POLAND CHINA SALE PROVES GREAT EVENT

The Big Bone Poland China Sale at Frank M. Clark's Silver Crest Farm came off last Friday, Sept. 10th, as scheduled, and was a great success in every particular.

The attendance was very large. In fact, although Mr. Clark did not tell us so, it was noted by many that the sale average would have been boosted considerably had it been less difficult for prospective buyers to get thru the crowd and inspect the offerings. Be that as it may, the sale, as before stated, was a great success, particularly so when we consider that this was Silver Crest's first sale.

A number of the country's most prominent swine breeders were here. They were all enthusiastic in their appreciation of the welcome and hospitality accorded them by Mr. and Mrs. Clark, and were voluble in their admiration of the splendid herd of Polands at Silver Crest.

A picnic dinner, "fit for the gods," was served to a regular picnic throng—and by many was declared to be "the Feature of the day."

Fifty animals were sold for a total of $12,080, or an average price of $241.60 per head. Following are a few of the top prices paid:

Jack Jones, gilt,	$4025
R. E. Cooper, gilt,	$850
W. B. Franklin, sow,	$640
W. B. Franklin, sow,	$450

Among the prominent breeders who made purchases were C. E. Alexander, Lewis Bros. and Cox Bros., of Childress; Ludwig Irlbeck, J. W. McCreary, J. Holderman and Geo. Walker, of Happy; Jack Jones, of Dodsonville; W. I. Atkinson, of Wellington; R. E. Cooper, of Turkey; C. V. Griggs, of Claude; Temple Atkins, of Ramsdell; W. W. Wilson, of MeLean; W. L. Butler and R. L. Dunkle, of Lelia Lake; and W. B. Franklin, R. E. Mann, Mrs. R. E. Mann, R. M. Webb, J. L. Kennedy and Walter Smith, of Hedley. Mrs. Mann was the only woman bidder, she buying a splendid sow, Mc Wonder Beauty.

Herbert S. Hilburn, editor of the Southwestern Swine & Poultry Journal Plainview, was here.

There were other visitors and more details that should be mentioned, but we didn't get them owing to the fact that Mr. Clark has been called out of town.

There will be another big sale at Silver Crest Farm in the near future, announcement of which will be sent out in due time. All who are interested in bringing their herds up to standard, will do well to attend.

SYRUP BUCKETS WANTED

Saw Too Late.

I was invited to dinner by some friends who were light housekeeping. Just as dinner was served I was relating some past experiences of camping, and remarked: "We had to use tin knives and forks, and that always spoils my appetite. Happening to glance at the table, I noticed (too late) that tin knives and forks were the best my hostess had for the occasion. It was a great relief to me when conversation was once more resumed.—Exchange.

GIRLS! LEMONS BLEACH SKIN WHITE

Make Lemon Lotion to Double Beauty of Your Skin.

Squeeze the Juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White which can be had at any drug store, shake well and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach for few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use lemon juice to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion. Lemons have always been used as a freckle, sunburn and tan remover. Make this up and try it.—Adv.

IS RACE TO BE HAIRLESS?

Prediction Made, Not Without Reason, That Coming Generations Will Be Bald.

That the man of the next century will have no hair on his head has been predicted time and again, and the fact that many men under forty are bald seems to indicate that this may be possible, the men of the coming generations acquiring baldness at an earlier age until finally a hairless specimen of the genus homo shall arrive. But it is through no fault of their own that men are losing their hair, while women are perhaps unconsciously getting ready to become hairless females of the species, and while they may be only working out the will of Providence, they are doing it deliberately by "bobbing" their hair. The fashion was introduced, it is said, by Russian women, who disguised themselves trying to get out of their bolshevist-ridden country. Coming to the United States, they bobbed hair attracted attention, was first taken up by the bohemian set in New York, and now is rapidly spreading. Some of the older women, not wishing to sacrifice their locks, are said to be wearing false bobbed hair.

Schedule Too Important.

A little girl was playing "trains" when she knocked into an old woman. The child took not the slightest notice but carried on with her game.

A little later she again passed the old woman, having finished her game.

"When you knock into anyone," said the injured dame, "don't you know you ought to say: 'I'm sorry?'"

"What?" returned the little girl. "Do you think an express train stops to say that?"

Can't Teach Old Dog New Tricks

Britisher Wear American Coat Shirt? No, Sir-ee, It Simply Be Done.

TEST OUR STYLE

Slip Garment on and He Wants to Touch teach an old when it comes an Englishman a few minutes to a haberdashery shirts cut English?" asked the was asked "You see, an Englishman won't have a coat shirt; he wants to slip it on over his head," said the shirtmaker. The fitter then told of several incidents about his countrymen who came into this particular shop. The other day one customer was thoroughly angry. He had been sold a dozen American coat shirts.

"I can't get into them," he said. "All right, we will sew them up," said the shirt fitter.

Another Englishman had bought some American shirts and came back with them in a very bad temper.

"What do you mean by selling me shirts without a collar buttonhole in the back?" was his objection. "Why, I had to cut a hole through with a penknife."

The polite salesman tried to show his customer the benefit of the American shirt; how fine it was not to have the collar button touch the neck. But he would have none of those kind of shirts.

"Why," said he, "I can't reach the back of my neck to put the button in."

"You don't have to," said the fitter "put it in before you put your shirt on."

That made the Britisher angry. "I won't do it," he said. "I always put my collar buttons in after my shirt is on my back. And I won't have you tell me how to do it."

Bars Hangers on Shirts. Though unconvinced on that point the salesman tried to tell the Englishman how fine it was to wear a coat shirt; that it didn't ruffle up one's hair when put on. "No, you can't sell me those shirts. I comb my hair after I put my shirt on. Besides," said this customer, "I don't want hangers on my shirts."

The writer told shopkeepers that coat shirts had not had a long history in America. "Well, you see," said he, "an Englishman learns how to put on a shirt when a little boy, and he won't change."

This particular shop has a customer who has bought the same color shirts for forty years, and he insisted on that color all during the war. Another customer for sixty years, now dead, always bought one color of neckties—red.

Races a "Function." One London paper has a paragraph about Walter Hagen taking off his sweater just as he was about to make a drive. It simply isn't done here.

Rather serious criticism greeted the first appearance of the American tennis players because they dressed so sloppily. An Englishman has his trousers pressed for tennis just as he has them pressed for dinner, and he usually wears a beautiful blue coat with brass buttons when he plays.

The writer asked an English friend why he always wore a silk hat and cutaway to the races. "Well, you see, it's a function and I must," he replied.

All these differences were discussed by a group last night. The Americans rather convinced the Englishmen of the advantages of American shirts, but very reluctantly. One of the group whom the Americans thought convinced blurted out. "Well, you see, those coat shirts wear out quicker in the laundry." What can you do with that kind of man?

W. Petr Ridge, the English writer and novelist, said the Americans would better change the subject. So he asked what was the difference between the English speech and the American. Somebody said the American speech was a bit louder. "Yes, you have hit it," he said. "Only you stress the unessential word. Your 'the' and 'to,' etc."

Another Englishman said: "We will settle it this way. Your shirts are better and speech worse. But in most things we break about even. But do you know what John Hay said when he returned from the embassy here?" All asked for Hay's speech. Here it is: "I never saw a street fight in England; I never heard a story that couldn't be repeated in the company of ladies; I never heard a real cuss word used."

"Where did Hay live?" one Englishman asked. "No," said another. "You are both right; we break even on those things too."

AVIATOR SEASICK IN THE AIR

Italian Flyer Encounters Rough Air Conditions on Trip to Tokyo.

Tokyo.—Lieutenant Ferrarin, one of the two Italian airmen who flew from Rome to Tokyo, encountered such rough air conditions while crossing Korea that he became seasick.

"In my entire flying experience," he said, "I had never before encountered such conditions. The machine pitched like a small boat in a heavy swell, and for the first time in my life I knew what it was to be seasick."

"The most exciting part of my trip occurred in Asia Minor," he added, "about 100 miles from Aleppo, where I was subjected to heavy machine gun fire by the Arab rebels."

Is Greatest Plane Motor in World

Most Powerful Airplane Engine Ever Built in United States Made in Detroit.

INTENDED FOR GENERAL USE

Capable of Driving Machine at 200 Miles an Hour, Says Designer, One of Liberty Motor Creators—Is Fireproof.

Detroit.—A new 500-600 horsepower airplane engine, the most powerful ever built in this country and the most powerful in the world except for a few racing freaks, has been completed here. It is expected to develop speeds far greater than anything yet achieved. In addition it is fireproof, and it can be started "cold" after a long dive, thus ending two of the greatest dangers that aviators have had to face. This announcement was authorized by Col. Jesse G. Vincent, designer of the engine, who is known as one of the creators of the Liberty motor.

The new engine, in spite of its great power, is no freak. It is intended for steady, long-time service, either for heavy duty or for great speed, and is designed for American quantity production methods.

Made for General Use.

While the men who are handling the new engine expect that it will push a plane at least 200 miles an hour, the engine was not designed for this purpose alone, and is capable of wide and general use. It weighs only 1,94 pounds per horsepower.

The lessons which Colonel Vincent learned during the war in his study of the actual performance of the Liberty motor, as well as of the best makes from both allied and enemy countries, are embodied in this design, and as a result there are several notable advances.

Most important is that the motor is fireproof for all civil purposes. This has been attained by putting the carburetor below and outside of the crank case, with all vents outside the cowling so that there is no possibility of conflagration from a back fire. This arrangement also has the advantages that it gives gravity feed, thereby eliminating the weight of extra piping and of the feed pump, and that it makes the carburetor much more accessible.

Exhaust Valves Changed.

Another change has been in providing two inlet and two exhaust valves for each cylinder, instead of one. The result has been a bigger and steadier flow of gas to the cylinders, and a very high mean effective pressure even at great speed. A double finger valve lift is used, and this permits changes in the cam-shaft and rocker-arm mechanism which make this engine much superior to any predecessor in the troublesome matter of leakage from the cam-shaft housing.

A third change is in the use of a single duplex carburetor, instead of the usual two carburetors. The difficulty of synchronizing the throttle and altitude controls of two carburetors has always been a bugbear to aviators, but it had been felt that two or more were necessary to give the requisite flow of gas. It has been found in the duplex

Shakespeareans. Lewt gave her classes a test in which she asked them to name five of Shakespeare's plays. Among the titles received were these:

- King Lear. A Merchant of Venus. Old Fellow. McBath. Omelet. Which reminds us of the high school pupil who said that Shakespeare's most famous poem was "Venice and Adenoids."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

SURE EGGS ARE FRESH

Generally Employed by Commission Houses for Purpose is Known as "Candling."

When supplying a fancy trade with or on receiving eggs from outside sources, it is often desirable to determine their freshness. The method usually used by commission merchants for this purpose is known as "candling" and consists in holding the egg between the eye and a light to note the contents. This should be done in a darkened room, and one of the egg testers on the set or simple home-made tester. The air space in a perfectly fresh egg is very small, and as the egg loses its contents by evaporation the air space increases in size with age of the egg. Fresh eggs should be clear and bright, showing no spots. Those accustomed to "candling" soon learn to detect stale eggs with a good degree of accuracy rapidly.

Another method employed by some have not a great number to test put the eggs in a basin of water, and they will lie on their sides; if they will stand on the small ends, under the egg the more upright ends, and if very old it will float in the water or even float on the surface.

KING OF SIAM

THE recent death of his royal highness, Chao Fa Chakrabongk Phivarnth, Prince Phitsanulok, the heir presumptive to the Siamese throne, directs attention to the fact that King Rama VI is the first bachelor king of Siam in 2,500 years. And, what is more, it is international diplomatic gossip that he is waiting to win an American woman to share his throne. One reason may be that King Rama has seen American beauties in twenty states of the Union.

Rama VI, known to his own people as Semdet Phra Paramindr Maha Vajiravudh Monkut Krao, Somdet Phra Rama Thabodi VI, is one of the most interesting monarchs, writes Frederick Dean, M. A., in the New York Tribune. The first bachelor that ever sat upon the Siamese throne, he is said to be waiting for an American girl to share his throne. The king's grandfather, Maha Monkut, used to say that he desired—and had—a member of every family of note in his kingdom in his "household." No outsider ever knew just how many wives he did have. His son, Maha Chulalongkorn, the father of the present king, had three wives on the day before he was made crown prince. On that day he married ninety-seven more to make up the complement of one hundred, which was the proper number of wives for the crown prince to have. When he died—ten years ago—he had between 7,000 and 8,000. When his son, the then crown prince, returned from his long stay in Europe—he had spent a third of his life in England, France, Germany and Russia, and had made frequent visits to Belgium, Italy and Spain, Norway, Sweden and the Netherlands—his father presented him with a collection of Siamese beauties, saying:

"My son, here are something over a hundred of the beauties of the court for you to start light housekeeping with, and to these you may add as you see fit."

But the young prince, much to the discomfort of his royal father, told the monarch that he would have none of this wholesale marriage business, and added that when he was ready he would marry "one wife, and she shall be the queen of my heart as well as the queen of my realm." His father took the decision of his son very much to heart and some have gone so far as to say that his boy's stubborn adherence to his word helped to end his royal father's life. When his majesty Maha Vajiravudh—known thereafter as Rama VI—came to the throne, as there was no queen and no heir, a crown prince, or, as they say in Siam, an heir presumptive, had to be chosen, and the lot naturally fell to the late Prince Phitsanulok, who was a brother of the king by the same mother.

Siam is a polygamous country. According to Siamese law a man may have as many wives as he can support. The households of royalty ran into almost countless numbers. Old King Monkut, the grandfather of the present monarch, used to say:

"I like large families. I have eighty-six children."

The present king has something like twenty half-brothers and any quantity of half-sisters. In doing away with the royal harem his majesty struck a blow at one of the oldest and most fundamental customs of the country. And if he chooses to step out of the beaten track and marry a foreigner he will be carrying out but one more of his unexpected reforms, for which he has been noted ever since he came to the throne.

Rama VI is a remarkable man in many respects. At the age of twelve he was sent to England where he fitted into the foreign school regimen in less than six months. He played football, learned to fence, ride and swim, and entered tournaments of golf and tennis, flirted with actresses. Later he went to Heidelberg, crossed swords with the daredevils of the world, and this way into the hearts of his subjects. When he came to England he entered the Royal Academy of Music, where on graduation he was given a diploma. He was a member of the Royal Society, and he was a member of the Royal Academy of Music. He was a member of the Royal Society, and he was a member of the Royal Academy of Music.

Each Old Man Wants to Wear a White Shirt

the advantages of American shirts, but very reluctantly. One of the group whom the Americans thought convinced blurted out: "Well, you see, those coat shirts wear out quicker in the laundry." What can you do with that kind of man? W. Petr Ridge, the English writer and novelist, said the Americans would better change the subject. So he asked what was the difference between the English speech and the American. Somebody said the American speech was a bit louder. "Yes, you have hit it," he said. "Only you stress the unessential word. Your 'the' and 'to,' etc."

War Machine and

KING'S PALACE IN BANGKOK

"looked over" twenty of the states of the Union. He is the only eastern monarch with a western education—the most democratic despot in the world. For Siam is an absolute monarchy; possibly the most absolute monarchy in existence today. Rama VI holds in the palm of his hand not only the property and possessions of his 3,000,000 subjects, but their very lives. A few years ago, when China was in the throes of not one, but of several revolutions, and had declared two "republics," the spirit of unrest started to trickle down into little Siam, but stopped at the border. Siam is called the kingdom of "Muang Thai" ("the People of the Free"), and nothing could enter that paradise to disturb that "freedom." The country is so prosperous, the taxes are so low, the advantages are so numerous that those living in Cochinchina on the east and in Burma on the west are clamoring to get over the Siamese fence to become partakers of the plenty that awaits all who make their home in this enchanted land.

A ruler who is so wise and so good, so generous and so far-sighted, is capable of performing many modern miracles. He is but forty years of age and has been on the throne ten years. His father ruled for forty-two; his grandfather was hale and hearty at sixty-three. With his constitution of iron and his well known temperance in all things nothing but an untoward accident should deprive Siam of her democratic ruler and the world of one of the progressives of the age.

Over a half century ago King Monkut had in his palace what he called his "American room." Around the walls were paintings of every president of the United States. Often he has been heard to say:

"I am planning my own country on the customs and the laws of America."

His son, the late King Chulalongkorn, sent his son to the White House in Washington for a visit "that has been denied me, and which I consider to be one of the greatest deprivations."

Ever since Siam was opened to the West America has been foremost in the minds and the hearts of the Siamese rulers. And if in his best judgment this eastern monarch shall find a suitable mate among the women of America he will but cement the long friendship between the land of the "free" of Asia and that other land of the "free" of America.

Many years ago a Siamese monarch found himself among a people without a woman of high enough rank for him to make his queen. So he married his own sister. Since that time the custom has prevailed that the ruling monarch must marry at least one of his half-sisters, for the heir must be possessed of royal blood on both sides. The late queen mother was the half-sister of his majesty, Maha Chulalongkorn. Her sons, therefore, were eligible to kingship. The late prince was the next in line to the king, and, in every way, was the rightful heir to the throne. Educated in England and France and having lived for a long time in Russia, where he was captain of the guard to the czar, it was but natural that he follow in the footsteps of many of the other members of the royal family of the Siamese court.

When the young king overthrew all precedent and declared that he would not marry any of his half-sisters—that he would not tolerate the royal harem—and that rather than this he would remain single, it was the queen mother who stood by him and who assisted him in bringing out the "women of the court" and compelled them to be recognized as a part of the new scheme of things. At his majesty's coronation ceremonies the young women of the court—the king's half-sisters and others who would naturally have become members of his household—were, for the first time in Siamese history, seen at the royal ball, in the theaters, at dinners and other royal public functions. It was the young king who decreed the new order, but it was the faithful queen mother who made the new order a practical factor in the life of the Siamese court.

Siam is a tiny little kingdom, so cunningly tucked away under the eaves of greater China that the average globe trotter passes it by without so much as a backward glance. But he who does stop long enough, and lingering, is lost in the lure of the luxury of this diminutive Asiatic paradise. For Siam is the richest country of its size in the world, and those who have lived there longest, claim that it is most fascinating.

DAIRY FACTS

AGE OF CATTLE DETERMINED

Each Year Leaves Its Mark on Grinders of Animal, Gradually Wearing into Stubs.

The age of cattle can be approximately determined by the appearance, development and subsequent wear of their second incisor teeth, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1066 just issued by the United States department of agriculture.

Cattle have eight incisor teeth, all in the lower jaw. In the calf at birth two or more of the temporary or first incisor teeth are present. With the first month the entire eight incisors have appeared. Each of the six stages in the development of the teeth is shown in the bulletin by illustrations which will be very helpful to the person desirous of becoming proficient in judging the age of cattle.

As the animal approaches two years of age the center pair of temporary in-

(1) Internal Face of Incisors of Calf. (2) At Two Years. (3) At Three Years. (4) At Four Years. (5) At Five Years. (6) At Twelve Years.

Incisor teeth or pinchers are replaced by the permanent pinchers, which at two years attain full development.

At from two and one-half to three years the permanent first intermediates are cut and are usually fully developed at three years.

At three and one-half years the second intermediates or laterals are cut. They are on a level with the first intermediates and begin to wear at four years.

At four and one-half to five years the corner teeth are replaced, the animal at five years having the full complement of incisors with the corners fully developed.

At five to six years there is a leveling of the permanent pinchers, the pinchers usually being leveled at six and both pairs of intermediates, partially leveled and the corner incisors showing wear.

From seven to eight the pinchers are noticeably worn; from eight to nine the middle pairs; and by ten years the corner teeth.

After six years the arch gradually loses its rounded contour and becomes nearly straight by the twelfth year. In the meantime the teeth have become triangular in shape, distinctly separated, and show the progressive wearing to stubs.

NEGLECT BUTTERFAT TESTS

Operation is Comparatively Simple Where Proper Facilities Are Available.

Many dairymen maintain milk record sheets continuously and well, but they fall short on doing the dairying sleuth work up brown, in that they neglect to make frequent and regular butterfat tests of their milk.

This chemical operation is relatively simple where the proper facilities are available and every farmer with a little practice will be able to get accurate and dependable results from its use. A simple, handpower Babcock test outfit is inexpensive and will pay for itself in a few months in the increased efficiency which attends its use.

DAIRY NOTES

Love for your work is the key to your success. Learn to love your cow.

The season of the fly pests, which make life miserable for stock during the summer, is on.

If it pays to raise calves at all it pays to feed and care for them from the day they are born.

Each calf should be fed separately, carefully regulating the amount of milk by the size of the calf.

Flow of gas. It has been found that the flow of gas in the digestive tract of a cow is directly proportional to the amount of food eaten.

Shave With Cuticura Soap And double your razor efficiency as well as promote skin purity, skin comfort and skin health. No mug, no slimy soap, no germs, no waste, no irritation even when shaved twice daily. One soap for all uses—shaving, bathing and shampooing.—Adv.

The Good Samaritan. It isn't even safe to trust even to a good Samaritan any more. The Tarkio Avlanche reports the case of one who turned out to be a thief. He discovered Dr. William Cunningham, a local physician, having trouble with his touring car, and promptly offered to help him. After the doctor had gratefully accepted the man got in and tinkered the car a bit and then started off to ride up and down the street a time or two to see how it worked. To date he is still seeing.—Kansas City Times.

A single application of Roman Eye Balm on going to bed will prove its merit. Use it for inflammations of the Eye.—Adv.

Mother's Opinion. A rather prominent old bachelor of Indianapolis the other evening went home with one of his friends for supper. Now, the friends has a six-year-old son, who is lively indeed, and the bachelor was much interested in him. At the supper table he asked the youngster: "Now, Bobby, when you grow up are you going to get married like your father did or are you going to be an old bachelor like I am?"

Back came the little fellow's immediate answer: "Oh, I'm not going to be an old bachelor. Mother wants me to amount to something."

Since then the bachelor has announced himself as a willing candidate for a leap year girl.

Nervous Spells—Near Heart Failure Eatonic Stopped It

Mr. C. B. Loats, writing from his home at Lay, Md., says, "I had been taking medicine from four specialists, but believe me, friends, one box of Eatonic has done me more good than all the remedies I have ever tried. I was in awfully bad shape. About half an hour before meals, I got nervous, trembling and heart pressure so bad I could hardly walk or talk. Eatonic quickly produced marvelous results, he up the poisons and carries them right out of you. Of course, when the cause is the sufferer gets well. Everyone that wants better health should have just a little Eatonic to try."

COMING EVENTS IN FALL SUITS

SUCH essential things as suits, and other clothes for the street, are launched by their manufacturers long before the season for their wearing is at hand. This must be done so that merchants may buy them a little in advance of the time when they are needed. September finds the public interested and October finds them buying very briskly their practical clothes for general wear and there is considerable business earlier, for outfitting young women who are going away to school.

It is for the benefit of such fortunate young persons that the very attractive suit shown in the illustration is offered for consideration in August. It is one of many attractive creations that are specially well adapted to the lines of youthful figures. Drawing such conclusions as may be gathered early in the season, skirts are to vary considerably in width, the extremely narrow ones not appealing to people of the best judgment and there are really not any models that can be called severe in line among the new coats. Skirts may be plain or plaited.

Coats are a matter for rejoicing, having those vague outlines that are called "easy" and are particularly smart. There is a great variety in them and in sleeves, which may grow less as the season grows older. It all depends upon the appeal of the several styles to the public.

One cannot go wrong in the selection of a suit like that one shown in the picture. It has a straight skirt in a conservative length and just wide enough for comfortable walking. The coat is straight with narrow belt confining it at the waist and there are very long ends at the front, finished with tassels. It reveals the persistence of embroidery and embroidered effects in styles for fall and indications are that this vogue has not reached the crest of the wave in its popularity. The collar merits special attention, being a mixture of styles and a novelty. It is so arranged that it can be thrown about the throat like a short scarf and is prettily finished with fat tassels. Buttons secure it in the position shown by the picture.

PIN MONEY PROPOSITIONS

THERE are women in every community who would like to earn pin money by some means that will not interfere with their home duties. In the larger cities there are "short hour" women employed in the shops, with hours from eleven in the morning until three or four in the afternoon, who find they can manage their household affairs and go to business too. But their homes are usually small and convenient apartments in which housework is reduced to a minimum of effort. The same opportunities do not come to women in the smaller towns and villages or on the farms. In the larger communities also there are opportunities of merchandising in a small way. Some women, familiar with millinery, do a thrifty little business in the spring and fall of the year, buying and selling hats which they display in their own homes. Waists and neckwear prove worth while for others. A business of this kind is usually conducted by women who have had experience in a store at some time.

For boys or girls can usually arrange to furnish supplies of some sort to them.

Besides these usual means of picking up pin money there are opportunities for women who own and drive cars. In summer and winter resorts they get together sightseeing parties and take them on short motor trips that yield a pretty profit, or they establish a regular trip carrying people to and from certain points. Women have proved themselves quite equal to driving motorcars in all parts of the country. Some young women have a very happy faculty for entertaining children. They undertake to look after a number of little ones one or two afternoons in each week, releasing mothers from their care for a brief time. The children must be brought to the home of their entertainer and called for. She provides for their amusement and gives them any attention they may need, for a fee. By looking after a number of them regularly the income is worth while.

Some women and girls are successful in soliciting subscriptions to periodicals and books. Some do well selling merchandise, as stockings, corsets, embroideries, among their friends. In considering the matter of making pin money it is necessary first to take stock of one's accomplishments to determine what work is easy to excel in. Women who know how to plan all the details for entertainments, luncheons, dinners and parties are in demand in thickly settled communities and many of them turn their gifts to good account.

Julia Bottomly

The Modish Overblouse. A boon to limited incomes is the modish overblouse, which may be made in all lingerie types and, aided by a single skirt, gives the appearance of many different frocks. One of the smartest versions of a more elaborate garment was developed in heavy flannel mesh, hip length, with a wide green neck and cuffs.

Women who live near the main roads used by motorcar tourists pick up considerable money in the summer months selling a few necessities by a roadside.

POULTRY CACKLES

MAKE SURE EGGS ARE FRESH

Method Generally Employed by Commission Houses for Purpose is Known as "Candling."

When supplying a fancy trade with eggs, or on receiving eggs from outside sources, it is often desirable to determine their freshness. The method generally used by commission merchants for this purpose is known as "candling," and consists in holding the egg between the eye and a light so as to note the contents. This should be done in a darkened room, using one of the egg testers on the market or simple home-made tester. The air space in a perfectly fresh egg is very small, and as the egg loses part of its contents by evaporation this air space increases in size with the age of the egg. Fresh eggs should appear clear and bright, showing no dark spots. Those accustomed to "candling" soon learn to detect stale eggs with a good degree of accuracy and rapidity.

Another method employed by some who have not a great number to test is to put the eggs in a basin of water. If good they will lie on their sides; if bad they will stand on the small ends. The older the egg the more upright it stands, and if very old it will be suspended in the water or even float on the surface.

TURKEYS EAT GRASSHOPPERS

Fowls Take Bulk of Their Food From Field Insects, Devouring Millions of Bugs.

Turkeys range far afield and prey upon insect forms that escape hens. From the time the young are old enough to begin foraging for themselves, perhaps early in June, until near frost, turkeys take the bulk of their food from field insects, devouring millions of grasshoppers and other injurious forms in meadow and pasture, says the United States department of agriculture.

In regions where wooded areas are still fairly extensive mast is an important item in the diet of the turkey. When the insect stores begin to fall

Turkeys Must Have Free Range to Thrive.

The most larders are beginning to be filled. Feeding on acorns, chestnuts, beechnuts, and the like, turkeys will go a long way toward fattening themselves for the Thanksgiving or Christmas market and will not require much feeding of corn or other grain to finish them. Generally speaking, turkeys will require a larger feeding of grain than chickens to fit them for market, but, as they utilize forms of waste that hens and their broods would not reach, the keeping of a fair number of turkeys is good economy.

BEST BROILERS FOR MARKET

Squabs Should Weigh When Dressed From Three-Fourths to One Pound Each.

The market demand is for broilers of three sizes: Squab broilers weighing, when dressed, from three-fourths to one pound each; small broilers weighing from one to one and one-fourth pounds each, and large broilers weighing from one and one-half to two pounds each.

At the age of six months the increased weight is slight and the quality poor. As the age of the cockerel increases above 12 weeks the quality decreases materially.

POULTRY NOTES

Mites help to keep cost of eggs high.

There is no room for poor birds on the farm.

Heat is the great enemy of eggs, both fertile and infertile.

Of the infectious diseases of turkeys, blackhead is the most destructive.

Mites multiply more rapidly in warm weather, so that war should be made on them now.

Remember that the early hatched pulch which you are depending for are making steady growth.

Consider the fact that the of so many birds we used with the improper male bird.

RECORD IN CATTLE TESTING

Federal and State Authorities Have 537,240 Head Under Supervision in Many Sections

From time to time the animal industry has been "battling" the forces of federal and state authorities. The latest battle was fought in 1917 the year of the beginning of the war. On April 1st the federal government, through the department of agriculture, issued a law which required that all cattle over 230 acres should be known to the government.

A Typical Native Scrub, and Obstacle to Progress in Live Stock Improvement.

Over 115,000 cattle were on the waiting list to be tested as soon as the veterinarians can work with them. Still another lot of 258,331 cattle have passed through the first stage of the test without showing any dangerous symptoms. The least optimistic estimate indicates that two-thirds of this number will conclude the test satisfactorily, and add 170,000 cattle to the accredited column.

HAMM HAS PUREBREDS ONLY

South Dakota Farmer Asks Enrollment in "Better Sires—Better Stock" Movement.

Declaring that not only all his sires but likewise all his female breeding animals were purebred, Charles P. Hamm, a South Dakota farmer, applied for enrollment in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign conducted by the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with state agencies. He is a breeder of Short-horn cattle, Percheron horses, Duroc-Jersey hogs, Rhode Island Red chickens, and Bourbon Red turkeys.

The better-sires movement is aimed particularly at the use of superior purebred sires, but the majority of those enrolled also keep some female stock. Mr. Hamm, however, is the first person officially listed as keeping five classes of live stock in which all the animals—both male and female—are purebred.

GRAIN FOR HOGS ON PASTURE

Full Feed is Not Economical Where Grass is Plentiful—Some Protein Feed Favored.

Hogs on pasture require grain for greatest profit in pork production, but a full feed is not economical when pasture is plentiful and grain high-priced. When corn alone is fed a limited ration is considerably cheaper because the forage crop takes the place of much of the grain.

Some protein feed, such as tankage or skim milk, is recommended to be fed in small quantity along with corn and pasture to pigs weighing less than 100 pounds. Pork production is usually too expensive when such feeds are given to large hogs, especially if they are on such pasture as alfalfa, clover, rape or soy beans, all of which are high in protein.

INDIANS FAVOR IMPROVEMENT

Live Stock Owned by Navajos in New Mexico to Be Bred to Purebred Sires in Future.

More than 191,000 head of live stock owned by Navajo Indians in New Mexico henceforth will be bred only to pure-bred sires. The female stock includes 3,000 cattle, 8,000 horses, 150,000 sheep, and 30,000 goats, besides smaller numbers of swine and poultry.

The Indians have signified their support of the "Better Sires—Better Stock" movement. The United States department of agriculture is co-operating in supplying the Indians with literature dealing with live-stock improvement.

ESSENTIALS FOR SWINE

CLINTON IS TRAPPED.

SYNOPSIS.—Alighting from a train at Denver a traveler is greeted as "Will" by an elderly lady and gentleman, who stop their auto to speak. He introduces himself as "Richard Clinton," on his way to the coast. The lady, introducing herself as Mrs. Kirkland, invites him to dinner, explaining the action by his truly remarkable resemblance to a friend. At the Kirkland home he meets a young lady who greets him as her fiancée. She is Ellen Kirkland, and becomes hysterical at his assertion that he is Richard Clinton. At dinner Clinton learns that his host is a medical specialist and that he is believed to be Will Lowry, a young man who had been suffering from a nervous breakdown and had gone East for medical treatment. Lowry had had in his possession bonds of the value of $100,000, belonging to the bank where he was employed, which he had disappeared and of which he has no recollection. With Doctor Kirkland Clinton goes to the Lowrie home, the doctor being satisfied that Amy Lowrie, Will's sister, will convince Clinton he is really Lowry, suffering from loss of memory. Amy declares at once he is her brother, and insists on treating him as such, to his great embarrassment. Ellen and Amy try in vain to convince Clinton he is Will Lowrie. They manage, however, to prevent his going. Bemm, a suitor of Amy and an agent of the bank, moves in the matter of the missing bonds. Bemm wants Amy to marry him as the price of shielding Will in the bond matter. Amy goes to Clinton at night to tell him about Bemm and make him brush her hair. Clinton temporarily convinces her he is not her brother. He starts to leave Denver and is arrested. He declares they are all crazy—or else there is a conspiracy. Doctor Kirkland secures his release. Bemm shows his hand and Clinton kicks him out. The "Chocolate Soldier."

CHAPTER X—Continued.

Ellen flung herself upon his breast. He averted his head to ward off her lips, and Amy blew a kiss down the back of his neck.

Mrs. Kirkland observed his crimsoning face, and came to his rescue. "Girls, girls, that will do. He must not be agitated. If he is hungry—"

"I'll see if luncheon is served," exclaimed Amy, and she darted from the room.

Clinton rose and transferred Ellen's arm from his neck to his elbow. "At least I still retain my normal appetite," he observed.

"That is a great deal, dear boy," said Mrs. Kirkland. "It shows that you have fully regained your physical health. A little psychological treatment will soon restore your mental balance, as well."

When, a few minutes later, Doctor Kirkland came in upon them at the luncheon table, the four were conversing as gaily as if none had ever heard of doubt and apprehension. The physician entered briskly, nodded to all in his genial manner, and explained his presence with a casual: "On my way to the sanitarium. Thought I'd stop by for a bite of lunch. My dear, a word about the new case—if I may ask the girls and Will to excuse us."

Mrs. Kirkland followed him from the room with an air of composure that vanished the moment he closed the door behind her.

"Karl, you must do something—at once!" she urged. "He is worse, far worse!"

"Appears to me to be quite rational," replied her husband.

"Since he came in to luncheon—yes. But before that—such queer behavior, laughter, hysteria—after the mad rage that so frightened Ellen."

"H'm. This makes it doubly necessary. His attack on Bemm—"

"Charlie—he attacked Charlie?"

"Yes. I had a telephone call from police headquarters just as I was leaving the office. Couldn't quite make it out. But I gather that Bemm was indiscreet—Will had so angered him that he complained to our official friend. I was told that Will should be confined. I agreed."

"To send him to jail—you agreed to that?" protested Mrs. Kirkland, horrified.

"Our official friend may have understood it that way."

"Ah—but you?"

"In the sanitarium he will be even safer than in jail, and will receive the treatment so necessary for his recovery," explained her husband. "If I can report that he is there under guard, I believe the bank will accept my argument that it is to their interest for him and had the yellow envelope in a twinkling. He held out, with a laconic "—and read the message to

"Patient escaped night of—"

"Yes," agreed her husband. "Now that this proves we were not mistaken, I confess there have been several times when, had it not been for my knowledge of dual personality, I might have doubted. Truly the changes superinduced by dissociation are marvelous! In his real self, Will is absolutely honorable, straightforward, honest. Yet it is evident he secreted the bonds, sold or obtained a loan on them, and deposited the money in Chicago. I have it from Bemm. He has information from a friend in the bank."

"You cannot mean that Will actually—look the bonds?"

"Not knowingly. Evidently, in his dazed condition when the change of personality occurred, his first and only idea with regard to the bonds was to raise money on them and take a trip to California."

"You are so profound, Karl! Your deductive logic is simply wonderful!"

"Hardly that, my dear. These cases are simple, when one has the key. The difficulty is to induce him to— Ah! I have it—that case of hyperaesthesia. The girls know her."

"You mean Annie Searle? It is hardly more than a speaking acquaintance."

"That is quite sufficient. Come."

He returned to the luncheon table, brisk, genial, and domineering—"What still at it? Sweetheart, there's a friend of yours at the sanitarium. You remember Annie Searle. She has asked for you. Might do her good to see you."

"Poor Annie!" responded Amy with ready sympathy. "If I can cheer her up—"

"We might all go," suggested Mrs. Kirkland.

"Clap on your hats, girls, and you also, my dear, while I take my milk and a sandwich," directed the physician.

CHAPTER XI.

Caged.

As Mrs. Kirkland chose the seat beside her husband, Clinton was required to make one of the three in the tonneau, and the girls saw to it that he sat between them.

The visitors were shown into a refreshingly cool waiting room, and the ladies sent up their cards to the parlor.

Clinton rose and transferred Ellen's arm from his neck to his elbow. "At least I still retain my normal appetite," he observed.

"That is a great deal, dear boy," said Mrs. Kirkland. "It shows that you have fully regained your physical health. A little psychological treatment will soon restore your mental balance, as well."

passed. Clinton had glanced about door and signed to Clinton to listen. From above came a faint, almost inaudible sound.

"That is a patient in the room above," he explained. "She is shrieking in an hysterical paroxysm. I told you our walls are sound proof. That is not absolutely the case, as you hear."

"But virtually so," said Clinton. "One never would imagine that a woman is screaming less than ten feet away."

"There is a special manner of deadening the walls and windows," explained the physician. "Otherwise we could not keep our supersensitive patients in the same building with those subject to noisy outbursts. Our arrangements are so perfect that many persons came here simply for relaxation and quiet. This room is one reserved for the use of such guests—I can hardly call them patients."

"It is an ideal room," remarked Clinton.

The physician beamed upon him. "I'm glad to hear you say that, my boy. What do you say to taking it yourself for a few days?"

"I?"

"Why not? You could keep secluded, and escape all this annoyance over your identity. Am I right in surmising that even the attentions of the girls are not altogether agreeable to you?"

"I am not so sure as to that," replied Clinton. "I cannot say that I have found it so very unpleasant being with my—sister."

The physician's look became grave. "I did not wish to speak of a disagreeable subject. The fact is the bank officials are not altogether satisfied with the arrangement by which you were placed in my—charge. If I can say that you are here under treatment, they may be willing to wait a reasonable time while we are straightening out this muddle."

"They still threaten me with punishment!" exclaimed Clinton, his eyes flashing with quick anger. "I shall go to the bank and tell them to try it!"

"You will do nothing of the kind," gently contradicted the physician, and he laid a sympathetic hand on the young man's shoulder. "Consider your friends!"

"Even if you should prove to be what you claim, do you imagine we would cease to think of you as a friend?"

Clinton grasped the other's chubby hand. "It is most kind of you to say it, doctor!"

The simple truth, my boy. I know you will stay to oblige me. Pardon me a moment. I wish to inquire about a patient."

He left the room in his usually brisk manner. Clinton selected a magazine from a pile on the neat little writing table and sat down in an easy chair. Noiselessly an attendant reached in and closed the door behind him without attracting his attention.

He read an article, tossed the magazine aside, and looked around. Dr. Kirkland had not returned. He yawned, rose, sauntered across the room, and opened the door. In a moment he found himself confronted by an attendant, who planted himself in the doorway, hand to cap and a smile on his good-humored, resolute face.

"You called, sir?"

"No," said Clinton. "I am going down to the waiting room."

The man did not move out of the doorway. Clinton advanced a half step and said sharply: "Are you deaf? I am going down. Step aside."

"Beg pardon, sir," respectfully replied the attendant. "Dr. Kirkland wished me to tell you that he preferred you should keep in your room."

Clinton measured the man with a swift glance. There could be no mistaking the athletic ease of the fellow's poise. Yet he stood with hands down. An uppercut to the chin, followed by a straight drive, might put him out of the way. Clinton tensed for the attack—and did not make it. Three other male attendants had appeared in the corridor behind their fellow employee. To attack would only result in the humiliation of certain defeat. The mere knowledge of this fact was quite sufficiently humiliating. Clinton flushed crimson with chagrin.

"You have the odds on your side," he muttered.

"Yes, sir. I trust you will not hold it against us personally, sir."

The respectful, good-natured reply tended to mollify the prisoner.

"That depends," he said. "I wish to see Dr. Kirkland."

"I'm afraid, sir, he won't be through with his calls for half an hour. But just as soon—"

"Then tell Miss Lowrie I wish to see her—alone."

The man looked his surprise. Clinton hesitated, and explained: "Dr. Kirkland will understand. I wish to take leave of my—sister before she

He started across the room with Amy. Ellen hesitated, glanced about at the alert attendant, and slowly followed. Clinton met her glance of timid appeal with cold antagonism.

"If you will pardon me, Miss Kirkland," he remarked, "this is getting to be rather too much of a farce. Every thing that I say or do is distorted by your deluded fancy into all sorts of strange meanings. Is it not enough that your father has very adroitly trapped me—"

"Hush, dear," reproved Amy. "Can't you see how you are hurting her?"

"I wish I could be brutal," he irritably rejoined. "It might force her to realize that I cannot be her fiancée."

"Nothing can do that, dearest," murmured Ellen.

"Besides, there's the telegram," added Amy.

"What telegram?" he queried.

"Mamma told us," replied Ellen. "It came to papa when we were all at luncheon."

"And it proved that you are all?" exclaimed Amy. "You needn't scowl, old beakins, because it does. It tells how you escaped to Chicago, and there the superintendent lost all trace of you. That was when this change of personality came on you. So when you found yourself—not your real, but your new self—with all the bonds, you thought they were yours, and put them in a bank and started for California. Isn't that plain?"

"Very. Only, as it happens, I opened my Chicago bank account several months ago."

Ellen looked at Amy and nodded. "He forgets what papa says about retrogressive time memory in some cases of dissociation."

Clinton flushed with exasperation. "Miss Kirkland, permit me to express my conviction that your father has made an unmitigated—owl of himself."

"No, no, please, dear!" begged Amy. He drew away the hand with which she sought to cover his mouth, and continued: "This farce has gone quite far enough. It has become a bore."

Ellen straightened with the hauteur of an offended queen. "You say that? First you insult my father, and now—"

"Wait, dear, wait!" Amy sought to intervene. "It can't be means—"

"Can't be?" demanded Ellen, all her love and gentleness overwhelmed in the bitter upwelling of her outraged pride. "Look at him, scowling at me!"

"I beg your pardon, Miss Kirkland," he apologized. "I was not aware—"

"Miss Kirkland!" she exclaimed. "That is quite sufficient. To think that after I—"

She blushed scarlet with mingled shame and anger. "Rest assured, Mr. Lowrie-Clinton, I shall no longer bore you with the farce of my attentions."

Clinton looked at Amy and nodded. "He forgets what papa says about retrogressive time memory in some cases of dissociation."

Climbing Mount Moran

MOUNT MORAN AND JACKSON LAKE

IT IS proposed to add about 1,000 square miles to Yellowstone National park on the south; legislation to this effect is now pending in congress. This enlargement includes the Teton range near the Idaho-Wyoming line, Jackson lake and the headwaters of the Yellowstone river. It will give Yellowstone National park magnificent scenery of a kind it needs. Grand Teton (13,747 feet), highest peak of the Teton range, has been famous as a landmark since the days of the early fur trade. Mount Moran, 11,100, on the west side of Jackson lake, has never been ascended, according to local belief.

In Country Life LeRoy Jeffers, A. C. F. R. G. S., secretary of the bureau of Associated Mountain Clubs of North America, tells of his ascent of Mount Moran. His narrative runs:

My wife and I entered Yellowstone park by its scenic eastern approach through Shoshone canon, climbing through tunnels in its towering walls of gray and pink.

After renewing my acquaintance with the exquisitely colored Grand canon of the Yellowstone, we ascended Mount Washburn for its comprehensive view of the park. Visiting the hot springs and geysers, we finally left Old Faithful for the hamlet of Moran on Jackson lake, 70 miles to the south.

As the Grand Teton had already been climbed, I was more interested in the possibilities of Mount Moran, which was said to be unclimbable. H. M. Albright, superintendent of Yellowstone park, had just viewed it from various sides, everywhere finding sheer cliffs. In August, 1917, a considerable party ascended as far as the glacier on its eastern face, which they named Huntley glacier. It was then reported in the Scientific American of March 30, 1918, that "the summit has never been attained, and probably never will be, as the last 3,000 feet of the mountain are sheer perpendicular walls of rock." Ben Sheffield, who is the local authority on the mountain, told us that he had spent many years in hunting sheep on its crags, always searching for a route to the summit, but always turned back by unscalable cliffs. He recounted a thrilling experience in which he nearly lost his life, and had come to the conclusion that the mountain could be ascended only by driving staples into the cliffs.

Danger From Stones.

These reports made the mountain seem all the more interesting, and we left Moran at eight o'clock that evening for the nine-mile trip across Jackson lake. Impressed with the warning that the walls near the glacier could not be climbed, we decided to investigate the northern face, and we landed as far to the right of the central mass of the mountain as it seemed safe for us to go in the boat.

It was after 1 p. m. on a hot day, a most unfavorable time for a serious climb on any glacial mountain, for the sun had long been melting the snow on the heights. Already the glacier was strewn with newly fallen rocks, but I passed on, jumping the open fissures and sounding in the snow with my ice-ax where there was danger of concealed crevices. I found delicate work in crossing the Bergschrund and surmounting the cliff above it, for I had to descend into the edge of the chasm where there were great passageways and caverns of blue and green leading up to unfathomed depths into which one might slip. The greatest danger, however, was from falling stones, which were whizzing with tremendous speed down the cliffs to the glacier, and I was not eager to intrude on their line of fire.

Ascending the grizzly walls of the cirque, I reached the summit just as a giant mass of rock, tons in weight, came bounding and crashing down from unseen heights in a tremendous avalanche which passed within a few feet of the trembling rock on which I stood. As the rocks followed the route of my ascent and spread over the glacier below me, it seemed to dream of a parrot. A parrot in one's dreams is a warning to watch out, for among your friends is some one not true to you. If the parrot is in a cage, it's a sign a secret of yours will be revealed by some one whom you trusted. But you hear a parrot talk in your dreams, listen closely to it, for it is supposed that advice is often given in this way.—Chicago Herald and Ex-aminer.

As he made the door it swung open. He athletic attendant promptly drew him into the room's hand.

"Dear brother, why were we waiting with a friend. Why did you down? Why did you Over her shoulder glance at the attendant for you," he replied. "Amy!" murmured Clinton. "I look short just within the door. He may again—" trifle with falling stones, for they are not a fair test of anyone's skill.

Where No Foot Had Trod.

A thunderstorm was raging among the crags, so I hurried back and retreated across the glacier and decided to climb the aiguille, on the left. This in itself proved to be a considerable height, and before reaching its summit I had become more interested in the great walls of the main peak.
