In Ketchikan, Alaska, citizens are trying to promote construction by waiving taxes through building periods, according to a McGraw-Hill publication. Under the program, real and personal taxes are removed during the construction period of not more than three years. When the project is completed the property is put back on the tax rolls.

Structures qualifying for this relief are hotels, stores, warehouses, factories and multi-family housing projects.

Sounds like this may be a worthwhile program, as it will likely stimulate building.

Notwithstanding the fact that we have been living in and passing through the age of high prices, American people are still consuming enormous amounts of meat. According to reliable figures it now appears that 145 pounds of meat will be consumed by the average American adult during the present year.

Bring on the T-bones.

Rev. Cannon Bryan Green of Birmingham, England, may be heard on the Protestant Hour program each Sunday, station WFAA, Dallas. Although a communicant of the Church of England, which does not go in for great evangelistic campaigns, this man is considered one of the greatest evangelists of today. Tune in Sunday morning at 8:30 and hear him.

A Fort Worth citizen in a recent news release, states that America seems to be sleeping on the job when it comes to training our young to combat false gods and false religions. He says Confucius was really confused when he suggested the worshiping of ancestors. Soviet Russia is even more dangerous with her false doctrines teaching plain infidelity and suggesting worship of members of the "brass collar" group in the Kremlin.

The separation of church and state is alright, but this does not mean that all Bible instruction is to be abolished. Let's study it for its real value, and not from the standpoint of denominationalism.

The Bible is the greatest of all books and should not be passed up if we are to gain real knowledge. Let's accept the Bible and God, remembering that America has been a shining light proving the advantages of positive thinking along the

11,000 Federal Employees Due To Lose Positions

Approximately 11,000 government workers in the 4-state Dallas region are expected to be cut off the federal payroll in the near future, Samuel M. Ray, deputy regional director for the Civil Service Commission, said today at Dallas.

Full effect of the economy move will not be known until individual agencies can assess appropriations approved for the new fiscal year by Congress, he said.

Ray estimated the reduction would cut the number of federal employees in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma from 201,000 to about 190,000.

Critics Flayed By Kidnaird At Lions Meeting

Don Kinnaird had the program at the Lion's Club Tuesday, and he did his own talking, much to the delight of the Lions.

Some programs have been dull, others medium, but Don's program went over with a bang. It was just what the group wanted, and most of them agreed with everything he said, only many of them didn't have the nerve to say it.

It was to the point. It contained brass, it was irony, sarcastic, and very pungent, but it hit the spot.

His subject, "See Ourselves as Others See Us," was discussed, described and dissected and finally chopped all to pieces. He told the truth and truth can hurt. In speaking of the man with stomach ulcers, he said we are not to be judged that way—that it is not what most of us are eating, but what is eating on us.

He invited us to "see ourself without flaws" as it is a very easy matter to do so, yet he let it be known that we were just blinded to them—that everybody did see them. No two people see exactly alike, so let us "see ourselves as others see us." When we do this we have a perfect picture.

He also warned against too much criticism, and implied that those who "dish it out" usually can't take it when it comes their way.

In all his address was good, and most every member found time to shake his hand and say thank you.

Trend to Left Seen Changing In C-C Study

Several recent actions of Congress and the national Administration were seen today as portending "a possible turning of the tide of American socialism."

The Council of State Chambers of Commerce is a study prepared for the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and thirty other state and regional Chambers of Commerce.

"Sufficient headway has been made this year toward halting and reversing the tide of American socialism to give great concern to its adherents. But progress to date can only be called a start when measured against the distance that socialism in the United States had already crept in the past two decades.

"The Federal Government already owns 25 per cent of the land. It has a monopoly on atomic energy production. It is by far the largest single producer and distributor of electrical energy, having power customers in 29 states.

"Its insurance, banking and credit activities dwarf even the largest private ventures in these fields. And it operates numerous other untaxed, taxpayer financed businesses which compete with taxpaying, privately financed business.

"The study pointed out that this is "a broad and fruitful field for study and action by the Administration and the Congress," adding, "Its potential is the return to full private enterprise in the United States and substantial reduction of the public debt."

The Council study cited as measures countering socialism the return of the "tidelands" to the States, moves to permit private utilities to develop the Roanoke Rapids in North Carolina and the Niagara River in New York, efforts to contain the expanding operations of TVA and steps to relinquish the Inland Waterways Corporation and synthetic rubber manufacturing plants to private enterprise.

The "Tidelands" Act was held by the Council study to have "inflicted a major setback to those who would centralize ownership and control of the land in Federal hands," it added.

"While the Act merely restored ownership and rights to the States to lands which historically had been theirs, this was a 'giveaway' in the eyes of the measure's opponents."

Pointing out that the socialist program calls for State ownership or control of such basic industries as electric power, steel, oil, coal and transportation, the study said, "Nationalization of electric power is especially important because it would enable the Government to control the decisions of most other industries on where they might locate, what they might produce and whom they might employ."

The Council study noted that "all three branches of our Government" have taken a number of steps in recent months "toward stopping and even reversing the encroachment of the Federal Government in industry."

Blind Rangerite Gets Aid

Caudle's Fund Totals $465.04

The fund to aid Morris Caudle, 63-year-old totally blind Ranger resident, to secure a "seeing eye" German Shepherd dog out in Hollywood, Calif., on Sept. 1, is well over the $450 mark.

Latest tabulation today indicated that total contributions thus far reported are $465.04.

New donations, in addition to those already published are:

Ranger Furniture
Exchange $10.00
Leonard Arterburn 1.00
Meredith Sides 10.00

In addition to cash funds collected during the campaign, a number of items of clothing and men's furnishings have been contributed to the Ranger resident.

Mr. Caudle, blind since a lad of 16, has been approved to receive a "seeing eye" dog from the International Guiding Eye Foundation, Hollywood.

He is tentatively due to leave Amon Carter Airport between Fort Worth and Dallas on Tuesday morning Sept. 1 and is scheduled to arrive in Los Angeles at 2:30 p.m. the same day at the International Airport at the West Coast City. He'll be met at the LA field by a representative of the International Guiding Eye Foundation.

Mr. Caudle and his new dog will be trained together for a period of four weeks before the pair return to Ranger via American Airlines.

State's Cotton To Total 3 1/2 Million Bales

A 1953 Texas cotton crop of 3,525,000 bales—just about average was forecast Monday by the Agriculture Department.

In Austin, State Agriculture Commissioner John White said he thought the forecast was just about right "as of the present."

White added that the crop could be less. "If this hot weather continues," he said, "some of our good crops, such as those in Central Texas, are going to deteriorate and we won't make that much."

The department forecast a 14,605,000-bale crop for the nation—a figure which virtually assured production controls on next year's crop. The decision must be made by Oct. 15.

The department said its present forecast was more optimistic than was indicated a month ago, mainly because more cotton than was expected came in Texas and Oklahoma.

A month ago, the department said, about 1 1/2 million acres in Texas and Oklahoma had not germinated because of dry weather. Surveys show about one million acres of this land had germinated and has grown enough to be retained for harvest.

Cisco's Rodeo Is Postponed

The Cisco Roundup Club announced Monday that its 4th annual Cisco Rodeo, previously announced for Aug. 14 and 15, has been postponed temporarily, due to unforeseen conflict with other neighboring show dates.

New dates will be set and announced in a few days, and every effort will be made to advise contestants and spectators of the new show dates as soon as possible.

In spite of extensive advertising, it was decided to change show dates in the best interest of the cowboys and cowgirls planning to participate in the two day rodeo, as well as for the convenience of the many patrons of former Cisco shows.

It is reported that several additional events will be added to the schedule of contests.

ZAD BARNES was dozing, thinking it must be about supper time when the girl, Sally, knocked on his door. She brought in a 15-year-old Indian boy, a runner from Tobey.

The boy could not talk English plainly, but Zad understood his report. "Tobey say tell you he has girl. Now got her up in mountains."

A wide, wicked grin overspread Zad's face. He said, "Go back and tell Tobey to bring her here to night, and to be careful."

The boy grinned and departed. Most of the men Zad had sent out had returned by dark. One of the group reported on how the fugitives had stopped at the ranch for breakfast and taken fresh horses.

Gabe Cox said, "Herb was in favor of chasing 'em all the way to Pangenet if necessary, but the rest of us thought we'd better turn back."

Zad allowed his smile to play over the uneasy Painter for half a minute. "Herb always does his best," he said.

"You could have caught Wilkin here, but I'm glad to see you," Jess said. "You hadn't been too lazy or too cowardly to ride on and take him."

"I wanted to go on today, but Gabe—" "You wanted to go on to Pangenet. Once there you'd have turned on the rest of us and spilled

"She isn't dead?" Pete queried. "Worse Tobey has her." "In Two Rivers?" "Yes. But she's not there now. And I didn't get a chance to follow her."

Pete swung off his horse. "Tell me what happened." "Old Tobey worked a slick-injun trick. Some of his bucks caught a couple kids huntin' a mile or so from Fangeget, but they let one kid git away and took the other'n to the hills. Of course when the kid got back every man in town got on a horse and went after the injuns. While they were slipping into town, or maybe was already hidin' there, and took and sheep usually watered. It was Betty. The injuns turned the kid a good hiding place, with an opportunity to keep watch, and he they was to it."

"You say you saw Betty?" "Yes, I did. I was down there last night after Zad got word Tobey had her. Zad had sent word in a manner that looked as if it to Tobey to bring her in, and they had merely caught 'here, but in showed up about midnight. That injun was proud as a peacock. Zad note telling injun was sure had a long talk with Betty, then they took her away. I didn't have a chance to see it if he come back there was only a chance to do nothing, so I come back to give the remotest chance that anyone would see her when you found the party was Herb Painter."

"About mid-afternoon he saw a flock of sheep trailing into the spring and recognized the herder as Jess Williams. He was not at all surprised, and had half counted on this opportunity to contact the man."

He recognized the possibility of with him is that when he has a bet, but it was a gamble he job to do he goes to sleep. I think it wise to take. When he rode he needs more sleep, don't you, down to the spring Jess made no hostile demonstration, but on the contrary seemed eager to see him. With a sweep of his arm Jess indicated the western side of the old man's face.

"I don't know how you got this country, but white men has never been here, but I'm glad to see you," Jess said. "Tobey knows every foot of it. 'About Betty?' Pete felt like a chunk of lead had lodged in his throat. Until then he had forced himself to believe that the girl would be all right."

Jess nodded, and his bearded face contorted with obvious grief. "For a moment he never will."

TRAGEDY—Steven Levy, 5, sobs above his injured grandfather, Rubin Sarapin, as his mother, Mrs. Anita Levy, bleeds profusely from cuts about the head in the rear of their wrecked car. The two were injured when an auto jumped foot high, three-foot wide concrete division between lanes on Route 3 near Rutherford, N. J., and crashed head-on into the car Mr. Sarapin was driving.

A letter from Mrs. Erick Kengpa, former Eastland resident, but now of Tulsa, Swisher County, arrived in today's mail. The letter follows:

"Just like to raise a question concerning Boyce House's story printed in your paper under date of August 5. I was just wondering if the frog was put in the cornerstone without light or air until the moment of re-opening? How does it happen that the frog was removed, the story says 'an oil man' lifted out a flat dust-covered Toad? Had it happened in Swisher county, in the Panhandle where I live, I could readily conceive that the dust had found a way through the pores of the cement during a dust storm, but being a native of Eastland county, I am sure the dust storms never reached such proportions in 'Old Rip's' territory."

Lady you seem to have the $64 question, and I shall not try to explain. We do feel, however, that nothing short of a miracle of God could make such possible, and there are a lot of people around here who feel that God didn't have anything to do with the incident.

HOUSTON, Tex. — A major in the Swedish army had his faith well founded in the U. S. Postal service when he sent to Houston for some braid for his uniforms. I should say 'thank you' if you will try find the right which know my name. I was in the shop 1/2 year ago and I think the

The postoffice delivered the letter to the Redman's Military Tailors, 1307 Main, and Harry Redman, the owner, said he remembered the Swedish major and would gladly fill his order.

The Army's 32nd Infantry Division generally is credited with more combat time than any other

Folks Talked About Heat In Old Days, Too

Efforts to beat the heat are as old as American summertime, according to records in the Colonial Williamsburg research files.

For example, there were the 18th century versions of air conditioning units advertised by an enterprising merchant in the July 25, 1776, Virginia Gazette. These devices called "ventilators" and inserted in windows, actually were boxes enclosing bellows which drew air in and blew it out again. They provided a reasonable degree of comfort except, of course, for the able-bodied men needed to push the bellows.

Not everyone approved of letting in the summer breezes, especially at night. In his journal, LOWEST-WIDEST SPORTSTER—Johnny Campbell, 39, above, points with understandable pride to his co-creation, the "Cado" car. Named for Campbell and his partner, Elbert Dooley, the machine is only 36½ inches high, and is six feet wide, the lowest, widest sport car ever built, according to its inventors. The hand-made machine is powered by a 100-horsepower Olds engine, and is expected to have a top speed of about 140 miles per hour.

the 18th century tutor Phillip Vickers Fithian said he kept his windows shut on summer nights "so long as I can breath without 'cating,' to keep out "dangerous dew's."

The 18th century rules of decorum limited the amount of clothing people could shed for hot weather comfort, but a 1721 atlas reports that in Virginia ladies' gowns and gentlemen's jackets were fashioned of light weight materials in the summertime.

There was difference of opinion as to just how hot these early American summers were. In 1705 the Virginia historian, Robert Beverley,

Summer Dress For Spuds

If potato salad's a hot weather standby in your household, perhaps you'd like to do something a wee bit different with it. How about making it the basis for a jellied ring mold, flavored with chicken bouillon? Here's a really cool main dish on a platter, dressed up to delight summer guests if you have them, and guaranteed to satisfy hearty appetites.

Accent's the seasoning to remember in salad time, for the supreme in taste experience. It's Mother Nature's own flavor booster—points up those luscious garden fresh flavors in all vegetables, and holds them at their peak till time for tasting. Whether a salad is arranged, tossed, jellied or frozen, Accent will help to amplify and blend the natural flavors of all ingredients. Sprinkle a little in your molded potato salad. You'll see.

| 1 envelope unflavored gelatin | 1 cup potato salad |
| ¾ cup cold water | ½ cup diced cucumber |
| 2 cups hot chicken bouillon | 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped |
| ½ teaspoon Accent* | 1 tablespoon cut chives |
| Few grains nutmeg | 1 tablespoon diced pimiento |
- Soften gelatin in cold water; dissolve in hot chicken bouillon; add Accent and nutmeg. Chill until consistency of unbeaten egg white. Fold in remaining ingredients. Spoon into oiled ring mold; chill until set. Unmold. Fill center with salad greens. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves 4.

erly, wrote that complaints about the heat were unfair propaganda circulated by merchants from England who "go sweltering about in their thick cloths all the summer."

Some years later plantation owner William Byrd confessed to an English earl that "we have about three months that impatient people call warm." He added, however, that his lordship would find them cool enough for a pair of blankets and perhaps a comfortable counterpane into the bargain.

On the other hand, there was the English gentleman who warned that in the colonies "the heat is beyond your conception."

Colonial summers never got hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalk—but only because there were no paved sidewalks. The Virginia Gazette reports that on August 9, 1766, "Colonial Tayloe's gardener" by way of experiment put an egg on a stone pedestal in the garden and ate it four hours later "sufficiently roasted."

Every year an estimated 100,000 American children suffer eye injuries while playing unsupervised games, reveals Dr. Franklin M. Foote, executive director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TELLS ABOUT OFFICIAL RULINGS

Attorney General John Ben Shepperd has released a list of all opinions written by his office during the month of July.

Opinions of general interest include the following:

A real estate dealer may offer premiums to a property owner who lists his property with the dealer but may not offer premiums to persons who submitted a "lead" which results in the dealer's getting a listing.

A County Judge may place defendants convicted of drunk driving on probation for not less than six months in lieu of a mandatory jail sentence.

The minimum amount of the bond required of the tax assessor-collector of an independent school district is twice the amount of taxes collected in the largest single collection period of the preceding year.

Justices of the Peace who get a regular salary may keep fees collected for performing marriage ceremonies and for acting as Ex-officio Notaries Public. Fees may not be paid to a sheriff in advance for serving citations on delinquent taxpayers who are non-residents of a county.

A County Commissioners' court may make county tax levies even if one of the Commissioners is absent from the meeting because of duties in one of the reserve branches in the armed forces.

A County Commissioner serving in a military reserve capacity is entitled to his salary during his absence on military duty.

A contract to purchase stationery and printing for the legislature, which was not let on competitive bids and approved by the Governor, Secretary of State, and Comptroller is not valid.

A County Judge acting as Ex-officio County Superintendent is entitled to keep the additional money paid him for such office. Shepperd said that his office is continuing to win approximately 98 per cent of all cases tried since the first of the year. During the month of July, 94 cases were won out of 104 tried or appealed.
