Post Arts industry major contributor to economy Planning underway to map future direction of arts

Post's arts industry has had a major impact on the economy of Garza County according to figures supplied by the Caprock Cultural Association. During the past 10 years, the developing arts industry in Post has impacted the local economy through a number of different avenues. Since 1990, the arts industry has impacted the economy an average of $1.23 million per year.

This figure is based on the income from such arts industries as the Garza Theatre, Post Art Guild, Kids N Art and the Caprock Cultural Association (CCA).

What direction this art industry takes in the future will be the focus of a public meeting June 24 at the Algeria Arts Center beginning at 7:30 p.m. Peter Fox and Emma Burnett from the Texas Arts Council will be on hand to explain, answer questions, take suggestions and exchange ideas with Post and Garza County citizens. The two will also be conducting interviews with a number of citizens June 23-25 to help in the development of a community cultural plan.

"The direction of future arts and cultural developments in Post will be outlined and directed by the input of its citizens," said JoAnn Mock, CCA executive director. "For three days this week, a large group of citizens representing all segments of the population with varied interests will be interviewed in depth to get a feel of all community concerns."

Questionnaires have been circulated by the Caprock Cultural Association in various club meetings for the last two months. Fox and Burnett will add to this information through their face to face interviews. The team from the Texas Arts Council will then take this information and compile it into a community cultural plan.

"This plan is expected to be used by several local groups for future developments of the arts industry, tourism, facilities, cultural concerns, education and economic growth," explained Mock. "The look and image of Post could be greatly enhanced through this controlled growth planning concept."

Future developments in the arts could be expected to create a substantial impact on tourism and provide the impetus for future economic growth. These developments could also enhance the attractiveness of the community.

"A cultural plan is a very important first step in reaching goals and opening doors for this growth," said Mock.

The meeting and plan are both sponsored by the CCA with financial support from the Texas Commission on the Arts, the city of Post and Garza County.

Lake flap gains media attention

by John Cordson

Much has been made over the $8.89 million compensation award made to Garza County oilmen Earl Chapman and Neil Jackson for their mineral leases in the Dorward Field southeast of Post. The conflict has been the focus of considerable media attention in Lubbock for the past few weeks.

What the award does is put in limbo the future of Lake Alan Henry being built by the city of Lubbock for its future water needs. And according to Chapman, owner of Rocker A Operating Company in Post, it also gives him and Jackson and other mineral owners in the area a more reasonable offer for their mineral interests that will be flooded by the lake.

Chapman says it is not his intention to stop the project, just to insure that he and other mineral interests in the area are treated fairly.

The attention has centered on Chapman and Jackson and their $8.89 million award made by three special commissioners at a condemnation hearing held in April. The award came after Jackson and Chapman refused initial offers for their rights from Lubbock and the Brazos River Authority which is overseeing the project for the city.

Chapman was awarded $4.8 million for the loss of drilling access on his leases and Jackson received $4.09 million for his leased acres. The city of Lubbock has said it will contest this decision.

Chapman said he was initially offered a negative $9,000 buyout from the city in April of 1990. The offer meant he pays Lubbock $9,000 and they take over the property.

"They first contacted us in early 1990 to try and negotiate a settlement," said Chapman. "For their first offer they told me to give them a check for $9,000 and they would take over."

Chapman refused the offer, instead choosing to fight against what he felt were the strong-arm tactics employed against him and other mineral interests in the area.

"When they offered me a negative $9,000 I got me some engineers and went down there and drilled some wells and made it worth some money," said Chapman.

He was then accused of trying to increase the value of the leases by proving their worth.

"I have been accused of drilling the wells in an attempt to raise the value of the property," admitted Chapman. "It's certainly the truth, that's my job to try and get every dime out of the lease" for the property owners.

Chapman also didn't like the way negotiations were handled. He said many of the letters concerning the offers made to mineral interests were threatening and seemed intent on frightening the recipient.

"The tone of the letters were we're going to take this and if you stand in our way, you're standing in the way of the Lubbock lake," said Chapman. He added that "a lot of people in Garza County are upset because of the way they have been treated."

Property owners were offered $20 an

Sheriff's office looking for missing Post woman

She was reported missing June 14 by personnel from MHR who had been checking in on her. It was first thought that she might be visiting family in Slaton or on a trip with a friend.

Officers began looking for her Sunday, June 20 when her friend returned to Post and informed authorities that she had not been with him.

"When her boyfriend showed up and he didn't know where she was we started getting concerned," said Deputy Maurice "Mo" Herridge. "We don't know if she took a bus or anything."

Law enforcement officials are asking residents of the county for information on Blodgett. She is 5'5", weighs 121 pounds and has green eyes. Anyone knowing her whereabouts is asked to contact the sheriff's office with this information.

Drive-up Confidential

Dear Friends;

If you didn't have time to fix your hair, our drive-up tellers are sworn to secrecy. If there's a severe case of sibling rivalry going on in the back seat of your station wagon, our tellers won't tell a soul.

But if your hair looks great and your children are behaving like little angels, we'd like to tell everyone nobody's business but yours.

Use the Drive-up.

Sincerely yours,
Charles Hadin

Tax 'n Facts

by Terri S. Cash, CPA

SOCIAL SECURITY: MONEY IN, MONEY OUT
Whatever the new administration and Congress do to the tax laws, the 1993 rates are pretty well set, especially for Social Security.

The wage base for Social Security this year has risen to $57,600, well up from '92. The tax rate for employees is 6.2 percent. The Medicare wage base rises to $135,000, paid at a rate of 1.45 percent. The biggest possible Social Security bite on an employee is $5,528.70. The self-employed pay twice as much, but half the amount can be deducted from your income as an adjustment to gross income on form 1040 page 1.

Maximum monthly benefits for 1993 have risen to $1,128 for an individual, or $1,692 for a couple, assuming that the spouse is collecting on the worker's earnings. (If both partners worked and collect their own retirement benefits, the total can be much higher.)

Recipients can earn more this year without losing benefits. Those under age 65 can earn $7,680 a year; those 65 to 69 can earn $10,560; and those over 70 can earn as much as they wish without penalty.

 acre to subordinate their mineral interests to the city of Lubbock. One such individual was offered a flat $160 in January 1991 for approximately 8 acres of mineral rights, even though the property's mineral interests were producing in excess of $400 a month income for the owner. When this offer was not answered, Milam Pipeline Company (this company was retained by the Brazos River Authority to negotiate for the mineral interests) countered with a letter a 190 days later threatening to haul the owner into court. After no answer was received, a third letter 22 days later was sent raising the offer to almost $300 for the mineral interests. Once this offer was rejected legal action was threatened again. A fourth letter was received by the mineral owner in January of 1992 with another final offer of almost $1,700. Chapman said this was just a sampling of the process used to acquire the mineral rights that will be flooded by the lake.

claimed the price was too high considering the actual value of the property. The oilmen countered that even at almost $9 million, the award was still under actual values but that the award was fair. Chapman said engineering studies he has paid for indicate that if he and Jackson were allowed to continue pumping the affected wells until the field plays out, the two oilmen could expect to get around $47 million. "As you can see, we did not get anywhere close to its value," said Chapman. Lubbock officials countered that the fair market value of the mineral interests should have been set when Exxon agreed to a $473,000 price tag for 10 of the company's wells. Chapman says this is not the total story. Exxon not only sold the wells to Lubbock, they also received certain protections in the sale. They also sold their remaining rights to another company. Under terms of the sale, the city of Lubbock indemnified Exxon and agreed to hold them harmless to all present and future claims and to defend them against all claims.

Lubbock in fact became the legal guardian of former Exxon property in the area. Chris Boyer, an oil and gas attorney from the firm of Crenshaw, Dupree and Milam wrote in a May 1992 letter to Lubbock officials that "The city of Lubbock would become, in effect, an insurer to any and all damages resulting from Exxon's past activities on the property." "Exxon received $4 million for the sale of property to Primrose and received $500,000 for the sale of 10 wells to the city of Lubbock and they got to leave an environmentally sensitive area," said Chapman. Lubbock's final offer to the two oilmen was for $537,000 or what Chapman says is essentially six cents on the dollar. Lubbock officials and mineral interests sat down last week in Post for the first time in face to face meetings in an effort to settle their differences. The fight has not come cheap for Chapman. He estimates he has spent over $200,000 so far just to get to this point.

Summer heat can add stress

Summer's sizzling temperatures can subject the body to hazardous stress. The potential toll of excessive heat ranges from mild discomfort to life-threatening heatstroke. "When it's both hot and humid, it becomes more difficult for the body to release the heat that builds up," said Lowell Johnson, M.D., family physician on staff at Methodist Hospital. "As a result, the body temperature begins to climb. Initially, this might cause mild discomfort - headache, dizziness and fatigue are typical symptoms." Following are the three degrees of heat stress, how to recognize them and prevention techniques. •Heat cramps - Represents the mildest form of heat stress. They are most often seen in poorly conditioned athletes who drink inadequate amounts of liquid before and during exercise. Symptoms included painful muscle spasms and sweaty skin. To relieve heat cramps, sit or lie down in a cool area. Drink cool water and stretch cramped muscles. •Heat exhaustion - Results when heat stress produces excessive fluid loss. Heat exhaustion causes nausea, vomiting, headache, muscle aches, dizziness, rapid pulse, thirst and clammy or pale skin. When heat exhaustion is mild, the treatment is the same as for heat cramps. However, if vomiting, confusion or headache persists, gently apply wet towels and call for emergency help. •Heatstroke - Heat exhaustion can rapidly lead to heatstroke, a condition in which the temperature regulating center in the brain fails. At this point, the body temperature soars, leading to severe and even fatal brain, liver or kidney damage. A person experiencing heatstroke may lose consciousness. If conscious, symptoms include confusion, a staggered walk and agitation. Other symptoms include hot, dry skin (rarely sweating) and a body temperature of 105 degrees Fahrenheit or more. A person experiencing heatstroke should be moved to a reclining position in a cool area. Emergency help should be called immediately. If the person is conscious, cool sips of water can be given. Large amounts of cold or ice water should be applied immediately. When the temperatures rise, avoid heat stress by scheduling exercise for the early morning or evening, drinking plenty of fluids, avoiding the sun, keeping your home cool and wearing lightweight, loose-fitting clothing.

PUMP UP SAVINGS with a Heat Pump
 When the dog days of summer put a bite in your utility bills, it may be time to consider an energy-efficient heat pump. Heat pumps transfer heat to the outside air in summer and draw heat from the outside air in winter. This method of transferring heat is much more efficient and means substantial savings to you. Contact your local electric cooperative to find out about their Centsible Cooling Program. By installing an energy-efficient heat pump, you can collect cash and save on your utility bills, too.

From the Pulpit

How do we know God exists?

In the June '93 issue of the "Smithsonian," I was stunned to read about an invisible force that cannot be seen or touched but "may determine the fate of the Universe."
 The article, written by James Trefil, was not talking about God, but an invisible force of some substance (mass) other than atoms. I had just become comfortable with the idea of a world composed of atoms. Trefil, however, claims that most astronomers now believe that the visible world (composed of matter formed by atoms) is only a small percent of the actual universe. Most of the world, possibly as much as 99%, is composed of a "soup" that has mass but "interacts weakly with ordinary matter." In other words, the stuff is all around, but goes right through us! It has been labeled "dark matter."
 How could so many scientists believe in such an invisible force as "dark matter" (not to be confused with "black holes")? Doesn't gravity, the stuff derived from atoms, account for what is happening in the movement and expansion of the universe? The answer, according to the Smithsonian article, is "no." The measurements that have been taken of gravity cannot explain how some galaxies hold together, nor can gravity account for the speed of other bodies traveling well outside of galaxies.
 Think of twigs moving in an invisible river. This particular river cannot be seen or touched; we know from the movement of the twigs that something is there, but we don't know what. That is with how Trefil describes "dark matter." The world we see, whether with telescopes or microscopes, is perhaps only 1% of the stuff that is actually there. Belief in this unseen force is not because we see what it is made of, but because we see what it is doing.
 Those of us who believe in God do so not because we know what God is made of, but because we have seen what God does. We see not only the creation, but the changes made in the lives of people. In fact, it is harder for any thinking person to disbelieve than to believe. In the Christian tradition, we wonder what it was that made those early timid disciples risk their lives and go out to the ends of the world proclaiming a risen Christ? Where did the power come from? They hid from the world when Jesus was crucified, but later came out boldly, something or someone of courage and faith can still be found from the one billion Christians who now inhabit our planet.
 So how do we explain the Trinity? Here again, the apostle Paul suggests in 2 Corinthians 13:13 that the explanation is best given in terms of what God does: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ (the Son), the love of God (the Godhead or Father), and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all." In other words, the graciousness that we discover in what Jesus did leads to a love of God. The defining moment of God's love was something that God did in the human form of Jesus. Jesus was God's greatest act of communication as to: (1) how God loves us, and (2) how humans link with God. Through God's love, Jesus links us into fellowship with God's Spirit (the communion of the Holy Spirit). The Trinity adds up as to what God did in "grace, love, and fellowship." no scientist will ever discover the substance of God, but like the mysterious forces of the universe, we know God is there because of what God has done and is doing.

"Give thanks to the Lord, because He is good; His love is eternal!"
 Psalm 107:1
