DAN MOODY SPOKE IN HEDLEY WEDNESDAY

Hon Dan Moody honored our town with a visit Wednesday afternoon. Having been invited to stop here, he arrived about 5 o'clock and made us a 25 or 30 minute talk. A large and enthusiastic crowd greeted him here and his remarks were well received. His opinion of a certain party, name of Ferguson was expressed in a way that we could all understand what he meant.

Mr Moody spoke at Clarendon Wednesday night, and many Hedleyans heard him there or at Memphis in the afternoon.

Clive and John Robert Lawrence returned on Saturday from a visit to relatives at Iredell. Mrs Lawrence and her mother, Mrs J. A. Fouts, started with them but while awaiting train connections in Fort Worth Mrs Fouts fell and suffered a dislocated hip. It was necessary to take her to a hospital, and of course Mrs Lawrence remained with her. Mrs Fouts is getting along in years, but it is expected that if no complications arise she will soon recover.

FORT WORTH BOOSTERS HERE NEXT MONDAY

The Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce Special Train containing Fort Worth boosters on their way to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Annual Convention at Amarillo, will arrive in Hedley at 5 p. m. next Monday, June 21st.

The purpose of this trip is to enable the representatives of Fort Worth business interests to get first hand knowledge of the trade possibilities of the towns visited, and to make acquaintances of merchants, which will be of mutual benefit to all concerned.

The famous Fort Worth Police Band will accompany the delegation and render several numbers while here.

The Informer hopes our people will turn out and give these Boosters a warm reception.

Be sure and hear the preaching at the Church of Christ next Sunday.

Miss Lottie E. What Radio Means to the Farmer

MEETS RADIO MEANS BUSINESS

By A. ATWATER KENT

PLUCKING dollars out of the air was one trick of the old-time sleight-of-hand artist that never failed to give his audience a thrill. While it was recognized as a trick, the mere suggestion that dollars might, somehow, be plucked from the ether stirred the interest of the average spectator more than many other feats of legerdemain requiring much greater skill. It touched his money sense—and the "pocket nerve" has long been recognized as one of the most sensitive in the human makeup.

Today, however, government experts hold that the illusion of the magician has been changed into the fact of actual accomplishment. Dollars are being taken from the air. Official investigation, in fact, reveals the air as a potential source of wealth for the farmers of this country to an extent rivaled only by the productivity of the soil itself.

This transformation is being brought about by the development and extension of radio facilities and services to fit the special needs of agriculture. For it is in agriculture that radio seems certain to find its greatest development as a utility with a direct dollar and cents value to its users.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, who has given much study to the use of radio as an aid to agriculture, recently said:

"Radio is already a vital factor in the economic and intellectual life of the farmer. It is easy to foresee millions upon millions of dollars added to the value of agriculture through services provided the farmer by radio."

Folks on the farms and in the country towns where general prosperity depends on the prosperity of agriculture are particularly favored by radio. To the city man or woman, the use of radio is limited to recreation and the reception of general information. They enjoy the concerts, the dance programs, the lectures and other features that come to them by day and night over the air, but their pleasure and enjoyment is the principal recompense for their investment in radio equipment.

The same programs that entertain the city listener are received also by listeners-in on the farm, where they are received with equal pleasure and satisfaction. But in addition to the programs of entertainment and general information, of interest alike to city and country, radio is being used more and more to carry to the farmer special information of direct assistance to him in the production and marketing of his crops, the breeding and care of his live stock and the prevention of loss and damage from storms, pests and other emergency conditions.

It is this service that raises radio, for the farmer, out of the class of a mere instrumentality for pleasure and recreation alone, and makes of it a utility as helpful in the business of farming as the stock ticker and the telephone are to the broker or business man in the city.

The greater emphasis on radio as a practical dollars-and-cents investment for the farmer does not come from radio manufacturers or broadcasters or from any group primarily interested in the radio industry. It comes, instead, from the United States Department of Agriculture, whose prime interest is in the progress and prosperity of the American farmer.

The department began an experimental radio market news service in December, 1920. A laboratory transmitter at the United States bureau of standards was used to broadcast, on a 400-meter wave length, by radio telegraph from Washington, a radio marketgram and turn it over to the newspapers in their own towns, or give copies to the banks or stores to be posted on bulletin boards.

ASSEMBLING RADIO SETS

RADIO IN THE HILLS OF WEST VIRGINIA

The practical results of this first experiment, I am told, encouraged government authorities to broaden the service, and in April, 1921, through arrangements with the Post Office department, wireless market reports were broadcast several times a day from air mail radio stations in half a dozen different cities. By January, 1922, these market reports were being relayed and broadcast by radio telegraph through a chain of stations reaching from coast to coast.

Then came the era of radio telephone broadcasting and with it the government's radio service for farmers grew by leaps and bounds. Well-established schedules of weather, crop and market reports are now broadcast from more than 100 stations in all parts of the country and no agricultural community is out of reach of Uncle Sam's farm radio service.

A recent study by the department, through its 2,500 county agents, of the extent to which farmers are finding this service of direct help in their business brought what the government experts regard as convincing proof that a radio receiving set is now definitely recognized as a part of the agricultural plant of the up-to-date farmer. Typical of this view, as expressed by these farm experts, is one I have seen from Earl S. Miles, county agent for Washington county, Indiana.

"Farmers in this county," Mr. Miles reported, "now think of radio in terms of an investment that will return a profit through more intelligent selling of live stock. The most encouraging thing today is to see farmers, located 15 or 20 miles from a railroad, equipped with a radio and a truck. The radio keeps them informed as to the market, and when prices are right they can put their stock on the market within two or three hours. Before the day of farm radio they had to take chances on what the market would be when they reached the yards."

Gardner C. Norcross, county agent for Plymouth county, Mass., reported still another angle of advantage for the farmer equipped with radio. "Radio," he says, "has proved one of the most effective methods of teaching better farm practices and thereby appreciably increasing farm profits."

As a result of the thorough endorsement by county agents of the benefits being bestowed by radio and the appreciation voiced directly by the farmers themselves, four new farm features were recently put on the air by the Department of Agriculture, all designed to be of direct material advantage to the farm family. These are: A farm news digest, consisting of short items of agricultural news not accessible to the average farm reader; "Fifty Farm Flashes," a daily service of 50 timely, practical questions put by farmers and answered by agricultural authorities; the housekeeper's half hour, an informal program designed to supply both information and inspiration to housewives, putting at their disposal the great fund of facts interesting to homemakers which are developed by the government bureau of home economics and similar research agencies and the Radio Order of Junior Gardeners, a program especially for boys and girls but helpful also to grown-ups.

The latter, it seems to me, gives an authoritative discussion of timely gardening subjects. Boys and girls who enroll in the order are later furnished the talks and supplementary gardening material in printed form.

In addition to these programs, broadcast by the government for the direct benefit of farmers, I am told that agricultural information of a sort that returns dividends in dollars and cents is being distributed by radio through more than a score of state agricultural colleges. Many of these colleges are now using radio in broadcasting their college extension courses. One fine thing about this is that boys and girls financially unable to attend college are, through radio, enabled to enroll for these courses, take their examinations and receive college credit therefor. Radio owes a great deal to Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, formerly head of the Kansas State Agricultural college at Manhattan, Kan., who was the pioneer in the broadcasting of college extension courses. As a result of the extensive use by this institution of radio as an aid to agriculture, under Mr. Jardine's direction, Kansas claims a larger percentage of farms radio equipped than any other large agricultural state.

Of necessity, the dollars-and-cents side of radio on the farm is often the deciding factor as to whether or not a farmer can afford to equip his home with a radio. But, despite any direct financial return, it is to be doubted, after all, whether the money profit that the farmer receives through his radio, however great, represents its greatest value to him.

Tea Table Talk

In contrast to the story that the earl of Arlington was the first to drink tea in England about the year 1658, a correspondent quotes from a news sheet of that year the advertisement "That excellent, and by all physicians approved, China drink, called by the Chinese 'Tcha,' by other nations 'Tay,' alias Tee, is sold at the Sultanesse Head Coffee-House, in Sweetin's Rents, by the Royal Exchange, London." "In 1690 (he adds) an act of parliament imposed a duty of eight pence per gallon on all tea made for sale, and it is reasonable to suppose that the beverage would be very popular when this was done."

Oysters are now being hatched in incubators.

Fire Pockets in Volcanoes

The modern theory of volcanoes imagines that the reservoirs of molten lava which feed the fire peaks are small and superficial. Instead of communicating with the earth's supposed interior fires, the two volcanoes of Hawaii probably possess, not far below the earth's surface, some kind of local pocket of fluid and highly heated lava. Similar pockets exist, it is believed, beneath the other active volcanoes,

AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:45
 Preaching at 11:00
 Senior League at 7:30, upstairs
 Junior League 7:30, downstairs
 Preaching at 8:30

The text at the morning hour is to be, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me."

At the evening hour Brother Mann, pastor at Wheeler, is to preach for us. Bro. Mann will bring us a message that will be both interesting and helpful to all. We hope to have a well filled house. Come without your coat.

Sunday night we begin our one week Sunday School Training School. We are planning to have three classes each evening: One in The Pupil, taught by Bro. Mann; one in The Missionary Message of the Bible, taught by Mrs. Hawkins; and one in the Organization and Administration of the Sunday School. I will teach this class. I think we have a sufficient supply of the text books for each of these classes.

The class in the Missionary Message of the Bible may meet in the afternoon instead of at night. The other two will meet at night, and we invite visitors, but we are very anxious for all who will to do the work and take the examination. This work means much to the future interests of the church.

We want to begin the devotional service about 8:15 each evening and have about 35 minutes for this. This service will be in the hands of Bro. Mann, largely. It will consist of various kinds of music and short addresses each evening by Bro. Mann. This service will be worth your coming to, even if you do not stay for the study period.

We trust that all who can will arrange to avail themselves of the opportunities offered next week.

J. W. Hawkins, Pastor.

Preaching at the Church of Christ next Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night.

First Baptist Church Notes

Our Sunday School seems to be gaining in its interest in Bible study and in its loyalty to the church services as well as in its average attendance. It has a very efficient force of officers and teachers. The congregations and the interest in the preaching services seem to be growing now without any extra advertising expenses. We are profoundly thankful for the very generous free advertising we are getting from the bootleggers and evolutionists. If they will keep right on "cussing" us, we will soon need a larger church house. A few more weeks of secret confabs and special sessions will get us a real hearing. We are still "banging around" and preaching a little bit once in a while. The people wish to know the truth for themselves and they will surely find it out sooner or later.

Next Sunday morning the subject will be "Glory to the Church" and the text will be found in Eph 3:21. The subject for the evening sermon will be "The Desolation of Hatred" and the text will be read from Ps 34:21. If you wish to study the argument beforehand, read Rom 8:5-11. Everybody has a general and most cordial invitation. You are very welcome. The gospel has power yet to save sinners. The Lord is for us. Victory is in sight. Bring along with you all of the bootleggers and evolutionists and "roadside spooners." We are ready now to take on the whole crowd together. Come with quiet nerves and prayerful hearts. We do not intend to rock the boat too far; but just enough.

J. H. McCauley, Pastor.

A "SURPRISE PARTY"

On Tuesday of this week Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Swafford were given a surprise birthday dinner, the 30th of May having been Mrs. Swafford's birthday and the 15th of June Mr. Swafford's.

Mrs. Roy Swafford and Mrs. O. R. Culwell planned the affair and carried it out with the help of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Adamson and Mr. and Mrs. Charley Dickson. The dinner was cooked, all ready for serving, and carried to the Swafford home, where the party was received in delighted surprise. Those present at the dinner in addition to the "honorees," were Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Adamson, Mr. and Mrs. Charley Dickson, Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Culwell and three small children, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Swafford, Miss Oleta Mason and Miss Nita Culwell. Uncle Charley was the oldest person present, being 81; Mr. Swafford next, 77; and Mr. Adamson third, 75. Now these three boys may be sick and not able to read the paper, if eating will make folks sick, for after they were through the table was not so heavily loaded. In the afternoon a number of friends came in with a "miscellaneous shower." They were Mrs. J. H. Richey, Mrs. C. L. Kinsey, Mrs. S. C. Richerson, Mrs. J. R. McFarling, Miss Geneva McFarling, and others sent in gifts. The shower consisted of handkerchiefs, silk socks, shirt towels, eggs, butter jelly, canned pears, peaches, berries, fryers, and even chewing tobacco for Grandpa. It was indeed an enjoyable occasion, and the surprised recipients spoke and looked their deep appreciation.

The party finally broke up, each member wishing for these dear old people many more happy birthdays.

Calling Them When Most Were Very Young

Buffalo you old enough to look back a quarter of a century ago and remember with any degree of vividness the fascinating scenes and events that made up the American years of 1900-1904? Or are you of the younger generation which wonders how its parents managed to exist without motors, movies, jazz bands, radios, lipsticks, bobbed hair, and knickers?

But they did exist. And more. They had a good time, and in addition were on hand to witness some of the most remarkable changes ever packed into one generation. Your grandfather who now pilots his whizzing flivver over smooth, hard roads can remember the time when his ox team plodded

Those Were Times of the Gibson Girl, Bicycles and Corsets

In 1925, skirts receded to the knees, stockings below them. Garters (were) worn visibly below the knee. The high-boned collar passed. With it went tight-lacing, and almost the corset itself.

Tracing the rise of bobbed hair, Mr. Sullivan points out that "women workers (during the World War) discovered that under limitations of time and otherwise, work and care would be facilitated by short hair. Women in ammunition factories found that powder got into their hair and was dangerous. . . . War-time photographs showed women wearing over-

In the later '90s Charles Dana Gibson's drawings in sheer black and white largely displaced the chromo and achieved an almost universal vogue. His characters, always clean and fine, composed the models for the manners of a whole generation of Americans, their dress, their pose, their attitude toward life, Mr. Sullivan says. (Copyright, by Collier's Weekly.)

carpet, with huge, highly colored designs, underlaid with padding and tacked down."

On the walls are two or three of Charles Dana Gibson's drawings with the "Gibson girl," magnificently pompadoured and corseted and high-chinned; perhaps a sketch of the old southern darkey by Kemble; one of Remington's Indians, or even a Maxfield Parrish.

"Within the usual American home Monday was always 'wash day,' attended by a soapy, steamy scent of suds," Mr. Sullivan recalls. "Water frequently had to be carried in buckets from a well some distance from the house. Clothes were 'put to soak' the night before, and washing was begun as early as four in the morning. It was a matter of pride to have the washing hung before breakfast, and neighbors would vie with each other in seeing whose washing appeared first on the line. Tuesday was 'ironing day,' and the irons were heated on a hot stove. . . . Women's and children's clothing was made at home, and usually the shirts of the men. . . . No man was ashamed to wear an honest patch. . . . Friday was 'cleaning day,' Saturday was 'baking day.' . . . To use much 'baker's bread' was an indictment at once of a housewife's industry and of her pride in her calling.

"To the relief of this routine there came first the Chinese laundry, and later the community laundry as a business institution; the dry cleaner, the electric washing machine and wringer, the electric iron, the vacuum by gasoline motors were devised, which furnished light for buildings, helped the housewife in her daily tasks, and pumped water for domestic uses. Electricity or gasoline began to milk cows, curry horses.

"Release from much hard physical labor (thus) actually came, but life did not become more simple. New needs, new desires, were stimulated. Luxuries became necessities. . . . Instead of comparing his state with the past, instead of reflecting that he was far richer in material comforts than George Washington, who was the richest American of his generation—instead of that, the average man made his comparison with the richest of his own generation."

Looking at the outward surface of American life, Mr. Sullivan tells us that one of the most marked changes was in woman's dress and adornment.

"Just before 1900, the vogue of the bicycle had begun a revolutionary innovation, which, after 1900, was carried further by a greater participation in athletics by women in colleges, by increased employment of women in business, and by certain curious consequences of the (World) war. . . . The bicycle, authorities agree, started the revolution. In the late '80s and early '90s, when the high wheel was supplanted by the 'safety,' women began timorously to ride. Previous to that, almost the only sport freely permitted to women by old-fashioned convention had been croquet. Women had ridden horseback, but only on sedate side saddles and in a riding habit, in which the amount of covering and cloth was even greater than the long trains of ordinary dress.

"Manufacturers began to make a safety bicycle adapted to women by nets to protect skirts from becoming entangled in the wire spokes. Gradually and daringly a few women began to wear shorter skirts, weighting the hems down with little strips of lead."

Then came "lawn tennis, accompanied by modification of stays and corsets. That met with outraged criticism. 'Ministers exhorted their congregations to eschew the ungraceful, unwomanly, and unrefined game which offended all the canons of womanly dignity and delicacy.' But sports for women began to be adopted in the women's colleges, then beginning to expand. . . . The more daring began to appear in bloomers. These were ridiculed in the press and denounced from the pulpit.

"It took years for the changes in dress to pass from costumes for sports into ordinary wear. Skirts ending at the ankles for street wear in bad weather were ridiculed, were not more gravely condemned. . . . In 1900 the standards of style in appearance and dress ran to 'smallness,' and called for high, tight-laced corsets, tight kid gloves, and shoes usually a size or more too small. The standard of beauty in waists called for one that could be 'easily clasped with two hands.'

"By 1925 the 'Sunday best' had passed away; woman tried to look her best at all times. . . . With other changes, dresses that required ten yards of material were supplanted by some requiring less than three. Cotton stockings almost disappeared, and silk took their place. The long sleeves of 1900 receded to none at all alls, knickers and with hair bobbed. Other women soon took up the practice. Finally it became a fad. At the end of the war it showed some signs of dying out, but was revived by motion picture actresses. By the beginning of 1924, bobbed hair was practically universal. Nearly all new spring hats were so small that only bobbed heads could get into them. Many women were forced into the vogue. It was almost impossible to find a hat large enough for a woman with long hair. New styles of bobbing were invented. Flappers, middle-aged women, gray-haired grandmothers, invaded men's last retreat, the barber shop. Men complained. Finally an ingenious barber in California put out a sign: "Barber Shop for Men Only."

What made possible the hue and cry over Free Silver, Trust-Busting and New Freedom? He tells us it was the end of free land, the immense increase in population, the reduction in currency by one-half since the Civil War, and the decrease of liberty following the law that "the amount of regulation the individual must endure is directly proportional to the density of population multiplied by the velocity of its units."

THERE'S a long, long trail awinding through the realm of sports clothes this season, with emphasis on the winding. The trail proves bewildering but fascinating to the fashion reporter in search of authoritative information, for sports clothes embrace so many types and these types are all so greatly varied, that it is hard to reach conclusions. But with all this attitude of go-as-you-please, as long as you know the way, on the part of stylists there are certain beaten paths that all are safe in following. One thing that is fully settled is the vogue of the two-piece costume for sports wear and the popularity of the jumper suit. These are developed in many kinds of material, with radium silk, shantung and crepe de chine, scheduled for warm weather favorites. There are innumerable suits in which two materials are used or two patterns in wool or silk, as in suits with plain skirts and checked, striped, or otherwise figured, jumpers, or the reverse of this, with skirts in large checks or bold plaids, worn with plain jumpers. Bordered fabrics are cleverly used in light and heavier woolsens and stripes are ingeniously managed, as may be seen in the handsome sports coat pictured here. Plaided skirts hold first place in all kinds of suits, followed by the circular models.

the simpler coats, of light woolen materials.

"The simpler the better" seems to be the slogan of manufacturers and designers of high-class coats and capes for little girls. Very pretty coats made of rep, or twill or flannel, are straight in line, with straight, standing collars, and are fastened with a cloth-covered button and loop at the neck and two buttons just below the waistline. For trimming, narrow bandings, in a deeper shade than the coat, are stitched in three rows above the hem line and on the sleeves near the wrist. Light green, June rose, blue and coral-sand, are among the livelier colors chosen for coats and capes. Capes in these gay colors, as well as in darker

Knitted sports frocks and two-piece dresses are reinstated in the modes and are usually decorated with borders in colors. Speaking of color, this is the feature stressed in all lines of sports wear. Light pastel shades, as well as vivid tones, are used everywhere—but color combinations are more than usually pleasing, because of the beauty of popular shades. Rose, in new tones, light and deeper greens, coral sand and many yellows, make country clubs blossom with color. White with a color used for trimming, is well represented in the displays of one and two-piece frocks.

through muddy trails. Your grandmother who pushes a button to flood her room with electric light can remember the time when the candle mold, twelve long tubes of tin, joined together, was still a common household article.

Mark Sullivan reviews it all for you in "The Turn of the Century, 1900-1904," the first volume of his series "Our Times, the United States, 1900-1925," published by Charles Scribner's Sons. His 602 pages of text, illustrations, maps, and statistical tables lay before you not only the full pageant of these glorious years, but also the preliminary events which were taking place before the dawn of the century.

Reading along, you are impressed that things in those days moved with less speed and noise. In the cities at six in the morning workmen, some on bicycles, some afoot, are going to their toll. They get $1.25 a day, but they are singing and whistling. For a man could buy a suit of clothes for $8, an overcoat for $9, a pair of shoes for $2.50. Dressed in gingham at 5 cents a yard, his wife goes to market, where she buys a dozen eggs for 14 cents, a pound of butter for 24 cents, and all the sugar she wants for 4 cents a pound. Crossing the quiet street down which speed no "devil-wagons," she enters a dry goods store, where she buys a pair of shoes for $1.95, a corset for 50 cents, and a length of 50-inch all-wool, sponged and shrunk French chevot at 79 cents a yard.

Her shopping done, she goes home to a common boxlike or L-shaped house. "The parlor of 1900 was furnished, usually, with 'three-piece sets,'" Mr. Sullivan says. "These were upholstered in red or green plush, gaudy successor to the horsehair, then just beginning to be looked on with disapproval. For bedroom and dining-room suites, golden oak was in vogue. On the floor was an ingrain sweeper, the electric sewing machine, the fireless cooker. Housework was completely revolutionized. The adaptations of electricity for housework began to arrive about 1900 in the cities. By 1925 the long antenna of the power stations had begun to reach along country roads, and the conveniences that the city woman had enjoyed were now made available to the farmer's wife. SAFFRON SKIN FROM SOUR BILE

SOUTH GEORGIAN DRIVES OUT ENORMOUS QUANTITY SOUR BILE WITH DODSON'S LIVER TONE.

After a long period of the worst form of weakness and the terrible feeling of sickness that comes from a system loaded with sour bile, Mr. Sam Puckett says: "When I kept getting those bilious attacks reckon I took enough calomel to kill a mule. Got worse all the time. Finally I turned saffron color all over. My wife happened to read about Dodson's Liver Tone in the Weekly Constitution, so we drove to town and got a bottle. It was like magic. It drove quarts of sour bile out of me as black as ink. From that day I have felt as if I had a new liver, and whenever I begin to feel weary and bilious, with no appetite, a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone puts me to rights."

This wonderful, quick-action, liver starter ought to be in every household, if for no other reason than to stop the use of dangerous calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is pleasant to take, even for children, and never makes you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Vare, Wet, Wins in Pennsylvania—Senate to Probe Campaign Expenditures.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM S. VARE'S victory in the Pennsylvania Republican senatorial primaries was the week's most notable event in the United States, because, as viewed by Mr. Vare himself and a great many other people, it was a victory for the cause of modification of the Volstead act rather than for Mr. Vare personally. True, the combined votes of Vare's rivals, Senator Pepper and Governor Pinchot, exceeded that of Vare by about 150,000, and both of them are pronounced dries. But Vare's election, if he wins in November means one more wet vote in the senate; and according to many political observers the Pennsylvania vote makes it certain that the beer and light wine issue will be a leading issue in the congressional elections this year. Party lines will not be closely observed in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts and some other states, it is predicted. In the Keystone state Vare's Democratic opponent will be William B. Wilson, former secretary of labor, nominated without opposition. He is a dry. Governor Pinchot may decide to lead a bolt of dry Republicans and run independently, and if he does, the Democrats think they have a chance to win in that overwhelmingly Republican state. Anyhow, the dries declare they will not support Vare, though Senator Pepper asserts he will stand by the party's choice.

PENNSYLVANIA'S primaries had something more than an echo in the senate chamber. Indeed, there was a veritable explosion there, for Senator Reed of Missouri took advantage of the published stories of vast expenditures on behalf of certain of the Republican candidates and brought forward again his resolution for investigation of primary campaign expenditures, first offered during the April contest in Illinois. He made a red hot speech in support of it, and was answered by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, who tried to defend the fair name of his state. The affair was embarrassing especially to those senators who come up for re-election in the fall. The vote to take up the resolution for consideration was 45 to 34, the nays being all Republicans. When the vote on adoption was taken it revealed some sudden and rather panic-switching. Fourteen more Republicans joined the Democrats in voting aye, and seven G. O. P. men ducked out of the chamber to avoid being recorded. The 14 were:

Butler, Cameron, Cummins, Curtis, Dale, Gooding, Harrell, Jones of Washington, McMaster, Pine, Stanfield, Weller, Williams and Willis. The seven who fled were: Capper, Deneen, Keyes, Reed of Pennsylvania, Watson, Norbeck and Robinson of Indiana. The vote was 59 to 13.

Comment by Reed of Missouri was characteristic: "The fact is that 34 of you voted against taking up this resolution, and 21 of you, and I am going to drop into the vernacular—wheled inside of 7 1/2 minutes. . . . It is a remarkable exhibition of intellectual activity. . . . Yes, in that period of time 21 senators changed their minds. If we had had two or three minutes more the other 13 would have changed also, in my judgment."

Vice President Dawes appointed this committee to carry on the investigation: Senators David A. Reed (Rep., Pa.), Charles S. Deneen (Rep., Ill.), Robert M. La Follette, Jr. (Prog. Rep., Wis.), James A. Reed (Dem., Mo.), Thomas F. Bayard (Dem., Del.), Reed of Pennsylvania, Deneen and Bayard, resigned for good reasons and were replaced by Fernald (Rep., Maine) Goff (Rep., W. Va.) and King (Dem., Utah).

The committee is empowered to sit during the summer recess and to investigate the expenditures of money not only in primaries that already have been held but also in those yet to come and in the impending election campaigns of the 34 senators who come up for re-election in November.

SENATOR REED of Pennsylvania, who supported Pepper, said he would advise his friends in the Pennsylvania legislature to vote for the holding of a referendum on prohibition modification, and at a conference with President Coolidge and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon he urged this course. New York state is going to have such a referendum, for the bill providing for it was signed on Wednesday by Governor Smith after he heard both sides.

MARSHAL JOSEF PILSUDSKI succeeded in his revolutionary coup in Poland, and now doesn't seem to know just what to do with his success. He installed Rataj as acting president and Charles Bartel as premier, but he firmly resisted all the demands that he assume the dictatorship, asserting that he was a liberal democrat and opposed to absolute rule. Neither would he stand as a candidate for the presidency. This led the Socialists and Radicals to desert him and to denounce him for a needless shedding of blood, although the marshal apparently had done all he could to avoid this. Indeed, his supporters say he originally had no intention of overthrowing the government, desiring merely to make a demonstration before the Belvedere palace in protest against the corruption of the administration. Acting President Rataj has summoned the national assembly to meet May 28 to elect a new president. Many of the deputies demanded that the session be held outside of Warsaw.

General Haller, one of Pilsudski's leading opponents, was supposed to be organizing a counter-revolution at Posen where it was reported he had more than 10,000 troops. Pilsudski started negotiations with him to avoid further fighting.

DISPATCHES to the London Daily Express tell of another terrific bombardment of Damascus by the French in which the Midan section of that city was utterly destroyed by shells and flames and 500 civilians and 100 rebels were killed. Druse felahs had attacked French military posts and then took refuge in the Midan quarter. The French commander gave the inhabitants an hour to get out of range of his guns and then opened fire on the barricaded Druses with three-inch guns, howitzers and airplanes. The bombardment lasted 15 hours and the slaughter of the natives was terrible. In a recent interview given a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune the nationalist leaders of Syria declare they will continue the fight against the French to the death unless their demands for independence are recognized. They hope for intervention by the League of Nations, since France holds the mandate for Syria under the league.

THE Norge, which landed at Teller, Alaska, instead of Nome, after its epochal flight over the North pole, has been dismantled for shipment to the United States and Captain Amundsen says he is done with polar exploration. Since he has been to both the North and South pole, his retirement is understandable. On the other hand, Lieutenant Commander Richard Byrd, the American who was first to fly over the North pole in an airplane, is now planning an expedition to the South pole. He and his party have left Spitzbergen for London.

THOUGH Great Britain is returning to normal conditions in most respects after the general strike, the miners are still out. Thursday their delegates in conference rejected the government's proposals for settlement because they included a reduction of wages. The delegates asserted the pay does not at present provide for a decent standard of living.

The country is beginning to learn what the general strike cost it. Walter Runciman, in the house of commons, estimated the total direct loss to trade at £26,500,000 (about $130,000,000) and indirect loss to the country's industries of more than £30,000,000. Four railway companies roughly estimated their losses at more than £5,000,000, while the National Union of Railway Men figures the strike cost to it at more than £1,000,000. The

MRS. BETTIE HEATH
 Mrs. Bettie Heath died last Wednesday, June 9th, at the home of her son, T. F. Heath, in this city. She was 91 years old, and death came as a result of the infirmities incident to old age. Funeral services were held at the First Baptist Church Thursday, conducted by Rev. J. H. McCauley. Interment was made in Hedley cemetery. A large crowd of sorrowing relatives and sympathizing friends attended these services.
 Mrs. Heath was born in 1835 in Illinois. When six years old she moved with her parents to Arkansas. In that state she was married to J. W. Heath, and in 1861 they moved to Grayson county, Texas. Here Mr. Heath left his young wife with his parents, went back to Arkansas and enlisted in the Army where he served three years.
 Mrs. Heath was the mother of thirteen children, only four of whom are now living. Her husband died in 1916. Since then she has been living with her children, a considerable part of that time having been spent at the home of her son here.
 Mrs. Heath was converted at the age of 16, joined the Baptist church, and for 75 years has lived a consecrated Christian life. In the Heavenly Home, with the dear ones gone before, she awaits the coming of those left behind.

FROM MR. AND MRS. TIMS
 Marlin, Texas, June 15, 1926
 Special to The Informer:
 As I lay here in my bed in the sanitarium, wishing for loved ones and friends at home, will try to pass part of the time away by writing—flat of my back; can't even be raised up. Only those who have gone through with such can ever know what I have suffered. We have gotten so many good, cheerful letters from home; too many to try to answer, so I take this method of answering them all at one time.
 I have a sweet Baptist nurse, she is from Waco, and a good, cheerful doctor who can always smile. But, best of all, my hubby can visit me any time. I received a letter from the T. E. L. Class yesterday. Wish each one could see my flowers—they sure are pretty. I think of our class every time I look at them. I can't ever thank you enough. The T. E. L. is the best class in Hedley Baptist church. They don't ever forget.
 It sure is cool here. Haven't had a real hot day yet. We want to be home by the first of July, if we can; but can't tell yet. I'll have to improve fast. They thought that I might be able to be propped up a little while next Sunday. My doctor said I was getting along as well as could be expected. Will be glad to hear from any one who cares to write. In care of Torbett's Sanitarium.
 Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Tims.

NARROW ESCAPE

Synopsis.—Part wolf, part dog—when two months old Baree has his first meeting with an enemy, Papayuchew (young owl). Fighting hard, the antagonists are suddenly plunged into a swollen creek. Badly buffeted, and half drowned, Baree is finally flung on the bank, but the water has destroyed his sense of direction and he is lost, lonely and hungry. For many days his life is one of fear and distress. He meets various creatures of the wild and goes through a thunderstorm. He is learning more and more. He strays into the trapping grounds of Pierrot and Nepeese. Nepeese wounds Baree with a rifle, but he escapes. Baree recovers and learns nature's secrets rapidly. Nepeese is determined to catch Baree and tame him and tries again.

Baree darted to one side and ran for the open meadow. Wakayoo did not stir as Baree sped past him—no more than if he had been a bird or a rabbit. Then came another breath of air, heavy with the scent of man. This, at last, put life into him. He turned and began lumbering after Baree into the meadow trap. Baree, looking back, saw him coming—and thought it was pursuit. Nepeese and Pierrot came over the slope, and at the same instant they saw Wakayoo and Baree.

When they entered into the grassy dip under the rock walls, Baree turned sharply to the right. Here was a great boulder, one end of it tilted up off the earth. It looked like a splendid hiding place, and Baree crawled under it.

But Wakayoo kept straight ahead into the meadow.

From where he lay Baree could see what happened. Scarcely had he crawled under the rock when Nepeese and Pierrot appeared through the break in the dip, and stopped. The fact that they stopped thrilled Baree. They were afraid of Wakayoo! The big bear was two-thirds of the way across the meadow. The sun fell on him, so his coat shone like black satin. Pierrot did not kill for the love of killing. Necessity made him a conservationist. But he saw that in spite of the lateness of the season, Wakayoo's coat was splendid—and he raised his rifle.

Baree saw this action. He saw, a moment later, something spit from the end of the gun, and then he heard that deafening crash that had come with his own hurt, when the Willow's bullet had burned through his flesh. He turned his eyes swiftly to Wakayoo. The big bear had stumbled; he was on his knees; and then he struggled up and lumbered on.

The roar of the rifle came again, and a second time Wakayoo went down. Pierrot could not miss at that distance. Wakayoo made a splendid mark. It was slaughter; yet for Pierrot and Nepeese it was business—the business of life.

Baree was shivering. It was more from excitement than fear, for he had lost his own fear in the tragedy of these moments. A low white rose in his throat as he looked at Wakayoo, who had risen again and faced his enemies—his jaws gaping, his head swinging slowly, his legs weakening under him as the blood poured through his torn lungs. Baree whined—because Wakayoo had fished for him, because he had come to look on him as a friend, and because he knew it was death that Wakayoo was facing now. There was a third shot—the last. Wakayoo sank down in his tracks. His big head dropped between his forepaws. A racking cough or two came to Baree. And then there was silence.

It was slaughter—but business. A minute later, standing over Wakayoo, Pierrot said to Nepeese: "Mon Dieu, but it is a fine skin, Wakabet! It is worth twenty dollars over at Lac Baln!"

He drew forth his knife and began whetting it on a stone which he carried in his pocket. In these minutes Baree might have crawled out from under his rock and escaped down the canyon; for a space he was forgotten. Then Nepeese thought of him, and in that same strange, wondering voice she spoke again the word "Baree."

Pierrot, who was kneeling, looked up at her.

"Oui, Sakahet. He was born of the wild. And now he is gone—"

The Willow shook her head.

"Non, he is not gone," she said, and her dark eyes quested the sunlit meadow.

As she quested the ragged edges of the little meadow for signs of the dog, her thoughts flashed back swiftly. Two years ago they had buried her princess mother under the tall spruce near their cabin. That day Pierrot's whimper that just reached the Willow's ears. Slowly she stretched in an arm. It was bare and round and soft. He might have darted forward the length of his body and buried his fangs in it easily. But something held him back. He knew that it was not an enemy; he knew that the dark eyes shining at him so wonderfully were not filled with the desire to harm—and the voice that came to him softly was like a strange and thrilling music. "Baree! Baree! Upi Baree!"

Over and over again the Willow called to him like that, while on her face she tried to draw herself a few inches farther under the rock. She could not reach him. There was still a foot between her hand and Baree, and she could not wedge herself in an inch more. And then she saw where on the other side of the rock there was a hollow, shut in by a stone. If she had removed the stone, and come in that way—

She drew herself out and stood once more in the sunshine. Her heart thrilled. Pierrot was busy over his bear—and she would not call him. She made an effort to move the stone which closed in the hollow under the big boulder, but it was wedged in tightly. Then she began digging with a stick. If Pierrot had been there, his sharp eyes would have discovered the significance of that stone, which was not larger than a water pail. Possibly for centuries it had lain there, its support keeping the huge rock from toppling down, just as an ounce-weight may swing the balance of a wheel that weighs a ton.

Five minutes—and Nepeese could move the stone. She tugged at it. Inch by inch she dragged it out until at last it lay at her feet and the opening was ready for her body. She looked again toward Pierrot. He was still busy, and she laughed softly as she untied a big red-and-white Bay handkerchief from about her shoulders. With this she would secure Baree. She dropped on her hands and knees and then lowered herself flat on the ground and began crawling into the hollow under the boulder.

Baree had moved. With the back of his head flattened against the rock, he had heard something which Nepeese had not heard; he had felt a slow and growing pressure, and from this pressure he had dragged himself slowly—and the pressure still followed. The mass of rock was settling! Nepeese did not see or hear or understand. She was calling to him more and more pleadingly.

"Baree—Baree—Baree—"

Her head and shoulders and both arms were under the rock now. The glow of her eyes was very close to Baree. He whined. The thrill of a great and impending danger stirred in his blood. And then—

In that moment Nepeese felt the pressure of the rock on her shoulder, and into the eyes that had been glowing softly at Baree there shot a sudden wild look of horror. And then there came from her lips a cry that was not like any other sound Baree had ever heard in the wilderness—wild, piercing, filled with agonized fear. Pierrot did not hear that first cry. But he heard the second and the third—and then scream after scream as the Willow's tender body was slowly crushed under the settling mass. He ran toward it with the speed of the wind. The cries were weaker—dying away. He saw Baree as he came out from under the rock and ran into the canyon, and in the same instant he saw a part of the Willow's dress and her moccasined feet. The rest of her was hidden under the death-trap. Like a madman Pierrot began digging. When a few moments later he drew Nepeese out from under the boulder she was white and deathly still. Her eyes were closed. His hand could not feel that she was living, and a great moan of anguish rose out of his soul. But he knew how to fight for a life. He tore open her dress and found that she was not crushed as he had feared. Then he ran for water. When he returned, the Willow's eyes were open and she was gasping for breath.

"The blessed saints be praised!" sobbed Pierrot, falling on his knees at her side. "Nepeese, ma Nepeese!"

She smiled at him, with her two hands on her bare breast, and Pierrot hugged her up to him, forgetting the water he had run so hard to get.

Still later, when he got down on his knees and peered under the rock, his face turned white and he said:

"Mon Dieu, if it had not been for that little hollow in the earth, Nepeese—"

He shuddered, and said no more. But Nepeese, happy in her salvation, made a movement with her hand and said, smiling at him:

"I would have been like—that. Ah, mon pere, I hope I shall never have a lover like that rock!"

Pierrot's face darkened as he bent over her.

"Non!" he said fiercely. "Never!"

He was thinking again of McTaggart, the factor at Lac Baln, and his hands clenched while his lips softly touched the Willow's hair.

Will Baree finally come under the domination of Nepeese?

Finns' Double Christmas

For centuries before the year 1772 the people of Finland had four Christmas holidays, but a Swedish royal decree issued that year abolished the third and fourth, as it was thought desirable to curtail the festival in the interest of work. But the Finns still have two Christmas holidays, Decem ber 25 and 26 (St. Stephen's day).

MARKET LYNCH DAVIDSON AGAINST EXEMPTING CUT-OVER LANDS FROM TAXATION

Lynch Davidson today charged that a deliberate falsehood is being circulated as to his attitude on the question of cutover timber lands in East Texas. Davidson said the question has been settled by the Legislature, which two years ago passed a law providing for purchase of cutover lands by the state. "This will exempt those lands from taxes, which is the thing that I am charged with attempting to do," said Davidson.

"The facts are that I vigorously and publicly opposed the proposition. It will be my purpose to cooperate in any practical plan to conserve our timber resources, provided such program does not contemplate the purchase of lands by the state or exempting them from taxation. I am opposed to the state's dealing in lands and engaging in the hazards of business."

Davidson said that the campaign of falsehood had gone so far as to link his name with that of John Henry Kirby as participating in an effort to have cut-over lands exempted from taxes. "The facts of the case are that Mr. Kirby is supporting Dan Moody, whose platform is the only one in this campaign which carries any reference to the cut-over proposition," said Davidson.
