THIN, FADED HAIR NEEDS "DANDERINE" TO THICKEN IT

35 cents buys a bottle of "Danderine." Within ten minutes after the first application you can not find a single trace dandruff or falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping your hair to grow long, thick and luxuriant.

Girls! Girls! Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, thin, scraggy. A single application of delightful Danderine will double the beauty and radiance of your hair and make it look twice as abundant .- Advertisement.

MCLEAN HERO BURIED

The funeral of Andrew Floyd, world war here, who fell on the firing line in France three years ago, was held Sunday, Oct. 9th, at McLean, where his parents reside. The service was attend ed by a great throng, numbers of out of town people journeying to McLean to pay this last honor to the memory of this heroic and popular young man. The American Legion Post at McLean was named in his honor. Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Floyd, he is survived by one brother and four sisters, one of the latter being Mrs. W. D. Biggers of this city. That he was a soldier of great valor is attested by the fact that he was awarded two citations for outstanding feats of daring, the croix de guerre and the palm citation from Marshal Petain of France. Mr. and Mrs. Biggers, Miss Alma Anderson and Miss Willie Merle Trapp attended the funeral from Hedley.

Serious Injury May Be Avoided by Drying Up Animal Some Time Before Calving.

Many a good dairy cow is seriously injured through poor handling before calving. The best milkers have a long period of milking. If not discouraged, they will give milk in worth-while quantities right up to calving. All too often they are encouraged, rather than having anything done toward reducing the flow. The consequence is not only a stunted calf, but a freshened cow that will never give more than three fourths the milk she would were she given a six weeks' rest. It is an easy matter to dry up a cow. Dread Disease Most Likely to Appear in Herds During Months of Oc tober and Nevember.

Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.

October and November are the months when the dread disease, hog choiera, is most likely to appear. During those months and until snow covers the ground swine raisers are urged by the United States Department of Agriculture to be especially observing when feeding hogs in the morning. Any animals in the herd which fail to come to their feed, and particularly hose having arched backs and rough oats, should be removed promptly rom the rest of the herd.

In some cases hogs sick with cholera die within a few days; in others the disease may assume a chronic form and linger for several weeks. If cholera is suspected swine growers should immediately call a competent veterinarian to make a proper diagnosis and to apply the preventive se rum treatment if they are found to be affected with choiers. ### Do you know what constitutes a strong constitution?

To have sound, healthy nerves, completely under control, digestive organs that are capable of absorbing a hearty meal, means you have a strong constitution! Your general attitude is one of optimism and energy.

But an irritable disposition, frequent attacks of indigestion, and a languid depression, indicate your system is not in correct working order.

Probably you are not eating the proper food. Probably the nutritious elements are not being supplied to your system in the proper way.

Grape-Nuts is the wholesome, delicious cereal that promotes normal digestion, absorption and elimination, whereby nourishment is accomplished without auto-intoxication. A mixture of energy-giving wheat and malted barley comprise the chief elements of Grape-Nuts. A dish at breakfast or lunch is an excellent, wholesome rule to follow.

You can order Grape-Nuts at any and every hotel, restaurant, and lunch room; on dining cars, on lake boats and steamers; in every good grocery, large and small, in every city, town or village in North America.

THE MAN YOUR BOY WILL BE.

You boy will be a man;
You like to look ahead a lot.
The future try to scan.
You hope he'll be a man in fact
As well as man in size.
And so his every boyish act.
You watch with anxious eyes.

The man your boy will be, If he the truth will follow well You try to make him see; You need not watch his nights and days In search of guilt or guile— You only need to turn your gaze Upon yourself awhile,

There is the place for men to look,
For fathers to inquire;
Sons do not learn life from a book,
They learn it from their sire.
The rule you make your boy obey
Must be the rule for you—
The boy will heed the thing you say,
But more the thing will do. But more the thing will do

ORTENSE is essentially a French name, though she has been must work. If you are fit for the job, adopted by all countries and she has the almost unique distinction among feminine names of having no contractions, diminutives or offspring of any form. Hortense she begins and Hortense she remains throughout history, with the single exception of Italy where the "H" is sometimes dropped and she is called Ortensia.

Like Sylvia, she is something of an ancient sylvan name, having come originally from the Latin "hortus," meaning a garden. The slave who tended those elaborate Roman gardens was called hortensius, and, finally through some strange quirk of fancy, it came to name an honorable old plebelan game.

For many centuries it continued in Italy and gradually the masculine form Cook together one cupful each of Ortensio came into use as a proper sour cream and brown sugar; when name, quickly followed by the feminine Ortensia. The most famous Or-Boil two and one-half tablespoonfuls meats. Add flavoring and spread on tensia of those days was Ortensia Mancini, the niece of Mazarin. This potable lady carried her name into France, where the French straightway placed the stamp of their language upon it by calling it Hortense. Since that time many famous women have

THE ISLAND.

Synopsis—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old maidbut never too old to think of marriage — with more money than brains, is invelgled by a strong-minded spinster. Miss Higglesby-Browne, into financing an expedition to hunt for burned treasure on Leeward island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel and is unwillingly carried along. By no means concealing her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Cuthbert. Vane. Talking with Dugald Shaw, leader of the expedition, Virginia very frankly expresses her views, practically accusing Shaw and the other members of the party, including a somewhat uncertain personage Captain Magnus, and a shady "financier," Hamilton H. Tubbs, of being in a conspiracy to defraud Jane Harding. Landing on the island is a matter of some difficulty, Virginia being carried ashore in the arms of Cuthbert Vane.

"I was," I announced, moved to defiance by the neighborhood of Mr. Shaw. "Before we started I was so afraid that if you had listened you might have heard my teeth chattering. But I had at least the comforting thought that if I did go to my end it would not be simply in pursuit of sor-did gain!"

"And indeed that was almost a waste of noble sentiment under the circumstances," answered the dour Scot, with the fleeting shadow of an coraging smile.

I promised myself, as I went with Vane toward the fire, that some day I would find the weapon that would penetrate the Scotchman's armor-and would use it mercilessly.

CHAPTER V.

The Captain's Legacy.

When in my tender years I was taken to the patinee, usually the most thrilling feature of the spectacle to me was the scene depicted on the drop-curtain. Directly I was seated -in the body-and had had my hat taken off and been told not to wriggle, I' vaulted airily over the unconscious audience, over an orchestra engaged in tuning up, and was lost in the marvelous landscape of the dropcurtain. The adventures which I had there put to shame any which the raising of the curtain permitted to be seen upon the stage.

I had never hoped to recover in this prosaic world my long-lost paradise of the drop-curtain, but morning revealed it to me here on Leeward Island. Here was the feathery foliage, the gushing springs, the gorgeous flowers of that enchanted land. And here were the soft and intoxicating perfumes that I had imagined is

The palms were nowhere more abundant than in the hollow by the cove where our camp was made, and their size and the regularity of their order spoke of cultivation. Guavas, oranges and lemons grew here, too, and many beautiful banana-paims.

"I know perfectly well that every one there has seen it dozens of times, and of course I cannot have a new one now-I am not complaining-I would really rather not go at all."

"I'm rather tired of the old crowd." Her mother saw the red lips quiver and knew it was because Carolyn Wright would be there with a group of young girls and men from the city. and that Paul Mason might be among them. Paul had been very devoted to Nancy the winter before and people had expected them to marry, but the last dancing party had come and gone word had been asked and he rtified herself behind a little pride and gone everywhere, observant mother had noticed did not wear the rose-colored dress again. It was a charming dress of soft satin and Nancy had looked like a rose herself as she danced the evening through. Almost any man would have capitulated to its allurement, but Paul must have been made of sterner stuff for he rode away was a cloud in her eyes which had not been there before.

"Why don't you wear the rose satin, Nancy?" asked her mother.

Nancy paled and for a moment she hid her face in her mother's lap. cannot, mother dear; it is such a happy dress," she whispered.

Mrs. Deering bent and kissed the brown head. "Wearing a 'happy dress' might bring happiness back to you, dearie," she said, and the words went to Nancy's heart. Of course Paul would never come back again, but wearing it would help her to forget him, forget his fickleness. She had learned to love the big shy fellow, and she believed that that last night at the club dance, when she had worn the rose satin dress, he would have said something about his love, but he had gone soberly away.

So she did not wear the blue dress but came running down in the rose colored satin looking like her old self. Her mother admired her from the crown of her bronze hair to the little trim ankles and silver shoes. "Mrs. Wright said Paul was coming," thought Mrs. Deering, "and perhaps my girl

"This-rose dress?" Nancy dered how he could remember.

"Yes-you had it on the last time I danced with you.' Nancy did not tell him this was the first time she had worn it since Ruth Law, Noted Flier, Resents the Implication That She Is Something of an Oddity.

The public is forever asking questions and always the same ones," says Ruth Law, "which we aviators answer over and over again. Now I am going to be the questioner, and will somebody answer my question?

"Why do men and women alike take it for granted that a girl who files an airplane must be a giant and always rough, mannish and a little bit wild?

"In a hotel in Detroit recently I had occasion to employ the services of a public stenographer. At the conclusion of my dictation when I had signed my name to the letters she had written, the girl looked at me as though she had seen a ghost and asked if I was really Ruth Law. When I acknowledged the fact she stammered: 'Oh! I thought you were so different.' Right then I determined to find out why she though: I should be so different. After much persuasion she said that anyone who could fly an airplane and stand on the top while it loops the loop must be sort of different from other people. I had my answer, and for the first time since I took up aviation I realized the penalty we women have to pay for doing the things we want to do, if they are a little different from the usual run of women's activities

"I love all outdoor sports, aviation the best of all, of course. I have met many of the girls who have excelled their particular lines of endeavor and they are never unusual, either in their looks or behavior.

"The so-called mannish woman is a pest, and as far as I have been able to observe, she never accomplishes anything further than strutting around looking important and doing nothing. The real women, as a rule, are always modest and womanly, regardless of their occupation, and an aviatrix is no exception to the rule." -Ohio State Journal.

It Was Too Rough. On the day after his first-and last -boxing match a sad and disappointed man hobbled off to see a doctor. His head was bandaged, his arm was in a sling, his face was a mass of courtplaster, and he had borrowed a crutch "Hurt yourself?" queried the doctor.

Hurt himself! The patient grunted. Of course he'd burt bimself! "Feel any pain?" asked the doctor. Feel any pain! The patient gave a
