HOLLYWOOD, (UP) — Alan Young says there is just one thing wrong with being funny. It's much work.

"For six months I haven't had so much as a one-day holiday," said the comedian, who sandwiches movies among his weekly appearances on television. He just finished a starring role in "Androcles and the Lion" at RKO. Last summer he made "Aaron Slick from Punkin' Creek" at Paramount.

He is keeping his slate clear for the next three months, to devote his time to television before starting in "The Sad Sack" next year.

Gabriel Pascal, who produced "Androcles," is one of a host of experts who have likened Young to Charlie Chaplin as a pantomime artist.

"Not since Chaplin have I seen such a performer," he said. Young does not agree with those who say he is Chaplin's equal, although he does follow the Chaplin formula and hopes some day to match the master's ability.

Matter of Technique
The Chaplin formula is to do something funny at the same time don't try to be funny while you're doing it.

"Spilling a bowl of soup in someone's lap can be very funny if it's done as unintentionally as possible. It becomes slapstick if the spiller does it on purpose.

"It's not what you do that's funny, but the way you do it." Young classifies himself as a comic who always tries to do the

THE general's words were heard clearly in one of those strange lulls which bloom in heavy fire. "We all know what we're heading into. Let's head into it like men. There's one force to help us now. May God bless us one and all." A terrific burst of Sioux fire cannonaded into the delivery of his last words. With it the hostiles came screaming in at us from every eighth of the compass. Only the short route up the hill behind us lay open. Spurring his horse in that direction, Custer shouted, "All right, men. Let's go!"

We didn't go far. The Sioux had a good general, too. It looked like we would make it. The Sioux below and flanking us didn't seem eager to come on in, contenting themselves with shadowing our retreat, firing from cover as they followed. Even so their fire was hitting in, troopers dropping by twos and threes every yard of the way. Hot as the fire was and busy as we all were aiming and firing back and running, I still wondered what the devil was holding the Sioux back.

Fifty yards from the top of the hill Custer regrouped us. There were about 60 men remaining alive. Tom Custer and Lieutenant Smith were on the slope below, Custer shot through the head, killed instantly. Smith, with his pelvis shattered, struggling to drag himself up the slope by his hands. We couldn't cover him. I saw Cow Runner snake in like a ferret under the drifting rifle smoke, seize Smith by the hair, whip his knife into and around the head. I got a bead on the Cheyenne but another burst of rifle fire rolled more smoke between us and when it cleared I could see Smith still moving, still groping blindly upward. But now he had no hair. Cow Runner had it. Cow Runner didn't have it long. I saw to that.

We now started on up the hill in two companies, Custer commanding the first, I the second, Butler fighting with both. Not once did I see any trooper between the sergeant and the enemy.

We covered half the distance to the hilltop before it happened. I had just moved my men back through Custer's turn and I had a sudden impulse to turn and look up.

A LOU Sioux horseman stood lean and black against the skyline. As I saw him, he threw up his arm in signal. A single, high call broke from his lips. It was a sound to curdle the courage in any white vein. Harsh, shrill, ululating. The tribal war cry of the Oglala Bad Face Band.

"Custer, look out!" I bawled down to the general.

Crazy Horse followed my words down the hill, 300 yelling Oglala at his back.

Custer had the time it takes a racing Indian pony to cover 50 yards to prepare his last defense. All any man could do, he did—kept levering shells into his carbine and firing them. I can hear his last given orders as clearly as though he were calling them as I write. "Stay together, men. Don't break. Fire low. We'll make it." His unforgettable voice carried over the panic disorder which had seized our men at the appearance of Crazy Horse. They actually pulled together and stood to take the Oglala charge.

Crazy Horse rode into us on the gallop, the momentum of the impact carrying the fight down the hill. His warriors threw themselves from their ponies and the battle was instantly hand-to-hand. Knife flashed against knife, pistol against tomahawk, clubbed carbine against war ax and lance.

My memo- of those two minutes is necessarily incomplete. You can't be fanning two guns, dodging war clubs, ducking axes, grabbing up fallen rifles and firing them, all the while leading a frightened cavalry horse, and still be making comprehensive tactical observations.

These things I remember, though: a crazed corporal, snatching the reins of Sergeant Butler's horse, swinging aboard the brute and galloping out through the Sioux lines. The Indian horde opening like a gaping, red mouth to let him in. The poor devil throwing his gun to his temple, blowing the side of his head out before the Indians could touch him. The following flashes of shock-image recording on my mind that we were now eight. Now six. Suddenly, three. Butler and Custer and I.

The general died first.

HOW history or the legend-makers will draw that death. God alone knows. Probably with yellow curls streaming, a gun blazing in either hand, a defiant burst of laughter.

Well, if so, they won't be too far amiss. General Custer was on his horse at the last. A smother of Sioux fire cut man and beast down together, the horse falling sideways to pin Custer's left leg beneath it. Butler and I started for him but a wedge of Sioux cut us off.

Custer, still alive, twisted up to rest his pistol across his dead mount's withers. Crazy Horse and a shrieking knot of Oglala rode over him.

They shot down into him. His pistol barrel wavered, plunged earthward. The finger on its trigger stiffened. Custer's last shot plowed into the dirt. He didn't hear it sound.

Two Sioux braves seized him, wrenching the lifeless body from under the horse. A third sprang in, knotting his left hand in the thick yellow curls. Up went the scalping knife.

A rifle shot cracked. The knife went spinning crazily out of the warrior's shattered hand. A guttural voice boomed angrily. "Respect him. This is a holy scalp lock."

I saw Crazy Horse beyond Custer's horse, thin blue smoke still wisping from his rifle.

DALLAS, Jan. 7 (UP)—Max Bumgardner of San Angelo Junior College today was named Texas "Junior College Coach of the Year" by the Texas Sports Writers Association after a vote-off.

New Modern U.S. Liner To Be On Voyage Soon

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (UP)—The Superliner United States, the world's most modern ship and biggest and fastest passenger liner ever built in the U. S., will leave New York on her maiden transatlantic voyage July 3, the United States Lines announced today.

The 900-foot, 52,000-ton vessel, now in the last stages of construction at Newport News, Va., challenges even Britain's prides, the Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, in size, speed, and passenger capacity.

John M. Franklin, United States Lines president, said the $70,000,000 vessel, capable of more than 30 knots, will sail on a schedule requiring crossings between New York and Havre, France in less than five days.

More Government Employees Found in California

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (UP)—California, not the District of Columbia, is the place where the most government employees are to be found.

The Civil Service Commission reported today that for the first time the number of federal employees stationed in a single state exceeds the number in the nation's capital. As of Sept. 30, there were 252,200 civilian government workers in California, compared with 249,900 in the Washington area.

New York ranked second with 193,700 federal employees, Pennsylvania, third with 149,900, and Texas, fourth with 116,500.

The United States has 90 percent of all the bathtubs in the world.

Four Burn To Death

DETROIT, Jan. 7 (UP)—Four persons burned to death in their beds early today when a flash fire gutted a small cement garage they have converted into an apartment.

The victims, who police said were employed in the junk business, were identified as William Collins, 49; Forrest Johnson, 56; Ted Stafford, 45, and Mrs. Mamie Jackson, 48.

Police said the blaze apparently was caused by an overheated stove.

The earth has an area of 196,940,400 square miles, of which 55,885,000 square miles are land and 141,055,400 square miles are water.

Looking Back on 1951—
 . . . the inventory shows that the scales weighed out a good portion of the better things for us to enjoy. While the mistakes we made stick out like a sore finger and our failures almost overwhelm us, yet these discouragements are small indeed compared to the unhappiness and tragic experiences of some who happen to live in other countries. We are glad we live here where we have had the opportunity to serve a host of loyal customers for more than a quarter century.

Shooting Preserves Are On The Increase In Texas

AUSTIN, Jan. 7—The growing number of shooting preserves in Texas reflects the increased competition for places to hunt, according to the director of Wildlife Restoration for the Texas Game and Fish Commission.

He said for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1951, 4,212 shooting preserve licenses were issued in Texas. In 1935, there were 1,335 and in 1945, a total of 1,958.

The director explained that the booming business has stimulated issuance of hunting leases, some by the season and some by the day, with the end not in sight.

"Shooting preserve areas," he said, "are most numerous in the Edwards Plateau where deer and turkey hold the stage."

"They are also very common on waterfowl ranges along the coast and even extend into the white-winged country of Cameron and Hidalgo counties."

"Some now exist in portions of East Texas, as well."

The director concluded that "whatever our other reactions may be, we can agree that in the space of 25 years, the pattern has become firmly established in Texas."

The original law covering these permits, passed back in 1925, provides that anyone acting as owner, manager or lessor of a shooting club or resort must secure a shooting preserve license costing $5, from the Game and Fish Commission before making any charge for hunting privileges.

New Weapons Are Found To Fight Rheumatic Fever

Rheumatic fever, second only to accidents as cause of death to children 5 to 19, will claim 20,000 new victims within the year—this despite the fact that recent drug and surgical weapons have shown encouraging results in individual cases.

The new drugs are ACTH and Cortisone. Here's a typical case history, reported in the January issue of Better Homes & Gardens magazine: At Good Samaritan Hospital in Boston, all of a group of children with rheumatic fever were treated with the drugs.

Three-fourths of the cases were afterwards considered terminated, half of the rest were definitely improved, while just ten percent had no response to the treatment.

Thus, although many problems of their use have yet to be ironed out, ACTH and Cortisone promise help for youngsters stricken in the future. But what about those thousands whose small hearts are already seriously injured?

The article reports a new surgical treatment developed at Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia.

In this delicate operation, the scar tissue which clogs the valves between the two chambers of the heart is carefully scraped away.

Another technique now being perfected on animals at the Albany, New York, Medical School replaces scarred, damaged heart valves with plastic substitutes.

Doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital have devised other surgical methods of relieving the congestion within the heart valves which ultimately develops in the majority of rheumatic-heart-disease patients.

During 1951, rheumatic fever claimed five times as many victims as polio, whooping cough, diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles, and meningitis combined. According to the article, the disease is responsible for at least 40 percent of the heart disease which appears in adult life. Small wonder this attention to it.

Former Dallas Opera Man Involved In Suit

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 7 (UP)—Giovanni Cardelli of Weston, former business manager of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, was named defendant today in an $18,000 suit filed by Sherman Ewing of New York.

Ewing said Cardelli, now engaged in television work, had failed to pay a $15,125 note executed by Cardelli to him in Dallas last Oct. 23. Ewing said the note represented a loan of money.

Horses Will Be A Feature At Ft. Worth Show

Fort Worth, Jan. 5 — Plans are being made for the traditional All-Western parade which will see hundreds and hundreds of horses and horse-drawn vehicles move through the Fort Worth Business district Friday afternoon, January 25, to open the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show.

The exposition's vice-president and parade marshal, Ernest Allen, expects the largest number of parade units in the show's 56-year history.

"Sheriff's posse, riding clubs, special groups, families and delegations" are invited, he said. Many groups representing towns or organizations will take part and may carry banners identifying them. "Only horses and horse-drawn vehicles, such as covered wagons and surries, will participate, with the exception, of course, of the bands," Allen said.

The parade will form on T.P. Reservation on the east side of South Main Street between the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company and the railroad at 12:30 p.m., and move promptly at 2 p.m. Line of march will be north on Main Street to Weatherford, west on Weatherford to Houston, south on Houston to Lancaster, east on Lancaster to South Main and back to the starting point.

OUR DEMOCRACY — by Mat

The AMERICAN RESOLUTION

To preserve our Heritage of Freedom,
To keep to the Standards of Honor and Good Citizenship
That have built and maintained our Nation;

And to advance Our Democracy with
New Vigor,
New Determination —
And Firm Faith in the principles of Liberty, Opportunity and Justice for which our country stands... This is the American New Year's Resolution

Ed Swenson, chairman of the New York State Group Office of the Blinded Veterans' Association tells this story on himself.

Before he lost his sight in World War II, Ed liked to wrestle. He and a friend who owned a diner in his hometown of Whitestone, Long Island, often met on the mat, with honors about even. Recently Ed was in the diner and his friend asked, "Can you still wrestle?"

For answer, Ed fumbled for a hold and then—to his surprise—threw his opponent to the floor with ease and dispatch. "Got enough?" he asked.

An untimely voice replied, "Darn sight more than I bargained for. All I came in here for was to ask the way to Whitestone Bridge."

Churches Sponsor "Principals" Week

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 7 — A nationwide observance on the application of Christian principles to daily work will be held Jan. 20 to 26, under the sponsorship of the National Council of the Church of Christ in the U. S. A.

During Church and Economic Life Week, the Council will call on Christian laymen everywhere to consider how they best can relate the teachings of Christianity to their own occupations.

In a statement issued in connection with the observance, National Council official Rev. Cameron P. Hall declared, "recent government investigations have highlighted the urgent need for Christian ethics in business and professional life."

He said that "the well-being of any nation depends in large part upon the character and measure of responsibility which its citizens bring to their work."

Mr. Hall is director of the Council's Department of the Church and Economic Life. Now in its fourth year, Church and Economic Life Week has as its theme for 1952, "The Christian at His Daily Work."

A booklet, "The Christian at His Daily Work," by Mr. Hall, recommended for study in local churches, notes that "the area in daily work that require decisions of ethical importance are limitless." It states that the Christian must "steadily and earnestly seek to live his faith in relation to the practical, concrete and challenging situations in his daily work."

Leaflets being sent to denominational headquarters will encourage sermons, church group discussions, councils of churches' special meetings and Christian social

A special conference being convened by the National Council of Churches and the Canadian Council of Churches, in Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 21-24, will explore the Christian meaning of work. Don A. Weber sent the gift to Sen.
