling collar, vestee and girle in beige satin. The skirt is scalloped at the bottom and vertical bands of Persian lamb above the scallops extend to the hip line. The same fur makes a little cape-collar at the back and appears in a band on the flaring sleeves. This dress is smartly finished with a girle of wide satin ribbon with a big rosette at the side making a telling touch on it.

The costume suit which dares to rival such unusual dresses must reveal some clever details in its make-work is done by machinery. This ingenuity is illustrated in the checked band which forms the collar and cuffs and adds much to the style of this coat and so do the patch pockets. It is provided with a wide belt to match that crosses at the front and buttons at the sides.

The model at the right might be made of wool jersey cloth or other fabric. It has the same sort of collar and pockets as its companion, but a wide, soft girle instead of a belt, and this is adjusted at a higher waist-line. This coat is becoming to slender figures, while the straight-line coats are worn by everyone—slender or otherwise.

The tuxedo has a lively rival in sweater blouses—the latest development in knitted garments. It is very up. The popular model pictured undertakes to meet this requirement in its long coat, split at the sides with turned back revers. Six large flat buttons emphasize the novelty of the revers and divide attention with the handsome embroidery at the bottom of the coat and narrow panels of it on the back. The plain sleeves are conspicuous by being close-fitting and long in a season when sleeves do all sorts of surprising things, and the collar of fur follows the lead of the sleeves by sticking to conventional lines.

However far the fancy of the restless sex may wander in pursuit of new interpretations of the sweater and the sweater coat it pretty in the surprise model, the front extended into sash ends that tie at the back, and is shown in several styles. Angora is the strongest ally of both the blouse and the tuxedo, making an unsurpassed finish for them in collars, cuffs or bands.

HOME TOWN HELPS

EVIL OF THE RENTING HABIT

Dependency on Other Hands for Homes Marks a Retrogression in Spirit.

When householders become renters by habit, that is, when they become willing to depend on other hands than their own to provide and maintain their homes for them, society loses much of that valuable individuality, that personal independence, initiative and self-reliance that distinguishes a great people from a mass of people.

For three hundred years the American people have led the world in individuality, initiative and personal independence. The fathers pulled out of the European huddle in order that they might stand on their own feet; and having reached America, they had to stand alone. Most born Americans were born of parents who owned their own homes.

Contentment with huddle, the willingness to live in some one else's warmed and cared-for roof rather than in one's own, fought-for and paid-for home marks a retrogression in spirit from the American way to the European way of life.

However we may excuse ourselves for inclination toward the easy comfort of the choreless, commercial, rented compartment, and for shrinking from the harder demands of the detached, owned and paid-for home; and however respectable the renting habit may have become, it must be admitted that our inclination is a phase of social degeneracy, a drift toward the huddle, the beginning of the abandonment of that vitalizing independence of which the owned home is pre-eminently the symbol and support.—Portland (Ore.) Telegram.

TWO ORIGINAL BIRD BATHS

One Is Made Entirely of Logs, the Other on Shingle-Covered Pedestal.

The photograph shows two original ideas in bird-bath construction that can be adapted where it would not be possible to build a cement bath.

At the left is shown a bird bath made entirely from logs, a heavy cross section being used for the base, another for the top, and a few feet of a much smaller log forming the pedestal. The upper log section is hollowed out to receive a round pan which holds the water.

The shingle-covered bath at the right has a base made from two-inch lumber, to which is fastened a tapered wooden frame, made of one-inch strips, each side being two inches smaller at the top than at the bottom. A two-inch cap, with a one-inch board support for the pan, is provided.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Hedge Solves Fencing Problems.

More and more Americans are appreciating the value of privacy in their gardens. It is a sane idea, this—that we plant lovely lawns and grow shrubs and trees, not to form a park for the admiring gaze of motorists and neighbors, but to furnish us with a little kingdom of outdoors all our own, where we can live and breathe and have our being unobtruded and unmolested.

Very frequently, of course, privet and other hedge shrubs seem to be planted only for the sake of dividing one property from another or one section of the garden from another. Then there is reason in keeping the hedge clipped back. But the hedge that is built for the purpose of giving protection should be clipped only enough to give the roots strength and to give it a trim appearance.

Much is being done nowadays with firs and other evergreens for hedges. Nursery men have gone to the ends of the earth for trees and shrubs that would withstand the extremes of our climate. A recently introduced fir has come from the east coast of Asia, where they are accustomed to a hotter summer and colder winter than we have here, and are therefore sure to withstand our extremes. Great expense has also been taken to get shrubs and trees suitable for wind-breaks in the trying seashore climate.

Value of Community Play.

Community play is being promoted by local governments because it has been demonstrated to be a practical business proposition. City officials accept as an axiom the statement that the leisure hours of the city must be either an asset or a liability. The people of this county have about a billion hours a day to pass outside of work and sleep. In this leisure time most of the crime, vice and delinquency occur.

SOME GOOD EATINGS.

Buttermilk and sour milk have both been used as a specific for prolonging life, renewing the tissues and preserving beauty. Buttermilk has been recommended by physicians for people troubled with liver trouble, gout or rheumatism.

Buttermilk is often obtained by stomachs which cannot digest milk. A glass of cold or hot buttermilk, according to the season or temperature, with a sandwich, makes a most satisfying luncheon. For those who are fond of buttermilk soup this recipe will be enjoyed:

Buttermilk Soup.—Heat a quart of buttermilk until nearly boiling; do not let it boil or it will curdle. Pour over three well beaten eggs, season with salt and sugar and serve with a gratin of nutmeg on top of each soup plate.

Buttermilk Ginger Bread.—Take one cupful of molasses, one well-beaten egg, two-thirds of a cupful of buttermilk, a third of a cupful of melted butter or shortening, two teaspoonfuls of soda, spices to taste and one tablespoonful of ginger; add flour to make a batter which drops like a veil from the spoon.

Buttermilk may be used in bread, just scalding the buttermilk and using it as any other liquid.

For dumplings a cupful of buttermilk in place of sweet milk and using baking powder as usual; the result is a fine tasty dumpling.

Egg and Potato Dish.—Try out two slices of fat salt pork cut in cubes; in this brown a cupful of bread cubes and an equal quantity of cold boiled potatoes. When all are well browned, add two eggs slightly beaten. Heat slowly, stirring constantly until the eggs are cooked. Season with salt and pepper and garnish with parsley.

Cocoanut Soup.—Grate the meat of one fresh coconut or the dry coconut may be used if the sugar is soaked out of it. Cook a tablespoonful of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour and a teaspoonful of curry powder. Add a quart of milk and water, a pint of each, and the coconut. Simmer a few minutes, add salt, pepper and a cupful of cooked peas.

Cheese Omelet.—Beat two eggs slightly, add one-half teaspoonful of butter, salt and pepper to taste and a tablespoonful of cheese grated. Add a tablespoonful of butter to the omelet pan and when hot pour in the mixture. Cook until firm, sprinkle with cheese and serve with graham bread sandwiches.

The things that are really for thee, gratitude to thee. He that finds God a sweet, enveloping thought, to him, never counts his company.—Emerson.

FOR THE INVALID.

If a member of the family becomes ill, it is often a problem just what to prepare to tempt the appetite and to reduce the recipe to proportions for one person.

Many times it is possible to prepare enough of any dish for the entire family, but when small amounts are to be served the following suggestions may be of service:

Potato Soup for One.—Scald two-thirds of a cupful of milk to which one-sixth of a slice of onion has been added. Remove the onion after the milk is scalded and pour the milk over one-quarter of a cupful of finely mashed potato. Melt one-half tablespoonful of butter, stir in one-half tablespoonful of flour, one salt spoonful of salt, a few grains of celery salt and white pepper. Add to the milk and potato mixture and cook until smooth. Strain and serve very hot, sprinkled with minced parsley. A teaspoonful of tomato catsup adds zest to this soup. Add just before serving.

Cream of Pea Soup.—Take one-third of a cupful of green peas—freshly cooked or canned will do; one-quarter of a cupful of water, one-quarter of a tablespoonful of butter, three-quarters of a tablespoonful of flour, two-thirds of a cupful of milk, one salt spoonful of salt, a few grains of white pepper. Add the water to the peas and simmer ten minutes. Rub through a sieve and thicken with the butter and flour cooked together. Add milk and seasonings. Strain into a hot cup and serve with croutons of bread.

Beef Balls.—Take a piece of round steak from the top of the round, cut in strips and scrape with the grain of the meat, using a sharp teaspoon. Form the meat into balls, sprinkle with salt and cook in a hot frying pan, shaking them over the heat until well seared. Arrange on buttered toast and garnish with parsley or water cress.

When egg is added to any soup, heat it well, mix with a little of the hot soup, then stir it in, using care that the egg is never overbeaten after the appearance of the soup.

Have You a Daughter? Is She Nervous? Pale? Then You Cannot Afford to Overlook One Word of This

Kansas City, Kans.—"When I was a girl just coming into womanhood, I came all run-down, weak and nervous, very pale as death. (CHAPTER XIX—Continued.)

She smiled painfully. "Yes, mad... I am sure of this: We... I could not cure myself of... I was marrying you. There had... some other cure for that. I... never loved my father... But he was my father, and if... Calhoun killed him I could not... But at last I came to... that your love and affection... did not make me forget him—no... I realize that now. He and I... never come together, but I owe... so much—I owe him my life, for... he must ever have a place... in my heart, he to me more than any... else can be. I want you to do... what you wish?"

and looked at Sheila. There shot into... a look of horror and relief in... one, if such a thing might be. A sudden... energy inspired her and she drew... herself up in bed, her face gone... ghastly.

"You are Sheila Boyne, aren't you?"... she asked in a low, half-guttural note.

"I am Sheila Llyn," was the aston-... ished reply.

"It's the same thing," came the re-... sponse. "You are the daughter of... Erri Boyne."

Sheila turned pale. Who was this woman... that knew her and her history?

"What is your name?" she asked—... "your real name—what is it?"

"My name is Noreen Balfie; it was... Noreen Boyne."

For a moment Sheila could not get... her bearings. The heavy scent of the... flowers coming in at the window al-... most suffocated her. She seemed to... lose a grip of herself. Presently she... made an effort at composure.

"Noreen Boyne! You were, then, the sec-... ond wife of Erri Boyne?"

"I was his second wife. His first... wife was your mother—you are like... your mother!" Noreen said in agita-... tion.

The meaning was clear. Sheila laid... a sharp hand on herself. "Don't get... excited," she urged with kindly feel-... ing. "He is dead and gone."

"Yes, he is dead and gone."... For a moment Noreen seemed to... fight for mastery of her stark emotion... and Sheila said, "Lie still. It is all... over. He cannot hurt us now."

"The other shook her head in protest... "I came here to forget and I find you... —his daughter."

"You find more than his daughter;... you find his first wife and you find... the one that killed him."

"The one that killed him!" said the... woman greatly troubled. "How did... you know that?"

"All the world knows it. He was... in prison four years and since then... he has been a mutineer, a treasure-... hunter, a planter and a savior of these... islands!"

The sick woman fell back in exhan-... sation. At that moment the servant... entered with a pitcher of lime juice... Sheila held a glass of the liquid to... the stark lips.

"Drink," she said in a low, kind... voice, and she poured slowly into the... patient's mouth the cooling draught.

A moment later Noreen raised herself... up again.

"All are here that matter," she said... "And I came to forget!"

"What do you remember?" asked... Sheila.

"I remember all—how he died!"... Suddenly Sheila had a desire to... shriek aloud. This woman—did this... woman then see Erri Boyne die? Was... she present when the deed was done?

"How did he die?" she asked in a... whisper.

"One stroke did it—only one, and... he fell like a log." She made a mo-... tion as of striking, and shuddered... covered her eyes with trembling hands.

"You tell me you saw Dyck Calhoun... and looked at Sheila. There shot into... a look of horror and relief in... one, if such a thing might be. A sudden... energy inspired her and she drew... herself up in bed, her face gone... ghastly.

After a moment she said in agitation: "You killed him—you struck him down! Yet you let an innocent man go to prison, and he kept there for years, and his father got to his grave with shame, with estates ruined and home lost—and you were the guilty one—you! all the time."

"It was part of my madness. I was a coward and I thought then there were reasons why I should feel no pity for Dyck Calhoun. His father injured mine—oh, badly! But I was a coward, and I've paid the price."

A kinder feeling now took hold of Sheila. After all, what the woman had done gave happiness into her—Sheila's—hands. It relieved Dyck Calhoun of shame and disgrace. A jailbird he was still, but an innocent jailbird. He had not killed Erri Boyne. Besides, it wiped out forever the barrier between them. All her blind devotion to the man was now justified. His name and fame were clear. Her repugnance of the woman was as nothing beside her splendid feeling of relief. It was as though the gates of hell had been closed and the curtains of heaven drawn for the eyes to see. Six years of horrible shame wiped out, and a new world was before her eyes.

This woman who had killed Erri Boyne must now suffer. She must bear the ignominy which had been heaped upon Dyck Calhoun's head. Yet all at once there came to her mind a softening feeling. Erri Boyne had been rightly killed by a woman he had wronged, for he was a traitor as well as an adulterer—one who could use no woman well, who broke faith with all civilized tradition, and reverted to the savage. Surely the woman's crime was not a dark one; it was injured innocence smiting depravity, tyranny and lust.

Suddenly, as she looked at the woman who had done this thing, she, whose hand had rid the world of a traitor and a beast, fell back on the pillow in a faint. With an exclamation Sheila lifted up the head. If the woman was dead, then there was no hope for Dyck Calhoun; any story that she—Sheila—might tell would be of no use. Yet she was no longer agitated in her body. Hands and fingers were steady, and she felt for the heart with firm fingers. Yes, the heart was still beating, and the pulse was slightly drumming. Thank God, the woman was alive! She rang a bell and lifted up the head of the sick woman.

A moment later the servant was in the room. Sheila gave her orders quickly, and snatched up a pencil from the table. Then, on a piece of paper, she wrote the words: "I, not Dyck Calhoun, killed Erri Boyne."

A few moments later, Noreen's eyes opened, and Sheila spoke to her. "I have written these words. Here they are—see them. Sign them."

She read the words, and put a pencil in the trembling fingers, and, on the cover of a book Noreen's fingers traced her name slowly but clearly. Then Sheila thrust the paper in her bosom, and an instant later a nurse, sent by the resident doctor, entered.

"They cannot hang me or banish me, for my end has come," whispered Noreen before Sheila left.

In the street of Spanish Town almost the first person Sheila saw was Dyck Calhoun. With pale, radiant face she went to him. He gazed at her strangely, for there was that in her face he could not understand.

"Come with me," she said, and she moved toward King's house. He obeyed. For some moments they walked in silence, then all at once under a magnolia tree she stopped.

"I want you to read what a woman wrote who has just arrived in the island from England. She is ill at the house of the general commanding."

Taking from her breast the slip of paper, she handed it to him. He read it with eyes and senses that at first could hardly understand.

"God in heaven—oh, merciful God!" he said in great emotion, yet with a strange physical quiet.

"This woman was his wife," Sheila said. He handed the paper back. He conquered his agitation. The years of suffering rolled away. "They'll put her in jail," he said with a strange regret. He had a great heart.

"No, I think not," was the reply. Yet she was touched by his compassion and thoughtfulness.

"Why?" "Because she is going to die—and there is no time to lose. Come, we will go to Lord Mallow."

"You have done the island and England great service, Mr. Calhoun," said the governor at last.

"It is the least I could do for the land where I have made my home, where I have reaped more than I have sown."

"We know your merit, sir." A sharp, satirical look came into Calhoun's face and his voice rang out with vigor. "And because you knew my merit you advised the crown to confine me to my estate, and you would have had me shot if you could. I am what I am because there was a juster man than yourself in Jamaica. Through him I got away and found treasure, and I bought land and have helped to save this island and your place. What do I owe you, your honor? Nothing that I can see—nothing at all."

"You are a mutineer, and but that you showed your courage would have been hung at the yard arm, as many of your comrades in England were."

A cold smile played at Calhoun's lips. "My luck was as great as my luck; while Calhoun was tough and virile and with the air of a thorough outdoor man. There was in his face the firm fighting look of one who had done things and could tackle big affairs—and something more; there was in it quiet exultation.

"It wasn't the Luck of Enniscorthy That Sent Erri Boyne to His Doom."

"I know. I have the luck of Enniscorthy!"

At the last words the governor winced, for it was by that touch Calhoun had defeated him in the duel long ago. It galled him that this man whom he detested could say such things to him with truth.

"It was not the luck of Enniscorthy that sent Erri Boyne to his doom," he said with anger in his mind, for Dyck's calm boldness stirred the worst in him. He thought he saw in him an exultancy which could only come from his late experiences in the field.

It was as though he had come to triumph over the governor. Mallow said what he had said with malice. He looked to see rage in the face of Dyck Calhoun and was nonplussed to find that it had only a stern sort of pleasure. The eyes of Calhoun met his with no trace of gloom, but with a valor worthy of a high cause—their clear blue facing his own with a constant penetration. Their intense sincerity gave him a feeling which did not belong to authority. It was not the look of a criminal, whatever the man might be—mutineer and murderer. As for mutineer; all that Calhoun had fought for had been at last admitted by the British government.

Calhoun spoke slowly. "Your honor, you have said what you have a right to say to a man who killed Erri Boyne. But this man you accuse did not do it."

The governor smiled, for the assumption was ridiculous. He shrugged a shoulder and a sardonic curl came to his lip.

"Who did it, then?" "If you will come to the house of the general commanding you will see."

The governor was in a great quandary. He gasped. "The general commanding—did he kill Erri Boyne then?"

"Not he, yet the person that did it is in his house. Listen, your honor. I have borne the name of killing Erri Boyne, and I ought to have killed him, for he was a traitor. I had proofs of it; but I did not kill him and I did not betray him, for he had alive a wife and daughter, and something was due to them. He was a traitor and was in league with the French. It does not matter that I tell you now, for his daughter knows the truth. I ought to have told it long ago, and if I had I should not have been imprisoned."

"You were a brave man, but a fool—always a fool," said the governor sharply. "Not so great a fool that I can't recover from it," was the calm reply. "Perhaps it was the best thing that ever happened to me, for now I can look the world in the face. It's made a man of me. It was a woman killed him," was Calhoun's added comment. "Will your honor come with me and see her?"

of me as a murderer! Is it fair to your honor?"

Something in Calhoun's voice roused the rage of Lord Mallow, but he controlled it, and said calmly: "Don't talk nonsense, sir; we shall walk together, if you will."

At the entrance to the house of the general commanding, the man to whom this visit meant so much stopped and took a piece of paper from his pocket. "Your honor, here is the name of the slayer of Erri Boyne. I give it to you now to see, so you may not be astonished when you see her."

The governor stared at the paper. "Boyne's wife, eh?" he said in a strange mood. "Boyne's wife—what is she doing here?"

Calhoun told him briefly as he took the paper back, and added: "It was accident that brought us all together here, your honor, but the hand of God is in it."

"Is she very ill?" "She will not live, I think." "To whom did she tell her story?" "To Miss Sheila Llyn."

The governor was nettled. "Oh, to Miss Llyn! When did you see her?" "Just before I came to you."

"What did the woman look like—this Noreen Boyne?" "I do not know; I have not seen her."

"Then how came you by the paper with her signature?" "Miss Llyn gave it to me."

Anger filled Lord Mallow's mind. Sheila—why now the way would be open to Calhoun to win—to marry her! It angered him but he held himself steadily.

"Where is Miss Llyn?" "She is here, I think. She came back when she left me at your door." "Oh, she left you at my door did she? . . . But let me see the woman that's come so far to put the world right."

A few moments later they stood in the bedroom of Noreen Boyne, they two and Sheila Llyn, the nurse having been sent out.

Lord Mallow looked down on the haggard, dying woman with no emotion. Only a sense of duty moved him.

"What is it you wished to say to me?" he asked the patient. "Who are you?" came the response in a frayed tone.

"I am the governor of the island—Lord Mallow." "Then I want to tell you that I killed Erri Boyne—with this hand I killed him." She raised her skinny hand up, and her eyes became glazed. "He had used me vilely and I struck him down. He was a bad man."

"You let an innocent man bear punishment, you struck at one who did you no harm, and you spoiled his life for him. You can see that, can't you?"

The woman's eyes sought the face of Dyck Calhoun, and Calhoun said: "No, you did not spoil my life, Noreen Boyne. You have made it. Not that I should have chosen the way of making it, but there it is. As God's in heaven I forgive you."

Noreen's face lost some of its gloom. "That makes it easier," she said brokenly. "I can't atone by any word or act, but I'm sorry. I've kept you from being happy, and you were born to be happy. Your father had hurt mine, had turned him out of our house for debt, and I tried to pay it all back. When they suspected you I held my peace. I was a coward; I could not say you were innocent without telling the truth, and that I could not do then. But now I'll tell it—I think I'd have told it whether I was dying or not though. Yes, if I'd seen you here I'd have told it, I'm sure. I'm not all bad."

"There's no good going on with that," said the governor sharply. "We must take down her statement in writing, and then—"

"Look, she is sinking!" said Calhoun sharply.

The woman's head had dropped forward, her chin was on her breast, and her hand became clenched.

"The doctor at once—bring in the nurse," said Calhoun. "She's dying."

An instant later the nurse entered with Sheila and in a short time the doctor came.

When later the doctor saw Lord Mallow alone he said: "She can't live more than two days."

"That's good for her in a way," answered the governor, and in reply to the doctor's question why, he said: "Because she'd be in prison."

"What was her crime, your honor?" "She killed a man."

"Him for whom Dyck Calhoun was sent to prison—Erri Boyne?" "Mr. Calhoun was not guilty, then?" "No. As soon as the woman is dead, I mean to announce the truth."

"Not till then, your honor?" "Not till then."

"It's hard on Calhoun." "Is it? It's years since he was tried and condemned. Two days cannot matter now."

"Perhaps not. Last night the woman said to me: 'I'm glad I'm going to die.'" Then he added: "Calhoun will be more popular than ever now."

The governor winced.

CHAPTER XXII. Then What Happened. An hour after Noreen Boyne had been laid in her grave, there was a special issue of the principal paper telling all the true facts of the death of Erri Boyne. It vexed Lord Mallow; but he steeled himself to urbanity, and he played his part well. He was clever enough to see it would pay him to be outwardly gracious to Calhoun. So it was he made a speech in the capital on the return of the general commanding and the troops from subduing the Maroons, in which he said: "No end in all the king's dominions had showed greater patriotism and military skill than their friend Mr. Calhoun, who had been harshly treated by a mistaken government."

A few hours later, in the sweet garden of the house where Sheila and her mother lodged, Calhoun came upon the girl whose gentle dignity and beauty seemed to glow.

At first all she said to him was, "Welcome, old friend," and at last she said: "Now you can come to the United States, Dyck, and make a new life there."

"It Wasn't the Luck of Enniscorthy That Sent Erri Boyne to His Doom."

The Flowers Were Crushed to Her Breast, With Her Lips Given to His.

I have ended my life under the British flag. I go to live under the Stars and Stripes."

The governor was astounded. "Your lady, sir; do you forget your lady?" But Sheila answered: "The life of the new world has honors which have naught to do with titles, and I will remain as I am."

"I sail for Virginia by the first ship that goes," said Calhoun. "It is good here, but I shall go to a place where things are better and where I shall have work to do. I must decline the baronetcy, your honor. I go to a land where the life is larger, where Britain shall remake herself."

"It will take some time," said the governor tartly. "They'll be long apart."

"But they will come together at last—for the world's sake."

[THE END.] Browning's Poetry. The truth is that many readers of verse resent any demand upon their intellects; poetry to them being only a pleasing indulgence—an occasional substitute for a sherbet—not to be taken seriously. Certainly Browning's poetry is not for such. No one today who knows "Sordello" derides it, for, difficult as it is to the beginner, it contains many veins of the pure gold of poetry and its pictures of the passionate, tumultuous life of the late Twelfth and early Thirteenth centuries in Italy, with the fierce conflicts of Guelph and Ghibelline by which it was torn, are unequalled in vividness and truth by any historian.—Philip Stafford Moran.

THE MODERN HEALTH CRUSADE

Austin, Texas—The Texas Public Health Association encourages everybody, children as well as grown-ups, to get out in the open air all seasons of the year. It is one of the methods for preventing tuberculosis or curing it after it has been contracted.

The Modern Health Crusade in which six million children are enrolled requires its members to play outdoors and the tuberculosis societies and sanatoria are demonstrating in every State that no matter what the local climate may be, out-door exercise is necessary for health. The general promotion of interest and belief that rest, fresh air and good food is the best treatment for tuberculosis is one of the tasks of the Texas Public Health Association and its affiliated local organizations.

During the last 15 years, the death rate from tuberculosis has fallen from 196 per 100,000 to 114 per 100,000 population. Progress has been made, but yet there were 132,000 deaths from this disease in the United States last year, and 1,000,000 active cases in existence; so, much more is to be accomplished. Texas has her full quota of tuberculous patients and much work is yet to be done.

Funds to carry on this work are obtained from the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals which will be offered to the public from Thanksgiving Day to Christmas. Response to this sale will determine the extent to which the fight against tuberculosis can be carried forward during 1922.
