Shall Hedley Have an Assembly Hall for Winter As Well As Summer?

Most people, by nature, are social beings and that social tendency is the fabric upon which our civilization has been developed, by people mingling and giving other people the benefit of their ideas and in return they receiving information that was valuable to them.

The Greeks developed their civilization by being naturally progressive and able to acquire the best from the neighboring nations. Then the knowledge of the few became the possession of all her people, because they were one of the most social of all the ancient peoples. The schools were their first interest, but they came together in great athletic meets, one of which was the Olympian Games which has been revived in recent years by modern nations. These games have the honor of being the incentive of the Greek's greatest sculpturing and the mother of that local patriotism which gave to us Democracy. They used every possible means to continually bring the people together, and at those gatherings all people were encouraged to take part. Oratorical contests were encouraged to the extent that every man was his own lawyer and the people was the jury. Because of such a life their love for home was intense, and it was this love that enabled them to withstand the attacks of nations apparently stronger than they. The history of our own country's development is the history of our own social life.

The social gathering may not be altogether productive of good; it depends largely upon the purpose of the assembly. The gatherings should not always be of the same nature; if they are the people will become one sided. The purposes should be divided into political, religious, educational and entertainment. The first two are fairly well taken care of. The political campaigns, assisted by the press, will not allow people to become stale on the issues of the day. The churches are usually found on the job, and at work.

The school is doing its best, in an educational way, for the young, but a man's education should not cease when he leaves school, so his education should be broadened by lectures along the lines of public interest. It is true that people often become so engrossed in their own business that they forget public affairs, but that is exactly the trouble with many of our German communities: their own private interest is all they see, and you make an enemy of them when you try to convince them that they should have an interest beyond their own fence. The same complaint comes from California of the Japanese, only they go far-

ROAD BUILDING

BOND ISSUE IS BIG PROBLEM
Best Means to Pull Counties Out of Land of Mud—Make All Improvements Permanent.

The biggest single issue before the people today is good roads; biggest not alone of itself, but biggest because the prompt and satisfactory solution of a permanent road system in every state will help to solve a half-dozen fundamental problems and indirectly affect for good, as well as in dollars and cents, almost every phase of farm, social and industrial life in the state. We cannot expect to have a real system of roads unless it is based on large units and this is best accomplished by accepting the county and state basis with a few experienced and responsible men in charge in each case. We must have roads that begin and end somewhere.

Many counties are presenting to the taxpayers the question of a bond issue for the improvement of their highways. The bond issue for a public improvement should be governed by the same considerations which govern a bond issue by any business organization. When a manufacturing concern issues bonds, the money raised is placed in permanent improvements in the plant which will last far beyond the life of the bonds, or else no investor would purchase the securities. Bonds for municipal purposes or for public improvements are not always subjected to this acid test, and instances are numerous in this country where bonds for twenty years have been issued for the construction of public roads, where the type of roads built with the proceeds of the bond issue could not possibly last more than ten years, and even then expensive maintenance is continually necessary. In some instances history shows that during the life of such a bond issue the original road has been worn out and rebuilt with a different material, and with the proceeds of subsequent bond issues as many as three times, and still the original bonds are a liability on the community.

Bond issues for better roads are the best means to pull counties out of the Land of Mud. But it must be certain that the road improvements will last the life of the bonds. This can be assured by securing expert and unprejudiced engineering advice on the best kind of roads for the soil. The banker can perform yeoman service in this connection.

In the state of Iowa the man who began with nothing and now owns a $30,000 farm, believes in paying as he goes when building a road, but he will borrow money from an insurance company with which to buy more land, and he has not yet seen that when he builds Making Necessary Repairs on Macadam Road.

A concrete bridge with one year's tax money, he has made a Christmas present of that bridge to posterity for the next one hundred years. He says that thirty-year paved roads are impossible because $10,000 per mile is too much to pay out of one year's tax money, and it has not occurred to him that there will still be taxpayers when he is dead and gone, who will be using that road, and by rights should have to pay some of it.—Wallace's Farmer.

COST OF VARIOUS HIGHWAYS
Macadam Road Is Most Expensive, But When Built Is Satisfactory and Permanent.

Dirt roads are ordinarily surfaced with sand, mixed with clay or with gravel, or brick, or crushed stone, concrete or other like material. The gravel road will cost from $1,500 to $3,500 a mile—the difference in cost depending upon the accessibility of gravel. The macadamized road costs from $2,000 to $10,000 per mile. It is the most expensive, but when well built is both satisfactory and permanent.

Essential Foundation.
Permanent foundations, having uniform bearing quality, are essential to all types of engineering structures. Roads are no exception.

Try Draining Wet Place.
Did you ever try draining that awful wet place in the road? Try it some time—once will be enough.

Don't Build on Paper.
If you want that road you're going to build to be of any value, build it on the ground—not on paper.

IN ENGLAND FRIENDSHIP

President Hough of North America Gained in Study of Country's Economic Situation Through British

Chicago.—President Lynn Hough of Northwestern University recently returned from England where he spent the summer speaking in churches and holding conferences with many educational and industrial leaders.

In reply to a question as to his attitude of England toward the American friendship, President Hough said: "The Englishman of serious and mind believes very profoundly in American friendship. Many as Mr. Fisher, the president of the English board of education, I readily to express their belief in the hope of the world. widespread anxiety about the situation. With a great America and the balance of wrong way, many Englishmen grave as they speak of the In England with a population of forty millions there is the prospect of producing food for some thirteen millions. The rest of must in the long run come change for English products other countries desire.

Would Cancel War Debt
"Some men feel that if it would cancel the war debt of it would be a decisive step toward the right situation. That America came into the war and such treatment of Britain and other allies would be a noble nation of wealth from a nation did not, as events unfolded, make so large a sacrifice of old Britain and France. So with a dash of adventure in the estimate of the situation take it that the dangers are over and that England will quickly recover. I heard Lord Beveridge was on the Mauretania going to press this view. It is probably a matter about which little is said will influence the actual of England has had a long and full experience in internationaling, and before even our Americans learn the psychology of it, Britain will probably be competing with America on more terms. And this is to the advantage of America. No business man to look into the future would break down England's financial strength even if such were possible."

Labor Unrest in England
When asked about the labor in England Dr. Hough replied times this summer the situation has been very grave indeed. If American needs to remember things if he would estimate it. The first is that there is a

BELGIAN GIRL IS HEROINE

Mlle. Marie Louise Gombier, a twenty-one-year-old Belgian girl, who arrived in New York from France en route to Los Angeles to make her home. In 1914 Mlle. Gombier was living in a convent at Bresges, Belgium. When the Germans arrived the girl escaped and made her way to her father's home near Brussels. With the fall of the Belgian capital the Germans occupied the Gombier home and installed a wireless plant. Mlle. Marie tried to destroy the plant, was caught and sentenced to death. The sentence was later commuted to imprisonment. After five weeks in prison the girl escaped and made her way to the Canadian lines near Ypres. Here she served as a nurse, winning the Croix de Guerre with two palms for bravery. Mlle. Gombier will make her home in Los Angeles with Mrs. L. Dowdy, an American Red Cross nurse she met in France.

IN JAIL 14 MONTHS, INNOCENT
Italian, Confused in Trial, Was Convicted of Perjury—Pardon Recommended.

New York.—Gov. Smith has granted a commutation of sentence to Frank Rossamongo, a Sicilian; a prisoner who figured in a famous case. Prosecuting authorities in the Bronx who convicted Rossamongo recommended that he be pardoned, after newly discovered evidence cleared him of wrongdoing.

Rossamongo has been imprisoned fourteen months. Nathan Lubin, "King of Pickpockets," was tried in the Bronx, charged with robbing Rossamongo. On the stand Rossamongo made contradictory statements. Lubin was given ten to twenty years. Rossamongo was tried and convicted of perjury in June, 1918. He always stoutly maintained he was innocent.

He got his story to the attention of the governor. District Attorney Francis Martin ordered an investigation. It developed that while Rossamongo on the witness stand seemed to have veered around from prosecuting Lubin to defending him, he was in reality only confused.

VIRTUE IS REWARDED HERE
Nine-Dollar Errand Boy Returns $75,000 Lost Bonds—Receives $15 as a Reward.

New York.—That he found $75,000 in Liberty bonds and received a reward of $15 for turning them into their owners was the story told by Isadore Geller, a sixteen-year-old errand boy who is employed at $9 a week by Unz & Co., of 26 Broadway. He lives at 420 Junius street, Brooklyn.

Geller said that he found a package in front of the subtenement building that proved to contain more than half a million dollars in bonds. He took it to the offices of Salomon Bros. & Hutzler, brokers of 27 Pine street, whose name was on the wrapper. Members of that firm declined to discuss the story.

ther and want a little Japan in our own land. Hence, we must, we are compelled to keep alive and encourage progress of the American ideal of continued improvement of our citizens after they leave school. This can be done by local programs, high class Lyceums and Chautauquas.

The trouble with our place is, we have no place to meet only for religious services. Many activities that we have in our community are not suited for the churches. We build churches and schools but we neglect the other lines. Even the school cannot be brought together as a whole, and so long as it cannot be it is handicapped for the lack of continuity of spirit and purpose. For example, the other day at a teachers' meeting the question was asked: "What are you preparing in the way of public holiday programs?" and the answer came in chorus, "We have no place to give them." And so often we are embarrassed by the questions: "Where is your assembly hall?" "How often do you have chapel?" and our answer is compelled to be, "We do not have an assembly hall; we do not have chapel; no place to meet even for a general announcement." Even the rural school is better equipped that way. The house is at least large enough to convene the school in a body and have some surplus room for visitors. Does the lack of a place for a general assembly for the school and the public, do you think, mean anything to your welfare and the welfare of your children? Does it mean that we are promoting the best interest of our community by smothering the possibility of these gatherings? If we are right, then hundreds of thousands of our leading educators are wrong. Candidly I believe it is thoughtless neglect, coupled with lack of co operation in attempting to get together on some plan. I have heard so many of the people express themselves as desiring a place for public meetings and public entertainment.

It has been suggested, since we have the frame and the roof of the old tabernacle, that it should be floored, ceiled and lighted for a place to meet in winter as well as in summer.

If we should do this, the basis for a model community would be laid. We would then have a school auditorium, a place for school programs or any other clean, wholesome community activities. If you are interested, let me repeat from last week's paper: Talk this to your neighbor, not once but many times, until he, with your assistance, will interest someone else to the point of DOING something instead of TALKING ABOUT what is needed. I think we agree that the need exists, but are you willing to assist in remedying this crying need? If you are, TALK it, BOOST it, and BOOST THE OTHER FELLOW to help you boost Hedley.

Inventor Lifts Terrors of the Fog From Harbors

WASHINGTON.—Ocean fog has been tamed by the navy, so that it will no longer be necessary for battleships and liners to lie outside harbors waiting a chance to creep in when the weather lightens. In a contract signed with Earl C. Hanson, a young inventor of Los Angeles, the navy department took the first step to make practical a new device to control vessels in a fog outside harbors.

Tests will be made at once at the naval base at New London and later in Ambrose channel in New York harbor. By the use of the invention in connection with the radio compass, which the navy has now perfected, delay in ocean travel due to weather is to be eliminated. The radio compass here is the captain's cabin listening device like telephone receivers are placed and attached by wires to the hull of the ship. The ship follows the course of the cable.

brings all shipping "in sight of land" and the new device, like a friendly hand, reaches out and takes the biggest of ships through the most tortuous channels safely and quickly to its pier.

The new device is a simple one. A cable is laid in the center of the ship channel. Through it is sent an electric current of low frequency, which through the listening devices on board ship gives off a sound of certain pitch that cannot be mistaken for any other sound.

The ship bugs the cable from harbor line to the dock. On the bridge and in the captain's cabin listening devices like telephone receivers are placed and attached by wires to the hull of the ship. The ship follows the course of the cable.

Boys' Working Reserve Proves a Great Success

FEW things that came out of the war have been of greater significance than the benefits derived from the United States Boys' Working Reserve, though we are still too close to the movement to appreciate its results. Back in the early summer of 1917 President Wilson wrote: "I call upon the able-bodied boys of the land to turn in hordes to the farms and make certain that no pains and no labor are lacking in this great nation."

The result was that "our second line of defense," as Mr. Hoover first called it, the Boys' Working Reserve, was formed. There was a spontaneous response in every state, many schools and other organizations undertaking the work of placing thousands of boys who went out to help the farmers with their work. In 1918 this army of boys from sixteen to twenty-one years old was more than 250,000 in the United States.

Of these 250,000 no less than 21,000 were from the high schools of Illinois. So a glance at the Illinois report will give an idea of the results in the whole country.

The Illinois boys produced crops worth $23,000,000 and earned for themselves $1,200,000. Less than 1 per cent of the boys have proved unworthy of the opportunity given them. About the same proportion of farmers proved unworthy of having a good boy sent them.

The boys made the farmers open their eyes, and in a few weeks the skeptical farmer was saying: "Send me more boys; the boys are certainly making good." It wasn't long until there were boys scattered here and there by the thousands. This meant much to the farmers, for there was an average of one worker from every farm in service, and the boys took their places.

Teachers bear witness that the effect upon the boys was exceedingly beneficial in all ways.

"Buck Privates" Would Have "Dugouts" Everywhere

IN THE long night watches on the firing line or in hospitals or rest billets, our fighting men found that tempus fugit to fugit with its customary alacrity. They yearned for amusement. To be sure, there were various patriotic organizations catering to the social instinct, but somehow they did not satisfy. So one day there sprang into being the Buck Private society. Its success was instantaneous.

Originally organized in the Sixth United States field artillery of the First division, which artillery regiment, by the way, fired the first American shot in the war, the Buck Privates' society soon numbered thousands of members in every branch of the service. There was no formality of initiation. The only qualification was that you had to be an overseas buck private.

In order that the society may become a permanent institution the charter members, now discharged, are beginning a campaign for organization. The original overseas organizer, Private Paul F. Collins, Battery D, Sixth field artillery, lives in Los Angeles. He is president and chief buck private.

But one of his comrades, First Sergeant Edward M. McGuire, opened headquarters the other day in Chicago as national field representative.

"The Buck Privates' society in no way conflicts with the American Legion," Sergeant McGuire said. "In fact, I might say one of its aims is that of co-operation with the legion. There is no question that it will be the means of strengthening that body. We hope to establish a dugout in Chicago with a membership of at least 50,000 men."

As its platform the society has adopted these planks: Broader educational work; cleaner politics; compulsory schooling for all boys under sixteen in order to make bigger and better Americans, and active study of conditions in industry, commerce and labor.

Women as Special Agents Under Food Control Act

OFFICIAL consideration is to be given the appointment of women as special agents for the department of justice in the enforcement of the food control act. It has been said informally that a recommendation will be made to name women among the agents necessary to enforcement of this new legislation. This recommendation will be placed before Frank Burke, chief of the bureau of investigations of the department of justice.

The department of justice has employed women agents previously. A number of them did spy work in this country during the war. They were stationed in many of the larger cities of the country—New York, Boston, Chicago, Baltimore and others.

"I think women would be most valuable as agents in the enforcement of this profiteer act, not only for clothing overcharges, but for food as well," said one of the officials of the department of justice. "Women have been the purchasers of these commodities for years and they ought to make good detectives of profiteers."

Housewives who have long cherished the desire to get legal action against the retailer who has taken too much for little Johnny's shoes or the family beefsteak may yet have the gratification of pouring their woes into the ear of a feminine department of justice agent.

It will be interesting to watch the effect on clothing and food prices should women agents be named.

As the food administration acts during the war educated the women of the country, this new bill may give them additional insight into the matter of buying and selling in quantities.

GLORIOUS! I'M NOT BILIOUS!

Yesterday I was Sick, Headachy, Constipated but I took "Dodson's Liver Tone"—not Sickening Calomel!

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel headachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, dangerous Calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than Calomel, and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take Calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.—Adv.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

Mr. Green's Perfect Mastery of the French Language Evidently Was Too Much for Him.

Mr. Brown and Mr. Green were taking their long-talked-of holiday in France. For three months Mr. Green had been learning French—by correspondence—and thought he had mastered the language. One afternoon the pair went into a cafe to have tea, and Green, who always insisted on doing all the talking, gave the order to the waiter. When, however, the tea things were brought, he noticed that something was missing, and spoke angrily to the waiter about it. "My dear fellow," objected Brown, "what an earth are you saying?" "Will you kindly refrain from making your absurd criticisms of my use of the French language?" retorted Green. "Oh, certainly!" answered Brown, "Only it seems rather a waste of time to ask the waiter to bring you a saucer when what you want is a teaspoon!"—London Tit-Bits.

I heard her cry out, and barely caught the lantern as it fell from her hand. At first I doubted the evidence of my own eyes, snatching the bit of flaring candle from its tin socket and holding it where the full glare of light fell across the grewsome object. Ay, it was a woman, with lower limbs doubled back from lack of space, but otherwise lying as though she slept, so perfect in preservation her cheeks appeared flushed with health, her lips half smiling. It was a face of real beauty—an English face, although her eyes and hair were dark and her mantilla and long earrings were unquestionably Spanish. A string of pearls encircled her throat, and there were numerous rings upon her fingers. The very contrast added immeasurably to the horror.

"She is alive! Surely she is alive!" The words were sobbed into my ear from Dorothy's lips.

"Alive! No, that is impossible!" I touched the figure with my hand. "The flesh is like stone," I said, "thus held lifeless by some magic of the Indies. What can it all mean? Who could the woman be? It is love or hate?"

"Not love, Geoffrey. Love would never do this thing. It is hate, the glowing of revenge; there can be no other answer—this is the end of a tragedy."

There was nothing not a scrap of paper, not even the semblance of a wound exposed. The smile on those parted lips had become one of mockery; I could hear the slight no longer, and rose to my feet, clasping Dorothy close to me, as she still gazed down in fascination at the ghastly sight.

"We will never know. The man who could tell is dead."

"Captain Paradilla?"

"Who else could it be? This was his schooner, and here he alone could hide such a secret. There is nothing more we can learn, and the horror unnerves me. Hold the light, dear, while I replace the lid of the chest."

It required my utmost effort to accomplish this. I was glad to have the thing hidden, to escape the stare of those fixed eyes, the death smile of those red lips. It was no longer a reality but a dream of delirium; I dare not think or speculate—my only desire being to get away, to get Dorothy away. In absolute terror I drew her with me to the open door—then stopped, paralyzed; the half revealed figure of a man appeared on the cabin stairs.

"Stop! Who are you?"

"Watkins, sir. I came below to call you. There's smuthin' bloomin' odd takin' place out there in the fog, Captain Carlyle. We want yer on deck, sir, right away."

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Boat Attack.

He waited for us just without the companion, but my eyes caught nothing unusual as I emerged into the daylight. I could barely see amidships, and on either side hung the impenetrable bank of cloud, leaving sea and sky invisible.

"What is it, Watkins? Where are the men?"

"Farrard, sir, a-nagin' over the starboard rail. That's somethin' curiously strange a-happenin' in that fog. Ole was the first ter hear the clatter of an oar slippin' in a rowlock. Then, sir, while we was a-listenin' we both caught sound of a Spanish oath, spoke as plain as if the buck was aboard."

"A lost boat, likely—shipwrecked sailors adrift in the fog; perhaps our other quarterboat. No one hailed them?"

"No, sir; I told the men ter keep still till I called you."

The crew were all gathered at the rail, staring out into the mist, whispering to each other. I pressed my way in among them. We may have been clinging there, a minute of two, breathlessly listening. Then a voice spoke directly in front of me out from the dense fog.

"Try the port oar, Pedro; we must have missed the d—n slip."

I straightened up as though struck, my eyes seeking those of Watkins, who stared back at me, his mouth wide open in astonishment.

"You heard that?" I whispered. "Do you know who spoke?"

"Do I? Dead or alive, sir, it was Manuel Estevan."

"Ay; no other, and alive enough, no doubt. Lads, come close to me and listen—they must not hear us out there. By some devil's trick the Namur has followed our course, or else yonder are a part of his crew cast away. They clearly know of us—perhaps had a glimpse through some rift in the cloud—and are seeking to board with a boat party. 'Tis not likely those devils know who we are; probab'ly take us for a merchant ship becalmed in the fog and liable to become an easy prey, if they can only slip on us unseen. How are you, bulles? Ready to battle your old mates?"

"Those were no mates o' ours, sir," said Watkins indignantly. "They are half-breed mongrels, and no sailors; Estevan is a hell-hound, an' so far as my voice goes, I'd rather die on this deck than ever agin be a bloody pirate. It that the right words, lads?"

The others grumbled assent, but their muttered words had in them a ring of sincerity, and their faces exhibited no cowardice. One only asked a question.

"I'm fer fightin', sir," he said grimly, "but what'll we use? Them lads ain't comin' aboard bare-handed, but damn if I've seed a weapon on this hooker."

"Dar's three knives, an' a meat cleaver in der galley, sah," chimed in Sam.

"We'll do well enough; some of you have your sheath knives yet, and the rest can use belaying pins and capstan bars. The point is to not let them get aboard, and, if there is only one boat, we will be pretty even-handed. Pick up what you can, and man this rail—quietly now, hearties, and keep your eyes open."

It proved a longer wait than I expected. Unable to withstand the inaction any longer I turned and took a few steps aft, thinking to gauge our progress by the wake astern. I was about the cabin on the port side when Dorothy called my name—a sudden accent of terror in her voice.

The alarm was sounded none too soon. Either fortune, or skill, had served those demons well. They had succeeded in circling the stern of the Santa Marie, unseen and unheard by anyone aboard. Even as she shrieked the alarm, a hand was at her throat, and she was struggling desperately in the merciless grip of a half-naked Indian.

Yet at that they were too late, the advantage of surprise had fallen them. A half dozen had reached the deck, leaping from the rail, the others below clambering after their leaders, when with a rush we met them. It was a fierce, mad fight, fist and club pitted against knife and cutlass, and the defenders struck like demons incarnate. I doubt if the struggle lasted two minutes. I heard the blows, the oaths, the cries of pain, the dull thud of wood against bone, the sharp clang of steel in contact, the shuffling of feet on the deck, the splash of bodies hurled overboard. Each man fought for himself, in his own way. I thought only of her, and leaped straight for her assailant with bare hands, smashing recklessly through the hasty guard of his cutlass and gripped the copper devil by hair and throat. I knew she fell to the deck beneath our feet, but I had my work cut out for me. He was a hell-hound, slippery as an eel in his half nakedness, strong as an ox, and fighting like a fiend. Yet I had him foul, my grip unbreakable, as I forced his neck back against the rail, until it cracked, the swarthy body sliding inert to the deck. Whirling to assist the others I found no need. Except for bodies here and there the deck was clear; men were struggling in the chains; two below in the boat were endeavoring to cast off, and Schmitt, with Estevan helpless in his arms, staggered to the side and flung the shrieking Spanish oar overboard out into dark water. I heard the splash as he fell, the single cry his lips gave, but he never again appeared above the surface. Above the bedlam Watkins roared out an order.

"That's it, bulles! that's it! Now let her drop! We'll send them to hell where they belong. Good shot; she landed!"

It was the hank of a spare anchor, balanced for an instant on the rail, then sent crashing down through the frail bottom of the boat beneath. The wreck drifted away into the fog, the two miserable occupants clinging desperately to the gunwales. I lifted Dorothy to her feet, and she clung to me unsteadily, her face yet white.

"Watkins, have you figured up results?"

"Two of our men are cut rather badly, and one hasn't come yet from a smart rap on the head."

"None got away?"

"Not less they swum, that's six dead ones aboard. Four took ter the water, mostly because they hed to. The only livin' one o' the bunch is that nigger 'longside the wheel, an' nuthin' but a thick skull saved him."

"Then there were eleven in the party. What do you suppose has become of the others aboard the Namur?"

"I dunno, sir; they might be a waitin' out there in fog. Perhaps the nigger cud tell you."

I crossed over to where the fellow sat on a grating, his head in his hands, the girl still clinging to my sleeve, as though fearful of being left alone. The man was a repulsive brute, his face stained with blood, dripping from a cut across his low forehead. He looked up sullenly at our approach, but made no effort to rise.

"Look yere, you black villain," roared Watkins, driving the lesson home with his foot, "don't be a playin' possum yer. Stand up an' answer Mister Carlyle, or yer'll git a worse clip than I give yer afore. Whar is the bloody bark?"

"Pounding her heart out on the rocks yonder," he said civilly, "unless she's sld off an' gone down. To the west, maybe a mile er so."

"What about the crew?"

"They got away in the boats, an' likely mostly are ashore. We were in the last boat launched, and headed out so far ter get 'round a ledge o' rocks we got lost in the fog. Then the mist sorter opened an' give us a glimpse o' yer topsails. We didn't expect no fight, once we got aboard."

"Expected to find something easy, of course? Perhaps it would have been if—what is it you see out there, Simms?"

The seaman, who was standing with hollowed hands shading his eyes, staring forth into the swirling drapery of fog, turned at my call and pointed excitedly.

"There's a bark aground yonder, sir; and it looks like the Namur!"

Even as I crossed the deck to his side the wreaths of obscuring mist seemed to divide, as though swept apart by some mighty hand, and there in the full glow of the sun, a picture in a frame, lay the wrecked vessel. Others saw it as I did, and gave vent to recognition.

"Damned if it ain't the old hooker!"

"She got what was coming to her all right mates."

"And she's lousy with treasure!"

"Come here, Sam! That's the last of the Namur."

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Last of the Namur.

The vessel was plainly a total wreck, rapidly pounding to death on a sharp ledge of rock. Both masts were down, and, lifted as the bow was, it was easy to perceive the deck was in splinters where falling spars and topmasts had crushed their way through. The bows had caught, seemingly jammed in between rocks, the stern sunk deep, with cabin port holes barely above reach of the waves. Not a living thing appeared, on board, and, as the fog slowly drifted away, my eyes could discern no sign of any boat, no evidence of the crew, along the wide sweep of water. A voice aroused me.

"What was it you said, Jack, 'bout treasure on the old hooker? Why not get it afore it's too late?"

"It's thar, all right, Ole," and I knew the speaker to be Haines. "Ain't it, Mr. Carlyle?"

"Yes, lads, there must be money on board, unless those fellows took it with them in the boats. I know of fifty thousand pounds stolen in Virginia, and no doubt there is more than that. The bark is liable to slide off that rock any minute and go down like a stone. What do you say, bulles? Here is a risky job, but a pocket full of gold pieces, if we can get aboard and safely off again. Who'll go across with me?"

There was a babel of voices, the men crowding about me, all else forgotten as greed gripped their imaginations.

"Stand back, lads! I cannot use all of you. Four will be enough. You'll not lose anything of what we bring back; it'll be share and share alike, so fall to, hearties."

I paused an instant to speak to Dorothy, seated on the flag locker, explaining to her swiftly my object in exploring the wreck and pledging myself not to be reckless in attempting to board. I read fear in her eyes, yet she said nothing to dissuade me.

I slipped down a rope and dropped into the boat, taking my place with a steering oar at the stern, and we shot away through the green water. The Namur proved to be a more complete wreck than our distant view had revealed, and lying in a more precarious position. It was no pleasant job getting aboard, but ordering Haines to accompany me, and the others to lie by, I made use of a dangling backstay, and thus hauled myself up to a reasonably secure footing. The fellow joined me breathless, and together we perched on the rail to gain view of the deck.

It was a distressing, hopeless sight, the vessel rising before us like the roof of a house, the deck planks stove in, a horrid jumble of running rigging, booms and spars, blocking the way forward. There were three bodies tangled in the wreckage within our sight, crushed out of all human resemblance, and the face of a negro, caught beneath the ruins of the galley, seemed to grin back at me in death. Every timber groaned as the waves struck and rocked the sodden masts, and I had no doubt but that the vessel had already broken in two.

Bigger and Heavier Hen Fruit.

It is thought by naturalists that the eggs of domestic hens of the present day are larger and heavier by nearly a third than those of the hens of the ancients. Eggs differ a good deal in weight, the average weight being about two ounces. A good egg is made up of ten parts shell, 60 parts white and 30 parts yolk. The white of an egg contains 86 per cent water. The shell contains about 2 per cent animal matter and 1 per cent of the phosphates of lime and magnesia, the rest consisting of carbonate of lime. Half the various specimens of snakes lay eggs. Instead of shell the covering of the egg is a tough, white, leathery substance. The largest egg of any bird today is the ostrich egg.

DAIRY FACTS

BETTER LIVE STOCK DESIRED

Authentic Incidents Related Showing What May Be Expected From Improved Methods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The following authenticated incidents are cited by the United States department of agriculture in its "Better Stock—Better Stock" campaign to show what American farmers and stockmen may expect through improved methods of breeding and handling animals.

One Cow Equals Five.—A New Jersey boy was influenced to buy a high-grade cow for $155. The cow on freshening gave 24 quarts of milk and kept it up for a long period. The father owned five cows, the average for the neighborhood. They were fresh in the spring. Their product did not equal the product of the cow owned by the son—five times the labor and five times the feed, in comparison with one good cow.

High-Class Bully Beef.—An Oklahoma farmer had two registered Short-horn yearling bulls that he priced at $100 each for breeding purposes. A butcher saw the bulls, asked the price, but learned that they were registered and that it would take $100 each to buy them. He bought them, killed them, and stated that they were the cheapest cattle he had bought for some time, because they cut the better kinds of beef and more of it.

Valuable Stock—Valuable Offspring.—In several counties of North Carolina more purebred live stock has been purchased during the past year at the higher prices which have prevailed than in any other year. Hogs were never so high, and yet hundreds of boys bought purebred pigs at high prices with the expectation of selling their offspring. Through the county agents many hundreds of pigs bred by the boys have been sold at good prices and this is stimulating the extension of purebred hogs.

Better Poultry—More Meat.—In a southern community, following the introduction of well-bred poultry for breeding, there was noticeable improvement in the size of the next generation of the fowls. The average weight of the birds marketed was 25 per cent greater than previously, according to the observation of an experienced poultry buyer.

CHEAP FLY PAINT FOR COWS

Formula Given by Expert of Kansas Agricultural College—Apply It With Brush When Cool.

It is often cheaper and easier to buy the mixture rather than make it for a few cows, but if you want to make it yourself here is the formula as given by George A. Dean, professor of entomology in the Kansas Agricultural college:

For cattle use two parts of pulverized resin, one part of soap shavings, one-half part of water, one part of kerosene, one part oil of tar, one part fish oil, three parts water.

In making this boil the resin, soap and one-half part of water until the resin is dissolved and then add the three parts water, oil of tar, kerosene and fish oil, and boil well for 15 minutes, being careful to keep the mixture well stirred. Put it on with a brush when cool. In using this mixture it will be necessary to make an application every day for two or three days, and after this once every three or five days is sufficient.

ADVISABLE TO SKIM CREAM

Saving Can Be Accomplished by Turn of Screw and Is Well Worth Effort Required.

In skin ming a hundred pounds of 85 per cent cream 15 more pounds of skim milk is kept on the farm than when the same amount of 20 per cent cream is taken. This saving can be accomplished by a turn of the cream screw, and at present feed prices is well worth the effort required. More skim milk on the farms also means more calves raised to furnish meat and milk for all. Milk producers are paid for the butterfat in cream, not for the water and other constituents. This makes it advisable to skim a rich cream, so that as much valuable skim milk as possible may be saved for feeding purposes.

EVERY VISITOR TO THE FIELD OF WATERLOO KNOWS THE LION MOUND

September, 1830." I could not ask for a more authoritative corroboration of my view that the Lion Mound is a monument to Dutch megalomania without any reference to Britons or Belgians whatever. Certainly the Belgians would never have thought of erecting such a memorial to themselves, and as to this country, it is not its way.

It is quite clear, then, that the mere reversal of the lion's position affords no adequate solution to the problem of satisfying those French sentiments which M. Saligne expressed 90 years ago, and which I do not doubt are still entertained. Once the matter is taken into consideration, there can be no dispute that the position and the pose of the lion are offensive and provocative to the French people, who, on three historic occasions in less than a century, have contributed of their best and bravest to the saving of Belgian independence.

WORKS OF ART PRESERVED

Art World Interested in Uncovering of Old Paintings in the Mosque of Saint Sophia.

An important result that may be looked for whenever Constantinople and the mosque of St. Sophia pass from under the control of the Turks is the verification of a belief, not generally known, that the interior walls of the building still hold in practically perfect condition the ornamentation with which the Byzantine artists decorated them, says a writer in Christian Science Monitor. The statement is made with convincing detail by the Italian architect, Fossati, who was employed by Sultan Abd-ul-Mejid to put the mosque in complete repair. To do this work Fossati removed the matting that lined the walls and took down the huge disks, covered with Arabic inscriptions, that here and there ornamented them; and behind these coverings he found the work of the ancient Byzantines. Hagia Sophia, taken by the Turks in 1453, was converted to their own uses by the addition of minarets and by covering the walls, the religion of its new possessors forbidding them to make or destroy any picture or statue of man. Fossati, with the ancient glories of the Christian edifice temporarily uncovered, made the notes for his book, and painted colored facsimiles of some of the mosaics; then he sealed them from view by replacing the coverings.

He Might.

In summer time the boy scouts roll down their socks and follow the Scottish custom of cool knives. Down at Camp Kinneua, in Sullivan county, the scout executive, who is both very tall and very boyish, follows the custom of his boys. It is picturesque and the grown-up visitors understand it, but the other night a tiny girl did not. She stared at the executive most of the time of her visit. Then when the family started home she turned to her father. "The chief of the scouts is terribly tall, isn't he?" she asked.

"Yes," answered mother.

"I suppose other men's pants would be too short for him," she continued. "But don't you believe that if he saved up a lot of money, mother, he could find a pair long enough for Sundays so his knees wouldn't show?"—Indianapolis News.

Detects Concrete Defects.

An x-ray outfit for inspecting concrete ships is stated by A. C. Freeman to weigh about 90 pounds. The radiographs taken by the apparatus are expected to show whether the concrete mixture has been kept uniform and compact; to detect any holes or voids in the structure; and to reveal any displacement of the reinforcing material. Such defects, when brought to notice in time, can be remedied before the work is completed.

Blank Expressions.

Flatbush—I see a recent invention is a hand telephone with a push button on one side with which telegraphing can be done.

Bensonhurst—Good! Now when the voice with a smile tells you the line is still busy, you can use the telegraph button and make a number of blank marks. The owner of the voice with a smile will know what the blanks mean, all right.

Doomed.

Moving Picture Actor—If you don't soon give me a "part" that has a larger salary connected with it, I shall die of starvation.

Director—If you don't die in the next scene you won't even have a "part."

CEMETERY ASSOCIATION

A fine piece of work was done the past week when the Rowe Hedley Cemetery Association was organized. Some days ago a committee was appointed, consisting of J. R. Boston, Claude Nash, J. W. Luttrell, S. L. Adamson, J. S. Beach, W. I. Rains and C. F. Doherty, whose duty it was to devise ways and means for getting the cemetery cleaned and keeping it in good order.

They agreed on plans, and a meeting was held Monday evening at which organization was perfected. J. R. Boston was elected chairman, C. F. Doherty secretary-treasurer. It was decided to make a personal solicitation for funds needed, and the following finance committee was named: Ben Kempson, chairman; S. L. Adamson, D. C. Moore, W. E. Luttrell, Mrs. S. L. Adamson.

Every citizen should subscribe to this fund, cheerfully and generously. It's too bad that so few of us have taken any interest in this matter, and we should neglect it no longer. If the committee doesn't see you, look them up, or send your check to C. F. Doherty, treasurer.

QUICK! YOUR HAIR NEEDS "DANDERINE"

Check ugly dandruff! Stop hair coming out and double its beauty

A little "Danderine" cools, cleanses and makes the feverish, itchy scalp soft and pliable; then this stimulating tonic penetrates to the furnished hair roots, revitalizing and invigorating every hair in the head, thus stopping the hair falling out, or getting thin, dry or fading.

After a few applications of "Danderine" you seldom find a fallen hair or a particle of dandruff, besides every hair shows new life, vigor, brightness, more color and thickness.

A few cents buys a bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter.—Adv.

Rich and Warm for Winter

The Fashion Show, which is more correctly called a style promenade, is an established institution now. Garments for all the seasons, spring, summer, autumn and winter make their debut at these promenades, when practiced and keen eyes pass upon their merits and the acid tests of the buyers send them on their way to success—or relegate them to oblivion. New fabrics, new silhouettes, new style features have their tryouts at these promenades and the questions, as to what is to be presented to the public, are settled by those who seem to have an intuition in the matter of coming fashions.

Two striking garments that challenged comparisons at a recent style promenade in New York, are shown above. They invite attention to new style features that have made a success and have an assured future. Wool velvet, which goes by several names, with fur for trimming, is the fabric used in them and their lines indicate what is acceptable to American women. At the left of the picture there is a handsome top coat in a very dark gray with cross-bars in white, which is a new adventure in velvet coatings. A photograph cannot convey the smartness and richness of this material, but it sets forth plainly the style of the luxurious and practical garment. It has a wide muffer collar and deep cuffs of caracul fur and a narrow belt of the velvet that buttons at the sides in the most unobtrusive manner. Aside from the interest that centers in the novelty of the material used in this coat, the wide, bias band of the goods which appears to be buttoned around the front of it about eight inches above the bottom, seized the attention of spectators and was credited with being a fine bit of cleverness in designing.

Paris took kindly to tailored suits this season and has furnished us with models that have a distinctly French flavor. They are less plain and less simple than the usual American creations and certain of our own designers have adopted the French ideas. But Paris decreed the very short skirt and America rejected it, and for once Paris changed its decree. We agree on longer skirts and two-third length coats and have a fine example of these features in the velvet suit shown at the right of the picture. It is at least reminiscent of the Russian blouse, having all the verve and style of that persistent inspiration.

Fine Feathers Are Back

The powers that be in the world of millinery have made a league in favor of feathers for trimming winter hats. Having decided that the mid-winter hat should be characteristic of the mid-winter season and bear little resemblance to its predecessors for fall, the designers have evidently settled on feathers as the great feature of the styles. Ostrich has come back and endless wings, cockades and fancy feathers are fluttering across the millinery horizon.

Ostrich, curled and uncurled, reappears to such advantage that we all wonder how fashion could ever have banished it. Yet it was absent for several seasons. Soft quills and long sprays of artificial sages sweep and swirl about brims. There is a great vogue for shaggy, ragged effects, with eagle feathers and burnt goose in turbulent, unsymmetrical arrangements about brims and crowns. Then there are angle long feathers and the most brilliant and precise wings to contradict what seems the careless placing of the scraggy feathers. It will take a season to tell all the stories of feathers.

Most are of welcome from many quarters, are the beautifully made wings and montures like those shown in two of the hats pictured above. Besides these there are some small shapes entirely covered with feathers and among them appear turbans in which groups of tiny wings spring out about the hat like small bouquets of feathers.

The hat at the center of the group has a narrow drooping brim covered with shirred velvet and a coronet of the same across the front. A pair of wings joined by a breast make an effective ornament set in behind the velvet coronet and sweeping in graceful lines backward. The feather band, terminating in wings in the hat below, is used on velvet or feather covered turbans. In this case the turban is covered with small, soft feathers and the wing at the left side is considerably larger than that at the right. These hats, made of or trimmed with rich feathers, placed in many eccentric ways, are suited to matrons and mature women.

For young women and girls the tam of velvet shown at the left of the picture has a place in all representative displays of millinery.

CHILLS, COLDS, FEVERISHNESS

Black-Draught Is Used by Virginia Lady for Colds, Fever and Other Troubles With Fine Results.

Rocky Mount, Va.—Miss Mae Chitwood, of this place, recently stated: "I have used Black-Draught for colds and stomach trouble and certainly have found it very satisfactory."

When I would feel bad and feverish, as though I was taking a fresh cold, I would make a good cup of Black-Draught tea and it would soon set me all right.

I can recommend it as a splendid laxative and gladly do so. You may publish my statement."

When you feel chilly, tired, feverish, headachy and fear that you are taking cold, take a good dose of the old, reliable, liver medicine you have heard so much about—Thedford's Black-Draught. It is made from purely vegetable ingredients, acts in a gentle, natural way, and by helping to drive out poisonous waste matter from your system, it will often, if taken in time, prevent a chill from developing into a cold.

Thousands of people, during the past 70 years, have found Black-Draught of benefit in such cases.

Try it, the next time you chill or sneeze.—Adv.

Any girl can paint her own portrait several years in advance by getting her mother to pose as the model.

Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezons costs only a few cents.

With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezons" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!—Adv.

Mahogany Trees. Mahogany trees do not grow in clusters, but are found scattered throughout forests and hidden in dense undergrowth.

Many persons imagine that Worms or Tape-worm cannot be gotten rid of entirely. Those who have used "Dead Shot"—Dr. Peary's Vermifuge, know that they can. Adv.
