Government Loan On Cotton Brings Up Legal Problem

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Plans for a government loan on 1939 cotton were delayed today by a legal question raised by the comptroller general as to whether loans can be made when cotton prices are above 52 per cent of parity.

The farm law authorized the secretary of agriculture to establish loan rates when prices are between 52 and 75 per cent parity, but makes loans mandatory only when the price is below 52 per cent parity.

PLAN TO AID IN CONTROL OF BLIGHT TOLD

A system of seed selection to control southern blight of peanuts has been suggested to Eastland County growers by Elmo V. Cook, County Agent, who reports that several have already made their seed selections for next year for this purpose. Southern blight of peanuts reduced the yield of nuts an estimated ten percent this year.

Blight affects the peanuts by either rotting the stems, causing the nuts to be left in the ground at harvest time or causing the entire peanuts to turn black and rot off the vine. The hay is rarely ever damaged, sometimes being better on the vines that are affected with the blight. Plant pathologists of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station have advised that the County agent that he hopes that cause the disease live over the winter either in the wall of the peanut shell or on the roots of most plants that are left in the soil. Blight lives on a large number of plants. It might be possible to control the trouble by securing clean seed and planting them on land where no peanuts have been planted for at least two years or by planting shelled seed on clean land. It is not recommended to plant nuts that have been shelled longer than this.

Because most peanuts growers find it next to impossible to follow the recommendations of planting peanuts in three years rotation because of the large acreage needed for such a program, Cook offers the seed selection plan as a possibility for disease control. The plan will work if a strain of peanuts immune to the blight can be found.

The growers should select unaffected plants from fields that are badly infested with blight, making about fifty vines selections when they are in windrows before threshing.

After the selected vines are cured about twenty five of the best nuts should be selected from each vine and placed in a small paper bag for storage until planting time. In 1940 these nuts should be planted in a field that has been badly infested, planting the nuts from each vine in short rows. When these rows are harvested in 1940 any rows not affected with blight should be saved for seed to plant a still larger acreage in 1941.

Cook points out that the above plans may not result in a blight immune strain but even if it does not do this the resulting seed will be better because of the selections made of the best nuts in 1939 and 1940.

SETTLEMENT AGREED UPON BY OFFICIALS

Highly satisfactory to county officials Tuesday was the settlement for $4,250 of a tax matter with George Beggs, Fort Worth oil man and realtor.

County Judge W. S. Adamson stated that the $4,250 was for settlement of state, county and school taxes owed by Beggs on oil property near the Stephens County line. Part of the land runs into Stephens county.

The settlement was reached by cooperation of Beggs' attorneys with the county judge, members of commissioners' court, Criminal District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., and others.

The county had filed suit through Conner to collect the taxes. However, because of the agreement 91st district court rendered judgment in accordance with terms of the county officials with Beggs.

Industrialists Want No Part of Another War

The National Association of Manufacturers is holding a series of meetings in key cities to try to make it clear to America that industry wants no part of another war.

There is a widespread belief that the United States was somehow jockeyed into the World War by manufacturers and industrialists intent on big profits. It wasn't that simple, as every student of war causes knows. The desire for profits undoubtedly did its share, but so did the desire for jobs, the desire of the farmers for $2 wheat, and the desire of the cotton-growers for export markets.

Nothing is simple, and the causes of a war are among the most complex of all phenomena.

Assuming that anything at all was learned from the World War, certainly industrialists must have learned these things, and their present meetings indicate that they have learned them:

1. The big profits, not only to manufacturers and industrialists, but to farmers, workmen, and everybody else, accrue during neutrality, not during war.

2. War itself always brings fixed prices, high taxes government restrictions and "interference" to such an extent that the pickings are slimmer than during neutrality.

3. Freedom lost during a war is seldom entirely regained, and the depression which follows a war boom is pretty likely to eat up more than the profits made during a war.

Thus there is no reason to question the entire sincerity of men like C. M. Chester, Tom Girdler, Howard Coonley, and the others who are speaking in the N. A. M.'s neutrality drive. They all know full well that the controls that would be imposed on industry during another war would probably never be relaxed, and that such profits as could be made would undoubtedly be absorbed by taxes and wiped out in the depression almost certain to follow the collapse of a war under the industries geared up to high speed to carry it on.

Whatever may have been the attitude of industrialists toward the World War, they are going to some pains to make crystal clear their attitude toward this one: they want none of it.

I Give You Texas

By ROYCE HOUSE

More Memories of a newspaperman:

The time when, as a small town editor, it was my good fortune to scoop the star journalist of Texas in his own newspaper. He was sent to Eastland by a metropolitan newspaper to "cover" the trial of the Santa Claus bank bandit but, figuring the jury would be out a good while, the staff correspondent wandered over to Breckenridge. The jury came in unexpectedly and, seeing that he wasn't there, I called his paper by long distance telephone and gave the verdict. The first he knew of it was when he saw the big headlines in his paper.

But I know how he felt. As the one-man news department of the Ranger Times, I okayed the first copy of the paper off the press one afternoon, then sauntered up town to a friend's office. A few minutes later, I heard a newsboy yelling, "Ranger man, commits suicide!" Knowing I had handled no such story, I ran out, bought a paper and—sure enough—there it was.

Here's the way it had happened! Right after I left the office, Geo. Manning, the advertising manager (now publisher at Overton) came in with the news as he had been passing right after the man had shot himself; then Ernest Glazner, linotype operator, wrote the story; Joe Thompson set it up; Whitey Hicks, the foreman, wrote the headline, pulled out a feature yarn on Page 1 to make room for the suicide story, and there it was—the editor scooped in his own paper. The only consolation was that it had taken four men to do it!

Which calls to mind the story of the negro accused of beating up a negro woman. The defendant explained to the judge:

"Yosh honah, she promised me ef I would git her da set o' false teeth that she'd marry me and I got her a set of teeth whut cost me $40 and then she thowed me ovah. Yistiddy I seen her wid an odder niggah and she grinned at me—grinned at me wid my own teeth, and I knocked her out o' her!"

Interesting facts about Texas: N. H. Pierce, Menard publisher, used to be a wrestler; look at his Gibraltar-like figure, 240 pounds, and you won't doubt that he went two hours to draw with a grappler who had held Champion Strangler Lewis to a tie. Captain Aldrich of the Texas Rangers has one of the finest collections of Texas books in existence.

Amon Carter used to sell crayon enlargements of photographs. And I should like to be recognized long enough to express my bitter resentment at being charged 15 cents for a hamburger in Austin—at a sandwich stand, at that. Any place so snooty that it feels called upon to charge more than a dime for a hamburger is too high-toned to be selling such a plain democratic product as a hamburger, anyway.

One of the most interesting hotels in Texas is the Excelsior at Jefferson. Part of the structure was erected before the Civil War. Between the hotel and the lone some old federal building (Jefferson once had a population of 30,000 but now has only a few thousand inhabitants), there are Texas fushias, like red rose-buds; the variegated pinks and yellows of lantanas; and periwinkles, white roses, marigolds, Mexican sunflowers and morning glories—(somebody told me that the morning flowers were, all but the waning glories—we had those in Arkansas too).

On the veranda is a large cage containing a hundred canaries. Their ancestors were there 5 years old and the register coning about.

Some of the furniture is 150 years old and the register contains the names of General Grant, Jacob Astor, W. H. Vanderbilt and Jay Gould. At the bottom of the page, Gould wrote "End of Jefferson, Texas." The railroad builder was angry because the city wouldn't provide the bonus he thought it should for building the railroad and that marked the beginning of Jefferson's decline.

The rooms of the Excelsior have no keys and have never been locked—not even when the town experienced a recent oil boom.

Boys Rent Ducks To Owners Of Gardens

AUSTIN, Tex.—Boys in Austin are giving a vivid demonstration of how birds can assist small urban landowners alike. This group of hustling boys rent ducks to house wives who turn the birds into their gardens. The ducks make a clean sweep of all insects without destroying the plants, and, incidentally, bring their owners 50c per day in rental fees. Texas has a large number of insectivorous birds and it is estimated by biologists that the birdlife of the State is worth 10c per acre for every acre in the Lone Star State due to their insect devouring habits.

Families Meet In England Only On Sunday Since War

By United Press LONDON.—Sundays are reunion days among London's evacuated families. In fact, they might almost be called "Father's Day" for the great majority of the husbands who leave London to visit the towns and villages around every week end are the men whose wives and families had left home at the start of the war. The trains leaving London's main stations are crowded with fathers, uncles, aunts, big brothers and sisters, and, sometimes, mothers who stayed at home when their children went away. Large crowds arrive at the High Wycombe station and from there spread themselves all over the Chiltern villages between the cottages and farms where the children are staying. There are more crowds at Chessham, Amersham, Reading and other towns. Village commons and lanes are populated as never before, and the reunited families spend most of their time in the open air. The children are almost incoherent with the new wonders they discover — blackberries, cows and the duck ponds — all of which father has to be shown. London families, with gas masks stacked around them, picnic on the grassy banks by the side of the roads. Many of the fathers make some sacrifice to pay their fares. At Widmore End (Bucks) one father, a laborer, having lunch with his family by the roadside, said he came from Paddington. "Our train was filled with parents," he said. "I walked four miles here from High Wycombe station and had a job to find the place." Another man who came to see his family searched on foot all morning before he found the village where they are living. At Holmer Green some of the fathers had walked miles. "Some have walked and begged lifts in lorries," one of the voluntary workers said. "Others came partly by bus and some cycled from London." There has been some slight trouble in some of the areas and an evacuation officer summarized the main complaints under these heads: Temporarily sleeping on the floor on mattresses. Oil stoves which the women do not understand. Distance from the shops. Difficult cooking arrangements. Quiet of the country. The breaking up of the family. "A few have returned but most are settling down," said the officer. "In many cases the foster-parents and the children are getting on so well that it will be a wrench when the children go back home. I know of a childless couple who have twin girls of 7 staying with them and already the husband and wife are dreading the day when the twins will leave."

PLANS BEGUN IN RED CROSS ANNUAL DRIVE

Cecil Barham, county chairman of the annual Red Cross roll call, today called for cooperation of citizens when they are approached during the annual membership drive.

The roll call will begin Nov. 11 and continue through Thanksgiving. Barham, of Eastland, said he will immediately begin the appointment of local roll call chairmen in cities and communities of the county.

Barham, discussing the call, said:

"The time has come again when the Red Cross must more than treble its forces on short notice to stand ready to meet one of the primary obligations upon which it was founded and for which it exists under Congressional Charter. As a Red Cross society, the American Red Cross is bound under the Treaty of Geneva, signed by the United States in 1882, to lend aid to other national Red Cross societies in time of war; to stand ready to furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of our Army in time of war; and to act at all times in matters of voluntary relief in accord with the military and naval authorities as a medium of communication between the people of the United States and their Army and Navy."

"In addition to the present emergency, the Red Cross here at home must continue to expand, both nationally and locally, its normal services of disaster relief preparedness; its social aid to service and ex-service men of the U. S. Army and Navy which are expanding, and to war veterans and their families; its nursing services; the training of volunteers in first aid, life saving and home safety; the work of special volunteers in Braille for the blind, making garments and canning food for the needy, and others.

"Membership in the Red Cross has increased steadily for the past eight years to where the organization in its services now is more inclusive than at any time in the past eighteen years. With this growth, expansion of services during this next year necessarily must be interpreted by a much greater membership than ever before in peace-time."

Barham said he had appointed Stewart Doss, Eastland, as chairman of a publicity committee for the roll call.

College Head Lists Ways To Aid Allies

OBERLIN, O. — Dr. Ernest Hatch Wilkins, president of Oberlin College, believes there are ways the United States could help England and France without becoming involved in the war.
"While the war still is going on," he said, "we shall have the opportunity to support the work of the Red Cross and other similar organizations in England and France."
It would be up to the United States to help bring about a "non-vindictive and constructive peace," he said, in which nations, both European and American, should participate.
Finally, he said, "if we go to war the chances are that the average total financial cost (during the war and afterward) to the average citizen will be something like $5,000. If we save that sum, we should be willing to give it to England and France so that they could use it for rehabilitation purposes."
