We Begin to Play Our South American Cards

The first United States card in the South American trade game is on the table, and it looks good for a trick.

It is the arrangement with Brazil by which the United States offers gold and credits to that country in order that it may put its debt structure in order and stabilize its money on a basis on which it can again trade on an expanded scale with the United States.

For the past year almost all the cards played in the Latin-American game have been German and Italian cards. They were good ones, too, and took many a trick.

Meanwhile Uncle Sam held some cards, but hesitated to play them. Trick after trick went to Europe. Now he has decided to play a few aces himself.

First he played the Good Neighbor ace, which ranked high, for the countries south know that today Uncle Sam has imperative reasons to want genuine friendship with nearest neighbors.

Then he played the Declaration of Lima and reciprocal trade picture cards, and they took tricks, too, for the South Americans are already beginning to realize that the blocked-mark boulevard is a one-way alley.

Now it looks as though Sam is going to run out the suit of friendly financial assistance and increased free trade. Chile desperately needs financial help to rehabilitate her earthquake regions. Peru, Uruguay, and perhaps Argentina, need help to get back on the track of orthodox finance and normal international trade relations.

The United States is now a creditor country, as Dr. Osvaldo Aranha pointed out, and must act like one. That is, it must use its creditor position to promote economic recuperation in countries less favored. A creditor has no other choice, for he has nothing to gain by the bankruptcy of his debtors.

Already howls have gone out from Germany that the United States is out to subdue South America with golden bullets. That is untrue, but it shows that the cards played were good ones, and the loss of the tricks hurt.

The United States is not seeking to exclude Germany or any other country from South American trade. It is only trying to see that the trade game is played under rules that apply to all, and not under special rules that allow some countries the privilege of not following suit, while the rest were compelled to do so.

A Cleveland master of ceremonies got married in a night club. At least, guests could sit down at the reception instead of balancing demi-tasse, cake, and ice cream while standing on one foot.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—Back of this new movement for getting surplus farm commodities onto the inner tables of relief families there is a rather surprising swing to the right on the part of the Department of Agriculture. The new plan—which would channel surplus commodity expenditures to the farmer by way of the corner grocery store, and would drop both direct-purchase and price-fixing schemes—is what is left of the famous "two-price system" which Secretary Henry Wallace brought up for discussion last fall. No final plans have been settled upon yet, but within a week or so it is expected that a program will be agreed upon. The idea that is receiving the most thought now, and that is being discussed with key business groups, would work as follows: Tickets or certificates of one kind or another—good, probably, for about half what a relief family spends for food during an ordinary month—would be issued. Such tickets could be "spent" at any grocery store, at face value, for such foodstuffs as the Department of Agriculture designates as surplus commodities. These commodities would vary from month to month, possibly even from week to week. The list would include such things as fruits, vegetables, dairy products—possibly poultry products and certain kinds of meats. The grocer could turn the tickets in, at some government office—possibly at the post-office—and get cash for them. Tickets would supplement the allowances ordinarily received by relief families. A family getting $50 a month in relief money, for instance, would still get the $50 a month. Assuming that it had been spending $16 a month for food, it would simply get an extra $34 worth of these tickets. And the idea behind all of this is the idea that in Secretary Wallace's mind last fall when he started talking about his two-price system. The idea: that the lowest-income groups in America are unable to buy the foods that would give them a balanced diet, and that actual or potential surpluses of those foods nevertheless exist on the American market. In some cases, these foods ripen simply to rot. Prices in many instances drop so low that the farmer finds it isn't worth his while to pick and ship his produce. In other cases, he refrains from growing foodstuffs which millions of Americans need, but can't buy. Secretary Wallace suggested that, if the buying power of the relief group could be built up, two birds would be killed with one stone. The needy would get the sort of food they ought to have, and the farmer's market would be vastly expanded. The important thing about this plan is that the handling of surpluses would be taken care of by the country's regular commercial distributive system, from the wholesaler down to the corner grocery store. The government would not do any buying, it would not license any dealers, it would not fix any prices. It would simply funnel buying power into local communities. A start would be made on a purely experimental basis, probably in half a dozen carefully chosen cities. Unless and until the program proves a success, no change will be made in the present activities of the Surplus Commodities Corporation. But the potentialities of the idea are vast. Already, for instance, some department experts are trying to figure out how the idea could not some day be expanded to include such commodities as cotton. (Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.)

POST-MORTEM

I Give You Texas

By BOYCE HOUSE
Plagiarism? A restaurant in Round Rock (which is where Sam Bass was shot to death) proclaims "Neckless, wingless, backless fried chicken." Another cafe there asserts, "Original neckless, wingless, backless fried chicken."

Another feud in food: Side by side on the Fort Worth highway just north of Waco are two stands, one advertising "Fried chicken, California style"; the other, "Fried chicken, Texas style." Guess which had the bigger crowd?

Will W. Lee O'Daniel run for the United States Senate next year? A seat in Washington would give the hill-billy philosopher a national audience.

"That's the way we do it in business," heard last summer, is being quoted by those favoring Senator Clint Small's proposal to wipe out the state deficit by issuing four-year bonds at a low rate of interest and thereby do away with the present situation whereby the taxpayer is paying more for supplies and work because bidders make plenty of allowance for the discount on state warrants.

Remember the joke about the fellow who played poker every night with some card sharps? He went to the room one evening, found the door locked and threw his bank-roll through the transom, saying, "They'd have won it, anyway."

Sights over Texas: A blind woman in Fort Worth playing an accordion and singing "I ain't got nobody and nobody cares for me."

Happiest lad in Texas probably is Oliver Grote. This chronicler witnessed the colorful climax of the Fort Worth Fat Stock Show a few days ago when the 12-year-old Mason County 4-H Club boy sold his grand champion steer for $1,264 a pound—the record price this season. The animal was bought for $1,039.50 by the Pabst Brewing Company of Chicago. E. L. Morris, Pabst executive, announced that the steer was being donated to the Fort Worth Community Chest, thereby aiding needy charitable institutions. It was the first time a national concern had bought the Fort Worth grand champion. Paul Whiteman, "king of jazz," acted as auctioneer.

Though from deep East Texas, Jerry Sadler is fond of the West, too. Friends have presented him with spurs, chaps, cowboy boots and a big hat. Not long ago, the Railroad Commissioner bought eight horses and a small ranch near Merkel.

Kiln Is Bed For A Man 10 Years
By United Press
SALT LAKE CITY.—Pneumonia, which he had avoided for 10 years while sleeping in a warm brick kiln, finally claimed "Old Ole."

Unknown by any other name, the 70-year-old man made his home in a Salt Lake City brickyard for many years. Each night he crawled into one of the kilns in which recently fired were allowed to cool gradually. "Old Ole" had a regular beat which he covered each day, getting enough food to keep him alive. He refused all offers of assistance from charitable organizations, preferring his strange life among the bricks and tiles.

"Old Ole" once mentioned that he had run away from an orphanage in Sweden at the age of 14. That was all that workmen at the brickyard knew of his life.

FROM CONGRESSMAN CLYDE L. GARRETT

CONGRESS SLATE FILLED—Unless something unforeseen turns up, it is believed the Congress' legislative calendar is completed.

Recommendations and legislation introduced this session is the smallest for some years, but some of the problems and issues to come up will be of such a controversial nature that much discussion and debate will be needed.

AIR CORPS EXPANSION—The Air Corps Expansion Bill was approved by the Senate by a vote of 77 to 8. 6,000 serviceable airplanes—500 more than the House provided—were authorized in the measure. The cost is not to exceed 300 million dollars plus annual maintenance appropriations.

MORE AGED—LESS CHILDREN—At present there are more than one and a half million fewer children than there were ten years ago. Ten years from now there will be about a million fewer than today.

NEUTRALITY—It is becoming increasingly evident that the United States as a whole does not know what to do about keeping the U. S. out of war.

FARMER BEST FRIEND OF WILDLIFE—Farmers are potentially the most important group of wildlife conservationists in America, says the Chief of the Federal Bureau of Biological Survey.

NEW LEAFLET ON FRUIT TREES—To help amateur growers of fruit trees, the Federal Bureau of Plant Industry has prepared Leaflet 172, Why Fruit Trees Fail to Bear.

What is the Difference between One Town and Another? Every day we talk to folks about home ownership. There is no subject more interesting. Some live in hotels, some in apartments, and still others in places that don't quite satisfy—and all good places to stay.

Every day we talk to folks about home ownership. There is no subject more interesting. Some live in hotels, some in apartments, and still others in places that don't quite satisfy—and all good places to stay.

The longing to live in the place of abode is always present in the human heart, and like conscience, it can't always be pushed aside and ignored. And some other possessions may have their satisfactions and comforts, but those which the home provides and insures are permanent and lasting.

The way folks are buying homes in Eastland is a very good indication that this town is a very good place to live in. Those who heard the feature address at the Chamber of Commerce banquet Tuesday night should today think more of their town and be more willing to cooperate to make it—not larger, perhaps—but better.

And which is the best town in Texas? It should be your home town!

In the case of Jake L. Hamon vs. Texas State Bank of Eastland the court ordered that the plaintiff take nothing and in favor of the garnishee. In the case of Jake L. Hamon vs. Arab Gasoline Corporation it was ruled that the plaintiff take nothing by his suit and also that the defendant take nothing by its cross action.

Court Helping In Ranger N.Y.A. Work

Commissioners court, it has been announced, has voted to allow the city of Ranger $20 each month in aiding in sponsorship of N. Y. A. activities at Ranger. Showdown Vote On Pension Bill Assured In House

AUSTIN, March 23.—A showdown vote on a constitutional amendment to finance social security was ordered today in the Texas House of Representatives. "We are endangering every house bill, every tax bill related to old age pensions by continuing the discussion, which we started a week ago Tuesday," said Rep. Lon E. Alsop of Carthage, in moving that final action be taken. The vote is expected as soon as pending amendments to the old age pension eligibility section are disposed of.

College Bill Sent Back to the House

AUSTIN, March 23.—A bill to elevate North Texas Agricultural college at Arlington and John Tarleton college at Stephenville to senior college rank was returned today to the Texas House of Representatives for concurrence in a senate amendment. The bill was passed by the senate yesterday afternoon, with little argument.

Voorhis of California introduced in their respective Houses a measure sponsored by the American Federation of Little Business. The establishment of 12 regional intermediate credit banks in which private capital and private management would be combined with Government capital and regulation, was provided in the measure. The system would be patterned, in many ways, after the Home Loan Bank-Federal Savings and Loan System. Local investment associations would be authorized to make loans up to $100,000 for business purposes.

NEUTRALITY—It is becoming increasingly evident that the United States as a whole does not know what to do about keeping the U. S. out of war. At least one gathers that impression when proposals of all types continue to flood Congress. The old Neutrality Law is held, by the President as well as by many Congressmen, as impractical and in some cases dangerous. A debate must surely begin on the question of keeping out of war, as on May 1, 1939 the "cash and carry" clause of the present Neutrality Law will expire. One thing is certain, with conditions in other countries as bad as they are, a sensible, and, well-thought out law, should be brought out of this session of Congress.

Audiences Are Getting Noisier Expert Declares

AUSTIN, Tex.—Audiences are getting noisier and noisier each year.

Such is the conclusion reached by Dr. C. P. Boner, University of Texas physics professor and sound expert, after a seven-year series of sound-meter experiments made in churches, gymnasiums, dance halls and restaurants.

The University's sound expert uses public address systems and sound meters as his measuring rods. The noise from the audience, he measures in "decibels," recorded on his sound meter.

He cites the University's huge Gregory Gymnasium as the nearest example. Its 25-watt public address system, adequate in 1930, has been "stepped up" to 125 watts since to overcome an audience noise amounting to 80 decibels.

Ordinary conversation registers about 74 decibels, according to Dr. Boner, while 130 decibels is "the threshold of pain" for the human ear.

The mounting noise level, which means the noisier audience, is just as evident in church pews, dance halls and restaurants, Dr. Boner's experiments contend.

One church was forced to raise the console of its organ from the floor level to the choir loft for the organist to hear his instrument, he said.

Reason? Dr. Boner is not sure yet.

It might be the radio, he reasons, for its widespread use as "unnatural volumes" may have accustoms the average person to louder sounds.

It might be post-depression nervousness, but the sound meter is only seven years old and he has no gauge of pre-depression audience noise.

One thing is certain, he maintains. The artificial "stepping up" of voice and orchestra distorts the tonal qualities of both speech and music.

Increased street noise are certainly to be considered, Dr. Boner said.

IS IMPROVING

Condition of W. A. Wiegand of Eastland, who has been ill of pneumonia, was reported improved Wednesday. Recently, however, his condition has been worse.
