A member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Baptist church prepared and read to the Auxiliary the following exposition on Faith. The ladies present considered it worthy of being printed in our local paper, so with persuasion she granted us permission to have it printed. She has now moved from our town, and the loss to our Society is keenly felt.

What is Faith? It is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidences of things unseen. Who is the Author of our faith? In Eph. 2:8 we read: Faith is a gift of God. God sends his Holy Spirit working faith in us, thereby uniting us with Christ. In Hebrews we are told to look unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. We can have great boldness in faith. Paul tells us to come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

A Christian walks by faith and not by sight. When we are united to Christ by faith, our desire is to obey his commands, and to walk in his way. Sometimes the path is rough and the stones hurt our feet, but we find him by us, holding our hand and cheering us by his loving words and promises.

A faithful Christian is one that is ever at his post of duty, and especially in his attendance upon the house of God. For he carries out the command of our Savior: Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together.

Put God to the test in faith. Christ says if ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, etc., you can do great things. Claim God's promises, and then open wide your mouth and he will fill it. Peter and John healed the lame man by faith. Faith brought the leper to Jesus, and the Syro-phenician woman was made whole by faith. Jesus did not heal her at first, but she cried on to him and seemingly would not be turned away, till Christ said: Oh, woman, be it unto thee as thou wilt.

It is because of our faith we build churches, schools, hospitals, and send our missionaries all over the world to teach, and carry the gospel to lost souls.

Let us turn to the 11th chapter of Hebrews where we can read of the great cloud of witnesses who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, and women received their dead back to life.

Elijah was a man subject to passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain; and it rained not on the earth for a space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and it rained and the earth brought forth her fruit.

Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. McDougal took a crowd of girls out to Deep Lake last Sunday.

A TRIP TO WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE

Two delegates and several visitors from Hedley attended the Northwest Texas Women's Missionary Conference at Amarillo last week, and I am sure all were benefitted by going. We were permitted to listen to some talented speakers, and it was inspiring to hear them tell of the great work the different societies are doing over our state.

Mrs. Nat G. Rollins, president of the Northwest Texas W. M. S., is surely the right woman in the right place, and proves what "woman" can do when given a chance. She was re-elected to the presidency. Mrs. Gabie Burton, corresponding secretary, made some splendid talks, as did a number of others. One could not listen to these educated ladies without a desire to do more in missionary work. The gift of speech and ease with which they talked held the great congregation spell-bound for hours each day.

The reports were splendid from nearly every society, and Hedley was not in the background, as she was one of only two societies that were on the honor roll, the other being Good night. Our President here at Hedley is doing good work, as are some of our other officers. Being president of social service of our society, I was particularly interested in the beautiful report of our general president of social service, Mrs. J. B. Smith, and after listening at her tell of the great things the different service presidents were doing, I felt that I had not done anything worth mentioning, was just playing at my job, and resolved to at least try to do something, or resign. I wish that all of Hedley could have listened as Mrs. Smith told us how we, as Christian women, should take the lead in how women should dress. It would have made some blush with shame. I could not help noticing the simplicity and neatness with which these noted Christian women were dressed, and I think their example is worthy of our following.

It was a treat to hear Mrs. Phebe K. Warner speak on the way we should train our children, the time and attention we should give them,—making it plain with pictures or charts which she had prepared.

We heard so many good things concerning the great work in which our society is engaged. Wish I could recall and describe them all.

The following Hedley women attended: Mes. Frank Kendall, Cal C. Wright, Walter Pierce, Shade Killian, S. L. Adamson, J. R. Benson; Misses Eva Lane and Gladys Hammond.

Mrs. O. R. Culwell.

FAINTING AND DIZZY SPELLS

The Cause of such Symptoms and Remedy Told in This Letter.

Syracuse, N. Y.—"When I commenced the Change of Life I was poorly, had no appetite and had fainting spells. I suffered for two or three years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Liver Pills which I saw advertised in the papers and in your little books. I took about twelve bottles of your Vegetable Compound and found it a wonderful remedy. I commenced to pick up at once and my suffering was relieved. I have told others about your medicine and know of some who have taken it. I am glad to help others all I can."—Mrs. R. E. DEMING, 437 W. Lafayette Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

BRACE UP!

The man or woman with weak kidneys is half crippled. A lame, stiff back, with its constant, dull ache and sharp, shooting twinges, makes the simplest task a burden. Headaches, dizzy spells, urinary disorders and an "all worn out" feeling are daily sources of distress. Don't neglect kidney weakness and risk gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped other people "the world over. Ask your neighbor!"

A Texas Case

MISS J. E. MERE, HOUSTON, TEX., says: "My kidneys were weak and acted very irregularly. My back hurt and I had a bearing down pain in my side. Sharp pains shot through my back and side, if I stooped I would get so dizzy I would nearly fall. Taking the advice of a neighbor, I bought Doan's Kidney Pills and a few boxes cured me of the attack."

Uncle Sam Honors Pilgrim Tercentenary

WASHINGTON.—The observances this year and next of the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims will be varied, with several nations participating. The house has passed a resolution appropriating $400,000 for participation by the federal government. The resolution provides for the appointment of a commission. Two sections are substantially as follows: "One hundred thousand dollars may be expended under the direction of the commission and in co-operation with the Provincetown tercentenary commission for the purpose of completing and improving the approaches to and the grounds of the Pilgrim monument at Provincetown, Mass.; of erecting suitably inscribed tablets or markers in the towns of Provincetown, Truro,

Farmer Gets Half of Average Milk Price

IT COSTS the average housewife in the United States 15.9 cents a quart for milk. This is the figure based on returns for April of 97 of the principal cities of the United States in every state in the Union, compiled by the department of agriculture.

For the milk which costs the housewife 16 cents (approximately) the farmers of the United States get from 4 cents up to 13 cents—an average of 8 1/2 cents.

Thus, of every dollar spent for milk in the United States, the dairy farmer gets only 50 cents. The other 50 cents covers the costs which come between farmer and consumer—freight, distribution and profits of the middleman.

The range of prices in April to the farmer who produces milk varied throughout the United States. In New England the farmer got from 6 to 10 cents a quart; in the east north central states they got from 5 to 8 cents; in the west north central states from 5 to 8 cents; in the south Atlantic states from 7 to 13 cents; in the east south central region from 6 to 8 cents; in the west south central states from 6 to 11 cents; in the mountain states from 6 to 9 cents, and in the Pacific states from 4 to 9 cents per quart.

Savannah, Ga., has the highest retail price for milk—from 25 to 30 cents a quart to the family trade. Many other cities have 25-cent milk. The cities with the lowest milk prices of those reporting to the agricultural department are Seattle, Milwaukee and Green Bay, Wis., where the price is 12 cents a quart to family trade. Salt Lake City has a price of 12 1/2 cents a quart.

Every other city of the 97 reporting has prices above 12 cents. In 1914 the average price per quart of milk was only 8 cents. By 1918 it had risen to an average of 14 cents; now it is near 16 cents. This represents an increase of nearly 100 per cent.

That the farmer is not profiteering is indicated by the fact that the costs of all foodstuffs and other elements entering into the production of milk have risen more than the milk price.

Out of 25 principal cities in the United States the farmer fares worst and the distributing company best in Omaha, Neb., where 57.1 per cent of the price of a quart of milk goes to the company and 42.8 per cent to the farmer.

The formation of companies should be continued. The company simply establishes a working unit that may include a class, a school or any other group adapted to local conditions. The number in a company may vary from ten to 50.

Each company should have a captain and one or two lieutenants, the latter depending on the number of pupils enlisted.

Young Oklahoma Marvelously Prosperous

IN THE house the other day Representative Everett B. Howard of Oklahoma made an interesting speech based on the fact that 31 years ago he placed the famous "Indian Territory" for homesteads," which marked the beginning of its state. That fertile country which was inhabited by the coyote at even-tide of me day boasted of cities of 100,000 and a total population running up to 1,000,000 mark. In 1918 he brought back a report that the population of Oklahoma in 1918 was 1,000,000.

Half the farms are under oil lease, and from these leases last year landowners received $22,000,000. The landowners received last year $22,000,000 in royalties and $22,000,000 in taxes.

HOME TOWN HELPS

NUT TREES FOR ROADWAYS

Walnuts Bring Eight Dollars a Bushel, Says Writer in Making Suggestions for Planting.

Maples, poplars, elms, willows and the alantus are seen along roadways and in parks wherever public ambition for shade has been sufficient in degree to induce authorities to put in trees of one sort or another. For the most part our northern highways are unshaded except by such trees as may accidentally spring up by the roadside, and, after competition with various enemies, finally reach above the fences, writes Robert T. Morris, a member of the American Forestry association of Washington, in The American City on "Nut Trees for Roads and Parks." Trees for city roads and parks, particularly in the larger cities, are often enough selected by some nurseryman favored by the political powers that be, and the nurseryman furnishes what he wishes to supply the uncritical purchaser. The time for this sort of procedure is passing, and people are beginning to awaken on the subject.

Progress in civilization along this line will mean that we are gradually to dispose of the kind of trees that furnish nothing but bunches of leaves which in due season litter the ground and when swept up contain nothing more than incidental trash. Now, if these trees were to give place to nut trees and fruit trees, there would be very much besides leaves to be swept up in the autumn. One of my friends in Illinois told me that in 1918 he received 88 per bushel for his black walnuts of a particularly good kind, and that some of the trees bore as many as 14 bushels to the tree.

BESTOW THOUGHT ON GARDEN

Promiscuous Planting of Flowers, Trees, and Shrubs Is Not to Be Recommended.

The main planting of any country place should be of trees and shrubs. Flowers should be used as decorations. They may be thrown in freely about the borders of the place; not in beds in the center of the lawn. They show off better when seen against a background; this background may be foliage, a building, a rock or a fence.

Where to plant flowers is really more important than what to plant. In front of bushes, in the corner by the steps, against the foundation of the residence or hothouse, along a fence or walk—these are the places for flowers. A single petunia plant, against a background of foliage is worth a dozen similar plants in the center of the lawn. Too many flowers make a place overgaudy. Too much paint may spoil the effect of a good building. The decoration of a yard, as of a house, should be dainty.

The open-centered yard may be a picture, the promiscuously-planted yard may be a nursery or a forest. A little color scattered in here and there puts the finish to the picture. A dash of color gives spirit and character to the brook or pond, to the ledge of rocks, to the old stump or to the pile of rubbish.

Well-Kept Lawns in East

Persons traveling through the cities and villages of Connecticut and other New England states often comment on the beautiful lawns there, the Oklahoma remarks. Even out in the country the yards are covered with a fine growth of grass, well watered and neatly trimmed.

It is said New Englanders are so careful with their lawns that they will not use rakes in gathering the cut grass after a mower goes over it. Instead they sweep the cut grass away. They assert that rakes tear the roots of the grass and otherwise damage it.

Famous Pennsylvania City

In the belfry of the ancient courthouse at York, Pa., hung a bell given by Queen Anne to St. John's Episcopal church. This bell was rung when the Declaration of Independence was signed, when Cornwallis and Burgoyne surrendered and when Washington passed through York. The bell is now on view in the vestibule of St. John's church. In the Presbyterian cemetery in York is buried James Smith, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and captain of the first military company organized in Pennsylvania to fight Great Britain.

Important to all Women

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition. Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so. But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

GAVE AMATEUR "SOFT" PART

Pompous Individual Duly Awarded Him "Place in the Sun," as He Had Requested.

The Swampton Dramatic society wanted their annual performance to be a success, so they engaged a professional from London to arrange it all. As soon as this gentleman appeared one of the amateurs tackled him. "I must have a role to suit me," he began pompously. "I always play one of the principal parts in our shows, and so far I've been most successful."

"Excuse me," interposed the professional, "but you must allow me to be the judge of the most suitable part." The first rehearsal occurred a few days later. When the cast was read out the pushing amateur found he had been left out altogether. "Why have I not got a part?" he demanded angrily. "You have a part, all right," replied the producer. "You are to be the first banana in the fruit-market scene."—London Answers.

BABOON PUT TO USEFUL TASK

As Shepherds, the Animals Are Said to Develop Traits That Are Almost Human.

I have often wondered, remarks Mr. W. C. Scully in the Atlantic Monthly, why more baboons are not trained as shepherds. The creatures invariably develop an absorbing affection for any young animals, human or other, that are placed in their charge, and there is a well-authenticated instance of a baboon taking charge of a motherless Kafir infant, and guarding it night and day for more than two years. The simian foster parent performed every necessary function except feeding the child.

Several baboons have been trained as shepherds. In a case that Mr. Scully himself observed the baboon had charge of several hundred sheep. He became passionately attached to the members of the flock, and remained with them all day long at pasture and brought them back to the corral in the evening. His only fault as shepherd was the outcome of extreme solicitude; if he heard the voices of wild baboons in the distance at any time of the day, he would at once collect the sheep, and with every appearance of the liveliest terror hurry them home.

For the man who can pay for it with honestly acquired coin the best is not too good.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

The State of Texas.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Donley County—Greeting:

Whereas, Zoe Bidwell Nix did, on the 14th day of June, 1920, file her petition in the District Court of Donley County, Texas, numbered 1051 on the civil docket of said court, wherein the said Zoe Bidwell Nix is plaintiff and Dothan H. Nix is named as defendant, in which petition plaintiff alleged that the defendant was not a resident of the state of Texas, but believed to be a resident of the town of Rand, in the state of Oklahoma:

These are to command you to cause a copy of this writ to be published in some newspaper published in Donley county, Texas, for four successive weeks, summoning the defendant, Dothan H. Nix, to appear before said court at the next regular term thereof, to be holden in the court house in Clarendon on the third Monday in July, the same being the 19th day of said month, in the year 1920.

The nature of plaintiff's cause of action is a suit for divorce up on the grounds of abandonment and for the exclusive care and custody of Hershel Nix, the sole surviving issue of said marriage, the abandonment alleged to be for more than three years and alleging that plaintiff has custody of the said Hershel, and that she is able to educate and maintain him, and that her father, Fred Bidwell, is ready, able and willing to assist her in the education and maintenance and nurture of the said Hershel.

Herein fail not, but have these before said court on the first day of the next term thereof, with your return thereon, in writing, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said court, at office in Clarendon, this 12th day of June, 1920.

W. E. Bray, Clerk of the District Court in and for Donley County, Texas.

By S. Hightower, Deputy.

BAPTIST MEETING

I wish to announce that the meeting at the First Baptist church will begin on the fourth Sunday in August and continue ten days or two weeks. Dr. B. A. Copass of Fort Worth, Texas, will do the preaching, and his brother, A. J. Copass, will have charge of the singing. Dr.

A PLAIN STATEMENT OF FACTS

We are NOT reducing prices on our clothing.

Our goods were marked at the beginning of the season to sell at a closer margin than ever before, at a profit less than that exacted by most stores, and the values we offer compared with wholesale prices of today's market are very remarkable.

If a merchant has been asking too much for his merchandise, he is perfectly justifiable in lowering prices, for the United States Government thru the "Fair Price" Commissioner of the State of Texas has fixed the profits of every retail clothing merchant in Texas, and has promised the people of this State that he would put every clothing merchant in the Federal prison for profiteering who violated these regulations.

These regulations did not affect our regular prices.

DIDN'T SHE KNOW?

Always interested in children, Miss Helen Gould recently contributed generously toward the maintenance of a summer school.

After it was established she paid the school a visit and ventured to question one of the kindergarten classes.

"Now, children," she said, "tell me what sort of clothes the puppy wears."

No reply.
"Come, now," she repeated, determined to extract the right answer by naming everything that a dog didn't wear, "does he wear feathers?"

A pained expression crossed the face of a little boy in the front row. "Please, ma'am," he said, pityingly, "ain't you never seen a dog?"

A KICK.

Mr. Bird—You never have anything but cold worms for dinner. Why don't you have some nice hot fire flies?

Drawing the Line.

This life's a game of give and take, a statement often heard; But I'll rise up and hit the Jake Who addresses me as "bird."

Plenty of It.

"I know a man who always gets more game than he wants when he goes hunting."
"How is that?"
"He is generally hunting trouble."

Suiting the Word to the Action.
"Willie, didn't you hear me tell you to stop your noise?"
"Yes, mother, but I'm a horse and you should have said, 'Whoo.'"—Browning's Magazine.

His Specialty.

"Does your son show any particular athletic tendency at college?"
"Oh, yes; he's running through my money."

Those Girls.

"Maud reminds me of a public office."
"Why so?"
"She's continually seeking the man."

Not Quite That.

"Don't you think the baby favors his father?"
"H'm! Well, he looks like him, but I wouldn't call it a favor."

Posthumous Courage.

"I hear Hopps is going to contest his wife's will."
"I suppose he won't be afraid to do it now that she's dead."

THE SITUATION.

"How are you making out with your chicken farming?"
"I find it hard scratching."

Queer.

Our speech is very queer, 'tis true, And many words are punned, For instance, when our bills are due The best of us are dunned.

Well Qualified.

"So you want a position here as a floorwalker? What experience have you had?"

"We have a six-months-old baby that has never slept a whole night through since it was born."

Merely a Suggestion.

Bridget—Do come and look at the beautiful sunset out at the kitchen window, ma'am.

Mistress—That's nothing, Bridget. You ought to see it rise some morning.

Mixing Metaphors.

"Don't you think our friend Johnson might loom up as a dark horse?"
"No," declared Senator Sorghum; "he's too shady. It would be a great deal better if he were washed."

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Doesn't hurt a bit and costs only a few cents

Magic! Just drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly it stops aching, then you lift the corn off with the fingers! Truly! No humbug!

Try Freezone! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without one particle of pain, soreness or irritation. Freezone is the discovery of a noted Cincinnati genius.—Adv.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of catarrhal deafness that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE. All druggists 75. Circulars free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

The State of Texas.
To the Sheriff or any Constable of Donley County—Greeting:
Whereas, Cora Craddock Adamson did, on the 24th day of March, 1920, file her petition in the district court of Donley county, Texas, wherein said Cora Craddock Adamson was plaintiff and March L. Adamson was named as defendant, the same being numbered 1067 on the civil docket of said court, in which petition the plaintiff alleged that the defendant was a transient person, who might temporarily be found in Donley county, Texas; and

Whereas, citation was promptly issued to the sheriff or any constable of Donley county, Texas, and returned without service because the defendant could not be found in said county; and

Whereas, thereafter an alias citation was issued upon said petition, to the sheriff or any constable of Falls county, Texas, wherin the undersigned was informed the defendant might be found, and whereas, such citation was by the sheriff of said last county returned unserved, because the defendant was not in said county to be found; and

Whereas, said cause will come on for hearing at the court house in Donley county, Texas, at the July term of said court, the same being the third Monday in July, 1920, being the 19th day of said month; and

Whereas, the plaintiff has filed a supplemental petition, stating under oath that the residence of the defendant is unknown to her;
These are, therefore, to require you to cite the defendant, March L. Adamson, by publication, to be and appear before said court on or before the third Monday of July, at the time and place above said, by causing these to be published for four successive weeks in some newspaper published in Donley county, Texas, the first of which publications shall be not less than twenty eight days before the return day hereof.

The nature of plaintiff's petition is a suit for divorce, upon the ground of abandonment by the defendant of the plaintiff for more than three years next preceding the date hereof, without cause or provocation upon the part of plaintiff, and further asking for the care and custody of the two children of the parties
hereto, the same being Vila Loise, a girl, six years of age, and Leslie William, a son, three years of age; and further alleging that the plaintiff is able to maintain, nurture and educate her said children, and the same are the sole surviving issue of said marriage, and further alleging that there is no community property existing as the estate of the parties to said suit.

Herein fail not, but have you this writ before said court, with your return thereon in writing, and with a sworn copy of the said publication thereto attached, as the law provides.

Given under my hand and seal of said court at office in Clarendon, Texas, on this the 7th day of June, A. D. 1920.

The Man Nobody Knew

By HOLWORTHY HALL

(Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co., Inc.)

"ONCE I LOVED HIM."

Synopsis.—Dick Morgan of Syracuse, N. Y., a failure in life, enlisted in the Foreign Legion of the French army under the name of Henry Hilliard, is disgraced by shrapnel. The French surgeons ask for a photograph to guide them in restoring his face. In his rage against life he offers in derision a picture postcard bearing the radiant face of Christ. The surgeons do a good job. On his way back to America he meets Martin Harmon, a New York broker. The result is that Morgan, under the name of Hilliard and unrecognized as Morgan, goes back to Syracuse to sell a mining stock. He is determined to make good. He tells people of the death of Morgan. He finds in Angela Cullen a loyal defender of Dick Morgan. He meets Carol Durant, who had refused to marry him.

"And . . . and I want to thank you now," she said in a tone which would have fallen as a blessing upon the ears of any other man alive, "for speaking as though you loved him. And for all you did for him. Perhaps you know already . . . perhaps you can't know . . . but I'm trying to tell you, because he was . . . he was one of my very dearest friends."

His brain snapped; he bent down to her. "You loved him—too?" he said, uncontrollably. "Yes," she said. "Once—I loved him, too!"

Alone in the appointed guest room of the Cullen home—for Mr. Cullen had been as good as his word, and sent a car to fetch his visitor's belongings—Hilliard lighted a cigarette (an acquired taste, but advisable as a minor deception, since he had been notorious for his taste in cigars) and grinned expansively. Leisurely he began to undress, but before his shoes were quite unlaced, he sat back comfortably in his chair and meditated.

"All serene so far," he said. "But when Carol came in . . ." He shook his head vigorously. "Well, it's over anyway. The doctor . . ." Hilliard's face darkened. "There's the man I want to get at! Pious old hypocrite! And he didn't think I deserved to be in the family! Sort of hate to let him make money out of this deal, but it's all in the game. Coats of fire! But ten thousand's a lot from the doctor . . . we'll say ten thousand."

He closed his eyes dreamily; and his thoughts reverted from Doctor Durant to the doctor's daughter. "Carol—Carol!" he murmured. "One minute there, I thought I'd crack. And I was 'one of her dearest friends.' I was, was I? And she loved me—once. Once! Pity it wasn't twice! Pity she and the doctor didn't say so the night they kicked me out so neatly. Well, . . . business is business . . . After they've made their money out of it, and found out this man Hilliard's some little gold-plated whirling all by himself . . . Gad! can't I see their faces when they get the truth of it!"

With the cigarette drooping from his lips, he stood up and swept a clear space in the table. From his suitcase he exhumed a tablet of thin transparent writing paper of a kind not sold in America; it was the paper on which the letter to Cullen from Richard Morgan had been written, and it was sheer luck that Hilliard had brought the remainder of the tablet from New York with him. He tossed a blob of ink from his fountain pen and inspected it critically.

"Too black," he decided, and went to the bathroom, where he half-emptied the reservoir of the pen and refilled it with water. "That ought to be just about right . . . sort of pale and mysterious and war-strength."

He seated himself at the table, took the pen in his left hand and inscribed circles on the paper; scribbled a meaningless sentence and laughed gently. "Funny how some people can be ambidextrous and take so long to realize it. If I hadn't caught a bullet in my arm, and tried to write myself away up here in no time. Writing's blamed distinctive. But, as it is, Hilliard—." Here he shifted to the other hand—"And small and curlicue, is Dicky Morgan—one of her is. I'm glad I killed that never amounted to a hill . . . But this Hilliard boy, a live wire!"

But this Hilliard boy, a live wire! sardonic humor, y paper, slowly in . . . as though in . . . 10.15. . . out, I . . . diligently, . . . He scowled, and struggled to remember . . . that it was that he'd risen out of . . . last night . . .

you would have them. And it may be that simply because of that, I've loved you more every day, and—"

Hilliard sat back, and his eyes were softly luminous. "Suppose, by the luck of the very devil, I should fall in love with her again?" he said aloud. "Suppose I should!" He tossed away his cigarette and rested his head in his hands. "Oh, Carol! I did care . . ." His shoulders shook spasmodically; then all at once he flung himself out of the chair and took to tramping the floor in a hurricane of emotion. His face was set in granite; he caught sight of it in a mirror, halted and himself was stunned by the transcendent mask which covered his soul in revolt. The work of the surgeons was not far short of miraculous; he couldn't upset it, not by any effort of his will. The eyes might flash, or lower, or chill—the other features were still calm and strong in their splendid glory. Even now, the face which he saw reflected in the mirror was one to convert the most hurried of all passing strangers to a new, if unformed, assurance in the brotherhood of man.

"You dirty blackguard!" said Hilliard, showing his teeth. He went pensively back to the letter, studied it, gazed at the floor. "But after all," he said, "no matter what she or anybody else did to me . . . and if I can kill two birds with one stone, and be what I've wanted to be—all except this damnable way of going about it . . . She acted as though this infernal lying letter would please her—that's not the point; it's a quicker way to get at the doctor . . . Well, it gets her a letter I never intended to write . . . and Dutout's war cross, too . . . that'll make it all the easier . . . I'll give her that, Angela was going to have it, still . . . So I was 'one of her dearest friends,' was I? What's that worth to Henry Hilliard, bringing back the news from the front?" He sniffed scornfully. "Ten thousand dollars—I hope. And the doctor'll make twenty out of it. . . Gad! that's turning the other cheek with a vengeance! Hanged if I don't almost wish he'd lose his rotten money! But that can't be helped—I'll get some satisfaction somehow."

He reread the unfinished note, folded it, creased it heavily for versimilitude, and gave it the final examination. "Business . . . is business," he said, musing. "That was a pretty sporty thing for me to do . . . to tell her there was a letter. Bit of a chance, too. And after smashing our engagement, she could stand there and tell me . . . oh, rubbish! So suppose we say . . . fifteen thousand from the doctor! But confound it—the better salesman I am, the more I get out of him, the more he makes! Whew! Where's the satisfaction in that? . . ."

His pupils had narrowed again, giving the lie to the sweetness of his smiling mouth. Then the smile faded and Hilliard was staring fixedly at the document in his hands. "I wonder who in thunder that man Armstrong is?" said the masquerader who had prided himself that he no longer cared.

He wakened early; and in that state of half-conscious reverie which has less of worldliness in it than perhaps any other state of human existence, he lay vegetating, subtly aware that he was very peaceful and content; but presently, when his brain had yawned and stretched itself, and begun to set about its usual functions (or, in other words, when Hilliard was sufficiently aroused to resume his usual introspectiveness) he was extremely unhappy, and not in the least vainglorious.

He scowled, and struggled to remember . . . that it was that he'd risen out of . . . last night . . .

to sleep. Not the Cullens, nor Carol himself, nor Armstrong . . . but wait a moment! Who was Armstrong? Whence and whither, Armstrong? A newcomer to Syracuse (that is, within two years) and already proprietary—Hilliard frowned, and rubbed his eyes, and wondered anew. He was a trifle amused and a trifle ashamed of himself; was it credible that he could be jealous of a man who had merely appropriated what Hilliard had no further interest in? How inconsistent . . . and yet how superbly characteristic of human nature! Hilliard chuckled to himself in recognition of it and dismissed the proposition as unworthy of further attention. Dismissed it, yes . . . as a child dismisses a rubber ball with an elastic cord attached to it.

From below stairs a Japanese gong chimed softly and Hilliard, without delaying another instant, leaped to the floor. Half an hour later, bathed, shaved and dressed, he descended complacently; the second day of his remarkable performance was begun. The Cullens, father and daughter, were waiting for him. They greeted him cheerfully; and he was glad that grief hadn't clung to their eyelids; he would have felt depressed, even although he would have sensed the hidden compliment. Quick to grasp the nearest handle of diplomacy, he saw that cheerfulness on his own part would help the situation, for now that his duty as a courier was over, there was no need for long protracted melancholy.

It was a cheerful trio, then, that sat down to breakfast; there was no exhilaration about it, but at least there was no somber cloud of mourning. Angela, behind the coffee urn, had occasional moments of pensiveness, but that was to be expected, and condoned; indeed, Hilliard held himself to be greatly favored by even this. She was imaginative, and Hilliard's pose was calculated to appeal to a lively imagination. He treated her not as a young girl, but with the respectful deference which belongs to a mature woman, a mistress of a household, and a hostess in her own right. She was charmed and captivated, and so was her father—most assuredly he was! So charmed, in fact, that instead of leaving for his office at half-past eight, he lingered until half-past nine; so captivated, that as his limousine slid quietly down the long, steep hill of James street, he found himself ascribing a new degree of credit to Dicky Morgan for the simple reason that Dicky Morgan had gained the full esteem of such a friend as Hilliard.

A mighty nice young man, thought Cullen. A man of soundest judgment, through and through. A man of brilliant intellect and razor-edged analysis. Had he not said, and furnished illustrations from his broad experience, exactly what Cullen himself had said, in regard to labor, and materials, and transportation, and production, these half a dozen years? Cullen sat back and smiled triumphantly. It does a man good to hear his pet convictions approved, expanded and laid down as axioms by another wise man.

Back on the wide veranda Angela had curled up comfortably in the hammock and, beside her, Hilliard was enjoying a cigarette. He was enjoying, too, this rare interlude of respite; he looked across at Angela, and thanked his stars for the invitation which had made this quiet hour possible. She lifted her eyes, caught Hilliard smiling at her and blushed furiously, not for any shame accruing to her, but because she had arrived at the age of easy blushes. "I . . . suppose you're going over to Carol's pretty soon," she said, constrained to say something and grasping at the first available idea. "So anxious to get rid of me?" he asked, amused.

"Oh, no!" Horror was in her tone and mortification. "Only . . . I wanted to talk to you before you saw Carol. Because Carol doesn't . . . I don't think she'll exactly feel as I do about this . . . I know she won't. Maybe it's because Dick and I were chums, and she and Dick were . . . oh, you know. It's different. You ought to take that into consideration—when you talk to her, I mean. I don't mean I don't care, because I do—terribly—but I . . . I can see what it meant to Dick . . . and I know how he'd have loved it, and picked this out of every possible way, to . . . end things, but Carol . . . she's different."

"There's anything you think I'd better say, or not say—" He rose, out of sheer inability to endure this ingenuous estimate of Carol's heartache. "Perhaps you'll tell me—because it's time for me to be going over."

Angela had risen, too, and stood beside him. Her features were composed, but still suggestive of inward emotions a little too tender to convey. "If there's anybody in the world," she said, "who could give Carol any consolation just now, it's you. I don't suppose you ever were a minister, but you look as though everybody could come to you and tell 'most everything, and you'd help . . . anyway, you'd try to. So I wish you'd . . . you'd sit and listen . . . Carol's got to talk to somebody, and when you're hurt the way she is, you can't talk to your family . . . and you were a friend of Dick's. And . . ." She swallowed, and went on more slowly. "You can use your own judgment, of course, but if I were in your place—I'd lie."

"Lie!" he repeated, aghast. "Yes, I would! He . . . he must have sent her some word, Mr. Hilliard! He must have!" She was desperately serious now, and thoroughly aroused. "It means the whole world to her! It's everything! Why, even I've got more than she has, and she was waiting for him to come back to her! I'd lie myself black in the face, but I'd tell her something—tell her anything I could think of to make her believe he hadn't stopped caring! It can't do any harm now. It can't hurt you. And I won't even ask you whether you do or not. Only you're here, and she'll trust you—"

"Will she?" "How could she help it? And . . . and that's all. Please don't let her think he didn't care!" Hilliard stood irresolute; chaos in his brain. "I'll . . . see," he said with difficulty. "I'll see."

"Won't you promise me? I won't ask you afterward, if you—" "Does it mean so much to you?" "Ever and ever so much. . . . Won't you please promise?" He gazed at her a moment, yielded with a show of reluctance. "Very well—I promise. Because you've asked it. And because it's the dearest, most generous, most thoughtful thing I ever heard of in all my life. . . . And after that, can't we be truly friends?"

Flushed, perplexed, honored, she gave him her hand with a hesitancy which betrayed the deep sense of compliment she felt. "I don't think I could be prouder of anything that could possibly happen to me," she said.

Was it worth the blatant mummery he had conceived and executed? Was it not worth that, and infinitely more? She was proud of his friendship . . . and she shared that distinction with no one else in the entire universe.

Proud of it! Hilliard was folsomely abashed. Abashed—yes, and simultaneously glorified. He had come to make the city proud, ignorantly proud, of the man whose deeds had merited no renown. Here, at the very inception of his plans, a seventeen-year-old girl was proud of him as he was. Courage. Inspiration. Resolve.

He had won her respect by the promise of a lie; and in this instant he vowed to deserve, by other and increasing lies if need be, the prestige he was unalterably committed to gain, whereby the past should be as nothing, and the future should be a magnificent citadel of reconquered dreams.

She was proud of him, and she had approved the lie in behalf of Dicky Morgan's memory. Unwittingly, she had sanctioned the very purpose of his coming, and the method of his approach. She had confirmed his own intentions, and given him the will to adventure. He was to act as the staunch defender of her playmate perished, and to make of himself a new and a better man, worthy of the eulogies which, as trustee, he now accepted for the unworthy Morgan. He consecrated himself to this end. Told himself fiercely that he would succeed. And she was proud of him! It was another omen.

It was eleven o'clock to the minute when Hilliard, not quite so blithe as a wedding guest, and yet not altogether as joyful as a mourner, waved his hand to a slender girl who stood on the veranda of a house diagonally across the street, and went slowly up the Durants' brick walk. He had anticipated the effect of this pilgrimage upon his nerves, he had discounted it; and Angela's advice had given him an artificial stimulus for the moment; nevertheless, as the front door opened to him, and he saw, over the head of a smirking maid-servant, a hallway and a vestibule unchanged, his breath came a little faster than usual, and his cheeks went a little darker. It was, so to speak, a return to a shrine, and a normal man might easily be pardoned for a little softening on the side, no matter how often he had changed his religion during the . . .

"How?" Hilliard's voice was even, but very low. "Older," she said, looking away. "And . . . and they were going to marry each other some time." "But wasn't that broken off?" "Yes, but she was waiting." "Waiting?" "Why, of course." Hilliard's breath quickened. "I should have guessed that this Mr. Armstrong—"

"Oh, but that wasn't until she thought Dick wasn't ever coming back. And besides, she isn't really crazy about him—just loathsome." "Indeed," Hilliard compelled himself to relax. "So you think . . . he hurt?" Angela's voice . . .

the living room, disappeared in a quick flurry of skirts; Hilliard, standing at the end of the long, high-roofed apartment, found himself surrounded by a thousand goods to remembrance. Not an item was out of place; not an item was otherwise than as he had often recalled it; his memory had been photographic.

At the opposite end of the room, flanking the black-marbled fireplace, was a graceful, swan-necked sofa, beautifully carved and splendidly upholstered. Doctor Durant had once remarked that Carol represented the fifth successive generation of her family to be courted on it. And evening after evening, in the ages that had gone before, Hilliard had sat there and dreamed and loved; and sometimes when Carol had slipped away from him he had sat there and dreamed and . . .

loved and smoked, while she played Chopin and Rubinstein and Moscovski to him. And the piano—somewhat battle-scarred but with a master instrument—was still over in its accustomed place, with the "Military Polonaise" perched open on the rack.

Then his pupils narrowed to gray necks of ice; for memory, by one of those tricks against which there is no defense, told him that he stood in this same position, in exactly this same spot, when two years ago the doctor had pronounced his sentence, and Carol, in terrible silence, had then and there confirmed it. His imagination conjured up that scene again; his blood chilled; he could fancy that Carol and the doctor were actually before him, and that he was staring at them in the flesh, and feeling the lash of the doctor's quiet peroration. . . .

At the threshold there was a faint rustle of fabric, and Hilliard turned. Carol! His hands went out mechanically, and hers to him; and Hilliard, tasting the acid of his somber mood, smiled benignly.

"I mustn't keep you waiting," he said, dropping her hands. "I've brought you the letter I spoke about." He gave it to her, and coughed his embarrassment. "I'm positive it's for you. And I'm sure you don't want anything to prevent you from reading it at once, so if you'd rather prefer to have me come back later for the talk you wanted—"

He was already moving toward the doorway; she restrained him gently, although her eyes couldn't be dragged from the folded paper he had given her. "No," she said. "please don't go. I particularly want you to meet my father, Mr. Hilliard. He's anxious to see you, too. Won't you wait while I call him?"

He inclined his head; followed her with his eyes to the hallway, strained his hearing, and knew that she had opened the letter as soon as she was out of his sight. His lips twitched cynically—and then, as he remembered Angela's injunction, straightened. After all, this much was pure charity. Down the hallway, there was the reverberation of a closing door, and silence.

COULD NOT HOLD OUT LONGER

Virginia Lady Realized She Couldn't Stay Nervous, Weak, Pale, and Hold Out Much Longer.—Cardui Helped Her.

Dublin, Va.—Mrs. Sallie Hughett, of Route 2, this place, recently related her interesting experience in recovering her health, saying: "When . . . I came on I was in a very bad condition and nothing the doctor gave me did me any good. Some say you have to let this take its course . . . but I knew there ought to be something to give relief. I was nervous, weak and pale. I couldn't eat or sleep to do any good, and felt I couldn't stand this very long. "I heard and read of Cardui, and how it had benefited other women in the same condition, so decided to use it myself. After my first bottle I felt better, so, of course, kept it up, and it did the work. "It helped me as nothing else did. I began to pick up right away. I ate and slept and could rest. I knew I was getting better. I kept it up and it did wonders for me." Thousands of women, suffering as this Virginia lady did, have used Cardui with equally happy results, and voluntarily relate their experiences, so that others, troubled with disorders common among women, may learn to take Cardui. Let your druggist supply you, today. —Adv.

STOMACH GOOD AS NEW. FOUR DOCTORS GAVE HER UP

Mrs. Hendricks, Bedfast Five Months, Was Able to Work in Two Weeks.

"I was sick last winter for five months with stomach and bowel trouble. Could not turn myself in bed without help. I was under the care of four doctors, and they gave me up. Then Mr. Mills, the druggist, persuaded my husband to try a bottle of Milks Emulsion. I had only taken it two days until I was sitting up in bed, and in two weeks I was doing my own work. When I began taking it I weighed only 70 pounds; now I weigh 120 pounds."—Mrs. Mary Hendricks, 200 Litchfield Road, Owensboro, Ky. Thousands of people who have suffered for years from stomach and bowel troubles have found relief almost from the first dose of Milks Emulsion. And it is real, lasting benefit. Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whose stomachs have weakened and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach troubles and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day. This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you need to try Milks Emulsion under guarantee—Take six bottles and see how it accords with your condition. It is sold in all drug stores, or promptly by mail.

BRO. MIZZELL WRITES

A mighty good letter comes to the Informer this week from our friend and former Baptist pastor, Rev. J. M. Mizell, now at Hallettsville, Texas. We regret that he has had to pass through a season of suffering and inconvenience, and rejoice that renewed robustness seems assured. May it be so. The letter, dated June 21, follows.

Dear Mr. Editor:

With a mouth full of new teeth, I salute thee. Tell my friend Craddock to pass his black hogs this way, for having lived on liquid diets until I feel like dissolving into milks, soups, etc., I am ready for something solid and strengthening. You know this teeth pulling business is a task for a well man, not a sick one. Physicians had for ten years advised me to have mine extracted, but I was slow of heart to believe. Early last Fall I began to lose both in strength and weight. However, after a sorry fashion I continued to do my work until the last of April the doctors took me in hand, took me out of the pulpit, made a thorough examination and decided that my teeth should be extracted, my tonsils removed, and my adenoids eliminated—otherwise I was a sound man. But now I was too weak to sit up much of the time, and when the teeth were extracted, I was wrecked both in strength and in nerves. A full month was necessary to recover what the experience had cost me. So tell your readers not to wait until they "have to," but to go to a dentist and have the task over with.

Well I have been confined to my room and bed more since coming to Hallettsville than in all the rest of my life. This must not be charged to the place, nor to the Plains through which we made a short journey, but let all blame attach to my teeth, to my tonsils, and to my adenoids. But thanks unto Him, and unto good doctors, a careful dentist, unto a thoughtful, attentive people, and also unto one of the best and most attentive companions ever, through all these

"The long, long night has passed;
The morning dawns at last."

The crisis is now over, and it is confidently believed that in a few more weeks strength and vigor will be mine. I am now able to hobble around in the house on my crutches, and that means much.

I must not close these lines without saying that no man ever served a better church; not a large membership, but one both competent and willing. Not only so, but with these blessed characteristics goes a thoughtfulness not often found. The sick pastor's salary has been promptly and fully paid while in other places the altogether worthy saints which they are.

With kindest regards to yourself and to yours, and also to all the inhabitants round about that goodly town, I beg to remain an appreciative friend and brother,
J. M. Mizell.
