Lift Up Your Heart

By Rev. C. Nelson

The fourth commandment answers the question of how often we are to worship God. We are to worship him every Lord's Day. No person will ever grow strong in the spiritual life who neglects his worship of God. No home will ever reach its maximum happiness that neglects this important matter. No nation will stand that neglects this matter, for it is only an indication that the nation has forgotten and forsaken God.

This commandment sets out certain duties that are binding upon man. The duty of work. This commandment dignifies labor. Labor is man's normal condition. Man is as much commanded to work six days as he is to rest on the seventh.

The duty of rest, Jesus said, "Man was not made for the sabbath, but the sabbath was made for man." Man's mental, physical, moral and spiritual health depends upon his observance of this day. The word Sabbath comes from the Hebrew word shabbat meaning, to rest from labor.

The duty of worship. Worship is sacred rest for the soul. As God rested the sabbath for the rest and refreshment of man's physical life, he also intended the sabbath for the refreshment of the spirit of man. Man is both spirit and flesh. His soul must be refreshed if he is to be happy.

Let us notice some of the reasons for keeping this day. First God rested from his creative labors and commanded his people to rest. God said we were to rest. This should be sufficient reason. Second, God set this day aside and made it a holy day. And when we desecrate its sacredness we become participants with unholiness committing an unholy act. Third, it commemorates the resurrection of our Lord in whose death burial and resurrection we have hope of entering into that eternal rest of the soul. God calls, Christ calls, his word calls. Conditions in the word calls us back to a reverent keeping of God's Holy day.

Calvert Enters Race For Pl. 2 Asso. Justice

Robert W. Calvert of Hillsboro announced today that he would be a candidate for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas, Place 2.

The place is now held by R. H. Harvey of Texarkana who was appointed to the court by Governor Beauford Jester and who has filed as a candidate for re-election.

While he has never held judicial office Calvert has been prominent in public affairs in Texas for a number of years, having served three terms as Speaker of the House of Representatives, as Speaker of the House of the 45th Legislature, as County Attorney of Hill County for two terms, and as Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee from 1946 to 1948.

Calvert received his public school education at the Sate Home at Corsicana, graduated from the University of Texas School of Law in January, 1931, and entered the practice of law at Hillsboro in March of the same year. For the past 16 years he has been a member of the law firm of Morrow and Calvert. By appointment of the Supreme Court he served as a member of a state-wide committee of lawyers and judges that re-wrote the rules of procedure in civil actions in 1940.

Calvert has been active in the affairs of his home town having just concluded six years service as a member of the Hillsboro School Board, serving the last three years as its chairman. He is married and has two children.

CARTER'S STATEMENT
I will be a candidate in the primaries for the Democratic nomination for the office of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas, Place 2.

As one who loves the law and is proud of his profession it will be my purpose, in keeping with my oath as a lawyer and in keeping with the dignity of the office to which I aspire, to "honestly demean" myself at all times during the campaign and during my judicial service.

Any lawyer seeking judicial office who did not believe that the ultimate goal of every judicial officer of the support of the people. It will be my fervent hope that my conduct and decisions as a member of the court will be such as to inspire the belief and confidence that justice is ever present for those who seek it.

Veep Gets Advice From Republican

AUSTIN, May 27 (UP)—Vice Pres. Alben W. Barkley, who addresses a Jefferson-Jackson day dinner here tonight, had advice today to "refrain from discussing President Truman's campaign to confiscate the tidelands of Texas."

In an open letter to Barkley, Jack Porter of Houston, Republican party leader, advised, "other than the Democratic executive committee of Texas, very few in your audience will approve President Truman's action concerning the tidelands."

Porter suggested the Vice President "dwell at great lengths on the benefits of the Yalta and Potsdam agreements because the people of Texas have a lurking suspicion that those deals put the Russians into Germany and Eastern Europe and into control of China and were the direct cause of the Cold War."

Porter, Republican candidate for U. S. Senator in 1948 and chairman of the "campaign committee for two-party government in Texas," expressed confidence "all Texans feel honored by your visit and that of your charming wife."

Princess, Commoner Tour Southern California; Ghali Faces Deportation

SAN FRANCISCO, May 27 (UP)—Honeymooners Riad Ghali and lovely Egyptian Princess Fathia toured Southern California today, but they raced against the day the handsome Cairo diplomat must face deportation proceedings.

Ghali, 33, a commoner who evoked the rage of King Farouk by ignoring the royal ban against his marriage to Fathia, must leave the U. S. by June 16 or face deportation proceedings.

Before the moslem wedding Thursday, Ghali, who renounced his Coptic Christian faith for a Princess' love, secured a 22-day visa extension. Farouk, in opposing the marriage, cancelled the diplomatic passports of the entire royal entourage and ordered their home. Monday they will return here where Queen Mother Nuzli awaited them in a luxurious suite at the Fairmont hotel.

The youthful couple fresh from their hard-won romantic triumph, travelled incognito in the Southland. Fathia, 19 and green-eyed, and the happy bridegroom artfully dodged reporters after being flown to Los Angeles by millionaire oil man Edwin Pauley in his private plane.

Dowager Queen Nuzli, who engineered a civil ceremony April 25 and the Moslem rite that followed, observed:

"The censors have refused to let any word that Ghali is a Moslem through to the people of Egypt. They think my daughter married a Christian and to them that is the greatest crime. Ghali is now a Moslem and the whole world knows it. That should 'now-bring about my son's forgiveness."

German Police Fire On West Zone Officers

BERLIN, May 27 (UP)—Soviet zone German police opened fire on West Sector police today in the first serious violence since the Russians began massing nearly 500,000 Communist youth for a gigantic Anti-Western rally.

No one was injured, and the West Germans did not return the fire, averting a major crisis in the tense and divided city where Allied troops were alerted against threatened Communist attempts to seize Berlin for the Russians.

Czecks Ordered To Close Doors At New York

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, May 27 (UP)—The United States agreed today to comply with a Czech demand to cut the American diplomatic staff by one-half, and in reprisal order the Czecks to close their New York Consulate General.

A. U. S. note delivered to the foreign ministry said the Americans were complying with the demand because Czechoslovakia "has made it clear that it is no longer interested in maintaining normal diplomatic relations."

The note said the U. S. would close its consulate in Bratislava "in recognition of the curtailed relations between the two countries imposed by the Czechoslovak government."

The new cut, demanded by the Czecks May 23, will leave only four diplomats, seven non-diplomats and one attendant here. The note said the United States "rejects once more the allegations the Czechoslovak government has put forward as the pretext for the reduction in U. S. representation."

It reaffirmed "continuing confidence in the good will and traditional feeling of friendship of the people of Czechoslovakia toward the U. S."

The U. S. charged the Czech government with "repeated provocations and groundless attacks against the United States."

"It is clear that the Czechoslovak government has belied its stated intention of promoting peaceful relations among nations," the note said.

Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs and James K. Penfield, embassy counselor, will stay. The others to stay have not yet been chosen, Penfield said.

Governor Grants Audience To Eastland Men

H. J. Tanner and Turner Collie have just returned from Austin where they held a conference with Governor Shivers Purpose was to invite the governor to Eastland to attend the Annual Horned Toad Derby to be held August 12.

Tanner reports that the governor made no commitment at this time.

U. S. Public Safety officials said the shooting followed the arrest of George Muenz, a 35-year-old school teacher who lives in the American sector of Berlin. Russian sector police invaded the American sector a few yards to make the arrest.

Twenty West Berlin police attempted to rescue Muenz and chased the Communist police back inside the Soviet zone. The Russian zone police opened fire, cutting loose with six or eight shots from rapid-fire machine pistols and carbines.

The Communist police then withdrew from the border area, taking the school teacher with them.

The incident occurred in Lichtenrade in the southern outskirts of Berlin as the Communist youth marched in military formation under overseas skies to Mitte Stadium for an "international sports festival."

There Communist youth chairman Erich Hoenecker told the massed blue-shirted youngsters that the Russian-sponsored "National Front" was "fighting to free our brothers and sisters in West Germany from the fetters of Anglo-American colonial domination and to ward off the terrible annihilation of a Third World War."

Today was the first big Communist youth rally. Sunday is considered the most crucial day when the threatened march on West Berlin may come.

The U. S. Army cancelled all leaves today and placed its Berlin garrison on partial alert for any eventuality. British troops were on "full alert" and British armored cars, military police armed with machineguns and soldiers with rifles moved into traditional "danger spots" along the 103 miles of East-West borders.

Farm Roundup News

After spending four years in the Army Air Corps, R. D. Donham returned to civilian life in 1945, to make an enviable reputation for himself, as a conservation farmer within the few years that have since expired.

A bit undecided at first, he attended Texas A&M College in 1946, his first year out of the service. The next year, however, he found his true calling, when he began actively farming in North Brown County, four miles south of Rising Star.

Almost immediately, he entered the Rising Star Veterans' Vocational Class of Agriculture, and began cooperating with the Brown Mills Soil Conservation District, by carrying out the conservation plan, worked out by his father-in-law, Gayle Greynolds, who owned, and had previously operated the place.

In 1949, because they felt that the old plan was out of date, and they had added several blocks of land to the original tract; they revised their conservation plan.

Since 1946, they have increased the size of their place from 314 to 907 acres. The land he now works was formerly in seven different places. Their 10-acre farmstead, and 64-acre pasture adjoining, were sold brush until two years ago. They have completely cleared this land, soddled most of it to bermuda grass, and sowed vetch and barley on it for winter grazing. On this block of land, R. D. has constructed his new home and other modern farm buildings.

On the three other blocks of land nearest the farmstead, comprising some 314 acres, they have worked out a crop rotation, whereby they graze, and harvest seed from vetch and small grain on one block, cut in a cover crop of vetch and small grain on the second, and grow a volunteer crop of vetch and small grain on the third, which is cut in for row feed crops.

On these three places, they have two fields subject to overflow. In one of these fields, comprising 32 acres, they have esablished a meadow of Johnson grass, which they drill in oats and vetch each year, and mow for hay. The other 29-acre field is seeded to clover and dry-lam alfalfa, also for hay.

The remaining 23 acres, on which the soil is rather shallow, they plan to seed to native blue-stem grasses.

Their other three places, which make up the 519 acres farthest from the homestead, they plan to establish entirely in tame pasture and native grasses, after a period of commercial grass seed production on the old fields. Their problem consists of seeding two fields to King Ranch blue-stem grass, and three fields to native blue-stem grasses, overseeding one bermuda grass pasture to vetch, and eliminating brush, and managing for the return of native tall grasses on four other blocks.

They started this year by seeding one 57-acre field to King Ranch blue-stem, planting sand lovegrasses on another 10 acres, and drilling vetch in the 48-acre bermuda pasture. R. D. also harvested grass seed with his combine, from two neighboring farms, and planted 15 acres of native little bluestem.

The four blocks that are covered in brush have been deferred two years, and now have a thick mixture of grasses in with the brush, which will make pasture more easily established, when the brush is pushed.

Their final goal is to have two bermuda pastures and two King Ranch blue-stem pastures, which can be grazed in the Summer months while deferring the five native pastures, and drilled to vetch in the fall. This vetch, along with that seeded on cultivated land, and the hay cured out on the native pastures, will be used to winter livestock. In April, when they need to take their stock off of their vetch and grain, they will get fresh, succulent grazing from the native grasses until the first of June. Then they will again return their stock to the summer pasture. The hay from the meadows, and the feed from the cropland, will be used as safety factors, and for any needed finishing of stock for market.

British Cabinet Leader Disagrees With UN Lie

LONDON, May 27 (UP)—A member of the British cabinet disagreed today with Trygve Lie's theory that the cold war must be brought quickly to an end if peace is to be preserved.

Hector McNeil, minister for Scotland and formerly minister of state and chief adviser on foreign affairs to Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, predicted that the cold war could go on indefinitely and intensify.

McNeil spoke to the general assembly of the Church of Scotland at Edinburgh. His speech came after:

1. Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, said at Lake Success at the end of his journey to Moscow that 1950 would be the "year of decision both for the United Nations and for the future peace of the world."

2. Kenneth Younger, foreign office undersecretary, told the House of Commons the government did not look with suspicion upon Lie's trip to Moscow, but welcomed his efforts to resolve the difficulties.

McNeil's speech came closer to the reality of official British opinion than the cold war will go on for a long time, that Lie's trip could not hope to ease it or end it, that "total diplomacy" must be applied to win the Cold War, and that any truce would involve appeasement of Russia, for which the west is not prepared.

"I saw with the greatest respect," he said of Lie's assertions, "that there can be no expectation that the Cold War will end next year or the year after that.

"I am quite certain that we are once more in one of those historical sectors where there is a great conflict of thought going on. That conflict, in my opinion, will continue intensively."

The British press has given little space to Lie. The British have remained cool to his idea of holding a special security council meeting at Geneva this summer with foreign ministers attending. But like the other Western countries Britain can hardly say no to the idea.

The western view is that new negotiations with Russia should not be attempted until the West is strong and can negotiate from strength rather than weakness. The West does not expect to be that strong until 1953 or 1954.

The average census taker will earn about $100 this year, Federal officials say.

THE STORY: Falling in love had been far from Clemency Northing's thought when she took her post as nursery governess in a luxurious North African desert home. But soon her heart was torn by the love of her employer's son, who had been engaged to her daughter, Baba. She had to choose between the love of her employer's son and the love of her daughter's fiance.

XXVIII

CLEMENCY stared down at the lettering on Piers' cigarette case. Her throat went dry. Piers from Syria! And he always carried it—"Toujours"—forever.

Suddenly Syrie's words came echoing back with new force: "They were parted through a tragic misunderstanding. Piers is a one-woman man."

It isn't true! she thought desperately. Not Syrie. Not Jon's wife.

Then from outside the window a woman's voice, low and urgent, spoke softly and clearly:

"It will be ghastly if Jon tells her."

She swung round swiftly, as through the aperture of the open glass doors Syrie and Piers came in together from the darkness outside.

Seeing that there was someone in the room, the two who had entered stopped dead. Syrie's hand went out, catching her companion's; and so for a split second they stood.

Seeing them there with the intimacy of the night behind them something wild and alien to all her nature blazed up in Clemency.

She was in no state to analyze the feeling or to recognize the destructive power of jealousy, but all that she had heard within this last hour came rushing upon her, tearing her heart and her mind. As she gazed at the man she loved and the woman she had been told she loved, something snapped in her.

"So it's true—what Jon told me. She hardly recognized her own voice. It seemed as though it must be someone else who was speaking, some other girl whose whole life had been shattered into little pieces about her."

"Clemency—" Piers moved swiftly across to her, but when she would have taken her hand she drew back.

"Don't touch me, please."

"My darling—what is it—what is the matter?" he asked.

She was deaf to the appeal in his voice; all that registered was the slender, bright-haired woman in the background—watching them.

She said: "I came to look for you, to tell you that Jon could not stay under your roof any longer, because he had lied about you wickedly."

"Well," Piers was dangerously quiet. "What did he say about me?"

"That—" She paused, fighting for self-control, then forcing herself to go on: "That you were in love with his wife, that you brought her here, because—"

"I TOLD you so," said Syrie without moving. "I knew that he would tell her—"

"It's unfair that he should make her pay—"

To have Syrie, of all people, offer her an "explanation" of what seemed veritably the last straw.

It snapped the final thread of Clemency's endurance. With a muffled cry, she brushed past Piers, and before he could stop her, she had wrenched open the

But soon her heart was torn by the love of her employer's son, who had been engaged to her daughter, Baba. She had to choose between the love of her employer's son and the love of her daughter's fiance.

XXIX

CLEMENCY went to the night nursery, glad of the dim light as she thanked Justine for watching Baba. The Frenchwoman would have lingered to chat, but it was manifestly impossible at the sleeping child's bedside. Justine murmured that the little one seemed feverish, and left almost at once.

Clemency stood by the cot, her clenched hands pressed tightly against her breast, conscious of that awful bruised feeling inside her. The minutes passed without her being aware of their passing, until the sound of someone moving in the nursery roused her.

"Hush!" Clemency warned in a quick, urgent whisper as the communicating door was pushed open.

From the lighted room behind, Syrie beckoned. For a moment Clemency was filled with a fierce resentment against that summons, then she went through into the other room.

"You look ghastly!" exclaimed Syrie. "Don't you want something to pull yourself together?"

"No, thank you," Clemency replied. "You wanted to speak to me?"

"Then—it's true! He was—your lover? Oh—"

It was a cry from the heart. Syrie simply repeated obstinately her eyes on the door: "I tell you, it's all over now—it was over months ago. Before you came here."

"What does that matter—if it once existed? How could you? How could you both?" Without waiting for a reply to the question, Syrie went back into the night nursery and through to her own room.

TWICE during the night Clemency had gone in to Baba, hearing the child tossing and turning. Once Baba had coughed herself awake, but she grew quieter after Clemency gave her a dose of the simple soothing syrup that was always kept in the nursery cupboard.

Each time Clemency had returned to her room and flung herself down on the bed again.

Now at last she knew that the ghastly night was past and dawn was here. Yet she dreaded the day even more.

Bruised, shamed and humiliated, the one clear thought in her mind was that she must get away from here at once. To remain under this roof after what she had learned, was impossible; the very thought of seeing Piers terrified her.

That Piers, whom she had believed to be everything fine and splendid, should have done this thing was incredible and unforgivable.

Yet she knew that she loved Piers and would love him as long as he lived, even though she did not want to face him, would have given anything not to have seen him again. Once more that panicky desire to fly clutched hold of her. But where to, and how?

Sitting up and pushing the hair back from her face she looked at the diamond circlet on her finger. The symbol of a dream that was over. She pulled it off and sat with it in the palm of her hand.

She decided that she would put it in an envelope and just give it to Piers—but if only she could get away without seeing him! If only she could get away!

YOU DON'T NEED MUCH ADVICE—
... but it is valuable at least twice in your insurance experience. First is, when you go to purchase a policy. Don't select just any kind of an agent or any kind of policy. There's a difference. Second is, when you have a claim: Use your own conclusions here, but for ourselves, we want somebody with a long record of successful performance in adjusting claims when we have a loss.

If it's insurance, we write it in all its forms

Clear Skies, Warm Winds, Smell Of Fresh Water Awakes Fishers

By J. Fred Eder
United Press outdoors Consultant
Clear skies, warm winds, the smell of fresh spring water, the pop-pop of a blue gill or crappie making his catch of a nice fat minnow or bug, causes a chill and thrill in the spine of a sportsman.

This great outdoor heritage of ours is both realized and symbolized now more than ever in Texas by the creation of man-made lakes. The range of activity available to be sportsman within the borders of our state has grown by leaps and bounds in the past few years.

The creation of Lake Texhoma, Pecos, Buchanan, and the Colorado River lakes offer the angler a veritable paradise for fresh water fishing. New dams and lakes under construction present an even brighter future for our outdoor heritage.

Outdoor recreation in Texas has reached a new height. Each week end brings forth a new crop of anglers. The hunting and fishing bug's bite continues to play havoc upon many an unsuspecting soul who has ventured forth for a week end with nature.

Bearing in mind that there is a beginning to everything, your reporter will attempt to be as plain and clear as possible in answering your questions. This is your column, so don't hesitate to ask those questions, for doing so we all benefit.

For the first question we really have a confused and somewhat discouraged angler. It's a question that confronted all of us at one time or another.

Please tell me the truth about all the gaudy looking painted lures found in most sporting goods stores. I have a tackle box full of them but don't catch too many fish. I admit I'm a beginner and it's hard for me to recognize the qualities of a good lure. To me they all represent freaks with loud paint jobs and imitate no living creature. I'm beginning to wonder if they are not made to hook fishermen instead of fish. Am I right?

B. L.

A. To begin with, you have the wrong attitude. A most important factor in fishing is to have full confidence in your equipment. A true fishing enthusiast gets half his fishing fun from the many clever and delightful gadgets and carefully worked out accessories that are made for his pleasure and protection.

There are some lures that do not qualify for the art of angling but no reputable sporting goods store will try to shove these lures off on a customer, let alone stock them. Now lets take those gaudy and brightly colored lures you ask about; It has been definitely proven that fish are partial to bright colors. This may seem unnatural, for to the human eye, most of the food, minnows, and insects, upon which our game fish prey are subdued in coloration. You are also overlooking the fact that none of us "get the limit" everytime we venture forth for a little fishing.

Perhaps some of your so-called "gaudy lures" do not have enough action or you are not yet experienced enough to obtain a killing action with these lures. The most important factor for any good lure is action and plenty of it. There are good lures on the market which have a built-in action, that is, no special skill or manipulation of the rod is necessary to obtain a killing action. The amateur can use this type lure with almost as much success as the experienced angler.

Q. Is the sand bass and the white bass the same?
A. Yes. White bass are also known as silver bass, striped bass, bar fish. The correct name for this scrappy little fellow is white bass. (Lepebema Chysops).

Q. What is the best color line to use for bass fishing?
A. Line color is not an important factor if a leader is used. Your reporter would suggest a light 4-pored line that blends well with the water in which you are fishing. Many, many bass have been caught with the black line, however.

Q. Does a Texas artificial lure license entitle me to fish in any lake in Texas?
A. No. Many lakes in Texas have a special lake license required in addition to your artificial lure license. For complete information on this write the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, Walton Building, Austin.

Now that most veterans have taken advantage of the G. I. education bill, Congress is clamping down. No longer will G. I. benefits be available for studying ballet dancing, personality development, public speaking and various other detours from calculus, American history and science. It's true the ballet keeps some of us on our toes, but with growing deficits threatening to keep the rest of us flat on our backs, Congress evidently figured they'd better conjure some way to get us all on our feet. We've nothing against culture... but to tell the truth, we're not opposed to budget balancing, either.

REMEMBER the Sabbath Day to keep it HOLY

IN THE Ten Commandments, which do you suppose gets the larger treatment? Reverent observance of the divine order for a day of rest and of worship gets chief emphasis. A moment's reflection makes the reason clear. The man who does not take time to keep the Sabbath will likely forget to worship the God of his fathers; he who does not reverence God cannot be expected to regard his neighbor and his neighbor's goods. Sabbath observance stands, therefore, at the very center of religion and of morality. Then if you disregard the Sabbath you do it at the peril of your soul!

NOTICE the argument of Moses. God could get His work done in six days, even the creation of a universe and all its creatures. Surely you do not need the seventh day for the lesser tasks of your doing.

You are under the command of God; you are a part of His creation; there is nothing more important for you than that you remember God and your relation to Him. The Sabbath is such a time of remembrance. The church bell, the rest from daily toil, the quietness in the busy street, the need of your own soul, unite to remind you of your God and His day. The law giver commanded His people to keep this one day sacred to the Lord; to use it for one's own profit is to rob God of the time which belongs to Him.

HERE is an ancient command, never more important than today. The press of the material and the secular was never more insistent; things want to get in the saddle and ride mankind. Remember the Sabbath; then you will worship God and know that you are the eternal child of the Highest. He who remembers the Sabbath most is most likely to remember to attend his church.

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 28.

The Golden Text is: "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Romans 8:31).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." (Matthew 4:10).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sin and disease must be thought before they can be manifested. You must control evil thoughts in the first instance, or they will control you in the second" (page 234).

"I'd Like To Pay A Third This Month"

Ever stop to think what life would be like if we still used the barter system? For one thing, this means of trading would make installment plan buying impractical. Money acts as a standard of deferred payments, makes it possible to know how much is owing. Use credit wisely—and when you borrow, borrow the low cost bank way.
