VOL. X

HEDLEY, DONLEY COUNTY, TEXAS, JUNE 18, 1920

NO. 31

W. E. Reeves left Monday on a combined business and pleasure trip to Marlin and Rotan, and he may go on to Galveston and other points.

Mrs. John Bidwell and little son, after a several weeks visit to relatives here, returned last Saturday night to their home at Whitesboro.

WARREN FOR ASSESSOR

It gives The Informer man much pleasure to announce this week the candidacy of his young friend, Harry Warren, for the office of Tax Assessor of Donley county, subject to the action of the Democratic primary in July.

We have known Harry since his "short pants" days, worked six or seven years with him in his father's printshop, and can testify that he is a young man of unusual ability, a gentleman, and the possessor of energy and determination to put anything over that he thinks ought to be put over.

Mr. Warren is one of Donley county's war heroes. He went across with the 38th Division, as a sergeant in the company organized in Clarendon. He is said to have shown unusual courage and daring in action, and as a result suffered desperate wounds. Harry's war record is good enough to elect him—if he chose to run on it. But he doesn't. We have disobeyed instructions in making mention of it. He wants the voters to consider only his fitness for the office. And since, in addition to his natural ability, he has recently finished a thorough course in business training, we opine that he would find small difficulty in performing the duties of the office to the satisfaction of all concerned.

PASTURAGE—I have good grass for about 20 head of stock. Plenty of water.

S. W. Smith.

B. W. M. W.

Quite a good number present, and a real fine lesson from our Question Book. Some business items were discussed; one was that we are to get new song books for the church. And such a lovely surprise was given us by our pastor and wife, Brother and Sister Orrick, who served delicious cake and fruit punch. We were sure glad to be there. And we could not forget to make mention of the favors we had in some excellent musical soles.

Don't forget to be with us next Monday. Program is as follows: Subject: Christian Education. Song. Scripture reading. Wisdom—Mrs. Kinsey. Knowledge—Mrs. Raney. Song. Prayer—Mrs. Bird. Value of Education for Life's Work—Mrs. Mobley.

The Right of Every Child to Have a Good Education—Mrs. Mann, Mrs. Kennedy.

Open Discussion: Why Have State Schools? led by Mrs. Hillburn. Why Have Denominational Schools? led by Mrs. P. C. Johnson. Why Baptist Schools? led by Mrs. Orrick.

CHRISTIAN REVIVAL

There will be a series of meetings held at the Tabernacle, beginning the first Lord's Day in July, conducted by State Evangelist A. K. Scott.

Remember the date. Everybody cordially invited to attend.

MRS. SMITH DEAD

Last Thursday evening word came to Hedley that Mrs. P. A. Smith had died that morning at McKinney, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frankie Holland, the cause of her death being apoplexy.

Mrs. Smith was one of the oldest settlers in the Panhandle, having had charge of the postoffice at Rowe for a number of years. She was loved by all who knew her, and was a good Christian woman, having been a member of the Baptist church for many years. None can ever know how she helped to strengthen the young Christians by her life, as it was ever telling for her Master. She was always encouraging the young people to live a life of service.

She leaves one son and two daughters and a host of friends to mourn her death. But we know we shall meet her on the other shore. Let this note bear to her children the assurance of true sympathy from us, who commend you in your sorrow to the care of the Infinite Father who fain would be your strength and comfort now, and at last wipe away all tears.

We miss thee from our home, dear mother

We miss thee from thy place,
A shadow o'er our life is cast—

We miss the sunshine of thy face.

We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care,

Our home is dark without thee,
We miss thee everywhere.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord
When love has bound the heart,

'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the words—
Must we forever part?

Dearest loved one, we have laid thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace

But thy memory will be cherished
Till we see thy heavenly face.

A Friend.

NAZARENE CHURCH

There will be Sunday School at the Nazarene church each Sunday. Preaching second and fourth Sundays, morning and night. You are invited to come and worship with us. Our services of late have been good, and each one present seemed to enjoy them splendidly.

We want to keep it on the minds of Informer readers that our meeting will begin July 23rd and continue until August 3rd. Brother and Sister Irick of Pilot Point will do the preaching. We are planning to buy a large tent for the Hedley and Amarillo meetings, and we trust these will be times of great refreshings from the presence of the Lord. We expect to have some of our best workers for these meetings, and expect to run at Amarillo for about four weeks, beginning August 8th. We want those who pray to make these meetings a special object of prayer, and try to be with us.

CALOMEL

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which starts your liver just as surely as calomel, but doesn't make you sick and can not salivate. Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless. Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.—Adv.

ALL OF FAMILY NOT THERE WOULD HAVE TO CALL EARLY

How Many of Spaniard's Daughters Were Missing Had to Be Left to the Imagination.

In Spain, and particularly in the province of Andalusia, families are so large that even Theodore Roosevelt would have been appalled.

Hamilton Fyfe, the well-known writer, was touring Andalusia on horseback one winter and went the night in a fonda near Los Baliches.

At dinner over his hominy soup, Mr. Fyfe was amazed to see the multitude of daughters that the innkeeper possessed.

"You have a fine, a very fine family of daughters there," he said.

"Ah, señor," said the innkeeper, "we've been very unfortunate with our daughters. During a 1917 terral, the chimney fell in and killed all but eleven of them."

Males Outnumber Females. The latest available compilation shows the United States to be one of the four leading countries in the world where the male population outnumbers the female. The proportion of females to each thousand males is as follows: United States, 934; England, 1,068; Germany, 1,025; France, 1,033.

Lots of women would make secret gifts to charity if they could only keep the secret.

Indianapolis Man Learned Something When He Set Out to Buy Second-Hand Auto.

Bob Devericks, head of the manuscript department, state board of education, tells a good one about two automobiles and a man of the people. Says Bob:

"I thought I'd try to pick up a second-hand automobile and enjoy some of the delights of the rich, and so began scanning the 'for sale' columns of the newspapers. I saw an advertisement that told about a Ford sedan only slightly used and for sale at a reasonable price.

"I called the telephone number given. A woman answered the call. She said her brother had advertised the machine; that he had bought the Ford to use while he was having his National painted. I told her I'd call the next morning and talk to the brother and received the reply:

"Well, I don't know whether you can get him unless you call very early. He leaves at five o'clock, because he drives a milk wagon."

PRETTY DRESS FOR JUNE BRIDESMAID

A PRETTY and conservative dress of net and net-top lace, to be worn over a colored underslip, is an American design that will commend itself to the bridesmaid at a June wedding. This same dress with white underslip, will interest the bride who does not want a conventional wedding dress, but does wish to be married in white, requiring only that her frock be pretty and then practical enough to do her some good after the wedding. There are many white dresses—of georgette, voile, crepe-de-chine, net or organza that such a bride may choose and lace of some kind is nearly always a part of them. In making a selection for a bride one must remember to look for dignified designs, but for bridesmaids this is not so important. The dress shown above has an underskirt of plain net with a wide hem. Over this there is a tunic of lace founcing and over this again, set on at the sides, pointed drapery of plain net, with a narrow frill at the top. The lace is used for the kimono bodice filled in at front and back with a "V" shaped piece of tucked net. The three-quarter length sleeves are finished with pointed flounces of net edged with narrow Irish lace and the girdle is made of wide satin ribbon. For a bridesmaid the girdle will be in the color used for the underslip and will be pretty if finished with a large flat blossom made of the ribbon. There is nothing prettier or more practical than taffeta in light, flower-like colors for bridesmaids' dresses and they are enchanting when quaint styles are chosen for them and scarfs or fichus of tulle worn with them. It is in her maid's frocks that the American bride follows the lead of fancy. There is nothing like taffeta for freshness and sprightliness. Sometimes it serves as a foundation for much airy tulle drapery and flowers simply belong to it, possessing kindred charms. There is every chance of success when taffeta is chosen for bridesmaids and the gay frock at the wedding begins its journey along the primrose path of festivities and parties.

Hats for Summer Wear

MILLINERS and millinery departments are featuring new displays of hats made for midsummer wear and calling attention to the distinctive character of this headwear. The spring hat makes its appearance very early, helping to beguile us with thoughts of bright and balmy days that usually lag far behind their cheerful harbinger.

The new displays for summer wear include hats for all occasions as may be gathered by a glance at the millinery pictured above. Here are street and dress hats with an example of a sport model. The most unusual hat in the group is made of plain and of brocade, georgette with slipper straw and piping braid contributing the unexpected but effective touches in its composition. The crown is of plain georgette with three rows of piping braid stitched about it, the brim of brocade georgette, built up with several rows of slipper straw about the and at intervals on the straw, flat, feather ornaments traverse the top of the braid. One can imagine handsome, semi-dress affair in desirable colors, but it needs no imagination to conclude that this is a difficult hat to make, an example of painstaking and beautiful artistry for which one must be willing to pay the price. A soft hat made of hem-stitched silk shirred to a flexible foundation represents the sort of sports hat that is making itself at home everywhere. For the off-the-face brim and lower part of the crown the silk is shirred in close rows. What milliners call a "tight" rose is made of folds of silk and posed at the front. A handsome tailored model of Milan has a crown of georgette. It is a clever off-the-face shape, spirited and becoming and is smartly trimmed with a wing at the right side. Bearing it company as a representative of the great company of street hats there is a small, high crowned sailor shape, with brilliant slipper straw applied to it—one of many such substantial looking and snappy models.

A PLAIN STATEMENT OF FACTS

We are NOT reducing prices on our clothing.

Our goods were marked at the beginning of the season to sell at a closer margin than ever before, at a profit less than that exacted by most stores, and the values we offer compared with wholesale prices of today's market are very remarkable.

If a merchant has been asking too much for his merchandise, he is perfectly justifiable in lowering prices, for the United States Government thru the "Fair Price" Commissioner of the State of Texas has fixed the profits of every retail clothing merchant in Texas, and has promised the people of this State that he would put every clothing merchant in the Federal prison for profiteering who violated these regulations.

These regulations did not affect our regular prices.

"I was so bad off with kidney trouble I had to give up my work as engineer," says J. B. Hagless, 210 West 60th Street, Chicago, Ill. "My back gave out completely. It was as weak as if it were broken. Often I tossed and turned the whole night long. I became dizzy and would have to grab the nearest object to keep from falling. At times the kidney secretions hardly passed at all, while again they would be profuse and oblige me to arise time and time again. The urine burned cruelly. I lost twenty-five pounds in weight; and I had taken so many things without relief I became discouraged; in fact, I was told there was no help for me."
"At last I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, and they made a new man of me. It wasn't any time before I was back to normal weight and had passed a life insurance examination, without any trouble. Over twelve years have since gone by and my kidney cure is still permanent."

ZION—Beautiful and Mysterious

Sinawava Temple on the Floor of the Canon.

ZION NATIONAL PARK—The newest of the national park system, established last November—is likely to have many visitors this season. Some will go because it is new. Others will go because of the claim of Utah that Zion equals Yosemite in beauty of form and far exceeds it in beauty of color. And still others will go because of the story of a mysterious cliff-dwelling that has been discovered—and is believed to be inaccessible and untouched by the hand of modern man. Moreover, a second canon, with many ramifications, has been discovered in Zion National Park. White men have been in it—or at least have looked down into it from the plateau thousands of feet above—but they are few. And who knows what relics of the mysterious prehistoric people of the great American Southwest these unexplored canons may contain?

Exploration parties are already getting ready in Salt Lake City and Los Angeles. It's no wonder. The story of the discovery of the inaccessible cliff-dwellings is one to whet the interest of the keenest mountaineer. Thus the story goes:

Eyre Powell of Venice, Calif., pointed his telephoto lens at a high perpendicular cliff in a side canon about three-quarters of a mile away and squeezed the bulb. A certain quarter of an inch in the print attracted his attention. He enlarged it as much as possible. It then showed what is apparently a cliff-dwelling something like 400 feet long and 60 feet wide. The cliff-dwelling is in a shallow cave about 400 feet above the talus at the foot of the cliff. Below it are apparently traces of ledges once used as an ascent and now almost eroded by the elements. Hence it is a fair guess that this particular cliff-dwelling has been unvisited since modern men entered this region.

And if this mysterious, long-hidden abode of the Cliff-dwellers proves to be a reality and is reached by some daring climber, will it yield something new? That of course is the question that adds zest to the quest. For, though here and there are archaeologists who believe they have solved the mystery of the prehistoric people, it looks to the common people as if the scientists were still guessing at the answers to the questions: Who are they? How long did they live there? What became of them? So the possibility that this Zion Cliff-dwellers' inaccessible refuge, untouched by the hand of the spoiler, may contain something that will throw light on these unanswered questions is fascinating.

Curiously enough, the many relics of this prehistoric people throw little or no light on these questions. This is the more strange, since the village sites of the ancient inhabitants, with all the accessories of village life—kivas, shrines, burial places, fields, irrigation works, lookouts, stairways—preserve a pretty complete picture of life in this ancient Southwest. Moreover, buried under the debris of buildings and in the graves of the dead are various artifacts of stone, bone, wood, fiber and clay, which indicate the industrial and domestic life of the people. Ceremonial objects, such as pipes, fetiches and medicine stones, together with the symbolic ornamentation of stucco and mortuary pottery, give a picture of the social and religious life of the people.

As are above ground objects thoroughly examined, a surprising variety has been found. In the temple, there are many of which those in Mesa Verde park in southwestern Colorado are probably the finest in all the Southwest.

excavations with a front of masonry. Others are complete houses on a sloping talus, with excavated rooms at the back.

In the Hovenweep region on both sides of the Colorado-Utah line and between Mesa Verde and Zion—this area is likely to be established as the Hovenweep National monument—are many remarkable towers of varying shape. The archeologists consider them among the most interesting and important of the prehistoric relics.

Casa Grande National monument in the Gila valley of south central Arizona contains Casa Grande—Great House—which was discovered in 1897 by the Spanish. It was even then a burned-out, dismantled group of walls. It was plastered within and without. It was probably the last of an indefinite number of such houses, as all around it are the ruins of older structures.

Excavation in this prehistoric Southwest is only beginning. The results have attracted the attention of archeologists the world over. Possibly the most important work to date is that of Dr. J. Walter Fewkes of the Smithsonian Institution in Mesa Verde. There he has excavated and restored in part the temple of the sun and Far View house. These are large and pretentious structures on the mesa above the cliff-dwellings. They are apparently buildings for religious ceremonies. It is guessed that they were abandoned about 1300 years ago.

The archeologists are confident that sooner or later they will find something that will answer one or more of the three great questions about this mysterious people of the American Southwest. Will they find it some such ruin as Casa Grande beneath the dust of centuries or will it come to light in some cliff-dwelling now unknown and untouched by vandal hands, such as those suspected to exist in the unexplored depths of Zion?

PARIS LANDMARK MUST GO

House of Robespierre Forced to Give Way to March of City Improvement.

The Paris correspondent of The London Times writes: The house where Robespierre is said to have lived, or, at any rate, passed several nights, is to follow the way of many reminders of the past in the general scheme for improving Paris.

This handsomely fronted building is situated in the Cite du Retiro, an antiquated backwater between the Madeleine and the Faubourg Saint Honore, which was overlooked when this quarter was brought up to date. The tenants of the prince of Monaco, to whom the district belongs, have been given notice, but the demolition probably will be postponed for a few years, owing to the action of the law which permits the owners of condemned property to continue using it for five years.

The capital will soon be very much improved, and all slums will disappear in accordance with the general scheme for fattening out the fortifications and allowing the city to undergo natural expansion. With this object the underground railway lines are to be extended far into the country, with two proposed terminals at St. Germain and Maisons Laffite. The Metropolitan railway reaching the latter will greatly ease the strain upon the ordinary railways on race days.

Great Britain's Whites and Blacks.
In the British empire there are 62,000,000 white and 376,000,000 colored people. The 62,000,000 white represent capital wealth amounting to $500,000,000,000, as against the $5,000,000,000 possessed by the black, brown and yellow people. The degree of illiteracy among the white people, according to Sir Henry Johnson, is probably not more than 15 per cent; among the colored races it is nearly 90 per cent.

MODERN STABLE FOR DAIRY FARM

Sanitary and Healthful Home for Herd of Cows.

SILOS PRESERVE FRESH FEED

Sunlight, Fresh Air and Warmth, Three Things That Make Cows Productive and Healthy Are Provided For.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building works on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 137 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Now that spring is fast turning into summer, it is time for the owner of the modern dairy farm to begin to plan the new buildings he may need to house his herd next winter. For it is an undisputed fact that a modern, sanitary, weather-tight and well-ventilated cow stable and barn is one of the greatest profit producers for the owner of a dairy herd.

Summer is the time farmers are required to build new buildings or remodel the old ones, for in the warm weather the stock takes care of themselves and building operations can go on without inconvenience. However, the quicker the farmer gets his plans and arranges for the construction of the buildings he wants the better.

The advantages and good features of modern dairy barns and cow stables have been pointed out in these articles numerous times, but they are so important to the man who wants to get the maximum of profit from his herd that they will bear repetition many times.

Sunlight, fresh air and warmth are the three things that make cows productive and healthy. And nature furnishes all three without charge. The dairy herd owner, however, has to supply the building in which nature's gifts may be conserved and put to work for the profit of the dairyman.

A cow stable designed to house the herd in the most profitable way is shown in the accompanying illustration. This is a one-story cow stable, designed so that the milk producers will be kept warm and comfortable in winter, will be supplied with plenty of fresh air, and their surroundings will be sanitary.

The building is 102 feet long and 38 feet wide, and is of frame construction set on a concrete foundation. This building is what is known as the "monitor" type, taking its name from the shape of the roof. Along the side walls of the building are 26 windows, 13 on each side, while in the monitor part of the roof there are as many more windows, equally distributed on either side.

These windows are one of the most important features of the building. In the first place they face the east and west, so that whenever the sun is shining in the winter the building interior gets the full effect of it. Cows provide their own warmth in winter, and the better they are protected the less heat they throw off. Heat is produced by the food the animals consume. So it can be realized that the less food required to produce heat, the more food will go toward milk production. That is what a weather-tight warm cow stable does toward increasing milk production. The feed the animals consume goes to milk rather than to produce heat to keep the cows warm.

The sunlight admitted by the many windows also has a purifying effect on the air in the barn. It will be noted by consulting the floor plan that the 34 stalls are grouped in four blocks and that the animals face the center of the building. This arrangement throws the alleys on either side of the stalls, where they get the full benefit of the sunlight. When it is sunny the animals face the sun.

method of arranging the equipment so that the work can be done easily and quickly is used in the modern dairy barn. Also numerous pieces of labor-saving equipment are installed.

The stall partitions usually are of steel, set into the concrete floor. These partitions are easily kept clean and sanitary. The floors of the stalls are either of concrete or some of the less hard floor materials, such as cork brick or wood block. Back of each stall is a gutter, which permits the refuse to be washed to a drain whence it is piped to a liquid manure tank.

Overhead is a carrier track running over both the litter alleys at the sides of the stable and over the feeding alley through the center of the building. The carrier that is hung to the track provides a means by which the litter can be removed to the manure pits at the rear of the stable and by which the food can be distributed to the stall head.

Drinking cups, which are connected to the pipes from the water pressure system are located at the stall head, one cup for each two cows. These drinking cups or bowls are ingenious devices. They have a valve in them that turns on the water as the cows press down their muzzles, and shuts off the water as the cows raise their heads. Careful watch has been kept on cows in stables where there are drinking cups, and it has been recorded that there is little time in either the day or night when one or more of the animals are not drinking. Records of milk production in the same stables show that where there is a continuous supply of fresh water, the animals give from 10 to 20 per cent more milk.

Fresh feed during the winter is another important thing for profitable dairy farm operation. At the end of the stable shown in the illustration there are two silos, which combined have sufficient capacity to provide the animals this building will house with fresh feed all through the cold months when the cows are inside.

It is in such stables as this one that present-day dairy farmers are housing their herds and are making them a great deal more profitable investment than under the old conditions. A modern dairy barn or cow stable will pay for itself in increased revenue in a few years.

KEROSENE LAMPLIGHT BEST

Efficiency of the Eye Declared to Be Best When a Yellow Flame Is Used.

There has long been an impression that yellow light is more agreeable to the eye than that containing chiefly the green and blue rays, and it is generally believed, for example, by many medical and technical men that the kerosene flame produces a more "restful" light than other illuminants, especially than incandescent solids.

This supposition has been submitted to careful tests by C. E. Ferree and G. Rand, and the results have appeared in the Transactions of the Illuminating Engineering Society, remarks the Scientific American Monthly. The experiments have compared the kerosene flame with the light from the carbon incandescent lamp, the Mazda lamp and with Welsbach mantles containing various amounts of ceria, and therefore varying in yellowness. The standard of comparison is the efficiency of the eye as determined by the ratio of time during which steadily observed type is clear or blurred.

The results obtained from numerous careful, prolonged experiments indicate that there is some justification for this impression, as they indicate that the efficiency of the eye diminishes more rapidly with light from the metal filament than with that from kerosene, and decreasing yellowness in Welsbach mantles also diminishes this efficiency of the eye. The authors, however, are not yet prepared to state positively that yellow light is better than white, but merely that yellow is better than green.

MAKING MILK DISEASE-FREE

Thriving Vermont Municipality is First Small City to Adopt Strict Regulations.

Barre, Vt., a thriving municipality of about 15,000, is the first small city in the United States which requires dairymen furnishing it with milk to place their herds under federal-state supervision for the eradication of tuberculosis. The result has been accomplished by close and persistent cooperation on the part of the mayor and other municipal authorities, the United States department of agriculture, the state commissioner of agriculture, the local veterinarian.

Eradication of tuberculosis was begun in a thoroughly systematic manner. The regulations of the federal bureau of animal industry and of the state commissioner of agriculture were supplemented by a city ordinance. The city provided at its own expense a large barn, in which were assembled all small herds, scattered lots, and individual cows. The city also furnished necessary conveyances, and employed a man who devoted his time to notifying owners when to bring their cattle in for test, assigning them stalls as they came in, and keeping the cattle moving out promptly after tests were completed.

Two hundred and sixteen herds, composed of 2,107 individuals, were tested, and 379 reactors—17.9 per cent of the total—were found. Those reacting to the test were promptly shipped out and slaughtered under federal inspection.

Among the larger cities whose milk is obtained entirely or chiefly from tuberculin-tested cattle that have passed federal and state tests are Birmingham, Ala., and Washington, D. C. In addition, numerous others have ordinances requiring the tuberculin test applied under local supervision.

PROPER MANAGEMENT OF COW

Ration Should Be of Such Kind That Animal Will Be in Good Flesh on Freshening.

During the dry period, the cow should be given a good ration so that she will be in good flesh when she freshens. This will improve the quality as well as the quantity of the milk. Just before freshening the grain ration should not be too heavy and should contain plenty of bran. The boxes should be kept well regulated. If necessary, one to one and one-half pounds of Epsom salts may be used as a drench. The cow should have a period of rest of four to six weeks in order to give the best supply of milk during the period of lactation.

GOOD COWS ARE ECONOMICAL

Animals Provide Cheapest, Best and Most Wholesome Feed—No Way of Doing Without Them.

The first reason for having good milk cows on the farm comes from the fact that they provide the cheapest, best and most wholesome food for the family. Their value is hard to estimate when we consider the amount saved on the hills. Their produce is a superior substitute for many foods necessarily purchased at high prices. In fact, there is no economic way of doing without plenty of good milk cows on the farm.

SILLO HAS MANY ADVANTAGES

Owner Can Carry Maximum Number of Cows and Supply Necessary Succulent Feed.

The farmer who has a silo can carry a maximum number of cows and supply his herd with a palatable, succulent feed of a uniform quality at any time during the year, conditions favorable to a large milk production.

DAIRY NOTES

Use clean bedding only.

In selecting a sire attention must be paid to the average type of females in the herd.

The old country breeders were very careful in the females selected to replenish their herds.

Improvement of the herd comes through the sire. Therefore, make you get a right good one.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. ### Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

The Man Nobody Knew

CHAPTER XIII—Continued.

And Hilliard had all a metropolitan's sensitiveness to the spirit and to the ethics of a men's club. He faltered on the very threshold; and if any other man than Dr. Durant had been his sponsor, he would have fled incontinently, so as not to disturb that rare, indescribable atmosphere which only clubmen understand and respect.

The Doctor was scrutinizing the menu; Hilliard, who faced the window, threw a glance over his shoulder. As he had fancied, the eyes of the room were upon him. They reminded him, oddly enough, of machine-gun batteries.

When at length the pair had gained the table nearest the window, Hilliard felt that he had undergone a strenuous ordeal; he was consumed by gratitude to his implacable host, but he had no inclination to repeat it.

"The table d'hôte's good enough for me," said the Doctor presently. "And you?"

"And for me, too," said Hilliard. "Anything to drink?"

"No, thanks."

The Doctor dropped the card and sat up straighter.

"Well, I won't keep you in suspense—I want some advice. As I said, I'm the worst business man in the world. Hilliard, I'm a mere child in your hands—so please treat me tenderly." He regarded his companion with mingled humor and seriousness. "James Cullen has been telling me about a wonderful plan of yours to make a nice shiny gold eagle grow where only a silver quarter grew before. In fact, he talked so enthusiastically that he's got me thinking about it, too. . . . I rather resent your not telling me about it yourself."

Hilliard recoiled.

"You shouldn't do that," he said. "I . . . I wouldn't have tried to interest you in it, Doctor, because—"

"Oh, I can see your reasons," deprecated the Doctor, smilingly. "You didn't want to trespass on a purely social relationship. I appreciate that. But the point is, I've got a few thousand dollars I don't exactly know what to do with. It's a rather extraordinary situation for a professional man, isn't it? I'll have to admit I'm puzzled about it myself. And the novelty might lead me into temptation. So I thought I'd ask your advice."

"You can have the best I've got," said Hilliard, averted. "But I'm not guaranteeing that it has much value, Doctor."

The Doctor nodded; drummed on the table.

"Do you ever let friendship interfere with business?"

"Often, sir."

"Will you let it interfere now—if you think you're justified?"

"Yes, Doctor. . . . I can promise that much, anyway."

The Doctor showed his approval.

"Well, tell me perfectly frankly—is yours the sort of proposition you'd let a man invest in, if you knew he had precious little money to lose? But if you also knew that he were quite willing to take the same chance as the rest?"

Hilliard shook his head slowly, and continued to shake it as he replied.

"I can't say that it is, Doctor. On the contrary—I don't think it's that sort of proposition at all." Dr. Durant's brows were contracted.

"But in the ordinary run of commerce, Hilliard—suppose the question of friendship didn't enter into this, and I hadn't brought up that subject—would you, in choosing your list of subscribers, and selecting the people you'd like to have share the plan with you, put a man like myself on any different footing than James Cullen? Or wouldn't you?"

"Doctor Durant," Hilliard's voice was slow, "is it possible you haven't heard me . . . the criticism that's been flying around town about this syndicate of mine? Haven't you heard that there's some question whether it's quite sound?"

"I've heard it—yes." The Doctor was amazingly indifferent.

"Well—do you still think this is any time to discuss the possibility of your coming in with us?"

The Doctor's voice was strong, encouraging.

"I think it's the best time, and the only time—for me, that is. I've lived too long to be affected by chance rumors. And besides, I've got the money now."

"Are you sure you know what about? The criticism, I mean." "I know anything about it at all? It's exactly why I'm coming to you. You certainly ought to know more about it than any one else, therefore, I'd take your advice before I'd take the money now. . . ."

"I thought you wouldn't." The Doctor sipped a glass of water thoughtfully. "And that leaves me with seventy-five hundred dollars I still don't know what to do with. Well, if you can think of any reasonable use for it within the next few weeks, let me know, will you? I'll keep it intact until I hear from you."

Something in his tone snatched at Hilliard's heart; he went white as paper.

"Doctor Durant!"

The Doctor smiled slightly. "Any reasonable use, I said. Any form of investment that—" things. So I'm coming to you for your honest opinion, and I know you'll give it to me . . . do you think I'm quite eligible?"

Hilliard's heart was in his mouth. "Why," he stammered, "at this particular time—I can't advise you—"

"Now, don't be too cautious," warned the Doctor. "I'm not asking you if this is the best investment the world has ever seen—I'm asking if it's reasonably safe, as such things go, with a chance of something really good if your best expectations work out as you hope."

Hilliard's throat was dusty, and his reply came with some difficulty.

"In spite of . . . everything, Doctor . . . you'd take my word for it, wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I would, and I've got Cullen and my own daughter to agree with me."

"And for me, too," said Hilliard. "Anything to drink?"

"No, thanks."

The Doctor dropped the card and sat up straighter.

"Well, I won't keep you in suspense—I want some advice. As I said, I'm the worst business man in the world. Hilliard, I'm a mere child in your hands—so please treat me tenderly." The Doctor smiled slightly. "Any reasonable use, I said. Any form of investment that—"

"Doctor Durant . . . if I . . . if I see what you mean . . . I . . . if you're willing to take my advice, why—"

"I'm sixty-three years old," said the Doctor calmly, "and I've made a fool of myself in every conceivable way but one. . . . That's in my own field; I'm a diagnostician. I've watched you very carefully, young man. . . . I think perhaps you need as much advice as I do, of a different variety. So here it is—when you—want encouragement, or a medical prescription, or a good cigar and a chat, or a quiet evening with an old man and a girl who plays the piano rather pleasantly, or seventy-five hundred dollars which you've already shown you won't let me invest unwisely, come and see me. Now, let's drop business. Not another word: I'm tired of it. You're through as an expert; let's get back to old-fashioned friendship. Speaking of coming to see me—Carol's wondering if you're trying to slight her. We've seen very little of you lately? It's a week now, isn't it?"

When, sustained and soothed by that peaceful hour, by the Doctor's trust in his integrity, and by the sedative of a long and untroubled stroll over the hills to eastward, Hilliard returned to the hotel, the room clerk greeted him with faint superciliousness.

"Somebody's been keeping after you on the telephone all morning," he said loftily. "New York call. Couldn't locate you. And here's some telegrams for you. . . ."

There were three of them; at sight of the signature of the first, Hilliard's eyes narrowed.

"Arriving Syracuse 4:15. Please meet me at train and stop all work in the meantime. Imperative."

"HARMON."

Hilliard's eyelids fluttered; this was evidently the initial result of Rufus Waring's efforts, and of those many letters he had written Harmon. He tore open the second envelope; the message was again from the broker, sent obviously from the Grand Central terminal just before train-time.

"Most important news received. Am just leaving, having wired you meet me at station 4:15. Find out who Bob Waring is and what he wants. Do all you can to stave off further inquiry. Absolutely imperative not talk to anyone until I see you. Have contract and all other data with you. Shall have to leave on short notice."

"HARMON."

And the third was from Albany: "Locate Bob Waring if possible and arrange meeting seven tonight. Urgently imperative." "HARMON."

Hilliard folded the three sheets methodically and put them in his pocket. He glanced at his watch; it showed a quarter to four. He had no dependence on Harmon, and no fear of him; he felt no obligation to Harmon, no sense of duty. To be sure, he had a cynic's curiosity to see what was in the middle of the whirlwind, but that of itself wasn't strong enough to send him to a rendezvous with a man he despised and loathed.

"If I go," he said to himself, "I'll be sorry; and if I don't go . . . why, if I don't go, I'll always wonder if it would have done any good!"

For himself, there was nothing promising in the situation. But on the millionth chance that something of benefit to his subscribers might come out of it—the millionth chance that Harmon might be frightened or persuaded into compromise—

So he went.

The very first passenger to reach the platform was Harmon; indeed, he had been fretting in the vestibule for half an hour, intent on vesting a useless fraction of a second when the train stopped. At sight of Hilliard, he beamed beneficently—all his earlier belligerence forgotten.

"Hello!" he said. "Glad to see you, son. Got all my messages, did you?"

He shook hands with great urbanity; Hilliard's grasp was hardly responsive.

"I got three," said Hilliard, dignified and noncommittal; and he continued to inspect his employee with ill-concealed disfavor and distrust.

"Well, that's all I sent. Now, where can we go sit down and talk for a couple of hours? There's a lot to go over, but I want to take the 9:40 West. Not to the Onondaga—I'd rather go somewhere quieter. How about the Kirk?"

"Suits me all right if it does you." "Any luggage?" They were crossing the tracks to the waiting-room; and Hilliard, in spite of himself, couldn't refrain from the solicitude which any right-minded resident of a city feels for the transient just arrived.

"Only this Gladstone. I can check that here, I guess. Well, I'm certainly glad to see you. Say, were you able to make a date with this Waring person? It was pretty short notice, but you're such a live wire—"

Hilliard, fully comprehending the nature of the compliment, smiled faintly. The person of the Gladstone was physically responsive to the unconscious "Not . . . But I've . . . at his . . . heard by name . . ."

and I'll telephone to the information clerk from the Kirk where he can reach me. He's sure to be in around five or half past."

"I hope so." Harmon swung his heavy bag to the brass-lined counter, and tossed out a dime with a philanthropic gesture which made the attendant glare at him. "Who in thunder is he, anyhow?"

Hilliard had reason to be reticent with his facts, and he preferred not to be too specific at the outset.

"He's a law student—an old friend of the Cullens. He's looking after some of their interests, in one way and another."

"Oh! Working up a practice! Well! the way he's bombarding me with fresh letters, you'd think he was on a congressional investigating committee! Say! There's one thing I'd like to find out—how'd he know I'm in the thing? You didn't tell anybody, did you? Our agreement—"

Hilliard was guiding him to the street.

"Why, he probably got hold of your name when he wrote to some law correspondents of his in Butte about the property; and they looked it up for him. I'd judge they must have gone into it rather thoroughly."

"They did! Humph!" The broker's tone held less of rancor and more disappointment than Hilliard would have expected. "And they made an unfavorable report on it, did they?"

"Unfortunately, for you, they did . . . as you very well know."

Harmon turned on him sharply.

"What do you mean 'unfortunately for me'?"

Hilliard turned into a wide doorway.

"We go in here . . . Why, it puts the quietus on any last hope of yours that there's still some business to be done in Syracuse, doesn't it? I should think that's about as plain as daylight."

Harmon's brows went up.

"Wh-a-t?" he said, and then, promptly, "Oh, yes—of course. But you've been such a live wire from start to finish, I thought the harder the proposition, the better you'd—"

"Oh, don't make me wish I hadn't taken the trouble to meet you!" snapped Hilliard. He slipped into the next unoccupied booth; Harmon followed him stupidly. "The thing's done for, and you know it. Don't act so innocent, Mr. Harmon—it isn't becoming to you, and it isn't helpful to me. We are in a position to talk English, I should imagine."

Harmon's eyes were very small and bright.

"What's he been saying around here?"

"Saying it's a fake promotion. What else would he say? He's quite intelligent. That's why it's unfortunate for you, and that's why we don't need to fool ourselves any further— isn't it?"

As Harmon removed his hat, he appeared to be somewhat warmer than the temperature warranted. His round face was now preternaturally blank; but his urbanity had increased until he was on the verge of fawning.

"So he's been giving out a pretty bad story, has he?"

"Only the bare facts. And if you don't know it already, I'll tell you that"

"How do you mean?" Hilliard was averse with hope.

The broker's smile was every moment more broadly ingratiating.

"Why, suppose I should hand you back every cent you've collected and paid in. This is just a suggestion—I want your opinion on it. You go 'round to your subscribers; tell 'em the mine isn't as promising as you thought it was; you're going to make good; give 'em their money back. Now—if you did that and left a first-class impression everywhere, could you start from scratch all over again and sell enough honest-to-goodness conservative stuff—municipals, or like that—to those same people to make up the difference?" He was studying his companion keenly.

Eyes of Plants.

Of course we know that trees have circulation, not of blood but of sap, that goes upward in the spring and downward in the autumn. It has been demonstrated also that plants have eyes, certain epidermal cells being really convex lenses filled with clear sap that brings the light rays to a focus somewhere within the cell. These little lenses are able to . . . images just as the eyes of . . ."

"So He's Been Giving Out a Pretty Bad Story, Has He?"

he's got . . . representative out there on the ground, so that—"

Harmon bit his lip. "A representative? When did that happen?"

"Nearly a week ago. It's about time to hear from him, and then the goose will be cooked."

The broker reflected diligently.

"Haven't seen him today, have you?"

"No; not for nearly a week."

Harmon sat back, and massaged his forehead absent-mindedly.

"Well—has this made much difference to you?"

"How could it help it?" Hilliard grimaced. "This isn't New York or a deaf and dumb asylum; it doesn't have to travel fast through the rounds. Everybody . . . heard by name . . ."

Harmon leaned forward on his elbows, and drew a quick, nervous breath. His eyes, now slightly dilated, sought for Hilliard's, found them, darted away again.

"That's tough . . . mighty tough . . . I . . . I came up here thinking I might do something about it. Save the situation, you know. Too late, is it?"

"A good deal too late."

Harmon exhaled lengthily, and fumbled for his invariable cigarette; Hilliard observed, without particular deduction, that his hands lacked certainty.

"That does sort of burst the bubble, doesn't it? Well . . . I suppose the next step you want to take is to get out of town."

"No," said Hilliard, "I'll stay till it's over with."

Harmon gasped.

"Stay? Stay here after the news is out? What for?"

"I hardly think you'd understand what I'm staying for, Mr. Harmon."

The fat broker shook his head in vigorous protest.

"Now, look here!" His voice was paternally kind. "You've been a fine sport through this whole business, except once, and we won't let that bother us now. As a salesman you've been a holy wonder. You've done all I expected you'd do, or could do, and then some. And your flare-up last time I was here don't hurt you with me one little bit. But here we are at the finish. My suggestion to you is to pack your duds and get out. Call it a day and quit. There's better business somewhere else. And if you'd like to plant yourself in some other good town, say, Detroit, and—"

"No, thanks," Hilliard's smile was out of genuine humor.

"Well, aren't you open to conviction?"

"No, I don't think I am. Please don't argue—that's final."

"Well, you're sure you can't do any more here, aren't you?"

"Not a nickel's worth—even if I wanted to. And would you mind getting down to brass tacks? Otherwise I can't see any benefit to either of us from prolonging this interview; can you?"

Harmon inspected him carefully and seemed to be struck with an inspiration.

"I'm not sure of it, at that. Look here now! I've got an idea! Let's try to get some benefit out of it. Suppose you got clear of this mess. Suppose we straighten it out from top to bottom. Everybody satisfied. Suppose you got out of it absolutely clean; do you think you could take your experience and your front and your energy and cash it on some better business?"

Hilliard exclaimed aloud; he could hardly credit his ears.

"What's that?" he managed. "I don't understand!"

The broker's eyes brightened. "It's easy enough if you put your mind to it. I've told you before," he said impressively, "I'm out for results. That's my middle name—R-E-S-U-L-T-S. And not results from minute to minute, but results in the long run. Now it does seem to me like an awful shame to have you come up here and spend all this time and money flub-dubbing around, and then have it all over with, and nothing to show for it but a lot of belly-aching customers. Of course we've made a little money, but when we let this scheme wind up in a big howl from everybody we've got into it we're losing the cumulative value of you. And it's you that was the backbone of the whole idea. Now—this is only a passing thought, but let's consider it—which way would be the best for us in the long run, to close up this deal and get out from under, and take a little profit and be in Dutch here forever, or to be a couple of philanthropists and play strong for the future?"

"How do you mean?" Hilliard was averse with hope.

The broker's smile was every moment more broadly ingratiating.

"Why, suppose I should hand you back every cent you've collected and paid in. This is just a suggestion—I want your opinion on it. You go 'round to your subscribers; tell 'em the mine isn't as promising as you thought it was; you're going to make good; give 'em their money back. Now—if you did that and left a first-class impression everywhere, could you start from scratch all over again and sell enough honest-to-goodness conservative stuff—municipals, or like that—to those same people to make up the difference?" He was studying his companion keenly.

Eyes of Plants.

Of course we know that trees have circulation, not of blood but of sap, that goes upward in the spring and downward in the autumn. It has been demonstrated also that plants have eyes, certain epidermal cells being really convex lenses filled with clear sap that brings the light rays to a focus somewhere within the cell. These little lenses are able to . . . images just as the eyes of . . ."

The editor of the Eastern Daily News does not have such matters as circulations, high cost of paper, a piece of news he's slabs his b . . . of . . ."

"So He's Been Giving Out a Pretty Bad Story, Has He?"

he's got . . . representative out there on the ground, so that—"

Harmon bit his lip. "A representative? When did that happen?"

"Nearly a week ago. It's about time to hear from him, and then the goose will be cooked."

The broker reflected diligently.

"Haven't seen him today, have you?"

"No; not for nearly a week."

Harmon sat back, and massaged his forehead absent-mindedly.

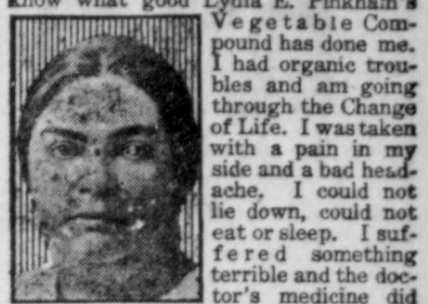

"Well—has this made much difference to you?"

"How could it help it?" Hilliard grimaced. "This isn't New York or a deaf and dumb asylum; it doesn't have to travel fast through the rounds. Everybody . . . heard by name . . ."

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me."

I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache, I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better. I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. You can publish this and I will tell any one who writes to me the good it has done me.—Mrs. MARGARET DANZ, 743 N. 25th Street, Phila., Pa.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

Prayed for Cure Finds it After 10 Years Food Would Sour and Boil—Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.
