Broiling

Seals in the Flavor!

There's an appearance about a broiled dinner that pleases the eye . . . an aroma that intrigues the taste. And broiled foods are more delicious when done to a turn in the smokeless broiler drawer of a modern gas range.

Fast, clean and economical, gas is the only fuel that really broils. Only gas provides the intense heat needed to give meat appetizing, crispy and even browning so desired. The heat penetrates so fast that loss of juices is prevented, full-flavor is saved. Fast broiling is only one of the many features on modern gas ranges. See them all demonstrated at Cooking School. Tomorrow is the last of 3 school sessions.

A Combined View of the Spending Program

Everybody is talking about government spending. In Congress, on public platforms, in club and restaurant, on the corner WPA job, people talk about it.

Is it going too far? Will it ruin the government and all of us? Is it creating a habitually-dependent class? Is it a bitter necessity, or a desirable piece of pump-priming and investment? Is it merely holding the fort until private en- lands. terprise can take its place, or is it scaring private enterprise from ever replacing it?

Everybody has opinions on these questions. But For- be a menace to all Texans. Whenatune Magazine sought a new point of view on the subject. a It brought together 11 men, all leading business or labor es the value of land, or perhaps men, economists and the like. It conducted a discussion of the spending question.

Then, instead of presenting the opposing views which were expressed, setting them off against each other, it sought to bring together all the points on which there was acres in Texas, and try to force a not too serious a disagreement. The idea was to find the r common ground that could be reached by people who disagree. Even such people do not disagree in everything.

What is the maximum general agreement that can be found even among people who differ? Raymond Leslie Buell, who engineered this forum, believes that such common ground, when found, will be pretty solid.

In regard to government spending and its effects, with slight exceptions which were noted, 11 widely-diverse men agreed as follows:

The government should invest money so that it will create productive opportunity, rather than merely pour it out to create purchasing power. The present fiscal policy has brought with it a large failure in business confidence; enterprise languishes because business has become convinced that the government doesn't care about it. Correction is needed, but social and labor reforms thus far established should be kept. Public spending should be used to counterbalance the business cycle, but only within the framework of a periodically-balanced budget and a real debt-retirement plan.

That is an interesting synthesis of viewpoints individually as far apart as those of a conservative business man and an economist devoted to New Deal objectives. It deserves the study of every person interested in the national

For the whole of democratic procedure depends on action based on that maximum of agreement that can be reached between men and pointss of view that differ wide-

Perhaps when it is all stripped down, the economic views of men, like their physical and social makeups, have more points in common than they have in distinctiveness. To find that common ground and act on it is the key to or-

BUTTERNUT BREAD IS

FEATURED BY MRS. FRENCH AT THE COOKING SCHOOL - -

MEET OUR STAR SALESMEN!

No, they're not on our payroll. They probably know very little about us. But we still consider them our "star salesmen"! Why? Well, because they do a great job of selling our bread-Butternut bread. They're "sold" on it themselves. They like its fresh taste . . . its flavor. They know it's pure and wholesome because Mother has often remarked about it. They're even a little bit scientific, too, because they realize it provides them with the energy they need for school and play. So they tell their friends about Butternut-which makes them our star salesmen!
