American Casualties Are Growing Daily In The War; We Can Help Keep Them Low By Buying More War Bonds

While Eastland County soldiers here and abroad carry on their part in the great fight for Democracy and Freedom, we as civilians are charged with the responsibility of keeping them supplied with the necessary supplies and to do this the Nation has been called on to buy (Not Donate) $15,000,000,000 in War Savings Bonds and Eastland County's part of this sum is $597,300.00. The time for the buying of these bonds is drawing near a close and latest reports were that only about one-half of the amount had been subscribed, so it is plain to see that each and everyone of us must get down to business, dig a little deeper into our reserves and put the campaign over.

Eastland's quota of the $597,300.00 for the County, like those of Ranger and Cisco, is $145,000.00, and late Thursday this amount was about three-fourths subscribed. County Chairman Cyrus B. Frost reminds us, however, that after all the $597,300.00 is the quota for the County as a whole and that in all probability it will require a substantial over-subscription from Eastland, Ranger and Cisco, to put the County quota over.

Another thing to bear in mind is that the government must have this money—The boys whose pictures are shown above as well as thousands of others, are depending upon that and if it is not raised in this manner it must be secured in some other manner.

Capt. Davis Due For Additional Honors Soon

Capt. Everett (Stinky) Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kile Davis of Eastland, is slated for a place of honor in the Dallas County Historical Association's "Hall of Fame," according to official information furnished his parents recently.

Capt. Davis was in the Philippine Islands when the treacherous Japanese stabbed this country in the back and precipitated the present conflict between the United States and Japan. He volunteered immediately for combat in the Air Corps and saw action at Corregidor, Bataan, Cebu and other points, and when General Douglas MacArthur left the Philippines to establish headquarters elsewhere in order to carry on his fight against the Japanese, Davis was one of his escorting pilots.

Davis has been acclaimed as the hero of numerous airplane battles and has been awarded many decorations for bravery and meritorious service. He also carries a number of wounds received in the line of duty.

Capt. Davis was born at Mesquite, New Mexico, on August 12, 1915, but was reared at Eastland where he attended high school, graduating at the age of 16 years. He attended Texas A&M College, majoring in mechanical engineering and military science. Upon graduating from A&M he went to Love Field, Dallas, as an instructor in the Air Corps. He got his first actual experience in flying under his brother, Sam Heath Davis. From Love Field was sent to numerous training fields in the United States, among which was Lowery Field, Colorado, the first bombardier school in the United States. From the first class of bombardiers at Lowery Field, 18 graduates, three of the 18 being listed as distinguished students; two of the three were from Texas and Davis was one of the two.

Davis had studied Spanish and it was because of his knowledge of this language that he was sent to the Philippines as an air corp instructor.

Davis is now giving United States airmen final flight instructions in this country.

On going into service he was sent to Chico, California, where he was stationed with the 4th Air Force, West Coast Training Center. On May 27, 1943, he was assigned to the Second Air Force, Heavy Bombardment at Casper, Wyoming. From this assignment he was sent to Randolph, for the course in aviation medicine.

Send Soldiers Xmas Mail Now

Attention of the public is again called to the fact that September 15 to October 15 has been designated as the period for mailing Christmas gifts to Army personnel overseas. Gifts for Navy personnel overseas should be mailed from September 15 to November 1.

There are unusual advantages to be derived from early Christmas shopping and mailing this year. Many retail stores, like other businesses, already are finding it difficult to have available an adequate force of experienced employees. If the Christmas rush should come as usual in the last few weeks before the holiday, the difficulty will be greatly intensified. Early purchases will help to relieve the burden.

During the next few weeks, millions of persons will be buying gifts for the men and women in our armed forces overseas. Those shoppers who plan also to mail gifts to addresses within the United States might as well make some of their purchases now for domestic mailing. The gifts for delivery in the United States can be held until November, during which month the bulk of Christmas parcels must be mailed if deliveries are to be made on time.

Transportation facilities already are burdened with a vast volume of war materials and personnel. There will be an acute shortage of trained postal personnel. We must be prepared for irregular train service, and an insufficient number of railroad cars and motor trucks. The public is asked to cooperate by mailing their Christmas gifts and greeting cards far in advance of the holiday season, and also to add the postal unit delivery number to addresses of mail directed to those cities in which the unit numbering system has been established.

THEY ARE DOING THEIR PART

Eastland Boy Was One Of First Americans To Land On Kiska; Had Narrow Escape From Japs' Mine

The Americans—including the officers in charge—composing the naval landing parties that went ashore on Kiska last August after several days of shelling the island, were really surprised to find that the enemy had flown, according to W. T. Harris, Machinist Mate Second Class and a member of the first "leave" to land. He is in Eastland on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Harris.

"We found four half-starved dogs and one dead Jap on the island," Harris said.

The enemy dogs, trained for sentry duty, attacked some of our men and I know that one of them was killed, but I do not know what became of the other three, Harris said. The dead Japanese, he said, was in a machine gun nest and apparently had been dead about two weeks, and possibly was killed by American airmen.

The Japanese in abandoning the island which they had held for so long, left many guns of various calibre, most of which had been purposely damaged by them, a considerable number of trucks, some of which were of American make and usable, and much ammunition and other supplies of no value to us, Harris said.

Along the beaches at Kiska village where we landed, Harris said was found a damaged ship of considerable size and in shed, dug into the hillside were found three two-man Jap suicide submarines. The Japs had also tunneled into the hills and built hospitals, powerhouses, etc.

In exploring one of the half submerged Jap ships I climbed down into the vessel on a ladder not knowing until later that the Japs had mined the ship with dynamite set to explode when contact was caused by anyone getting on the ladder, Harris said. It was explained to me, he said, that the reason the explosion did not take place was because the contact points had corroded.

The Aleutian territory is mostly mountainous and shrouded by fog, of various density much of the time which made the work of the American airmen very difficult, Harris said.

Harris, who has been in two major engagements, arrived in Eastland Saturday from Seattle, Washington. He has been in service about one year.

RUSSIA TAKES POLTAVA; FOUR OTHER BASES THREATENED

(Sept. 23, 1943)
LONDON, (UP)—Russian arm ies sweeping the Germans back against a 700-mile stretch of the Dniester River burst into White Russia and captured Poltava today as the battle lines swayed close to the vital Nazi defense sections of Smolensk, Kiev, Dniepropetrovsk and Zaporozhe.

Allied armies rocked the Germans back to the Dniester River and White Russian today and hammered closer to burning Naples in Italy.

The Red army plunged 61 miles westward across the border of White Russia in the Gomel sector and are pushing toward the old Polish frontier, Moscow dispatches reported, while a German broadcast said advances elements of the Russian army had reached the Dniester at an unspecified point—presumably far to the south in the Kiev area.

Allied Headquarters North Africa—Allied naval and air forces are tightly blockading the eastern coast of Corsica to prevent the evacuation of German forces being driven into the northeastern corner of the island, a communique said today.

In the Mediterranean area, Allied armies pushed the Italian front forward to encompass three more towns south of Naples and were fighting hard perhaps 20 or 25 miles south of that great port, which the Nazis had started destroying with fire and dynamite. At least 30 ships were scuttled in Naples harbor which appeared to have suffered a drastic application of the "scorched earth" technique.

Facing rough going through the rocky, hilly country, the Americans and British pushed toward a Naples which Germans apparently were reconciled to lose. But before leaving, the enemy was engaged in an orgy of looting, destruction and terrorism that refugees reaching the Isle of Capri could attest with Warsaw in 1940.

An Italian naval officer who towed twenty-five miles from Naples to the island said that the Germans were flooding Italians in the streets for simple traffic violations. He added that he had seen as many as fifty persons rounded up at a time and shot on various meager pretexts.

OUT OUR WAY

The Baptist Herald

First Baptist Church Rev. Homer J. Starnes Pastor The Sunday School and Training Union attendance were up again last Sunday. This increase is due to the effort being put forth by our faithful workers. This is the Divine Plan that the Lord's work grows by the effort of the church that has a core of conscientious and efficient workers. Every member of a church should do something for his or her church. Help with your own presence and then invite others. Sunday is Promotion Day for Sunday School and Training Union. We are anxious to have every pupil in Sunday School Sunday and then stay for the morning service. We especially urge every one that is to be promoted to be in the morning service to receive his or her Promotion Certificate. These lovely certificates will be prized by each one. Let us also urge every teacher and officer to be in the morning service Sunday. Sunday closes the Sunday School year and we want to recognize all those who have been entrusted with the teaching and training program of the church for the coming year. The fine work that our T. U. and S. S. leaders are doing is appreciated and we want an opportunity to give expression to that appreciation Sunday. We welcome the five who came into the fellowship of the church last Sunday. They can find a place of service in the church and we trust the church will fill a need in their lives. The recent religious census showed 131 Baptists in Eastland whose membership is elsewhere. Certainly one's church relationship would mean more if his membership were in his home community. To Baptists living in Eastland we not only extend a hearty welcome but urge them for their own spiritual good and for the glory of Christ to find their place in the church. The women's work is getting off to a good start for the new church year. The women of our churches have long been faithful in their support of the work. Our Broth-

Many Oil Men of Section Will Be At Convention

The oil industry of West Central Texas will be well represented at the 24th annual convention of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, which opens in Fort Worth on Wednesday, October 13, according to Joseph M. Weaver, of Eastland, vice-pres. of the Association. "This year's convention will be of unusual interest to every oil operator in West Central Texas, said Weaver, since discussion will not only involve problems and plans of immediate concern to our industry, but will also be devoted to post-war planning." While the business program will be streamlined and concluded on Wednesday, October 13, with Fort Worth oilmen as hosts to the visitors at a buffet supper that evening, the convention will extend through Thursday, October 14, as that delegates may compete for the Hamilton Cup in the traditional oilmen's annual handicap golf tournament. "And so I'll see my Danny in February," she said breathlessly. "Think of it, Tom! I'll see him!" "How is it that this Danny doesn't know you're his grandmother?" Tom asked grimly.

SYNOPSIS

Lobster Towers, a fine old apartment house, has been taken over by the local University to be made into a dormitory for the boys. Mrs. Freeman (Mabel Paige) an exquisite little old lady, who has lived there alone for twelve years, in the hopes that her wayward son Danny will some day return home, finally refuses to leave the apartment her husband bought for her when the house was first built. Re-modeling starts, but the little old lady is undaunted and goes serenely on her way. The boys assemble in the hall and, after their first surprise at finding a lone female resident in their midst, promptly fall for Mrs. Freeman and become her willing slaves. One night Lucy Stanton (Dorothy Morris) creeps up the fire-escape and into Mrs. Freeman's room, calling softly "Danny, Danny Freeman," then she sees the little old lady. Lucy explained her mistake; she had quarreled with her sweetheart, Danny Freeman (John Craven), and, realizing the fault was hers, had come to apologize but had entered the wrong room.

CHAPTER THREE

"I'ven everything turns out all right," Mrs. Freeman said. "I know all about quick tempers, my dear, and making up, I understand perfectly." Lucy looked at her with brimming eyes, then flung her arms around her neck and kissed her. "Goodnight," she said shyly. "And thank you, I'll never forget!" Mrs. Freeman stood at the window until she saw Lucy drive off, then turned and hurried into the hall to where Paul sat, keeping his vigil at the head of the stairs. "It's all right, Paul," she said. "Go to bed—and bring him to see me tomorrow. I'm sorry I asked you to—" She broke off as the front door slammed below and a lusty voice shouted unintelligible words. "Is—that he?" she faltered. "Is that Danny?" "That's he," Paul said grimly. "And I'm afraid you'll have to wait till tomorrow to make his acquaintance. He seems to have been drowning his sorrows, Rom, along to bed, please. I'll bring him to you in the morning if you will want to see him."

Lucy Stanton (Dorothy Morris) has had a misunderstanding with her boy-friend Danny Freeman, (John Craven) they are very much in love and she wants to effect a reconciliation.

Her face clouded for just a moment. "My Danny told everybody his mother was dead. I understand that. Pride and bitterness would make him want to wipe out his life as it had been." She sighed. "Mr. Freeman never changed, either. He refused to try to find Danny and always spoke of him with relentless anger. So you mustn't blame him, Tom. And don't look like that—it's not like you to be cross when I'm so happy. Be happy with me—" Tom's face softened, and he said gently: "That I will, I'm right glad for you."

But there was deep trouble in his kindly eyes as he watched her walk away. Strangely enough, it was Danny's love for Lucy Stanton that brought him closer to Mrs. Freeman. Or perhaps it wasn't so strange. Perhaps it was part of the pattern which had been her design for living throughout the years. Early in December, the boys on the fourth floor had a conference with her. Danny, they announced glumly, was falling behind in his classes. If he flunked his mid-terms in February, he would have to drop out, and that would be just too bad for the football team next season. It wasn't that he couldn't pass his exams, if he would work, Joe Downes said, and the others agreed, that it was all because of Lucy Stanton. When Danny wasn't with her, he was brooding about her. He just couldn't work. It seemed that the Stantons and Ike Dale's parents were lifelong friends, and they had always hoped that Ike and Lucy would be married. Mr. Stanton was like the father in some old-fashioned melodrama. He liked Ike. Consequently, although Lucy didn't like him, she had to be pleasant to him. And Danny was a wreck every time he knew that Ike had a date with Lucy. Maybe Mrs. Freeman could suggest some way to help.

"Well," she said hesitantly, her eyes bright, "I was thinking—" in some way, she could show the Stantons that Danny, not Ike Dale, was the boy Lucy should marry. Even in her wildest dreams, however, she never could have imagined herself doing what she did that night. From the beginning, Mr. Stanton made it quite plain that he did not like Danny. And he made it equally plain that Ike was a welcome guest in his house. The others were all playing cards, and Mrs. Freeman sat for a long moment alone in the library, holding the silver bracelet Dan and Lucy had given her, wondering what she could do to help them. Then, quite suddenly, as Ike Dale came into the room, a plan sprang into her mind. "Ike," she said, "would you do something for me?" "Sure," he told her. "I'm just looking for a drink. I'm dummy—and have to get back soon. But what is it you want?" "Well, I'm a little embarrassed," she cleared her throat. "Danny and Lucy gave me this lovely bracelet. And I want to give her a ring that Mr. Freeman gave me when I was her age. I haven't a Christmas card, so I'll have to use a calling card. I need a pen—and could you find me a little empty box? If it's not too much trouble?" "I suppose so," Ike said, handing her his fountain pen. "I'll see what I can dig up." "Perfect," Mrs. Freeman told him. "Now, if you'll put in the ring, with the card on top, I'll see if I can find a ribbon." Her knees were trembling as she walked away. She knew that Ike could never resist reading what she had written on the card: My dear, A very old ring from a very old woman who has known much happiness since this night you came into her bedroom—by mistake. With love, Sarah Freeman. She came back in a moment, to find Ike holding the card. His face was livid. "What does this mean? Lucy came into your bedroom—by mistake! And you live in—" "Ike!" Mrs. Freeman implored. "Lower your voice. It was all perfectly innocent, I assure you." "Innocent!" he shouted. "Her father will have something to say about that!" The card still in his hand, he strode from the room. (to be continued)

"Reality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 26.
The Golden Text is: "Since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him" (Isaiah 64:4.)
Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee" (Psalms 145:10).
The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God created all through Mind, and made all perfect and eternal" (page 205.)

The Revival closed with good victory. Rev. Gunstream did some of the best preaching I have heard in some time. Also the Music was of the best. Mr. Elbert Rains leading the singing and Miss. Oletha Huestis assisted by others did good work at the Piano and special singing. The church was helped and blessed.
Now we are to face a forward advance. Our church leaders are asking us to build larger Sunday Schools and have Revivals. To this end they are asking that one million calls be made in the United States during the Month of October. The 3rd of October is to be Rally Day.

Best Limerick To Win War Bond

GOOSE CREEK, Tex. (UP)—Jingle writers in the Tri-City area can now put their ability to good use.
The war activities committee for the Tri-Cities Junior Chamber of Commerce is offering a $21 bond for the best limerick in both the student and adult divisions.
Contestants must purchase an extra bond during the third war loan drive and complete the following jingle:
"You give a Yank a knife and a gun,
And he'll fight 'til victory's won,
So it isn't right,
If you can't fight,
Glider School Is WAG's Paradise

Glider School Is WAG's Paradise

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UP)—Word has leaked out via the canine grapevine, that the big glider school at South Plains Army Air Field is a dog's paradise.
Proof of the fact that American soldiers are a soft touch for homeless dogs is the landslide of adoptions by different groups and individuals at the field in recent months.
"Cadet", a brown and white Collie owned by Colonel Norman B. Olsen, commanding officer, is probably the best known of the mascots. An attack of gun shyness recently caused him to wash out of the training school for WAGS, Army sentry dogs.
All SPAAF mascots have regular flying time in military gliders and some have been made honorary staff sergeants. As members of the WAGS, the dogs walk sentry duty to assist in guarding the field.

Five Names Account For 200 Students

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—Recalling names—always a nemesis for politicians—won't be so difficult for political hopefuls on the University of Texas Campus this year.
For the most part, the office aspirant may call persons "Smith" and be right one time in 100. And if that doesn't click, he may use the names Davis, Johnson, Miller and Wilson.
