THE Kendall Detective Agency was not bustling with activity. In fact, it was not bustling with anything and George Kendall was sadly contemplating a bankruptcy and the eighty-second floor of the Empire State Building. He was seated in a swivel chair facing the window, his feet propped on the sill.

"Maybe I should've been a plumber," he said dejectedly. "Somebody always needs a plumber. But farming is really the life."

Verna Denton, his secretary and Girl Friday, closed the stenographic pad in which she had been doodling.

"Cheer up, boss." She rested her hand on his shoulder. "Maybe somebody'll get murdered."

This, he found of little consolation. He particularly avoided tommy guns, gangsters and missing bodies, leaving these to the more gallant and heroic species of public and private detectives. He considered himself physically capable of protecting himself, but there was no sense in flirting with lead pipes and sawed-off shotguns if you didn't have to.

"Verna, do you realize we haven't nibbled on a client for over three weeks? Honest, kid, I'm about ready to throw in the towel and go back to milking cows."

"That's the trouble with you, boss," she said, beginning to massage his shoulders. "Things get a little tough and right away you want to fold up."

He spun the swivel chair around and faced her. "A little tough? They couldn't get any tougher. No clients, we're a month behind in our rent, we owe a two-month phone bill, and we've got one foot in the bread line."

She opened her compact. "Didn't Emerson or somebody say that into every little rain must fall?"

"Don't drag out those corny proverbs. Besides, this is a cloud-burst." He pulled a slip of paper out of his coat pocket. "Look at this. Our net profit for six months is a minus one thousand three hundred and fourteen dollars."

"And three cents!" She moistened her eyebrows. "There was postage due on that farm catalog you ordered."

"Yeah, and you paid it." He watched her as she deftly applied the lipstick and he felt a little angry with himself for not possessing some deeper feeling for her. He hadn't paid her any salary for two weeks and by now he suspected that her staying with the sinking ship amounted to more than loyalty. He admired her jet black hair, the prominent dark eyes, her full mouth and all the good things that went with it, but the admiration was only lukewarm. Perhaps, he thought, he

"Things couldn't be any tougher. No clients and we've got one foot in the bread line."

"Well— He hesitated, and then raising his voice slightly, he said, 'We'll try to squeeze him in. Miss Denton. Send him in.'"

Presently the doorway framed a short, puffy-looking man in his sixties and wearing a black overcoat and derby hat. His face was flushed and he seemed out of breath.

"Mr. Kendall!"

"Yes, do come in." He came from behind his desk and greeted the old man with a warm handshake. When he had helped the man off with his coat, George drew up a chair. "Just make yourself comfortable, Mr. Southworth."

"Southworth, the old man corrected. "Albert P. Southworth."

KENDALL settled into the swivel chair and clasped his hands across his stomach. The happy feeling of officialdom had returned and he found it difficult to contain his enthusiasm. With the agency on the rocks, he found Mr. Albert P. Southworth a most welcome individual.

Beginning his usual pep talk, he said, "Before we begin, Mr. Southworth, let me say that you are getting prematurely old."

"SUDDENLY, they both heard the door of the outer office open and shut. Verna shoved the compact into her skirt pocket and hurried to the outer office. Meanwhile, George Kendall grabbed a bunch of papers and assumed a business spirit of industry."

In a second, Verna was back. "Mr. Kendall, a Mr. Sutworth to see you."

"Does he have an appointment?" He winked at the girl.

"No, Mr. Kendall."

"Well— He hesitated, and then raising his voice slightly, he said, 'We'll try to squeeze him in. Miss Denton. Send him in.'"

RANGERS OPEN BASKETBALL SEASON TONIGHT IN TILT WITH KCJC JAYHAWK QUINTET

Coach Boone Yarbrough's 1952 Ranger Junior College basketball squad makes its debut tonight when they'll be hosts to an invading band of Howard County Junior College Jayhawks on the hardwoods of the Recreation Building in downtown Ranger tonight.

The non-conference cage scrap is due to get underway at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Harold Davis' powerful Jayhawks hold much promise for the coming basketball campaign, and a top-notch point-making machine will hit the floor tonight with the Red & Gray squad for his winter's play built around a nucleus of six let-emen.

The Howard Counties are members of the Texas Junior College Conference.

Coach Yarbrough's Purple & White cage machine for the '52-'53 season of play is comprised of 17 squadmen, paced by four letter men.

However, none of the returning veterans were students last year the P.C. mentor said.

A pair of guards and two forwards from the '51-'52 squad will lettered during last winter's play are augmented by a dozen other first-year men. Lettermen are David Anderson of Fort Worth 6'2, and Bobby Skipwith of Wylie, 6 foot 1, forward, and Rusty Talbot, 5 foot 10, of El Paso and Johnny Plunkett of Whiteface, 6 feet even, guards.

Two other experienced RJC veterans of the campaign of a year ago include Buddy Hamrick, 5 feet 11, of Ranger, and Rex Holland, 7 feet 8, of Levelland. Both play guard positions.

This announcement was made by R. M. Critchfield, General Manager of Pontiac Motor Division. The new 1953 models will go on display Saturday.

Pontiac list prices for 1953 start at $1788.36 for the Chief and Special Six, two-door sedan. Pontiac's DeLuxe Chief and DeLuxe Chief, four-door sedan, which is expected to account for about 50 per cent of next year's volume, carries a list price of $2099.51. Price reductions on Station Wagons run from $28.00 to slightly in excess of $100.00.

All 1953 Pontiacs will be offered with either a six or eight-cylinder engine with G.M. Hydramatic Drive and Power Steering optional.

VA Offers Tips On Gifts For Vet Patients

Planning a gift for a veteran in a hospital?

If so, you'd better check up on requirements of the Veterans Administration.

In Washington Thursday, to aid gift-givers, the VA put out a general hint as to what kind of Christmas presents not to give its hospital patients.

"Since VA hospitals normally buy sufficient quantities of magazines, playing cards, puzzles and games," an announcement said, "gifts of this kind are not in demand."

The VA said some patients also cannot use certain type gifts because of their illness. Diabetics, for instance, are not allowed candies, cookies and other sweets.

But bulk gifts of Christmas goodies and other food packages for distribution by hospital managers are all right, the VA said.

Here are some items the VA thinks would make good Christmas presents:

Books or cantana tickets, in $1 and $5 denominations, which veterans can use in shopping at VA centers. These books can be bought from the centers or special service office at any VA hospital.

Nation's Fire Losses for 1951—

... are way up according to report of National Board of Fire Underwriters just released. Three quarter billion dollars went up in smoke, an increase of 12.3%, and more than 11,000 persons lost their lives. The causes are listed as about the same as previous years with careless use of matches and smoking accounting for 27%. Misuse of electricity, overheated chimneys and flues, lightning, spontaneous combustion and explosions are others in order.

Convicts Donate Much Blood

Officials of the state prison at Abilene near Sacramento, Calif., claim that inmates have set a world record for blood donations.

In a single day, 1,167 of the 777 donors a pint of blood a piece in a drive sparked by the Red Cross and Office of Civil Defense.

OCD officials said the new mark eclipsed a record set by Navy personnel on the carrier Philippine Sea.

checking water hauled, $816.75. Actual cost of water hauled—$27,292.64. Cost of drilling ten wells, (2 abandoned account salt water, 1 dry hole, 4 very little water, 3 fair wells,) which wells are producing about 30,000 gallons daily, digging sump for holding water pumped and hauled, plus pumps and piping, $2,845.90. Total expense for getting additional water, necessary, on account of the drought—$30,138.54. Most of the wells we drilled started producing in June, 1952, and more than paid for this expenditure in less than one month. The average monthly cost of operating the water and sewer departments, including the $1,500.00 monthly requirement on water and sewer bonds, is $5,700.00, or for the above three month period, when we were hauling water, $17,100.00. This added to the above amount of $30,138.54 will make a total expenditure of $47,238.54. Water, sewer and trash pick-up collections for the months of October, November and December (December estimated same as November collections) amounts to $34,511.63. (September, October and November water billed is collected in October, November and December.) This will make total disbursements exceed total receipts for the above three month period—$12,726.91.

Reduction in cash on hand as of November 30, as compared with August 30, is $17,882.46. As our water collections in December will be in payment of November water accounts, during which period we were hauling water, the collections will be in excess of a normal month's collections $5,000.00, which amount we will deduct from above—$5,000.00. This will leave a reduction in our cash for the three months hauling period of $12,882.46, which amount practically ties in with the above figure showing disbursements in excess of receipts for the hauling period, which amount is $12,726.91.

We realize statistics are a dry subject, but we want to give you the complete facts, so you can see we have been doing the best we possibly could, under the circumstances. We solicit your continued conservation of water. Your cooperation has been wonderful, for which we are grateful. We hope, before long, we will have sufficient water in the lakes so we can get back to normal water usage, but we still have to have the rains required to put the water in the lakes, before this can be accomplished.

One factory that will employ 50 to 100 people or more could be a real asset to any up-and-coming town. Many large manufacturers are shopping around for quarters in smaller cities and towns.

Everything should be considered. Raw materials, and available markets for manufactured items. They will want to know about available power companies, and to this as well as most any other question that may be asked, we will be in position to give encouraging answers. Unless the manufacturer hears about these things in our city, we will likely be passed by unnoticed.

We have a number of manufacturing plants in our midst at this time, and some of them are utilizing raw products from the county. Horton Ceramics is an example, for this plant uses a special clay found here. The Haydite plants use Eastland County clay for their building blocks. Our Leon plant, a unit of the Texas Electric Service company, makes cheap power available. The Hollywood Garment factories fur-
