PLANS GO FORWARD FOR COUNTY FAIR

Plans for the Donley County Fair to be held in Hedley Friday and Saturday, Sept. 26 and 27, are moving along rapidly and harmoniously. Everybody seems willing to put a shoulder to the wheel, and all indications point to a successful exhibition.

The catalog is in the hands of the printer and will be ready for distribution within a few days.

Let all our producers bring out their choicest specimens and let us put on such an exhibit as will cause the natives in the less favored districts to arouse themselves and take notice of things.

It will be quite a feather in Hedley's cap to put on a creditable County Fair—and that's just what Hedley will do. In spite of a few knockers, or perhaps because of them, Hedley is becoming embued with the progressive spirit and is determined to go forward. So be it.

You are failing in your duty to yourself and your home town if you refuse to cooperate.

WORK ON ELEVATOR AWAITS MATERIAL

A big lot of material is on the ground for the construction of the big elevator of the Perrine Field Grain & Elevator Co. However, work is still held up pending the arrival of several more cars of long overdue freight.

Every effort is being made to get this material delivered in Hedley, and when it arrives the construction work will go forward with a rush.

The "awful" transportation service we have been getting for many months has proved harmful to Hedley's progress in numerous ways, but we suppose it has been pretty much the same all over the country.

We'll have the elevator up in time to handle this year's crops, and, believe us, we're thankful for that.

FOR TRADE—I want to trade a buggy for a saddle. A good school buggy for the children.

NAZARENE CHURCH

The readers of the Informer will remember we first announced our summer meeting to begin the 22nd of this month; then our Baptist brethren asked for part of that time; we granted it, and set the time for our meeting to begin the 29th of this month, and we have looked forward to and planned for this date.

We have secured the services of Brother and Sister Ingle for this meeting, at this date. Bro. and Sister Ingle come to us highly recommended as people of God, and we trust the good spirit of co-operation manifested in all the meetings of Hedley will continue through this meeting also.

Now, brethren, if you do not believe we are good Christian people, you should not have said "Amen" to our testimonies in your services, nor asked us to pray for your people. And if you believe us to be earnest Christians, come and help us to run the meetings a few days longer and do all we can to save as many people as we can around Hedley this summer.

I certainly feel grateful and thank God for what has been done in the meetings already held in Hedley, and we are expecting our brethren of these churches to help us also. Our services will be held in the tabernacle and everybody is invited to come and help make the meeting a success. We have learned to love the Hedley people, and we are going to be disappointed if you all don't come and help in the meeting.

Remember the date and place, and be sure and come.

ROADS and TREES for REMEMBRANCE

AN ESTES PARK ROAD

TREES ABOUT THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.
NEXT to well-equipped and thoroughly up-to-date railroads, transportation means good solid wagon roads. Even in normal times the economic value of such roads is well nigh incalculable, but in a period of armed conflict victory or defeat may depend upon the condition of the common highways. All this is well known. And yet, though far-seeing men have for some years been urging the good roads movement upon the people and some progress has been achieved, our highways in general still remain among the worst in the world.—Albert J. Beveridge.

I think that I shall never see
A poem as lovely as a tree—
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the world's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.
—Joyce Kilmer.

If you want to build a road, let the people plant memorial trees along that road and your project is a success.—Charles Lathrop Pack.

Thus come closer to the Great Tree-Maker. Plant memorial trees in honor of the men who gave their lives to their country—in honor of the men who offered their lives.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

Roads and trees for remembrance!
Victory highways in honor of America's fighting men!
Roadside planting of trees in memory of their individual deeds!

It is a truism that the economic and moral fiber of any community is shown by the condition of its highways. Give the community the right kind of roads, schools, churches, factories and banks and the other signs of advancement will soon be in evidence.

Memorial roads! What more fitting monument can we build in honor of our heroes? Permanent roads dedicated to them! How can a community better commemorate their achievements?

And all these memorial roads planned and built as parts of a great system of victory highways—victory highways that food may move from farm to city and manufactures back to the farm; that the way of the children to the schoolhouse may be made easy; that the defense of America against armed force may be certain.

Victory highways that not only serve the nation's needs but delight the people's eye—victory highways beautified by roadside planting of American trees and shrubs and flowers. No walls and gates and arches with their suggestion of something closed and set apart, but memorial trees and groves and little parks and wayside camps for the American traveler and food trees for the birds.

To Abraham Lincoln have probably more memorials been erected than to any other man. Which of all these memorials is most impressive—most fitting? Consider now the Lincoln highway as it is and as it is soon to be.

The Lincoln highway is an object lesson of what is and what is to be in a memorial road. More than 3,000 miles in length, it runs east and west through the heart of America, with giant north and south feeder highways, joining the Atlantic and the Pacific. It traverses 11 states. Fifteen millions have been expended on it in the last five years. Already there are nearly 400 miles of concrete and brick and paving and more than 1,000 miles of macadam. It is in operation from end to end. It carries an endless procession of Americans in their own automobiles. The year round it is dotted with freight trucks.

At this very moment the federal government has under way on the Lincoln way across the continent an exhibition train. It started from Washington, and from Gettysburg, Pa., the route is over the Lincoln way to Pittsburgh, Camden and Buevius, O.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Chicago Heights, Ill.; Clinton, Cedar Rapids and Marshalltown, Ia.; Omaha, Neb.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Carson City and Ely, Nev.

A MARYLAND TULIP POPLAR

AN ENGELMANN SPRUCE

Finally dropping down the Sierra Nevada to Sacramento, Cal., and then to San Francisco.

This train consists of 90 motor-vehicles of the types employed by the motor transport corps in the conduct of the winning of the war. In addition, accompanying this train are several other branches of the United States army service, including representatives of the engineer corps, with antiaircraft defense trucks and searchlights, and certain specially detailed observers who will make an intensive study and report to the war department on road conditions.

The trip is being made for both military and educational purposes, including: An extended performance test of the several standardized types of motorized army equipment used for transportation of troops and cargo and for other special military purposes; the war department's contribution to good roads movement; demonstration of the practicability of long-distance motor post and commercial transportation and the need for judicious expenditure of federal governmental appropriations in providing the necessary highways.

So much for the Lincoln highway as a means of transportation—a transcontinental road linking the United States by states. Consider now the Lincoln way as a beauty spot—and a memorial, not only to the Great Emancipator, but to the heroes who followed his example and won the freedom of the world in the great war.

The roadside planting of the Lincoln way is in charge of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. This organization has a membership of 2,500,000 members. It has a state federation in every state in the Union. Mary K. Sherman, chairman of the conservation department of the general federation, has secured a comprehensive planting plan for the way. This plan has been worked out by Jens Jensen, a noted landscape engineer of Chicago. In general it provides for the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers indigenous to the locality. For example, blue prints have been made for the planting of the way through the 180 miles of Illinois. These prints give all necessary details—kinds of trees, shrubs and flowers for each locality; suggestions for grouping each. The clubs of the several states through which the way passes will see to it that the planting is done. Many clubs in other states will plant memorial miles on the way and in addition carry out the same plan in application to Lincoln way feeders in their own states.

Features of this roadside planting of the Lincoln way by the general federation are memorial trees in honor of individual heroes; groves, fountains, camping places along the road; fruit and nut trees for the birds and a bird sanctuary from ocean to ocean.

For ten years America has been spending from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 a year for highway construction and maintenance—without national plan—without relation to the broad needs of the country as a whole and with little co-ordination of effort between states. After spending over $2,000,000,000 in a decade, we are, broadly speaking, as far from a proper connecting system of radiating highways in the United States as ever.

The latest government figures show a total highway mileage in the United States of 2,457,334 and of this total, even after the tremendous expenditures noted, but 12 per cent, or some 296,000 miles, have received any attention whatever and these improvements are scattered in 48 states, in a loose and utterly ineffective way, over various sections of our entire 2,500,000 miles.

Now the time for national action has arrived. Thus the time is ripe for roads and trees for remembrance. The United States is going to expend $500,000,000 in the next few years on a national highway system of interstate arterial routes. It only remains to be seen what agency of the federal government is to have charge of the construction. If the department of agriculture and the state highway commissions do the work, the government and the states will share the expense, half and half. If a highway commission is established by congress to have charge of the work the share of the states will be apportioned in order that states like Nevada, Wyoming and Arizona shall not be too heavily burdened.

As to the feature of memorial trees, this is also the chosen time. Public sentiment turns toward the idea. Events all over the country forecast a general memorial planting.

The American Forestry association, of which Charles Lathrop Pack is president, has issued a call for memorial tree planting. It is registering all memorial trees and giving certificates of registration; also instructions for planting.

Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark has called upon the Christian Endeavor societies to plant memorial trees.

Georgetown university remembered its war heroes at its one hundred and thirtieth commencement by planting 54 memorial trees in honor of its heroic dead. To each tree was affixed a bronze marker, of which a sample is given herewith. To the next of kin goes a duplicate of the marker.

"My boys made a wonderful reputation for this country on the battlefields of France," says Daniel Carter Beard. "I say my boys because I believe that there were boy scouts in every American division that participated in the war. The boy scout's slogan is, 'Once a scout always a scout.' A plan that we are taking up is the planting of trees as memorials for our heroes. This is being done in some parts of Long Island and should be done in all sections. After the tree has been planted a small tablet should be placed on it bearing the name of the man who made the supreme sacrifice, and when and where and how he was killed and his branch of the service."

Many victory highways to be planted with memorial trees are under way throughout the country.

The National Defense highway, between Blandensburg and Annapolis, is Maryland's contribution. New York is planning a Roosevelt Memorial highway from Montauk Point to Buffalo. In Ohio Col. Webb C. Hays has offered to give memorial tablets on memorial highways in Sandusky county, and William G. Sharpe, former ambassador to France, will do the same for Lorain county.

The poem by Joyce Kilmer, who gave his life for his country in France, is most touching. What is more fitting than a tree for a memorial? We may attain the most magnificent effects in stone and bronze. Compare them with a permanent tree—enduring as the Applan way, built 22 centuries ago—and shaded by the Maryland tulip poplar or the Engelmann spruce or any other of our magnificent American trees. The glimpse of an Estes Park road in the Rocky Mountain National park shows nature's way of beautifying a highway. Consider how the trees on guard add the crowning touch to the Washington monument.

DAIRY FACTS

RATIONS TO PRODUCE MILK

Cow Should Be Fed So That Greatest Possible Amount of Feed Goes to Supply Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many owners of cows are confronted with the problem of supplying economical milk-producing rations for their cows. Under these conditions there is a strong temptation to cut down on the amount given to each animal. The total quantity of feed must be sufficient, and if the concentrates are cut down, more and better roughage must be supplied.

The reduction of feed below a certain amount always means a reduction in the amount of milk the cow produces. There may be exceptional cases where the owner is feeding more than is necessary for the maximum milk production, but the greatest danger is the other extreme. The cow requires a certain amount of feed to maintain her body. The amount she receives above this maintenance ration goes either to meat or milk production. The cow should be fed so that the greatest possible amount of feed goes to actual milk production. A few simple rules are offered to this end.

1. Highly specialized cows, which never carry excessive fat and are persistent milkers, being dry only a month or so, should receive all they will consume. With such cows economy in feeding is equivalent to liberal feeding.
2. With general-purpose cows, or those which tend to beefiness, the dairyman must adjust his feed strictly to the milk produced, or he will find his feed going to form fat instead of milk. Cows of this nature, the milk from which contains about 5 per cent of butterfat, should receive what roughage they will clean up and one pound of grain for every three to three and a half pounds of milk produced. When the milk tests about 3 1/2 per cent, the cow should receive one pound of grain for four to four and a half pounds of milk.

3. Dry cows should receive feed enough to insure their being in good, thrifty milk-producing condition when they freshen. Poor cows drop weak, puny calves and will not produce properly, as they have to use a part of the feed to build up the body.

4. Cows of a beefy nature should not be fed enough to make them excessively fat when dry, as the dairyman does not receive returns from such feed, and excessive fleshiness tends to sterility. On the other hand there is little danger of overfeeding highly-specialized dairy cows which are not dry for more than one month to six weeks, as during this period any flesh put on and not essential to bodily vigor will be turned into milk when they freshen.

ATTENTION TO YOUNG BULLS

When Six Months of Age They Should Be Separated From Females—Don't Retard Growth.

After the bull is six months of age he should be kept apart from the females. If well grown and vigorous, he may be used for occasional service when ten months of age. It is a safer plan, however, not to use the young bull until he is twelve months of age so that his growth will not be retarded. One rule to follow regarding the number of cows with which a young bull may be mated is that the bull may serve during a season as many cows as he is months of age. In herds where the services are distributed throughout the year, instead of during a particular season, the number may be greater. In some cases but one bull being necessary for a herd of 40 to 50 cows.

S. W. Bishop Was Laid Up By Kidney Trouble. Now Owes Good Health to Doan's.

"I owe my present good health, largely to Doan's Kidney Pills," says S. W. Bishop, 5162 Kensington Ave., St. Louis, Mo. "I wasn't able to work. Sharp pains would catch me when I stooped or tried to lift anything, and at night the kidney secretions passed frequently and were scanty and painful. Spicks seemed to be before my eyes and I would get dizzy. There was a puffiness under my eyes. I could see myself falling from day to day and I finally was laid up from June until September. I got Doan's Kidney Pills and used them. I received relief with the first box and became stronger every day. I could sleep well at night and the kidney secretions were now of natural color. The dizziness and other troubles disappeared and I picked up in weight. After I had used four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I looked and felt like my old self. The cure seemed a miracle and I firmly believe that my life was saved by this remedy."

BAPTIST PROTRACTED MEETING CLOSES

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church closed Thursday night, having been in progress twelve days. It was a decided success from every point of view. Congregations were very large, specially at nights, the last night there being more present than could be seated in their large auditorium.

Twenty members were received, twelve being on a profession of faith and baptism. A splendid co-operation between all Christians was had throughout the meeting and it is questionable if at any time in the past a better feeling existed between Christians of all communions as well as in the community at large.

Rev. Hunt and his singer, Prof. Sparks, greatly endeared themselves to all our people, as was evidenced by the large congregation giving them a hearty, rising vote to return to us for another meeting next year.

We are requested in this connection to state that there will be no preaching at the First Baptist church next Sunday, as the pastor, Rev. J. M. Mizell, is away visiting his mother at New Salem, Rusk county.

MRS. JET BRUMLEY DEAD

All Hedley was grief stricken when the news came that Mrs. Velma Parks Brumley, wife of J. W. Brumley of this city, had passed away at 6 a. m. at the home of her grandfather, J. C. Lofland, in Memphis, last Saturday.

Mrs. Brumley, though apparently healthy and of excellent physique, had for a long while suffered from an affection of the heart, and it was this trouble that caused her death, in spite of all that love and skill could do.

Velma Parks was born in Hill county, Ark., in December, 1894, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Parks. Her mother died when she was a baby, but her father is living and was present when the end came. Seven years ago she was married to J. W. Brumley, and to them have been born two children, a son, Parks, and a daughter, Dorothy.

Funeral services were held at 2 p. m. last Sunday in the Methodist church at Memphis, conducted by Rev. Cal C. Wright of Hedley, assisted by Rev. J. R. Henson of Memphis. Interment in Fairview cemetery, the Eastern Star Chapter having charge of the service at the grave.

To the heart broken husband and to the little son and daughter bereft of mother's wondrous love and tender care, the Informer extends its heartfelt sympathy. May comfort and strength be bestowed upon them according to their needs.

Mrs. R. S. Smith has returned from a pleasant visit to home folks and friends at Forresteron.

The genial Jack McCants was in town Saturday from Giles.

BAZAARS of INDIA

The Bazaar of Lucknow.

THE day of the bazaar in India has long passed without hope for any return of its glory. Yet the visitor, in search of novelty, may still be fairly well satisfied with the results of the effort he must make to see what remains of the curious life in those places which are different from everything in this land; their nearest parallel being the French market in New Orleans, or a county fair, says the Christian Science Monitor.

The stranger to India should take the precaution to secure the services as a guide and physical protector of a thoroughly competent interpreter, one who is conversant with at least half a dozen of the numerous dialects spoken in India's commercial circles, and who—when it comes to buying or rejecting—knows at a glance "a hawk from a heronshaw" because, as a decidedly cynical Englishman said, "Nine-tenths of the stuff displayed in those Indian bazaars are spurious, and the remainder utterly worthless rubbish." An exaggeration, of course, yet it is a hard matter to find the few gems that may be there; and, at any rate, if the purchasable inanimate is lacking, the almost endless variety of the recumbent or animate human denizens is a rich reward for the fatiguing hours in a bazaar.

In Search of the Picturesque.
It is a great pity that civilization is so very inconsiderate toward the picturesque, the stranger, and the racially attractive (in spite of its dirt) which are so different from the life and the people we know and are so tired of, their lazarist dirt especially, that we often rush off to the antipodes to find something artistic and interesting. When we fall in our search, we are apt to abuse the writers who tell us—not what they really did see, but what they had predetermined they were to see.

It is not many years since that the bazaar at Delhi, to take at random one of the many, was truly a wonderful place. It occupied a large extent of ground, covered with all manner of ramshackle buildings, the ground floors of which were open stalls somewhat like those seen in the illustration accompanying this article. There were a few fairly broad thoroughfares which traversed the section from side to side in a serpentine course, but the really interesting and attractive shops were reached by many narrow, winding lanes, forming a veritable labyrinth, into which the unwary stranger who ventured alone was quickly lost; and when he betrayed his misfortune by act or word, was sure to be pounced upon by a flock of human vultures bent upon getting his last rupee in exchange for their wares, and heartless as to whether or not he got back to the meager civilization of Delhi's then wretched hotel.

In the main avenues there were—shall we say canals, or streams, or ditches? Well, there was something in whichever we call them that possessed the motion of liquid, and there was one, or perhaps two, rows of discouraged-looking trees. But in the narrow alleys there was no disguising the fact that those ditches were simply open drains, usually so torpid in their flow that the stenches was almost overpowering, and the visitor from abroad wondered how any human being could breathe the fetid air all day and all night as complacently as did the bazaar denizens.

Occasional Bargains Found.
Nevertheless, those were the days when it was quite possible to pick up really rare and precious bargains for a song, plaques hammered out from brass or other metals, true gems of many kinds, jade ornaments deftly carved from jade in minute patterns, making them almost literally "worth their weight in gold," and many other treasures such as nowadays never reach a bazaar stall, for they are snapped up by professional dealers the moment they leave the hands of their original owner, whom want compels to sacrifice, and the dealer knows exactly where lives the rich Indian who pays, without much haggling, the top-most price.

The glory of the bazaar, like that of practically all that was picturesque, had given way to the vitally needed sanitary measures. But the bazaar still exists, although rather in what we would call open or general markets. Undoubtedly they continue to offer many temptations spread before the covetous eyes of the foreign visitor in such alluring ways that the end of purchasing is not reached even when the bottom of the purse is, because the dealers are only too glad to send their wares to the hotel to be paid for at master's or madam's convenience, and lots of other "rare bargains which cannot be duplicated."

Most Fascinating of Streets.
Mr. Curtis' "Modern India" says of Delhi's Chandni Chauk, "Silver Street," that it is fairly called "the most picturesque and fascinating street in the world." Between the two rows of trees that grow along the center of its width of 75 feet there was formerly an aqueduct of clear, running water, that is now filled, and its banks are the great promenade for the city's gentry, both foreign residents and natives.

But the street is marvelous for the adeptness of the shopkeepers in "spotting" the stranger. Let a visitor from abroad appear, no matter how perfectly (he, at least, thinks) he has disguised himself in proper Indian garb, he is pounced upon by a swarm of shopkeepers, and besought to avail himself of the bargains that were never before offered, and never will again fall to his good fortune, until he either yields and secures, sometimes a true bargain, but often a lot of rubbish, or calls to his relief a friendly policeman, usually a swarthy Sikh. Sometimes it is most amusing when rival merchants grapple each other in their frantic efforts to secure the monopoly of a seemingly profitable customer, and the policeman's services are required to separate the belligerents.

Freak Fiddles.
The story of freak fiddles would fill a book. They have been made of tin, copper, iron, leather, glass and paper. They have assumed many wonderful shapes. Last year, in Los Angeles, a blind fiddler used to play on the corner with a fiddle that had no body. A tin horn did the work of the ordinary sound box of the violin. This was the invention of a local man. A certain corporation making phonograph records in the east uses an aluminum violin. This instrument is scientifically constructed and used by one of the greatest artists in making records of his solos for reproduction on talking machines. Even the highest priced old violins do not sound as one expects a violin to sound when it is reproduced on a record. This aluminum violin corrects that and the listeners sit entranced at the sweet tones of the record. The violin, itself, has a most disagreeable tone.—Los Angeles Times.

Steaming Paper.
Stripping wallpaper from the walls of a room is a tedious and unpleasant task. The following method has been found to do this work satisfactorily: Remove all furniture from the room and take up the floor covering; place in the middle of the room some kind of a portable stove with a big pan of water on top. Light the stove and close all the windows and doors; when the room becomes full of steam it will soften the paste which has been used for sticking the paper on the wall. After an hour or more of the steaming it will be easy to remove the paper.

As Far as It Goes.
Some people's idea of efficiency is to pin a notice on the front door that the bell is out of order, instead of having it fixed.—Ohio State Journal.

FARMERS MUST GUARD THROUGH SUMMER SEASON AGAINST ARMY WORM INVASION

The Army Worm and Some of Its Insect Enemies. Parent or Moth, Upper Right-Hand Corner; Full-Grown Larva, Lower Left-Hand Corner; Eggs on Plant Stems; Pupa in Soil, Lower Right-Hand Corner; Other Insects Are Beetles and Wasps, Parasites of Army Worm.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The army worm has cut a wide swath this year in the vicinities of Dallas and Fort Worth, Tex. Strenuous efforts to prevent its spread have been made, and absence of other reports gives ground for the hope that it may not appear elsewhere this summer, but United States department of agriculture entomologists urge all farmers in all states east of the Rocky mountains to remain on the watch for the pest until cool weather comes next autumn.

There are usually three generations of caterpillars—the form in which the pest greatly damages crops by feeding upon them—in a year, but seldom or never are there two successive outbreaks in any one locality. The insects usually appear in the fields very suddenly, and it seems certain that the moths—the parents of the caterpillars—at times fly in great numbers for many miles, in the direction of the prevailing winds, and alight in a body to deposit their eggs at some place favorable to the development of their offspring. This fact accounts for the appearance of the army worm in regions far removed from any known source of infestation.

How to Identify Worm.
The full-grown army worm is a beakless, naked, smooth, striped caterpillar, about one and one-half inch long. Its general color is usually greenish, and the stripes, one along each side and a broad one down the center of the back, are dark and often nearly black. The stripe along the back usually has a fine, light-colored broken stripe running down its center. The color of the body between the dark stripes varies from greenish to reddish brown. The head is greenish brown, speckled with black.

"When an army of these worms is at work in a field," says one of the publications of the department of agriculture, which are not given to exaggeration or to seeking after melodramatic effects, "the champing of their jaws is plainly to be heard as they greedily devour every blade in sight. In this stage the army worm frequently consumes all of the food supply near the place where it has developed from the eggs. When such is the case the caterpillars mass together and crawl away in a body in search of other food. It is this habit which has gained for the insect the popular name of 'army worm.'"

Killing Worms in Furrows.
It is the mashing together of the caterpillars which gives to the farmer the chance of destroying them in great numbers. Furrows or ditches are plowed or dug completely around the infested area, or directly across the path of the advancing horde. In attempting to cross such ditches the worms fall into them, and can easily be destroyed by crushing them with a log dragged back and forth through the ditch or furrow. If shallow post holes are sunk in the bottom of the ditch at intervals of about 20 feet, the worms will crawl along the ditch bottoms and fall into the holes, where they may be destroyed by crushing or other means. If the soil is of such a nature that water penetrates it but slowly, the post holes may be partially filled with water, with a layer of coal oil or petroleum on the top of it. The oil kills the worms immediately.

Other Control Measures.
Watchfulness and quick action on the part of farmers are essential in all the control measures, which include, in addition to the ditching method, the following:

In case of a general invasion, give the ground a light cultivation, if possible, after the caterpillars have gone

LOSS FROM ARMY WORMS

In the eastern states alone, United States department of agriculture entomologists believe, many millions of dollars' worth of grain and forage crops has disappeared down the throats of army worms in the past 30 years.

The army worm feeds by preference upon grasses, both wild and cultivated; next, upon the grasslike grains, such as millet, which suffer severely in outbreaks. Wheat in its unripe stages, corn, oats, and rye seem to be preferred in the order named. Alfalfa has suffered injury in the southwestern states. Clover is occasionally attacked.

into the ground to change to the next stage, the pupa. This will mix many of the pupae.

Spray infested grass or other vegetation not intended for forage purposes with a mixture of 1 pound of paris green to 50 gallons of water. Do not use the sprayed grass or vegetation for forage.

Spray growing grasses and other forage crops intended for use at a considerably later date with a solution of 1 pound of arsenate of lead (powder form) in 50 gallons of water, or 2 pounds of arsenate of lead (paste form) in 50 gallons of water.

When corn is infested, spray with one of the following mixtures: Arsenate of lead (powder form) 2 pounds, or 4 pounds of the paste form, in 50 gallons of water; or 1 pound of paris green and 2 pounds of freshly flaked lime in 50 gallons of water.

Scatter poisoned bait broadcast over infested fields. Take 50 pounds of bran and mix thoroughly with it either 1 pound of paris green or crude arsenic, then add 2 gallons of low-grade molasses diluted with from 3 to 4 gallons of water, and 6 finely chopped lemons. This is especially recommended for fields containing mixtures of grass and cowpeas, cowpeas and sorghum, or fields in which grass has been consumed by the caterpillars.

Do not pasture stock in fields where the grass or other crops have been sprayed with a poison mixture until after heavy rains have fallen, and not before three weeks after the application of the insecticides.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

- The weeds are still with us.
- The straw spreader has come to stay.
- A harrowing after a rain keeps the moisture in the soil.
- Cabbage requires frequent cultivation for best results.
- Sweet clover is taking the country—a fine thing for the country.
- Tomatoes and other vine crops should be tied to their supports early.
- A good windbreak is a great factor in the success of the orchard or garden. The repeated failure of many orchards may be laid to the lack of protection from the winds of summer as well as winter.

SPLENDID DESIGN FOR FARM HOME

Five-Room Bungalow That Has Strong Appeal.

MAKES THE HOUSEWORK EASY

Will Accommodate Good-Sized Family and is Most Conveniently Arranged—Sleeping Porch Attractive Feature.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

There now is little difference in the homes designed for farms from those that are erected in cities. The comforts and conveniences that are found in town are embodied in the homes that are being erected on the farm, with the additional features that the work of the rural housewife requires.

To promote home building and to provide plans for houses that can be erected at a minimum cost, the United States department of agriculture recently designed a number of farm homes. All of these houses were small, but were planned so that the family would have a modern home.

The accompanying design follows out this idea. Here is a five-room house that will accommodate a good-sized family. It really is a four-room square house, with the kitchen added at the back and a sleeping porch put on the side where the bedrooms are located. A screened porch adjoining the kitchen also is a feature.

The dimensions of the main part of the house are 36 by 28 feet, while the kitchen and porch projection is 20 feet 6 inches by 18 feet. As will be seen by the accompanying illustration this home has an attractive exterior. The gables in the roof of the porch and the house, the method of applying the siding and the sleeping porch projection, all combine to make this an excellent design.

Four rooms, living and dining rooms and two bedrooms are contained in the main portion of the house. The floor plan shows how they are arranged. The living room is large, 17 feet 6 inches by 12 feet, and is connected with the dining room by double doors. The dining room is practically square, being 15 feet 6 inches by 14 feet 6 inches. A 4-foot passageway runs alongside the dining room and opening off it are two bedrooms and the bathroom. The front bedroom is 12 by 14 feet 6 inches, and the rear bedroom is 11 by 14 feet 6 inches.

One of the exceptional features of this design is the sleeping porch, which is connected with both the bedrooms. The dimensions of the porch are 9 feet 6 inches by 18 feet 6 inches, large enough to accommodate two full-sized beds. It may be partitioned if desired.

The kitchen is arranged to accommodate the needs of the farm. Adjoining it is a pantry on one side and a cooking room on the other, while the large screened porch that opens off it provides a comfortable and pleasant place for the many duties that can be performed out of doors in the summer. A second entrance leads from the porch to the passageway, so that all the rooms in the house may be reached without going through the kitchen.

The bathroom is so located that there is little expense required to connect it with the water system from outdoors, and from the kitchen range where the water is heated. Running water now is found on most farms, and for this reason the design has been made so that it can be carried into the house at little additional cost.

What will appeal to the housewife in this design is the convenient arrangement of the rooms all on the one floor. There is no running up and down stairs required in doing the work, neither are there any unnecessary steps to be taken in getting from one room to another.

The cost of this house easily can be ascertained by consulting the local contractors and material dealer. Material and labor costs vary in different localities, but no matter where the farmer lives he will find that this house is comparatively inexpensive to build, while, at the same time, it will make a comfortable, convenient and attractive home.

Much has been written and more has been said about the advantages of building modern homes on the farms. When a farm home is to be built, however, there is no good reason why it should not embody the features that make for comfort and ease in doing the work required to keep it up. When these advantages are put into a design for a farm home, it would seem foolish to build anything else.

Building a home is something that most farmers do only once in a lifetime. Before building, therefore, it is wise to make a careful study of home designs. Consideration should be given to the size and number of rooms required; but greater thought should be expended on making the room arrangement compact and labor-saving. In this way the new home will be satisfactory to everyone who is going to live in it.

Now is an excellent time to build. Prices of both material and labor will not be less for a number of years to come, if in this generation. Just so long as foodstuffs cost as much as they do now, labor, which is more than 80 per cent of the cost of building, will require living wages. Those wages will come down only when the price of food is reduced, a condition that no producer wants to see.

And He Spoke.
A county superintendent visited a consolidated school the other day. On his entrance the children began to cheer. The teacher was puzzled, especially as the cheering continued, and called on one of the children for an explanation. "We want him to make a speech," he told her.

"Pleased she turned to the superintendent. "What a compliment," she fluttered.

The superintendent grinned. "Perhaps not," he said. "You see it hasn't been so long since I was a boy that I can't remember how we'd rather listen to the driest kind of a speech rather than recite a hard lesson."

The teacher was embarrassed. And not the least bit relieving was the next speech of the school head. One of the boys said, "Oh, we weren't going to recite. The teacher was going to read to us."

"Well, I've been there, too," laughed that portly man. "So I'll go on and speak, anyway."

No Sense in Playing Martyr.
Affecting the abused mortal won't keep you from paying the fiddler. Some folks are always being made to bear the burden of things—so they would have you believe. The fact is so many people can't do a really big day's work and they throw in lots of bluff to make up for the shortage. But the more bluff they use the more they call attention to what they are. Air is unstable and the hotter it is the more it starts things. So beware of playing the martyr. There's nothing in it and the sooner you give it up the better. Face the music like a man. Be master of the situation instead of a whiner.

Parcel Post to Siam.
The Siamese director general of posts and telegraphs has officially notified the American consulate at Bangkok, relates the New York Times, that parcel post service between Siam and the United States via "Hongkong-Pacific" came into operation as from October 10, 1918. The rate from Siam to the United States is 95 stangs (about 35 cents gold) for parcels up to one pound in weight, and 40 stangs (18 cents gold) for each additional pound, each parcel being limited to 11 pounds in weight.

THE "BLUES"
Caused by Acid-Stomach

Millions of people who worry, are despondent, have spells of mental depression, feel blue and are often melancholy, believe that these conditions are due to outside influences over which they have little or no control. Nearly always, however, they can be traced to an internal source—acid-stomach. Nor is it to be wondered at. Acid-stomach, beginning with such well defined symptoms as indigestion, belching, heartburn, bloating, etc., will, if not checked, in time affect to some degree or other all the vital organs. The nervous system becomes deranged. Digestion suffers. The blood is impoverished. Health and strength are undermined. The victim of acid-stomach, although he may not know the cause of his ailments, feels his hope, courage, ambition and energy slipping. And truly life is dark—not worth much to the man or woman who has acid-stomach!

Get rid of it! Don't let acid-stomach hold you back, wreck your health, make your days miserable, make you a victim of the "blues" and gloomy thoughts! There is a marvelous modern remedy called EATONIC that brings about such quick relief from your stomach troubles—sets your stomach to rights—makes it strong, cool, sweet, and comfortable. Helps you get back your strength, vigor, vitality, enthusiasm and good cheer. So many thousands upon thousands of sufferers have used EATONIC with such marvellously helpful results that we are sure you will feel the same. Write for a free trial. Get a big 50 cent box of EATONIC—the good tasting tablets that you eat like a bit of candy—from your druggist today. He will return your money if results are not even more than you expect.

HOW RHEUMATISM BEGINS

The excruciating agonies of rheumatism are usually the result of failure of the kidneys to expel poisons from the system. If the irritation of these uric acid crystals is allowed to continue, incurable bladder or kidney disease may result. Attend to it at once. Don't resort to temporary relief. The sick kidneys must be restored to health by the use of some stinging remedy which will prevent a return of the disease.

Get some GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. They have brought back the life of life to countless thousands of sufferers from rheumatism, lame back, lumbago, sciatica, gall stones, gravel and other affections of the kidneys, liver, stomach, bladder and allied organs.

They will attack the poisons at once, clear out the kidneys and urinary tract and the soothing healing oils and herbs will restore the inflamed tissues and organs to normal health.

All others are imitations. Ask for GOLD MEDAL and be sure the name GOLD MEDAL is on the box. Three sizes, at all good druggists.—Adv.

Round the World With the Marines

IN THE DAYS OF THE BUCCANNERS

"Oh, the English and the Irish and the 'owlin' Scotlins, too. The Canucks and Austrilins, and the 'airy French polli; the only thing that bothered us don't bother us no more. It's only 'y' in 'ell we didn't know the Yanks before."

"Well, Joe, I asked them guys what the globe and anchor stood for on their caps and one guy speaks up and says it means that the marines fight all over the world."

"It's a cute little thing, the marines' insignia. Looks something like a boiled huckleberry pudding with a couple of fish-hooks run through it, or like a lady hen having a try to hatch out a fractured door-knob. I'm sure you get me Gladys. Also, marines may be identified by their caps. Just where they wear that I've ten for the moment, but you're sure if it's somewhere about them if you close. It is 'Semper Fidelis'. One 'd', it's a phrase taken from the dialect, I think, meaning literally, 'we do we go from here?'"

The story of "Bluebeard" and his wives, which many will recall read long ago, is still going the rounds. The fable appears to have originated in France, but it has turned up almost everywhere in the wide world.

Now it appears that the Virgin Islands have a "Bluebeard" of their own, whom they claim as the original dyed-in-the-wool villain of child-lore.

Corporal Lester F. Scott of the Thirty-fifth company, United States Marines, who is stationed at Charlotte-Amalie in the little island recently acquired by the United States, writes as follows of the people and their beliefs:

"On a set of hills, the people are called 'Chaco'. They are a set of hills, the people are called 'Chaco'. They are a set of hills, the people are called 'Chaco'.

"They are a hard drinking race, yet they are the most industrious people on the island, and are especially good canoeists. Their boats are long, narrow affairs made out of scraps of wood. They supply the town with fish and the women make straw hats that find a ready sale among the negroes.

"They will never rise any higher than the true beach-comber, because the race has degenerated, due to intermarriage in so small a colony. With their ruddy faces, stiffly starched blue shirts, tight white trousers and broad-brimmed hats, they present a curious and unusual appearance.

"On the crest of two of the three hills of Charlotte-Amalie nestles the famous old castles of 'Bluebeard' and 'Blackbeard'. These are the two places of interest on the island. The old buccannery were alike as two peas in their habits, but the castles are in no way similar. Bluebeard's castle is the more massive and is separated from Blackbeard's by a distance of a half-mile. After the death of the two pirates, a secret tunnel was found connecting the two castles.

"It is reported that it was through this secret tunnel the two exchanged the women they had captured on ships."

How Germany Looks to Them.
How Germany looks to a marine who was one of the first to cross the Rhine is told in a letter from Lieut. Carrol J. Single of the Sixth regiment of marines, to his parents who live in Stockton, Cal. From somewhere in Germany he wrote the following:

"The people near the border were unless you want him never to visit you again.

"If you are an employer, and an ex-service man asks you for a job—don't turn him down. He left his old job to fight for you. It's your business to provide him with a job now."
Col. Arthur Woods, former police commissioner of New York, and now assistant to the secretary of war, offers this advice as the best way to keep our ex-service men happy and to absorb them speedily into the structure of peace-time America.

HOW GERMAN LOOKS TO A PARENT

Just plain squareheads, dumb looking, stolid, and unusually stupid. But two days ago we penetrated into the wonderful Rhineland and it is glorious here. We saw for the first time what we had not thought to find—pretty girls and mothers. There is nothing so restful to tired feet as the sight of a pretty girl. No, sir!

"The country we are in is more like America than anything I've seen since Paris. They have fine stone houses and many beautiful mansions and hotels here. This is the country of those famous German bades, or baths, where you come to drink of that magic of life that Ponce De Leon used to find in Florida."

"Single journeyed to Neuenahr when he visited the 'Wienbergen' or mountains and finally reached the Rhine, which he describes as follows:

"I am now in Brohl, a small town. The Rhine flows two hundred yards from my window. In front of us are mountains and in back are mountains terraced for grapes and on the river at the foot of the mountains huddle the small towns. The river here is about 600 yards across and flows restfully along into the distance. All is in true German order and big dredgers are working to make a harbor."

"Last night I met Captain Stone, one of the best friends I have known in the service. He would have naught but that I should dine with him. We climbed to a big castle on a hill back here overlooking the Rhine. I stepped in the door and started (like the movies have it) from a realistic armored man on my left only to find a more scoundrel on my right. In the great master's den were many stuffed foxes and birds, also deer horns. Captain Stone had roast chicken, and it was a real meal, right in the castle of some former German baron."

On Duty in Guam.

Something of the life of a marine on duty in the Island of Guam is told in a letter from Corp. Fred G. Taylor, who is stationed on this American insular possession in the South sea.

"When the last transport was here I had a very interesting excursion out to it on official business." Corporal Taylor writes. "A corporal and I went aboard to check the baggage of the 'homeward-bounders,' and then waited several hours for the captain quartermaster of the vessel to return from a social affair on shore to sign the manifest. He failed to appear, so we ate a swell feed aboard and then returned by launch across the harbor in the moonlight, and back by auto through the coconut groves to town. The next morning we again visited the vessel, this time getting our business done and saying good-bye to our friends on the ship, bound for the Philippines and the States.

"Last Sunday another fellow and I took a hike out into the jungles, walking around one of the beaches and climbing out onto the coral reef that guards the harbor, at low tide. We took some pictures and started back to town, after spying some of the most beautifully colored fish we had ever seen."

"We took a road that we thought led to the main road, but after several miles found we had discovered a deserted Spanish highway leading through the jungles. In a few minutes we found ourselves at the leper colony at one end of the island."

"There we saw the walls of an old Spanish prison and looked into the 'Devil's Punchbowl,' which is a contraction in the ground about 20 feet across at the top and bottom, but bulging in the center and about 100 to 150 feet deep. Then we returned to town, took some pictures of native women collecting 'toddy,' the juice of the coconut tree, from which liquor is made, and returned to camp."

Lake That Disappears.
In Georgia, near Vidalia, there is a lake which disappears every three or four years and then comes back again, no matter what the weather is like. The lake is three miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, with an average depth of 12 feet of water. There are natural subterranean passages beneath it, through which the water passes off. It takes two or three weeks to disappear, when a mammoth basin is left in its place, which furnishes a beautiful sandy beach. After a month or so the water begins to return, and then in a couple of weeks it is the same magnificent stretch of water as it was before.

"Now, my dear," said Mr. Crosslots, "we must avoid contradicting the new cook, or hurting her feelings in any way."

See Miss Rosa Marquis for Piano and Violin instruction. At C. E. Johnson's residence, Tuesday, Sept. 2nd.

H. Hoggard presented the Informer family with a luscious musk melon yesterday, for which we extend our thanks. It is a new variety, and we don't recall its proper name, but it was mighty good to eat. He says he has more of them, but added that the patch is right close to the house, so we decided not to do what we were thinking about.

WOLVES of the SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

Peace or War? Dorothy Is Forced to Choose.

Synopsis — Geoffrey Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for rebellion in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a Portuguese bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez's followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew. The pirates return to the Namur with Dorothy, the captured gold and Sanchez, badly wounded but still alive. Carlyle finds a friend in Watkins, an English sailor. Estada, acting captain, makes Carlyle first mate of the Namur.

CHAPTER XV.

The Cabin of the Namur. Both huge, black hands grasped the spokes, and it was evident that it required all his giant strength to control the bucking wheel. He was an ugly-looking brute, the lower portion of his face apelike and the wool growing so low as to leave him scarcely an inch of forehead. His eyes lifted an instant from the binnacle card to glance at me curiously. They exhibited no flash of recognition.

For half an hour Estada hung about aft, apparently paying no attention to me, and yet watching my movements closely. There was little to be done, but I thought it best to keep the watch reasonably busy, so they might thus learn that I knew my work. They proved prompt and capable enough, although I was eyed with some curiosity when I first went forward, and, so doubt, was very thoroughly discussed behind my back. The idlers amidst were a totally different class—a mongrel scum, profanely chatting in Spanish or swaggering about the deck, their very looks a challenge. However, they kept out of my way, and I found no occasion to interfere with their diversions. After Estada left the deck the majority amused themselves gambling, and as I had received no orders to interfere I permitted the games to proceed. Mendez interfered only once on occasion of a brief fight. My only instructions from the Portuguese on this going below was to call him at once if a sail was sighted. Apparently he was satisfied of my ability to command the deck.

No occasion to call him arose during my watch. It was still daylight, but with a purple gleam across the waters, when LeVere arrived on deck for my relief. We were talking together about the wheel when Estada appeared in the companionway.

"Every promise of a clear night," he said, glancing about at the horizon. "Better change the course two points, LeVere; we are lying in too close to the coast for our purpose. The table call will come very shortly, Senor Gates."

I washed up hastily in my stateroom and came out into the cabin perplexed as to what might occur within the next few moments. Yet whatever the result there was no avoiding it. My every move was one of extreme caution.

Estada and Estevan awaited me. The latter was all rigged out, and with smooth black hair oiled and plastered down upon his forehead. I never beheld a more disagreeable face, or one which so thoroughly revealed the nature of a man. As I touched his hand, at Estada's brief introduction, it was as if I fingered a snake.

"This is your chat, Gates, and you will find we live well aboard the Namur—wine, women and song—hey, smell! Why not, when all are at the table?" Steward, you told the lady that we were. Then bid her

We stood in silence, as Gunsauls crossed the deck and inserted a key in the after stateroom door. Manuel was grinning in full enjoyment, but the expression on the face of Estada was that of grim cruelty. I felt my hands grip like iron on my chair back and my teeth clench in restraint. God, but I would have liked to grip the fellow where he stood—all the bottled-up hatred in my soul struggling for action. Yet that would only mean the death of all hope, and I turned my eyes away from him and stared with the others at the opening door.

Out into the full light of the cabin the woman came and halted barely a step in advance of the steward, her head uplifted proudly, her eyes on us. Never before had I realized her beauty, her personality, as I did then. Her posture was not that of defiance nor of surrender; she stood as a woman defending her right to respect, sustained by a wonderful courage. I caught her glance, but there was no recognition in it; not by the flicker of an eyelid did she betray surprise, and yet in some mysterious manner a flash of intelligence passed between us. It was all instantaneous, for her gaze seemed to concentrate on Estada as though she knew him as leader.

"You sent for me? For what?" she asked, her Spanish clear and well chosen.

"To join us at meal," he answered unmoved. "It is better than to remain alone."

"Better! You must have a strange opinion of me to believe I would sit with murderers and thieves."

"Harsh words, senorita," and Estada grinned grimly. "Yet I expected them. There are many trades in the world by which men are robbed. We only work at the one we like best; nor will I discuss that with you. However, senorita, I can say that we have taken no lives in this last affair."

"No lives!" in sudden, incredulous surprise. "You mean my uncle lives?"

"If you refer to Fairfax—the one in whose room the chest was hidden, I can only reply truthfully that he lives.

"Peace or War?"

One of my men struck him down, but it was not a death blow. If that be the reason of your disdain there is no cause. This chair is held for you."

"But why was I brought away a prisoner? To be a plaything? A sport for your pleasure?"

"That was but the orders of our chief; we await his recovery to learn his purpose."

"Sanchez! Was he your chief? A pirate?"

"A buccaneer; we prey on the enemies of Spain. It was at Captain Sanchez's orders we waited the arrival of your vessel from England. He loved you; he would no doubt have dealt with you honorably; I have reason to believe that to be his purpose now. Nothing will change his purpose. He is that kind, and he has the power. He determined that if you should not come to him by choice you would be made to by force. You are here now by his orders and will remain until you consent to his purpose—all that remains for you to decide is whether you choose to be prisoner or guest aboard."

"And if he should die?"

Estada shrugged his shoulders indifferently.

"Who knows?"

Her lips tightened as though to hold back a cry while one hand pressed to the open door steadied her. There was a look in the searching eyes I did not like to see. It was a moment before she could control her voice.

"I have heard them call you Estada. Of what rank in this company are you?"

"I am Pedro Estada, formerly the first officer, now, by occasion of Captain Sanchez's wound, in full command.

These are two of my officers—Senor Gates, one of your own countrymen, and Manuel Estevan. And now that I have answered your questions, what is it to be between us—peace or war?" Her eyes dropped, and I could distinctly note the trembling of her slender figure. When she slowly raised her glance once more it rested on my face as though seeking approval, guidance.

"If there be only the one choice," she said quietly. "I accept peace. I cannot live locked in that room alone haunted by my thoughts and memories. If I pledge you my word, senor am I to enjoy the freedom of this cabin and the deck?"

Estada looked at us, a shade of doubt in his eyes. I made no sign, but Manuel nodded.

"Why not?" he asked in his harsh croak of a voice. "So long as we be at sea? What harm can the girl do?"

"Perhaps none; I will take a half chance, at least. You shall have freedom of the cabin. So long as you keep your word, while as to the deck, we will consider that later. Prove you mean what you say by joining us here."

My recollection of that meal is not of words but of faces. Estada's eyes sought constantly the girl's face, and to my consternation exhibited an interest in her personality which I had never noticed this awakening admiration, but she certainly played her part with quiet modesty. I believe that even the Portuguese reached the conclusion that she was not altogether regretful for this adventure and that it was safe for him to relax some degree of vigilance. His manner became more gracious, and long before the meal ended his language had a tendency to compliment and flatter. I contented myself with occasional sentences. The young woman sat directly across from me, our words overheard by all, and as I knew both men possessed some slight knowledge of English I dare not venture beyond commonplace conversation in that tongue. With quick wit she took her cue from me, so that nothing passed between us, either by word of mouth or glance of eye, to arouse suspicions.

Believing the feeling of confidence would be increased by such action, I was first to leave the table, and it being my watch below immediately retired to my room, noisily closing the door after me, yet refraining from letting the latch catch, thus enjoying a slight opening through which to both see and hear. Manuel did not linger long, making some excuse to go forward, but Estada remained for some time, endeavoring to entertain. His egotism made a fool of the man, yet even he finally became discouraged of making her comprehend his meaning, and lapsed into a silence which gave her an excuse to retire. This was accomplished so graciously as to leave no sting, the fellow actually accompanying her to the door of her stateroom, bowing his compliments as she disappeared within. The fob actually believed he had made a conquest and preened himself like a turkey cock.

"Gunsauls, you need not lock the senorita in her room or guard her in any way hereafter. She is permitted to come and go as she pleases aboard."

Estada entered his own stateroom, leaving the door ajar. When he came out he had exchanged his coat for a rough jacket. Thus attired for a turn on deck, he disappeared through the companion.

CHAPTER XVI.

In Dorothy's Stateroom.

I stood crouched, with eye at the crack watchful of every movement in the lighted cabin, my own decision made. I must see and talk with Dorothy. Gunsauls turned down the light and departed along the passage leading amidsthips. A moment later I heard the sound of dishes grinding together preparatory to being washed. No better opportunity for action was likely to occur, although the situation was not without peril. I crept along close to the side walls, lifted the latch noiselessly, and slipped quickly within. There was no light, except a glimmer of stars through a large after port, but against this faint radiance she stood vaguely revealed. Her first thought must have been Estada, for there was a startled note in her challenge.

"Who are you? Why do you come here?"

"Speak low," I cautioned. "You must know my voice."

"Geoffrey Carlyle!"

"Yes, but do not use that name—all hope depends on my remaining unknown. You welcome me?"

She came straight forward through the dim star shine, a spectral figure, with both hands outstretched.

"Welcome!" her tone that of intense sincerity. "Your presence gives me all the strength I have. But for you I should throw myself through that port into the sea. But I know not how you came here—tell me, you are not one of these wretches?"

"No; you must believe that first of all, and trust me."

"I do—but tell me all you can."

"Is there a divan here, or anywhere we can sit down together? I can see nothing in this darkness."

Carlyle saves Dorothy from death at the hands of a mysterious intruder but is unable to account for the sudden attack in the night. There is some dark plot behind it all. What will the morning disclose?

To Freshen Silks. Japanese, China, India and pongee silks are freshened by washing in warm soapsuds, rinsing quickly and drying in the shade; roll in a sheet when not perfectly dry and then iron on the wrong side.

Colored silk fades and white silk yellows after washing, but this may be avoided by using medium warm soap and water and rinsing well; wrap in a large cloth (an old sheet is fine) for half an hour, and then iron on the wrong side with a moderate iron, using a bit of thin lawn between the iron and silk. Do not let the light and air get to it while wet, as this yellows and fades the fabric.

When black silk or satin begins to shine, sponge on the right side with a mixture of two parts of gin and one of water, and iron while damp on the wrong side.

To Remove Grease Stains From Silk. When any greasy substance has been dropped upon silk it can be abstracted by mixing French chalk with methylated spirits to the consistency of cream, laying it upon the stain, then covering with a brown paper and pressing with a warm iron.

French chalk removes grease and does not injure colored silks. Scrape a little on the spot, rub it in, let it stand 24 hours, then brush off and repeat the process if necessary, for grease is often hard to remove.

To Remove Stain From Silk Use Chloroform. First remove as much of the grease spot as you can by the hot-iron method; that is, place clean blotting paper both above and below the stain, then place a warm iron over the paper. The heat will dissolve the grease which the blotting paper will absorb.

Remove the paper, add a fresh supply under the stain and rub with chloroform.

Grease Spot on a Parasol. You may get rid of the grease spot by laying on hot French chalk. This will dissolve and absorb the grease. Next, the parasol should be opened and then thoroughly washed with gasoline and white soap all over its surface, more particularly on the soiled places.

Afterward sponge off with clear gasoline. By going over every part of the parasol there will be no danger of spots or streaks and gasoline will not harm it. Keep away from fire or artificial light during this process.

Both Suits and Dresses. Owing to the proportions of the present demand for women's wear, the coming fall season promises to see suits and dresses bought in equal amounts. Only a short time ago in the history of the dress trade it was always a question of a choice between the two styles of garments, with rarely a time when both were equally good. Manufacturers of dresses hold the present demand for quality responsible in a measure for the field that exists for both suits and dresses, and as long as both maintain high standards they stand the same chance of acceptance. This stabilizing of conditions has been a decidedly welcome development to the dressmakers.

What the Children Wear

Very simple frocks of fine cotton goods in ray colors or of handkerchief linen; and all made by hand, are provided our little girls to wear when they are all dressed up. Cotton crepe, batiste, lawn and organdie usually furnish the material, and embroidered batiste or val lace or fancy needlework the trimming for these fine affairs, and hand work puts the hall mark of elegance on them. And when the little boy of three or more must be dressed up to match the splendor of his sister he is likely to appear in knickers of pongee or other strong silk, with batiste blouse to match it in color. But of course his life is spent in much more sturdy clothes made of strong cottons, like cotton poplin and pique, while these and gingham or chambrays serve for the daily wear of little girls.

Between the two extremes of very dainty and sheer things, for special occasions, and heavy cottons, come the durable printed volles. They make very practical frocks that are more dressy than gingham. A good many of these imitate gingham in plaids and cross-bars that are very pretty in this sheer material, and a greater number have small flower designs scattered thickly over their surface; others are striped, so that there is an unending variety to choose from, and all these cotton goods are well represented in stores all over the country.

The little girl out in Arizona has the same chance as the little girl in New York to wear frocks that are up to date.

The dress shown in the picture is of printed voile, machine made, with organdie collar and cuffs and facing on the pocket. The sash is also of organdie and there is a little spray of embroidery on all these organdie accessories. Narrow organdie frills bordering neck and sleeves and sashes prove as pretty a trimming feature as the season has to offer. On summer dresses sleeves are short, either elbow or three-quarter length, and skirts usually about knee length.

Designers of children's clothes have not ignored georgette crepe and crepe de chine for the most pretentious of dainty frocks. The georgette is often figured and has the appearance of very fine lawn. Gay ribbons and scalloped edges on sleeves and skirt, bound with the ribbon or silk to match it, finish up these airy creations. Many frocks are made with coat and jacket effects in the small bodices, and narrow ribbons, including baby velvet ribbon, must not be overlooked in finishing them off. These and tiny crocket or pearl buttons decide the class of many a little frock.
