THE BAPTIST MEETING CLOSED LAST SUNDAY

The meeting at the Baptist church came to a close last Sunday night. It was said by many to have been the best meeting the town has ever had.

The preaching was done by Dr. B. A. Copass, of Ft. Worth, and his brother, A. J. Copass, of California. The people were greatly pleased with the preaching, and the religious life of the entire community was very much strengthened by the meeting.

We do not know how many were saved during the meeting, but about sixty united with the Baptist church. The Pastor baptized thirty-seven Sunday afternoon out at the W. I. Rains place, in his concrete tank. The baptizing was witnessed by a very large number of people from Hedley and the surrounding country.

The people expressed their appreciation of the services of the two brothers by raising $575 for them. The people of Hedley will be very glad to have these preachers come again.

National Park-to-Park Highway

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

NATIONAL Park-to-Park highway! Fix the name in your mind. Then take a look at the map. The two together are an inspiration. You see instantly both the need of the highway and the appropriateness of its name.

This is the Scenic West. It contains twelve national parks. Several hundred thousand Americans from all parts of the country are visiting these national parks at this very moment. Eighty-five per cent of them are traveling in their own automobiles. Many thousands will visit more than one park; other thousands will visit several parks; still other thousands would like to visit all of the parks. These national parks are the people's playgrounds; the people should be able to get to any or all of them easily in their own cars. So all twelve should be connected by good roads—by the National Park-to-Park highway.

This Scenic West is alive this summer with visitors from every nook and cranny of the United States. It is a summer paradise—a land of high mountains, great forests, cold rushing streams, clear lakes, wild flowers, camping grounds, and trout; of everlasting snow on the peaks, bright skies, cool nights; of the primeval wilderness, of scenic roads and of good hotels. There are more national park visitors this summer than there were last summer and last summer Rocky Mountain had 169,492 and Yellowstone 62,291 and Glacier 18,956 and Mount Rainier 55,232 and Yosemite 58,362 and so on around the circle. Every year the people go there to play in greater numbers. Every year the travel by private car increases; in 1917 there were 54,892 and in 1919 there were 97,721. Every year the park-to-park traffic grows larger.

So here's the plan: At this writing—probably half around the 4,000-mile circle from Denver—is an official pathfinder picking out a tentative route. When he has completed the round he will lead an official party around the circle and this official party will fix the official route. Then every-body—states, counties, municipalities and semi-public organizations will get together and fix up the National Park-to-Park highway. Possibly the federal government will also join in the work.

The National Park-to-Park highway project was originated in 1915, the year that tourist travel by private motor first assumed impressive proportions. The next summer a meeting was held in Yellowstone National park and the National Park-to-Park Highway association was formed. Gus Holm's of Cody, Wyo., a national park and good roads enthusiast who had put through the Yellowstone highway, was elected president, L. L. Newton of Wyoming secretary, and Scott Leavitt of Montana treasurer. Director Stephen T. Mather of the national park service was elected "guide, philosopher and friend" of the association. The purpose of the organization is to promote the construction of at least one good highway connecting these twelve national parks in the Scenic West, to increase publicity and to encourage inter-park tourist travel. A number of state branches have been formed. The war interfered with the project.

Some day there will be other national parks in this circle. Washington offers the Mount Baker and Yakima projects. Utah wants another national park in the Bryce Canon region, a little north of Zion. The National Park of the Cliff Cities is a New Mexico project of long standing and much merit. Mount Evans, to the south of Denver, is likely to be added to Rocky Mountain. Lake Tahoe wants to join the system. A "Save the Redwoods League" has been organized to promote a Redwood National park in California.

There are now over which this pathfinder has picked out and all twelve national parks are likely to be added to the route already. These are kinds—good, bad and indifferent—gaps, some of which are in the mountains, some of which are in the plains.

Some of the good roads, take 25 miles of "national highway" or "state highway" from the national park.

probably take the better part of two months. In addition to spying out the land, he will take data for maps to be used by the A. A. A. Also he will arrange for the coming of the official party. With him are Mrs. Westgard and her son James and Mr. Leavitt.

The date of the start of the official party from Denver has been tentatively set for August 25. This party will also turn to the north in order to get through the northern parks before the snow flies. At its start it will be made up something like this: President Holm's and the secretary and treasurer of the National Park-to-Park Highway association; Director Mather of the national park service and other representatives of the federal government; Mr. Westgard, who will be "director-general" of the trip, and other representatives of the A. A. A.; official representative of Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and other states; members of various associations and organizations interested in the project, a stenographer, photographer and descriptive writer, and such others as the committee in charge may think desirable.

The official party will probably make a regular "triumphal progress" around the circle. There is much interest all along the line. Meetings will be held at the principal places visited. Local enthusiasts are expected to join the party at many places to the extent of testing the hotel capacity.

Denver is the natural starting place for both the pathfinder and the official party. Here is the lay of the land: The Lincoln highway hits the Rockies a hundred miles north of Denver. The Pikes Peak route lands fifty miles south of Denver. The Santa Fe trail runs a hundred miles south of Denver. From each of these transcontinental highways, which carry the bulk of the national parks tourist traffic, is a cut-off to Denver. Then, starting from Denver to the north the park-to-park motorist arrives in succession at Rocky Mountain, Colorado; Yellowstone, Wyoming; Glacier, Montana; Mount Rainier, Washington; Crater Lake, Oregon; Lassen Volcanic, Yosemite, General Grant and Sequoia, California; Zion, Utah; Grand Canon, Arizona; Mesa Verde, Colorado.

Some day there will be other national parks in this circle. Washington offers the Mount Baker and Yakima projects. Utah wants another national park in the Bryce Canon region, a little north of Zion. The National Park of the Cliff Cities is a New Mexico project of long standing and much merit. Mount Evans, to the south of Denver, is likely to be added to Rocky Mountain. Lake Tahoe wants to join the system. A "Save the Redwoods League" has been organized to promote a Redwood National park in California.

There are now over which this pathfinder has picked out and all twelve national parks are likely to be added to the route already. These are kinds—good, bad and indifferent—gaps, some of which are in the mountains, some of which are in the plains.

at all. Congress established this park in 1916, but with its usual haphazard national park policy has appropriated no money for it yet.

The roads into the other three California parks are excellent—and more are being built.

From California the Santa Fe trail will take the pathfinder back to Denver, via Zion, Grand Canon and Mesa Verde.

Director Mather of the national park service is an enthusiast. He gets a salary of $4,500 a year and has already spent more than $100,000 on the parks out of his own pocket.

And one of his particular national park enthusiasms is this National Park-to-Park highway. Last summer he did over 4,000 miles of pathfinding in his own car.

In his 1919 report he has considerable to say on the question of inter-park tourist travel by automobile. Here are some of the things he says:

"The prospects for the establishment of the National Park-to-Park highway as a great system of interstate routes in the West have grown brighter almost daily since the opening of the past touring season. There is now a wide demand for the highway, where prior to this year its importance was seen by relatively few communities, most of which were on direct routes to the national parks, and had unusual opportunities to observe its growing volume of motor travel."

"Many of the sections of any interpark highway system are, of course, so situated as to naturally require no special designation, and in such cases the roads are either being repaired or plans for their improvement are under way. On the other hand, in several states there are numerous routes that might be selected as sections of the system, and it is necessary to choose one or two routes for special attention if the funds available are not to be spread thinly and ineffectively over all such roads."

"I should point out again the fact that some links of any complete park-to-park system of highways may have to be constructed by the federal government without state co-operation. In certain states through which the highway would run most of the land belongs to the federal government. In such cases, particularly where the road would be used principally by motorists en route to the national parks from all parts of the United States, it would seem that the federal government would be under the obligation of defraying the cost of such sections of the interpark system."

Last spring, long before his nomination at Chicago, Senator Harding was in Denver and in an address at a Mile High club luncheon, March 30, he said in part:

"I like the slogan 'See America first' and I think our national parks are the best motor highways. I shall not see America first, but I can motor from this beautiful America, as portrayed over a circuit of our vast, so varied, so physical. It is good to think of America first and do it."

Will Not be One Day Without PE-RU-NA

This Lady TELLS Her FRIENDS

Mrs. Mary Fricke, 507 Bornman St., Belleville, Ill., is just one of the many thousands of ladies throughout the country who, after an agony of years, have at last found health, strength and vigor in PE-RU-NA.

Her own words tell of her suffering and recovery better than we can do it: "I suffered with my stomach, had awful cramps and headaches so I often could not lay on a pillow. Saw a doctor, tried PE-RU-NA and got good results from the first bottle. To be sure of a cure I took twelve bottles. I have recommended PE-RU-NA to my friends and all are well pleased with results. I will not be one day without PE-RU-NA. Have not had a doctor since I started with PE-RU-NA, which was about fifteen years ago. I am now sixty-three years old, hale, hearty and well. Can do as much work as my daughters. I feel strong and healthy and weigh near two hundred pounds. Before, I weighed as little as one hundred. I hope lots of people use PE-RU-NA and get the results I did." An experience like that of Mrs. Fricke is an inspiration to every sick and suffering woman.

It will tone up the nerves, give you health, strength, vigor and the joy of living. Do what Mrs. Mary Fricke and thousands more have done—try PE-RU-NA. You will be glad, happy, thankful.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it," Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

DEALING IN DAYLIGHT STOCK

Beginners in Grand Old Game of Speculation Made Somewhat Humorous Selection.

Two young pretenders of high school age have been noticeable in a local broker's office recently, taking an interest in everything financial.

It had been explained that X on the ticker tape was the abbreviation for United States steel. GQ stood for Great Northern ore, and the figure following was the price at which the stock was selling at the moment.

They had been watching the ticker for some time when PM was flashed on the tape, along with several hundred other quotations, and they immediately began to hunt through the guide card for the meaning of PM.

"Going to buy something?" inquired the board member.

"Yep," five shares of this PM stock. I see it's quoted at $1 a share."

"Oh," said the board member, glancing at the clock, which was then pointing to one o'clock. "I see you are taking stock in the afternoon."—Indianapolis News.

Says War Cost Hundred Billions

English Financier Fixes Real Losses of the European Belligerents.

AMERICA WORLD'S CREDITOR

To Only United States and Japan Did the War Bring Prosperity, According to English Authority—Germany a Heavy Loser.

London.—The actual cost of the war to European belligerents was in excess of £20,000,000,000 ($100,000,000,000 normal value), represented by property destroyed, losses in investments abroad, depreciation of properties and by pensions, Edgar Crammond, English financier, told the Bankers' institute at a recent meeting here.

He fixed the following as the real losses of the European belligerents:

Germany	£8,700,000,000
(£42,500,000,000 normal value.)
France	$250,000,000
The United Kingdom	15,300,000,000
Italy	2,100,000,000
Belgium	500,000,000

To only two belligerent countries—the United States and Japan—did the war bring prosperity, Crammond said, but Spain, Holland, Switzerland, Greece and Scandinavia also had grown wealthier. He believed the "liquid capital of the world, now distributed in centers which are unaccustomed to the exercise of their new powers," would eventually again find its chief outlet through London.

America the Gainer.

"The war has produced an extraordinary change in the economic relations of the United States with Europe," he said. "Whereas, in 1914 America owed Europe £2,000,000,000, at present Europe owes America £2,000,000,000 ($10,000,000,000)."

Assuming that the post-war purchasing power of the dollar was 70 per cent of its pre-war value, Crammond said during the last five years there had been an actual increase in the national wealth of the United States of approximately 30 per cent, and he estimated this wealth now in the neighborhood of £70,000,000,000 or $350,000,000,000.

The national wealth of Japan, he estimated, had been doubled by the war.

Germany Heavy Loser.

On the basis of a post-war mark valued at 50 per cent of its pre-war value he estimated Germany has lost, apart from the indemnity, 26 per cent of her national wealth, the whole of her mercantile marine, all her colonial possessions, and practically the whole of her investments abroad. If the figures suggested at the Hythe conference, £6,250,000,000, were fixed as the German war indemnity, he declared the total losses of the German people arising out of the war, would be equivalent to about £15,000,000,000, or one-half her national wealth.

"So far as the world as a whole is concerned, the principal loss is in the fact that Europe is not yet 'a going concern,'" he continued, "but the underlying economic forces which made her the great center of the world's commercial activities are still at work and will rapidly transform the economic situation in Europe."

He said the dominant characteristic of international trade in the next ten years will be a tremendous world demand for capital, and the internal financial policies of the nations should be framed with due regard to this condition.

Cannibals Once Peopled Texas

Discovery Made That Prehistoric People Were Different From Indians.

HAD REGULAR CAMP SITES

Life History Read From Records They Left in Their Burned-Rock Mounds —Advanced to Stage of Paleolithic Culture.

Austin, Tex.—Evidence that Texas was inhabited by a prehistoric people different from the Indian who roamed the plains when the first white man came has been unearthed by James E. Pearce, professor of anthropology of the University of Texas. The early inhabitants, he said, lived a nomadic existence, roaming from one part of the wilderness to another and killing with rude stone weapons, animals and even humans for food.

In co-operation with the Smithsonian Institution bureau of ethnology, Prof. Pearce has been investigating the mounds for more than a year, he reported.

"The life history of these people has been read from the records they left in their burned-rock mounds or kitchen middens," the professor said. "These mounds are piles of broken and charred bits of limestone three or four feet high and sometimes as long as 100 feet."

Had Regular Camp Sites.

"They are made up of the kitchen refuse of these prehistoric peoples, who had regular camp sites at frequent intervals along the Edwards plateau, extending from Austin westward to New Mexico.

"These people evidently were advanced to the stage of paleolithic culture, an earlier age than the period of heathen culture, to which most of the American Indians belonged. These early Texas inhabitants had arrows and spears tipped with flint points, chipped but not polished. They did not polish their stone weapons, nor did they engage in any form of agriculture. They were, however, skillful skin dressers, for we have found scraping tools made of flint.

"The kitchen middens which we discovered are the only thing of their kind in America, so far as I know, although they had been found in other parts of the world. At these sites, camps were located with a great fireplace in the center, over which huge slabs of limestone were placed as a sort of primitive stove, upon which to cook the meat the inhabitants killed.

Cannibalism Practiced.

"We know these people were cannibals, for among the refuse heaps have been found human bones split apart in order to get at the marrow.

"The soft limestone slabs, being exposed to the weather, broke from time to time, and were cast aside near-by, to be replaced by new ones.

"In the course of our investigations we have completely examined some fifteen of these mounds and in them have found thousands of splendid specimens of chipped arrow and spear heads, as well as scraping tools and other implements. Bones of the deer, which were prevalent in this region, are found in profusion, indicating that this was the principal article of diet."

After Ten Years—Eatonic Proves the Best

"I say, God bless Eatonic," writes Mrs. Della M. Doyen. "I can truthfully say, after suffering with stomach trouble for ten long years, that I have never had anything do me so much good as this one box of Eatonic."

We print these grateful words from this dear lady, so that sufferers everywhere may have hope and a little faith—just enough to give Eatonic a trial. Why, folks, last year over half a million people used Eatonic and found relief.

This is the secret: Eatonic simply takes up the excess acids, poisons and gases, and carries them right out of the body. Of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well. Stomach trouble causes about seventy non-organic diseases, so, if you are suffering any kind of misery, not feeling well, go right to your druggist today and obtain a big box of Eatonic; cost is a trifle. Use it as fast as you can, sure relief.

BEEF IMPORTS GROW

Figures Are Given Out by Bureau of Animal Industry.

Canned and Cured Meats Show Big Falling Off for the Period Covered.

There was very little difference in the quantity of fresh and refrigerated beef imported into the United States in 1919 and 1920. The figures are taken from the meat inspectors' reports, bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture. In 10 months ending in April, 1919, 27,673,195 pounds of fresh and refrigerated beef were imported. In the period ending at the corresponding time in 1920 the quantity of fresh and refrigerated beef arriving in the United States from foreign countries was 27,673,195 pounds, an increase of 100 million pounds.

Fresh and refrigerated meats of other kinds jumped to twice the quantity in the 10 months ending April, 1920, as for the same period in 1919. The figures show 7,933,377 pounds for 1919 and 14,979,693 pounds for 1920. But the canned and cured meats imported during the same periods show a remarkable drop from 128,624,348 pounds in 1919 to less than 2,000,000 pounds in 1920. This item accounts for the marked decrease in the total meat products imported. The total weight imported in the 1919 period was 168,602,911 pounds, but 1920 brought only 50,246,655 pounds.

THE MAN WHO WASN'T HIMSELF

ROBERT AMES BENNET

COPYRIGHT, BY W.G. CHAPMAN.

"YOU BLACKMAILER!"

SYNOPSIS—Alighting from a train at Denver a traveler is greeted as "Will" by an elderly lady and gentleman, who stop their auto to speak. He imagines it a case of mistaken identity and introduces himself as "Richard Clinton," on his way to the coast. The couple appear greatly surprised, and learning he is to be in town until midnight, the lady, introducing herself as Mrs. Kirkland, and her husband as Doctor Kirkland, invites him to dinner, explaining the action by his truly remarkable resemblance to a friend of theirs. At the Kirkland home he meets a young lady who greets him as her fiancé. She is Ellen Kirkland, and plainly is greatly hurt by his assertion that he is Richard Clinton. At dinner Clinton learns that his host is a medical specialist and that he is believed to be Will Lowrie, a young man who had been suffering from a nervous breakdown and had gone East for medical treatment. Lowrie had had in his possession bonds of the value of $100,000, belonging to the bank where he was employed, which he has disappeared and of which he has no recollection. With Doctor Kirkland Clinton goes to the Lowrie home, the doctor being satisfied that Amy Lowrie, Will's sister, will convince Clinton he is really Lowrie, suffering from loss of memory. Amy declares at once he is her brother, and insists on treating him as such, to his great embarrassment. Doctor Kirkland sends a telegram to the sanitarium where Lowrie is undergoing treatment. Ellen and Amy try in vain to convince Clinton he is Will Lowrie. They manage, however, to prevent his going. Bemm, a suitor of Amy and an agent of the bank, moves in the matter of the missing bonds. The sanitarium telegram proves nothing. Bemm wants Amy to marry him as the price of shielding Will in the bond matter. Amy goes to Clinton at night to tell him about Bemm and make him brush her hair. Clinton temporarily convinces her he is not her brother. He starts to leave Denver and is arrested. He declares they are all crazy—or else there is a conspiracy.

"As a friend of the—that is, of Mr. Lowrie," he remarked, "may I be permitted to suggest that this idea of his about a conspiracy rather supports Doctor Kirkland's theory of irresponsibility."

Clinton set his jaw and stood silent, evidently resolved to say no more. Doctor Kirkland smiled approval. "That is better, my boy. Keep cool. Over-excitement is good for no one. May I see the warrant?"

The official produced the warrant. The physician glanced through it with an experienced eye. "H'm—embezzlement of the bonds—Will Lowrie, alias Richard Clinton."

"Pardon me," remarked Bemm somewhat diffidently. "I wish to say I happen to know that the—er—party representing the bank in this matter is inclined to accept my theory that our friend disposed of—that is to say, misplaced the bonds while mentally irresponsible."

"Then why have they acted so outrageously to him?" demanded Amy.

"Had he not attempted to leave town, y' know—"

"That is the worst of it!" exclaimed Mrs. Kirkland. "The publicity! The scandal!"

"Madam," reassured the official, "there has been no publicity so far; and there need be none if Mr. Lowrie can account for the bonds. We here are the only ones who know of his arrest, except the plain-clothes man who caught him at the depot. He won't leak."

"One moment, officer, if you please," interrupted Doctor Kirkland. He fixed his keen gaze on Clinton. "If released from custody would you leave town?"

Clinton looked at Amy, and suddenly his anger vanished. He even smiled as he answered: "Those who dance must pay the piper. I could have telegraphed for my proffers; I could have told you all about my life. But I was too stubborn to do either. Bemm and this official refuse to believe my full statement about myself and my business. Therefore I now refuse to telegraph or say anything more, except that I no longer have any wish to go away. I wish to stay, even though it is in jail, until you have disproved this ridiculous charge and I am free to go."

ry, doctor, but in the case of a warrant—

"Very true," agreed the physician. "He must be kept in custody, unless admitted to bail. That does not prevent you from deputizing me and placing him in my custody. What he requires is sanitarium treatment. Confinement in jail would probably shatter his mind beyond all hope of recovery. The sanitarium, on the contrary, may restore him to his old self and enable him to remember how he lost the bonds."

Bemm smiled suavely at the police official. "Ah. In that case I venture to request you to accede to Doctor Kirkland's suggestion. I feel sure you may safely intrust Mr. Lowrie in his custody. Consider me as the doctor's second in the matter—er—what is the term?—his guarantor, if I am considered to have any standing."

"H'm," muttered the official. "It's a queer case. Well, I guess I'll take the responsibility of deputizing Doctor Kirkland and entrusting the prisoner to his custody. There's no precedent for it; but considering the circumstances and the fact that the doctor has often helped out the department with expert advice, I'll risk it."

The physician bowed in acknowledgment and walked over to Clinton. "My boy," he said, "we cannot compel you to give over your fancied idea of a conspiracy against you. However, our friend here has agreed to set you at liberty on my recognizance. All I ask of you is your word as a gentleman that you will remain in Denver until cleared of this charge."

Clinton turned and impulsively held out his hand. "Doctor, I beg your pardon for my suspicion. It was the only way I could account for the persistency of everybody in identifying me with Mr. Lowrie. I see that I must have been mistaken. I give you my word that I will not leave town until I am cleared of this false and ridiculous charge."

"We shall stay with Amy until her—your mother returns," rather hastily remarked Mrs. Kirkland. She covered the betrayal of the doubt that troubled her with a smile, gracious and cordial. "And now you and Amy must come home to lunch with us."

"And Charlie, too," added Ellen. "He was so thoughtful, phoning to us."

"Will is my best friend," said Bemm, looking at Amy. She gave him a grateful glance. He started for the door. "Count on me. I'd like to go with you, but I shall hunt up Will's suitcase and take it home for him on my way."

CHAPTER X.

Blackmail.

When Bemm drove up to the Kirkland residence in his big touring car he found Clinton dozing in a swing-bench, and the girls on guard over him. Each had her charming nose in a magazine that she might not be tempted to chatter and thereby disturb the repose of their drowsy charge.

Bemm's arrival roused Clinton, and for some time the four talked on impersonal topics. At last Ellen and Amy went inside. Bemm promptly shifted to a seat near Clinton and remarked in a sympathetic tone: "That was rotten—their serving you with a warrant. But I—"

"That Was Rotten—Their Serving You With a Warrant."

"Frankly," said Bemm, "what puzzles me is that you wished to go at all. You had agreed to stay, and we were all trying our best to treat you well."

"I presume the police searched my suitcase," irrelevantly observed Clinton. To tell Bemm about Amy's visit to his room was unthinkable.

Bemm took out a cigarette before replying: "One can usually count on their committing such impertinences. I take it. Though, if they opened your case, they must have been rather clever in their work. It seemed to be securely locked."

"You left it at Miss Lowrie's?"

"Yes."

"That was very kind of you."

"Don't mention it—I say, old man, I've been wanting to talk with you about your—er—about Miss Amy."

"I fail to take you," said Clinton. "You forget that I am not your friend, Will Lowrie."

"Friend!" muttered Bemm. He forced a smile. "You're the one that has forgotten your identity. But, unluckily for me, you still retain an impression—or, as Doctor Kirkland would say, a subconscious memory—of your opposition to me."

"Must I repeat—"

"No. Yet you cannot deny you have this feeling, this prejudice against me, with regard to Amy."

"You refer to Miss Lowrie, I presume."

"Duce take it!" exclaimed Bemm. "Haven't I stood your friend in this police affair? Am I not entitled to some consideration from you?"

"Very well," said Clinton. "Now if you will kindly proceed to elucidate what you are driving at."

"Right-O! We're getting down to bedrock," replied Bemm. "You're listening to me as her brother; you have my word that I am not so frivolous or—fast—as I am said to be; and you know how I regard your sister. I may not be as desirable a match as some; but I am eligible, as you know, and though I seem to be doing nothing, I really am engaged in a serious and ambitious vocation."

"One moment," said Clinton. "You insisted that I play the part of Miss Lowrie's brother; but I have not asked for any confidences from you. Kindly remember that you are speaking to a stranger."

"Indeed? Really now, you can't fancy you can shunt me off the track at this stage of the game," scoffed Bemm. "A man in your situation might be expected to catch at hints. Perhaps your head really is added. I'll give you the benefit of the doubt."

"Thanks," said Clinton.

"If it is not added, you certainly are a cool one," rejoined Bemm. "Don't you realize what a hole you are in over those bonds? Admitting for the sake of the argument that you remember nothing about them, I will explain that I know enough of what you did to—put you through."

"Most kind of you to tell me, Mr. Bemm."

Bemm's gray-brown eyes lost their deceptive shallowness. Clinton looked into their depths and saw the man behind the jester. His steely glance struck flint instead of rubber. But Bemm's voice was very soft:

"You see, old man, it is still a matter between friends. All you need do is to find the bonds, or their equivalent in money, if they have been disposed of. Doctor Kirkland believes you were irresponsible. If you have used any of the—er—proceeds, there's no doubt he will advance you the amount. If that is done—the bank reimbursed, y'know—the bank will credit his theory of your mental condition, and will allow the matter to be hushed up. This is provided I forget certain facts that, if recalled by me, would knock the doctor's hypothesis into a cocked hat."

"So—you remember certain facts?" muttered Clinton.

"My dear Will, let us say that I do not now remember them. One may easily forget, where a friend is concerned. All I ask is that you, in turn, show your friendship by intimating the situation to Am—er—Miss Lowrie. Nothing raw, y'know. Just a hint. She admits that she likes me, and you know how she is. A word from you in my favor, and she would at once—"

For all his quickness, Bemm was not quick enough to elude the hand that shot out to clutch his collar. He pulled back to free himself. In the same instant Clinton rose over him, white with anger. Without a word, Clinton jerked him by his feet, whirled him around and rushed him to the head of the porch steps. Clinton's shoe assisted his flight down the steps.

The audacity even more than the suddenness of the attack had paralyzed Bemm's power of resistance. The spell was broken by the shock of his landing on the hard cement walk at the foot of the steps. He scrambled to his feet, his face twitching with fury. He put his hand to his hip.

"Drop that hand," ordered Clinton in a tone barely above a whisper.

Bemm's furious glance fell before the look in Clinton's eyes. His hand slipped down, away from the hip-pocket. Clinton descended a step, and spoke in the same low-pitched tone: "You blackmail—er you cur! Get out of here!"

Again Bemm tried to face the other's look, and again his glance wavered and fell. He turned and walked hurriedly down to the curb. The tires of his big car tore holes in the street surfacing, so violently did he throw on the power of the engine.

The indignation caused the man to look about. Amy was starting after she cried: "Oh! Will!—as if—"

He sprang to meet and sweep her back into the house.

"No—not out here!" he muttered—"Private, where none can see or hear—till he comes back—The cur! the d-darned cur!"

"Hush! hush, dear!" urged the girl, putting up a hand over her mouth.

"Oh, Will!" cried Ellen in the entrance of the drawing room. "You swore!"

"The scoundrel! The—er—" Clinton choked with wrath.

Between them, the girl hurried him into a secluded room where he could not be heard. He found voice; but the words that first forth were so incoherent that neither girl could understand what he said. Overcome with dread, his wild outburst, Ellen fled to tell her mother that he had become violently insane.

Mrs. Kirkland hastened to telephone the calamitous news to her husband. As soon as she received his promise to at once come home, she started to the rescue of Amy, timidly followed by Ellen. With a trepidation that by contrast emphasized her moral courage, the lady opened the door of the room in which Ellen had left the maniac. No sound came from within. Her palor increased. Shuddering with dread of what might be within, she rushed into the room. Ellen followed, still more fearful of what they might find.

"Drop That Hand," Ordered Clinton.

Clinton was reposing in the depths of a big "sleepy-hollow" chair, as peaceful and still as if asleep. Amy, perched on the arm of the chair, was stroking his forehead and closed eyes. She looked about at the intruders and touched her lips for silence. But her patient had opened his eyes. At sight of the frightened ladies, he captured Amy's hand and set up in the chair, his face red with embarrassment.

"Oh keep your seat! Do not disturb yourself! Be calm!" urged Mrs. Kirkland.

Amy freed an arm and slipped it about his neck. "You are calm now. Aren't you, dear?" she soothed.

"Yes—yes, of course," mumbled Clinton, but his color deepened.

"But, dearest," murmured Ellen, "you must be dizzy. You look queer."

Clinton's expression became still more peculiar. His features were convulsed. He wagged his hands. "This—this—" he gasped. "Whatever I—I—Don't you—Chocolate Soldier?"

They looked at one another in acute alarm. There now could be no doubt as to his condition. He sought to explain: "The—the opera."

"Opera?" repeated Amy. "Oh, yes—yes, we understand, dear. You are reminded of that opera, when the hero comes into the castle and the ladies make such a fuss of him. Yes, dear, we understand. So how hush and be quiet."

But instead of obeying, he flung himself back in the chair and burst into a roar of laughter. The outburst was far more violent than the first. It did not end until he lay helpless from spent emotion, tears rolling down his cheeks, and his hands feebly beating the arms of the chair. Mrs. Kirkland hovered over him, ready with the bottle of lavender salts. On either side of him knelt Amy and Ellen, each with her arm about his neck, and his head against his shoulder, and a hand stroking his face.

"Save—save the pieces!" he panted. The girls redoubled their tender caresses. Mrs. Kirkland held her bottle under his nose. He took a whiff, and groaned: "Alas! Who shall deliver me out of the hands of mine—my friends?"

They exchanged anxious glances and Mrs. Kirkland whispered: "Hysteria!"

He pulled himself together, caught the girls' hands and his breath, and remarked in a conversational tone: "My dear Mrs. Kirkland, will you consider it hysterical if I observe that a cup of tea—"

"He's coming to himself!" shrieked Ellen.

"He has come to himself!" shrieked Amy.

Clinton enjoys "relaxation and quiet."

GRAND CANYON DEDICATED

GRAND Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona is a national park at last, after more than 30 years of endeavor by the nature lovers of the country. Congress has passed an act changing this natural wonder of the world from a national monument to a national park, and has appropriated money for its development. The national park service has succeeded the forest service in control of it. Court decisions have pronounced worthless the fake mining claims with which its rim is plastered. And the other day the Grand Canyon was dedicated as a playground for the people of the United States forever. And an interesting part of the exercises was the dedication of the memorial to Powell (thumbnail sketch with head).

The average well-informed American thinks of Jamestown and Plymouth when America's beginnings are mentioned. That is to say, he goes back to 1607-20. But by this time the American Southwest was near a century old. Allen Chamberlin, writing of the Grand Canyon dedicatory exercises in the Boston Transcript, calls attention to this. For it was one of Colorado's lieutenants, Don Garcia Lopez de Cardenas, who was the first white man to behold that tremendous spectacle, about the year 1540.

From that time until shortly before the Civil war the canyon seems to have attracted no particular attention, and small wonder, considering its remoteness and the forbidding aridity of the region on every hand. The report of Lieutenant Ives in 1857 to the war department on the navigability of the Colorado river seems to have been the first official recognition of the canyon by the government, but it remained for the Powell expedition of 1869 to put it on the map, so to speak. The tale of that adventure, undertaken in a purely scientific spirit, was more thrilling than a novel, and attracted considerable public notice. Nearly 20 years later President Harrison, then a senator from Indiana, conceived the idea that the canyon was a worthy subject for a national park, and introduced a bill in congress. That was in 1886. Yellowstone Park had been created in 1872, the Hot Springs reservation of Arkansas was set up as a national park in 1880, Yosemite valley had been turned over to California as early as 1864 as a state park, and Senator Harrison evidently saw that the Grand Canyon was at least equally worthy of protection from exploitation in the public interest. At that time Arizona was a wild Indian country, and the canyon was miles from anywhere that could be reached by rail.

Where Roosevelt Stepped In.

Finally, after more than 30 years, that Grand Canyon National park was created last year. It did not come easily into being, however, for the obstacles of selfish ambitions which beset the course of the final legislation required a decade of patient and persistent effort to overcome. President Roosevelt, in his characteristically timely fashion, interposed a powerful check upon the hankering of the would-be exploiters when he took matters into his own hands in 1908 and proclaimed the canyon a national monument and a game preserve. By that time the Santa Fe railroad had built a line to the southern rim, and every visitor thenceforward became a publicity agent for the park idea. When the writer first saw the canyon in 1902, shortly after the railroad was built, fewer than 1,000 persons made the trip during the course of a season. Nowadays more than 100 times that number are counted on, for this is one of the few all-the-year-around parks, and instead of the rude log houses and the adjacent one-story barracks of 20 years ago, there now a modern hotel, and a boarding car.

attend. Among these was a man, F. S. Dellenbaugh of New York, who was a member of that daring crew under Powell, who bore the ensign carried by that expedition, and taken through safely in spite of the loss of two of their four boats, all their instruments and much of their general duffel in their exciting battle with the raging river. It was a wonderful experience to stand on the rim of the canyon and listen to this man's story of that three months' journey from the upper waters in Wyoming to and through the canyon. Powell was a school teacher who had been a major in the Civil war, in which he lost his right forearm. Much had been heard in a desultory way of the wonderful Colorado river, but except for the report by Lieutenant Ives, little was actually known about it. Powell determined to find out what he could of scientific and economic interest in that hidden region, and, backed by certain Illinois state institutions and the Chicago Academy of Science, he embarked, late in May, with ten men, in four open boats.

Long before they made the Grand Canyon their mishaps had reduced the flotilla to three boats. Most of their instruments had been lost, and of the ten months' supplies with which they set forth there was left an abundance of coffee, but hardly enough flour for ten days, and musty at that, plus a few dried apples. That was on August 17. Nothing daunted, they launched resolutely into the forbidding depths of the defile, and somehow, two weeks later, they came through alive, all except three men who, but a day or two before the canyon was finally passed through, became disheartened and abandoned the party, only to fall prey to the Indians. This experience, but whetted Powell's appetite for more, and two years later he repeated the experience with greater success and less privation. Subsequently, not improbably in recognition of these achievements, he became director of the United States geological survey.

Plans for Greater Usefulness.

The human history of the Grand Canyon did not begin with that early sixteenth century visit of the Spanish adventurer. There are records all about on the canyon's walls of a people who dwelt there day in and day out for many generations long before the Spaniard came.

With the creation of the national park the Grand Canyon will be developed so that it will become a genuine vacation ground. Until now it has been regarded by the public generally as a one-day stop in the course of a transcontinental journey. Unless the visitor engaged a pack train for himself there was little that could be done beyond gazing from the rim near the hotel, or joining a mule procession down the Bright Angel trail, a trip too rough and nerve-trying for many persons. Plans are forming in the park service for a system of good motoring roads along the rim, and for the development of new trails, not only into the canyon, but through it, with camping opportunities here and there along the way, thus providing excursion possibilities that will exhibit the incomparable scenery from various aspects.

Moreover there is the north rim, 1,000 feet higher than that on the south, and eight miles or more away, where there are interesting things to see and do. From that point a road is projected to connect with the new Zion National park in southwestern Utah, and boarding facilities are to be established on the northern rim before travel from rim to rim becomes popular that 1,000 the Granite gorge must be that saddle animals may be used. That is one of the things of the near future.

In a sense the easier now than it has become.

The park is well, well, well, had to require.

It leadeth me into paths of ridicule for its name's sake; it prepareth for me a breakdown in the presence of mine enemies. Yea, the I run thru the valley I am towed up the hill. I fear great evil when it is with me; its rods and its engine discomfort me. It anointeth my face with oils, its tank runneth over. END OF EIGHT YEARS MISERY

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Recovered.

Newark, N. J.—"The doctor said I had an organic trouble and treated me for several weeks. At times I could not walk at all and I suffered with my back and limbs so I often had to stay in bed. I suffered off and on for eight years. Finally I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was a good medicine and tried it with splendid effect. I can now do my housework and my washing. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound and your Blood Medicine and three of my friends are taking them to advantage. You can use my name for a testimonial."

THOSE PRETTY COTTON FROCKS

THESE are some very good stories that never grow old. We listen to them, with variations, from year to year and from generation to generation. And so it is with the story of cotton frocks. Sometimes they are simple, oftentimes they are not, especially in this season of much-trimmed dresses. Take organdies for example. Some of them are stiffened in colors that make a color contrast, some of them are covered with lace frills dyed to match, numbers are befrilled with little flounces of the same material, others are decorated with satin cut into geometrical figures and if yarn embroidery and stitching hasn't attacked them as yet, it is sure to do so, for nothing is immune. But, of all the lovely trimmings that have been inspired by organdy nothing quite equals the blossoms that are made of it.

Writing of such an airy and irresponsible fabric is likely to make one a bit flighty but there are other cotton frocks, the ginghams and dimities and chambrays, whose role is not frivolous but always interesting. They are the bread and butter dresses that we never tire of. Two out of many sane and attractive models are pictured here.

Ginghams in the smaller plaids and in checks suited the mood of the season better than any others, perhaps because they look so well with organdy in accessories and decorations. One of these is shown with square neck finished with white organdy frills, having pleated edges in a color. The skirt is shirred in four rows and where it joins the bodice a little ornamental stitching makes a girle unnecessary.

The other dress might be the effort of an expert designer trying to demonstrate just how plain a cotton frock can be, and still be unusual and interesting. This one might be made of unbleached domestic or of chambray. Occasional splashes of vivid color appear in a scattered leaf motif, cut from heavy cotton and outlined with stitches in black. A girle of narrow black ribbon makes just the right finish.

Veils Do Their Kindly Part

THE light that lies in woman's eyes is airily veiled these summer days, glancing with heightened charm through nearly invisible screens of silk. Of a spider web fineness, and, considering it, unbelievable strength, our veils support patterns of braiding, embroidery or dots that center attention on them and give them distinction. Behind such interesting barriers faces are more interesting. Veils have much to give to their wearers, but they have to be selected with discretion, for they can be either kind or unkind, both revealing and concealing; that's why they are made in so many and so varied patterns.

Four chic veils, as shown above, give one only an inkling of the endless variety in the ornamentation of fine meshes that are at the service of veil devotees for this summer.

Paris sponsors headwear in which the veil is more important than the hat over which it falls. An example appears in the square mesh net with braided pattern in the border, that drapes a narrow brimmed hat of milines without trimming, except for a band and bow of ribbon. The veil's graceful flowing lines

Some More Truths.

WOULD you use a steam shovel to move a pebble? Certainly not. Implements are built according to the work they have to do.

Would you use a grown-up's remedy for your baby's ills? Certainly not. Remedies are built according to the work THEY have to do.

Are you reminding you that Fletcher's Castoria was sought out, found and used solely as a remedy for Infants and Children. And let this be a warning to you: Substitutes, Counterfeits and the Just-as-good stuff that may be able to keep you in all your strength, but dangerous for the little babe.

Alas, the voice that lies within your heart cries out to you: Be true to Baby. To Baby you will keep in the house remedies specially prepared for you would a baby's food, hairbrush, toothbrush or sponge.

Children Cry For

Are You Prepared?

A doctor in the house all the time would be a good idea. Yet you can't afford to keep a doctor in the family to keep baby well or prevent sickness. But you can do almost the same thing by having at hand a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, because it is a wonderful remedy for indigestion, colic, feverishness, fretfulness and all the other disorders that result from common ailments that babies have.

Fletcher's Castoria is perfectly safe to use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria, and mothers recommend it because they have found it a comfort to children and a mother's friend.

If you love your baby, you know how sweet it is to be able to help baby when trouble comes. You cannot always call upon a doctor. But doctors have nothing but good to say of Fletcher's Castoria, because they know that it can only do good—that it can't do any harm—and they wouldn't want you to use for baby a remedy that you would use for yourself.

MOTHERS SHOULD READ THE BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA.

I find a field for a man, I put in a woman. Women, come to these lessons on medical missions and learn of the wonderful work women are doing in the Orient, and you'll be more determined than ever before to do something to help this great cause. This is the second lesson in the new mission study, a "Crusade of Compassion." Make a sacrifice, if necessary, to attend these meetings, and God will richly reward your efforts.

TO OUR SCHOOL PATRONS

What an awful botheration,
Giving kids an education,
Biggest job throughout the nation,
But don't belittle such a station.
If you'd see the world grow better;
A nobler thing we couldn't do
Than give the child a broader view,
So let's stand by our teaching crew
And help to put the kiddie through
To higher heights; yes, let's be true,
Be faithful to the letter.
Let's see the child is put in school,
Encourage it to keep the rule,
And not stand off and play the fool
By acting like a stubborn mule,
Unless we've stood the test;
Flesh and blood will sometimes err,
So don't be ready for a stir
And want to pull a fellow's fur
Because you think that he or her
Has failed to do his best.
Fellow patrons, let's stand by them,
Our full support let's not deny them,
I'm sure they'll have enough to try them
Without a critic's stare to eye them,
-Let's pledge co-operation;
Our public schools will surely grow
If we will just such interest show,
'Twill help to make the business go
And all around will truly know
We stand for education.
-Ivy.
