POULTRY MONEY vs. Pin Money

Once poultry raising was "the old lady's job"---in that way she made pin money.

Now it pays the grocery bill on prosperous farms and provides enough ready cash to keep the old man's name off the "dotted line."

Want to tackle it? Let's go over the plans together.

PROMINENT MASONS WILL VISIT HEDLEY

At a conference with representatives of the Grand Lodge committee on Masonic Service and Education, Judge James W. McClendon of Austin, chairman of the committee, announced a three months tour of Masonic speakers who will stress education and service. July will be spent in Northwest and West Texas.

They will be in Hedley on Saturday, July 10.

A number of prominent Masons will be among the speakers, including John W. Howerth, S. P. Sadler, Judge Hiram F. Lively and others.

The purpose of the visits is to advocate and present before the Masons of the jurisdiction of Texas a higher standard of citizenship, education among Masons, explaining to them by lectures and motion pictures the achievement of the Masonic fraternity in Texas and point out the need for further relief measures in the name of Masonry. The motion pictures will feature the Home and School at Fort Worth, the Home for Aged at Arlington, the Eastern Star Home at Arlington and the Hospital for Crippled Children at Dallas.

NOTICE

Come and worship with us Sunday, as we are leaving Monday morning for Moody, Texas, where we will visit our parents for two or three days and then go into the battle for the Lord. Our first meeting will begin July 9 at Flat, Texas. Our second will be at Ft. Gate, Texas. Here we are expecting an old time revival and a landslide from Heaven.

Then we will turn our faces toward Hedley with a burden for you and your children, as our revival will begin July 30 and close August 15. Rev. R. M. Hecker of Plainview will do the preaching. Don't miss this meeting; if you hear him once you will come again. We expect to have an old time gospel tent stretched on the church's lot. A revival at the Nazarene church means for your church to be built up. If you know God, begin to pray. If you are lost, begin to repent. Men, women, brothers, sisters, will we stand idly by and let the revival pass without doing a thing and hear someone, maybe your loved one, say: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved."

While we are away, Brother Dawson will have charge and there will be services as usual. One of our young ladies, called to preach, will give you a message one Sunday night.

Come, pray, work!

BROTHER OF HEDLEY MAN PASSES AWAY

Horace K. Jones, 77, resident of Texas for more than 70 years and of Cooke county 50 years, died last Monday at a sanitarium in Gainesville. His home was at Valley View, ten miles south of Gainesville, where the funeral services were held Tuesday.

Mr. Jones was the last surviving charter member of the Garland Masonic Lodge of Dallas county, which was organized 54 years ago as the Duck Creek lodge, when Dallas was only a village. A few years ago, in the Masonic lodge at Valley View, he and four of his sons occupied the stations in conferring the third degree in Masonry on his fifth and youngest son.

Mr. Jones was born in Tennessee and came to Texas with his parents in 1859, locating at old Breckenridge, near Richardson, Dallas county. He had been a member of the Methodist church 62 years.

Last November Mr. and Mrs. Jones celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with "open house" festivities attended by friends from all over North Texas.

He is survived by his wife and eight children, Mrs. J. A. Lane, Mrs. W. C. Moss and Metz Jones, all of Valley View; R. Delbert Jones, Dallas; Congressman Marvin Jones, Gillette; H. K. Jr., Earl and F. Jones of Lubbock.

Mr. Jones was a brother of H. Jones of this city, who lives in Hedley and has a number of friends here.

R. Y. KING ANNOUNCES FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

The Informer is authorized to announce R. Y. King as a candidate for County Attorney of Donley county, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries.

A prominent citizen of Clarendon, in writing of Mr. King's candidacy, says:

"Mr. R. Y. King began the practice of law in Clarendon in the early part of 1915 and practiced in Clarendon and at Hedley until the declaration of war in April, 1917, when he immediately closed his office and volunteered. He saw several months fighting in France and during the time was gassed. As a result of this he was not able to stay in an office until about a year ago, when he returned to Hedley and again began the practice of law at about the place where he left off in 1917. We are sure that Mr. King is remembered by many friends who knew him in this county before the war, and they bespeak for him your favorable consideration."

Your vote and influence will be much appreciated.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

APPLES ATTACKED BY CODLING MOTH

The codling moth or apple worm causes more apples to go to the cull pile than any other pest affecting the crop. Injury to apples is done by the larva of the moth. This larva is a small pinkish worm about one-half to three-fourths of an inch in length. It spends the winter in a cocoon under the bark of the trees and there are two and sometimes three generations per season in this state.

According to C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist for the North Carolina State college, the adult moth emerges about two or three weeks after petals fall but does not deposit eggs until the temperature gets around 85 degrees. The young larvae feed, to some extent, on the foliage of the apple tree, but enter the apples at the blossom end soon after hatching. The worms become mature and leave the fruit on the side about 30 to 40 days after entering. The second brood gets in on the side, generally.

"To control this pest," says Mr. Brannon, "it is very important to fill the calyx with arsenate of lead spray before the calyx closes. Therefore, we recommend that arsenate of lead spray be applied when seven-eighths of the blossom petals have fallen in order to fill the calyx cup or the blossom end of the fruit with poison before it closes. This spray has no relation to the time the first brood of larvae emerge. It is applied several weeks before the larvae will enter the fruit, but it is held there to poison the young larvae which attempt to enter."

"The second codling moth spray is also applied for the first brood, but is to kill those which do not attempt to enter the calyx and which feed on the foliage. Thus we are giving two sprays to kill one brood of the insects. This is important, however, for the second brood comes from the first, and if the first worms are killed, the second brood will be greatly reduced. The third is timed to poison the second brood as they are hatching in greater numbers."

Set Apple Grafts Early, Says a Missouri Expert

Apple grafts made during the winter months should be set out in the nursery row just as soon as the ground will do the work, according to T. J. Talbert of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

The rows should be laid off about three and one-half to four feet wide. The furrow may be opened with a small turning plow. The grafts are then planted in the furrow from ten to fourteen inches apart by standing them up against the vertical side. The soil is then thrown against them with a plow or hoe. The grafts should be planted deeply, allowing only one or two inches to be exposed after the soil is leveled and packed about them.

The grafts should receive frequent and thorough cultivation during spring and summer to keep down weeds and conserve moisture. The young trees may be set in the orchard after one season's growth or they may be allowed to grow two seasons before transplanting.

Set Out Grapevines in Rows for Best Results

Grapevines should be set out in rows, with a distance of six to eight feet between rows, and with the plants about eight feet apart in the row if a vineyard is wanted. For family use a few vines may be set singly wherever there is a suitable place. When in rows it is usual to set posts in the rows and string wires on the posts, on which the vines are trained to grow. If plants are set singly a post may be set near the plant on which the vines can be trained and without wires.

Grapes should have high and well-drained land on which to grow, and the soil should not be very rich, nor should the vines be manured, at least until they are quite old. On rich land the vines make too much growth without making much fruit.

Horticultural Facts

- Plant at least one tree this spring.
- The practice of planting pears on soils not suited for growing apples is discouraged.
- Pear growing is especially recommended for the grower who has over-specialized in apples.
- A growing realization is developing of the fact that grapes are one of the surest and most profitable crops.
- Raspberries need a good supply of manure. It is applied in the winter between the rows.
- We are using or destroying our forests four and one-half times faster than we are replenishing them. Remember this.
- The apple trees which are cultivated often do not require the use of artificial fertilizers, although occasionally the land is lacking in nitrogen, in which case soil amendments should be applied.

grated by the action of the Egyptian assize court which recently acquitted six out of seven persons accused of political assassinations and other crimes. Judge Kershaw, British president of the court, resigned in protest, and the British government has declared to the Egyptian government that it does not accept the court's judgment and reserves full liberty to take what steps it considers necessary to protect the safety of foreigners. As a precautionary measure a warship was sent from Malta to Alexandria. Official opinion in London was that the situation was "distinctly grave." The trouble goes back to the murder of Sirdar Sir Lee Stack in November, 1924, by Nationalists. Zagloul, a Nationalist leader, then resigned as premier. He always has been considered unfriendly to Britain. Some of the murderers Stack were executed. Those re-acquitted also were accused of crime and Lord Lloyd, British commissioner, says the court so influenced by Zagloul's advocacy that it did not dare pass a verdict on them, though the evidence of their guilt was complete.

MARSHAL PILSUDSKI didn't want to be president of Poland. He was elected by the national assembly, but declined the office because he had no confidence in the people who elected him. He thought that the constitution was unworkable. Next day the assembly asked Prof. Ig. of Lemberg college, a complete instrument in the situation. The situation was confusing and dangerous. The saw correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says: "Nobody in Poland, even Marshal Pilsudski's closest friends, can get an expression from him on his program or plans. Nobody in Poland knows from where to expect orders or instructions, nor where the ship of state is drifting. The police and public services are becoming demoralized."

The opposition to Pilsudski is growing stronger and bolder daily, and he may be eliminated unless he stages another military coup.

WOMEN in attendance at the International Suffrage alliance convention in Paris had a lovely week of scrapping, the main result of which was the victory of the conservative element in the exclusion of the delegates from the National Woman's Party of America. The latter demands equality of all rights for women while the League of Women Voters of America, which won in the struggle, believes the women should be especially protected in industry by law. The Women's party representatives were supported by a number of liberals from other countries, and later these forced the adoption by the congress of two measures which amount to a demand for equality in certain forms of industrial legislation. The defeated women, headed by Mrs. Belmont, began laying the foundations for a new international association which, while not hostile to the alliance, will work solely for equal rights in everything.

FOR the first time in history a native-born American has captured the British amateur golf championship. Jess Sweetser accomplished this feat in impressive style at Muirfield, Scotland. Then the American Walker cup team, of which Sweetser was a member, went into action at St. Andrews, winning three of the four two-ball foursomes the first day. The second day the Yankees clinched the possession of the trophy by winning three of the eight individual matches. The British won four and one was all square.

MILITARY leaders in Portugal have accomplished a bloodless coup d'etat and the cabinet and President Machado have resigned. Commander Cabecadas, Gen. Gomez da Costa and Senator Carmona now control the government.

In reading a magazine I ran across a sentence which did me good; I hope you may gain benefit from it, also. The writer was a convict grumbling at decent people, and said: "Disorderly living does more injury to a community than the few crimes which earn for their perpetrators long terms of penal servitude."

There is much in the statement; probably the convict stole it from a respectable source, since convicts are not fair and accurate thinkers.

Every day, in my walks I pass a lonely house where lives a martyr woman. In the yard stands an old wagon, but there are no horses in the tumble-down stable. Everywhere are signs of neglect. A son is foolish, and annoys the neighbors a good deal. Occasionally he has a fit in the yard, when we see a bedraggled, unhappy woman hurry out, and take him inside. The husband and father, we hear, is gone most of the time; looking for work, and rarely finds it. Two sons are with the father. The mother lives on what the husband sends her, and it is safe to say he doesn't send much.

I don't care to do anything for the African heathen, but should like to do something for this martyr woman, and do not know how to go about it.

In India the fact is as plain as the nose on a man's face that there is too much religion. And this religion has become so complicated, because of centuries of quarreling about it, that few one understands it: If it has a means of grace no one knows how to take advantage of it. When in that country a Brahmin priest who acted as my guide confessed that he did not understand his own religion and expressed the belief that no one did.

American politics has become as complicated and meaningless as the religion of the Hindus. In our country politicians exact a greater tax and create more disturbance than religion does in India. There are no ceremonies in the Hindu religion more meaningless than the ceremonies in our politics. Our orators and writers say more meaningless and foolish things about liberty, justice, etc., than the Hindus say about their Joss Man. We are neglecting simple, important, true things as regularly as the Hindus, and pay an equally great price for talk about Joss Men stuffed with saw-dust.

What a great amount of disorderly living goes on in every neighborhood—in almost every household!

It is the great crime of humanity. Mothers spoiling children which might become a valuable asset to the community.

Husbands and wives wrangling to their own hurt.

Lack of thrift.

Lack of efficiency.

Lack of ordinary politeness.

Waste, waste, waste.

If a man steals a thousand dollars the loss is not great compared with every one in the community being somewhat disorderly.

If a man shoots another only two are harmed directly and a few others indirectly, and this happens only at rare intervals.

But disorderly living goes on in a community every day and night and every one engages in and suffers from it.

It is one thing that should cause us all to blush.

I often think people should understand each other better, God knows there is no great mystery about us.

Men and women everywhere talk mean about their neighbors, but never mean half of it; they know most of it is untrue.

Sometimes a foolish theory will cause quite a ripple on the ocean of fact.

In reading I lately ran across a question that caused me to put down my book, and think: "Has there been as much heroism displayed for the right as for the wrong?"

Has virtue had as many martyrs as vice?

Virtue is nearly always rewarded; so there is no martyrdom in virtue; but the ill-behaved are punished; and how steadfast they are in bad habits! Is vice as natural as virtue? Does a bad man inherit vice as a good man inherits virtue, and is one as stubbornly vicious as the other is stubbornly virtuous?

A Buddhist prayer: "I pray thee to have pity on the vicious; thou hast already had pity on the virtuous by making them so."

What is your greatest fault? Mine is that I put off until tomorrow that which I should do today. And I find a very old maxim about this fault; it seems to have been common a long time ago.

You claim certain people are fools. The only way to prove your contention is to get along better than those you condemn. If you succeed in doing it, you will prosper well enough; the punishment will go to others.

The senate also passed the air expansion bill, and both bills went to conference.

LE the senate judiciary subcommittee was deciding that all the measures should be there were two outstanding announcements on the house side. Senator Borah of Idaho, during the Presbyterian assembly in Baltimore, came out so strongly in favor of prohibition and against the attempts to weaken enforcement that he was immediately hailed by the most enthusiastic drys as their national leader and a fit man to be nominated for President by the Republicans in 1928. Certain political speculators who have been trying to find signs of the waning of Coolidge's strength called attention to the fact that the Anti-Saloon leaders have kept away from the White House ever since the President made it clear he was not disposed to let Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews be disciplined for his testimony before the senate committee, and made the most of this in their guessing that the drys were preparing to oppose the re-nomination of Coolidge.

Borah was unsparing in his denunciation of liquor and the liquor traffic, but, being a conservative constitutionalist, he made his strongest point when he said: "Even a greater question than the liquor question is the capacity of the American people for constitutional government. The question of the hour is: Shall we live up to and enforce that provision of the Constitution until in the orderly method pointed out by the Constitution we see fit to change it? Can we enforce the law which we have deliberately made?"

"It is perhaps as definite and specific a challenge of our love for the Constitution, our capacity for self-government, as could be presented to our people. I am infinitely more con-

CHARGES and counter-charges made exceedingly lively the closing week of the Republican senatorial primary campaign in Iowa. Senator Reed of Pennsylvania brought to the senate's attention the fact that Brookhart campaign literature had been inserted in franked envelopes with a speech which Reed had made opposing the unseating of Brookhart, and mailed to Iowa voters. Brookhart and his campaign manager denied responsibility for this and the former declared it was a "frame-up bearing the earmarks of the Daugherty gang."

Major Lund, campaign manager for Brookhart, sent this telegram to Senator Reed of Missouri: "Reports that Cummins campaign forces using an unlimited amount of money, estimated at $500,000, and backed by federal and state patronage. State now flooded with paid Cummins workers in districts, counties and even precincts. As striking contrast, we have Brookhart, a poor man, backed only by people of Iowa and campaign committee laboring day and night to conduct a campaign with entire expenditure not exceeding $5,000."

Managers for Cummins said their organization was large but that all the workers were contributing their time free.

TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC

We wish to increase our prosperity and to expand our trade, to grow in wealth, in wisdom, and in spirit, but our conception of the true way to accomplish this is not to open our places of business only on every fourth (4th) Sunday in each month.

People wishing to buy the general line of garage supplies will be welcome to do this on Saturdays. Respectfully,

First Baptist Church Notes

We were delighted to have so many visitors in our regular preaching services last Sunday at both morning and evening worship. Our Sunday School voted unanimously to extend its thanks and expressions of appreciation to the garages and the filling stations which have signed a closing agreement. Also, that it urge all Christian people to buy their gasoline and auto supplies on Saturday as much as possible was included in the motion. This pastor believes any business establishment which can close on a Tuesday on account of a Chamber of Commerce session in Amarillo can also close its place of work on each and every Sunday. For one, he can say he appreciates the Sunday closing of all who do so in obedience to God's Word.

Next Sunday the morning hour subject will be, "Should All Churches Defend the Faith of Our Common Salvation?" Read the text in the third verse of Jude's Letter and come, if you care to hear a straightforward discussion with no dodging around the actual facts now prevalent. Commencing promptly at 8:30 p. m. and speaking exactly forty minutes, we will discuss Rev 22:15 "Should a Clique of Laymen in a Dying Church Conspire to Make a Lie and Get Lie Lovers to Circulate It on the Pastor of a Successful Church?" Everybody who heard that one to the effect that a pastor in our town was afraid to distribute his announcements and was later afraid to discuss what he had announced are especially invited to come; and the "rink" who made it up and loved its circulation are urgently invited to come and hear what the Lord's Word says about their certain destination. This pastor is very nervous now and expects to hear more about it, but he is going to tell it on them anyway. Let everybody else keep cool, even if the pastor does get shaky.

Special music.

KING'S LIZARD

"It's not every lizard that can boast of a royal name," said King's Lizard. "No," said Mrs. King's Lizard, "that is so. In fact, I'm so fond of our name and so proud of it that I wouldn't even change it to call myself Queen Lizard."

"I call myself Mrs. King's Lizard, as all the Mrs. King's Lizards have been doing since there have been King's Lizards and Mrs. King's Lizards."

"I don't know that there is an special reason for such a name," said King's Lizard.

"I don't suppose it is because I am gray with black and brown touches. I don't suppose it is because I have a ringed tail which is bright and beautiful."

"I don't suppose it is because I came from far down South in New Mexico and I don't suppose it is because I have scales on my back which number six."

"Six scales on my back makes it interesting and nice for me, but that is probably not the reason why I am called King's Lizard."

"Neither do I suppose it is because the scales upon my sides are smooth. No, I do not suppose any of these reasons enough."

"There should be some other reason for my name. But I don't really believe I know what it is."

"I have tried to find out, but no one seems to be able to inform me."

"They all say that it must be because I was so named for some reason or other years and years ago. Now that may be so, but it is not enough of a reason to satisfy me. Yet it must satisfy me, I suppose."

I'm So Fond of Our Name.

"Especially considering I cannot find out any other reason. If any one does know the reason for my name I would be very grateful if they would tell me."

"Oh, very grateful, indeed. They would be doing the whole King's Lizard family a favor."

"Surely they would be pleased to do the King's Lizard family a favor. It is not every day in the week or month or year that one has a chance to do a favor like that for the members of the King's Lizard family."

"As a matter of fact, I don't see any reason for being called King's Lizard, and yet King's Lizard I have always been called, and always will be called. And it's a nice name, a fine, royal, mighty name. It's a name of which to be proud, it is."

"It is, indeed," agreed Mrs. King's Lizard. "But let me suggest something to you."

"What is it?" asked King's Lizard. "Do not feel sad because you cannot find a reason for having such a name."

"Do not try to find out if there isn't some reason tucked away which you haven't thought of as yet."

"Don't bother to think of why you have a fine name, but just think that you have, and be happy over that."

"I am happy over it," said King's Lizard.

"But you're always wondering why you have such a name," said Mrs. King's Lizard.

"Don't wonder any more. Just be a proud and happy King's Lizard all your King's Lizard days."

And the King's Lizard agreed that that was the sensible thing to do, decidedly the sensible thing to do.

Fatter Seat Wanted

The street car was crowded. A stout woman entered and a slender young man got up and offered her a seat.

It was evident to all that she could not sit in the small space. A small boy opposite at this moment spoke to his mother. "Mother, why doesn't somebody give her a fatter seat?"

He Had to Turn

Junior was in the first grade, and, like most little folks, was very eager to obey his teacher. When she, therefore, instructed the pupils that afternoon that they must go straight home, he hurriedly put up his hand.

"But, teacher," he said, "I must turn at York road."

All Set

"Well, dad, they have fired me out of college and I'm ready for work. What shall I do?"

"Grab that bag of potatoes," said the grocer, "and rush for the truck with it. That's touchdown. Get set. Go. Rab, rah, rah!"

"A MAN-DEVIL"

Synopsis.—Part wolf, part dog—when two months old Baree has his first meeting with an enemy, Papayuchisew (young owl). Fighting hard, the antagonists are suddenly plunged into a swollen creek. Badly buffeted, and half-drowned, Baree is finally flung on the bank, but the water has destroyed his sense of direction and he is lost, lonely and hungry. For many days his life is one of fear and distress. He meets various creatures of the wild and goes through a thunderstorm. He is learning more and more. He strays into the trapping grounds of Pierrot and Nepeese. Nepeese wounds Baree with a rifle, but he escapes. Baree decovers and learns nature's secrets rapidly. Nepeese is determined to catch Baree and tame him and tries again. Baree is strongly drawn to the girl, but still fears man. Baree makes friends with the beaver.

It may be that Umisk saw him. It may be that very soon the story of his adventure was known by all the inhabitants of Beaver Town. For when Baree came upon Umisk eating his supper of alder bark that evening, Umisk stood his ground to the last inch, and for the first time they smelled noses. At least Baree sniffed audibly, and plucky little Umisk sat like a rolled-up sphinx. That was the final cementing of their friendship—on Baree's part. He capered about extravagantly for a few moments, telling Umisk how much he liked him, and that they'd be great chums. Umisk didn't talk. He didn't make a move until he resumed his supper. But he was a companionable looking little fellow, for all that, and Baree was happier than he had been since the day he left the old windfall.

That friendship, even though it outwardly appeared to be quite one-sided, was decidedly fortunate for Umisk. When Baree was at the pond, he always kept as near to Umisk as possible, when he could find him. One day he was lying in a patch of grass, half asleep, while Umisk busied himself in a clump of alder-shoots a few yards away. It was the warning crack of a beaver tail that fully roused Baree; and then another and another, like pistol-shots. He jumped up. Everywhere beavers were scurrying for the pond.

Just then Umisk came out of the alders and hurried as fast as his short, fat legs would carry him toward the water. He had almost reached the mud when a lightning flash of red passed before Baree's eyes in the afternoon sun, and in another instant Napakasew—the fox—had fastened his sharp fangs in Umisk's throat. Baree heard his little friend's agonized cry; he heard the frenzied flap-flap of many tails—and his blood pounded suddenly with the thrill of excitement and rage.

As swiftly as the red fox himself, Baree darted to the rescue. He was as big and as heavy as the fox, and when he struck Napakasew, it was with a ferocious snarl that Pierrot might have heard on the farther side of the pond, and his teeth sank like knives into the shoulder of Umisk's assailant. The fox was of a breed of forest highwaymen which kills from behind. He was not a fighter when it came fang-to-fang, unless cornered—and so fierce and sudden was Baree's assault that Napakasew took to flight almost as quickly as he had begun his attack on Umisk.

Baree did not follow him, but went to Umisk, who lay half in the mud, whimpering and snuffling in a curious sort of way. Gently Baree nosed him, and after a moment or two Umisk got up on his webbed feet, while fully twenty or thirty beavers were making a tremendous fuss in the water near the shore.

After this the beaver pond seemed more than ever like home to Baree.

Chapter VI

White lovely Nepeese was shuddering over her thrilling experience under the rock—while Pierrot still offered grateful thanks in his prayers for her deliverance and Baree was becoming more and more a fixture at the beaver-pond—Bush McTaggart was perfecting a little scheme of his own up at Post Lac Bain, about forty miles north and west. McTaggart had been Factor at Lac Bain for seven years. In the Company's books down in Winnipeg he was counted a remarkably successful man. The expense of his post was below the average, and his semi-annual report of furs always ranked among the first. After his name, kept on file in the main office, was one notation which said: "Gets more out of a dollar than any other man north of God's lake."

The Indians knew why this was so. They called him Napao Wetikoo—the man-devil. This was under their breath—a name whispered sinisterly in the glow of tepee fires, or spoken softly where not even the winds might carry it to the ears of Bush McTaggart. They feared him; they hated him. They died of starvation and sickness, and the tighter Bush McTaggart clenched the fingers of his iron rule, the more meekly, it seemed to him, did they respond to his mastery. His was a small soul, hidden in the bulk of a brute, which rejoiced in power. And here—with the raw wilderness on four sides of him—his power knew no end. The Big Company was behind him. It had made him king of a domain in which there was little law except his own. And in return he gave back to the Company bales and bundles of furs beyond their expectation. It was not for them to have suspicions. They were a thousand or more miles away—and dollars counted.

Gregson might have told. Gregson was the investigating agent of that district, who visited McTaggart once each year. He might have reported that the Indians called McTaggart Napao Wetikoo because he gave them only half price for their furs; he might have told the Company quite plainly that he kept the people of the trap-lines at the edge of starvation through every month of the winter, that he had them on their knees with his hands at their throats—putting the truth in a mild and pretty way—and that he always had a woman or a girl, Indian or halfbreed, living with him at the Post. But Gregson enjoyed his visits too much at Lac Bain. Always he could count on two weeks of coarse pleasures; and in addition to that, his own womenfolk at home wore a rich treasure of fur that came to them from McTaggart.

One evening, a week after the adventure of Nepeese and Baree under the rock, McTaggart sat under the glow of an oil lamp in his "store." For six weeks there had been in him a great unrest. It was just six weeks ago that Pierrot had brought Nepeese on her first visit to Lac Bain since McTaggart had been Factor there. She had taken his breath away. Since then he had been able to think of nothing but her. Twice in that six weeks he had gone down to Pierrot's cabin. Tomorrow he was going again. Marie, the slim Cree girl over in his cabin, he had forgotten—just as a dozen others before Marie had slipped out of his memory. It was Nepeese now. He had never seen anything quite so beautiful as Pierrot's girl.

Audibly he cursed Pierrot as he looked at a sheet of paper under his hand, on which for an hour or more he had been making notes out of worn and dusty Company ledgers. It was Pierrot who stood in his way. Pierrot's father, according to those notes, had been a full-blooded Frenchman. Therefore Pierrot was half French, and Nepeese was quarter French—though she was so beautiful he could have sworn there was not more than a drop or two of Indian—Chippewayan, Cree, Ojibway, Dog Rib—anything—there would have been no trouble at all in the matter. He would have bent them to his power, and Nepeese would have come to his cabin, as Marie came six months ago. But there was the accursed French of it! Pierrot and Nepeese were different. And yet—

He smiled grimly, and his hands clenched tighter. After all, was not his power sufficient? Would even Pierrot dare stand against that? If Pierrot objected, he would drive him from the country—from the trapping regions that had come down to him as heritage from father and grandfather, and even before their day. He would make of Pierrot a wanderer and an outcast, as he had made wanderers and outcasts of a score of others who had lost his favor. No other Post would sell to or buy from Pierrot if Le Bete—the black cross—was put after his name. That was his power—a law of the Factors that had come down through the centuries. It was a tremendous power for evil. It had brought him Marie, the slim, dark-eyed Cree girl, who hated him—and in spite of her hatred "kept house for him." That was the polite way of explaining her presence if explanations were ever necessary.

McTaggart looked again at the notes he had made on the sheet of paper. Pierrot's trapping country, his own property according to the common law of the wilderness, was very valuable. During the last seven years he had received an average of a thousand dollars a year for his furs, for McTaggart had been unable to cheat Pierrot quite as completely as he had cheated the Indians. A thousand dollars a year! Pierrot would think twice before he gave that up. McTaggart chuckled as he made his way through the darkness to the door. Nepeese as good as belonged to him. He would have her if it cost—Pierrot's life. And why not? It was all so easy. A shot on a lonely trap-line, a single knife-thrust—and who would know? Who would guess where Pierrot had gone? And it would all be Pierrot's fault. For the last time he had seen Pierrot, he had made an honest proposition; he would marry Nepeese. Yes, even that. He had told Pierrot so. He had told Pierrot that when the latter was his father-in-law, he would pay him double price for furs.

And Pierrot had stared—had stared with that strange, stunned look in his face, like a man dazed by a blow from a club. And so if he did not get Nepeese without trouble it would all be Pierrot's fault. Tomorrow McTaggart would start again for the half-breed's country. And the next day Pierrot would have an answer for him, Bush McTaggart chuckled again when he went to bed.

Until the next to the last day Pierrot said nothing to Nepeese about what had passed between him and the Factor at Lac Bain. Then he told her.

"He is a beast—a man-devil," he said, when he had finished. "I would rather see you out there—with her—dead." And he pointed to the tall spruce under which the princess mother lay.

Nepeese had not uttered a sound. But her eyes had grown bigger and darker, and there was a flush in her cheeks which Pierrot had never seen there before. She stood up when he had done, and she seemed taller to him. Never had she looked quite so much like a woman, and Pierrot's eyes were deep-shadowed with fear and uneasiness as he watched her while she gazed off into the northwest—toward Lac Bain.

She was wonderful, this sliver of a girl-woman. Her beauty troubled him. He had seen the look in Bush McTaggart's eyes. He had heard the thrill in McTaggart's voice. He had caught the desire of a beast in McTaggart's face. It had frightened him at first. But now—he was not frightened. He was uneasy, but his hands were clenched. In his heart there was a smoldering fire. At last Nepeese turned and came and sat down beside him again, at his feet.

"He is coming tomorrow, ma cherie," he said. "What shall I tell him?" The Willow's lips were red. Her eyes shone. But she did not look up at her father.

"Nothing, Nootawe—except that you are to say to him that I am the one to whom he must come—for what he seeks."

Pierrot bent over and caught her smiling. The sun went down. His heart sank with it, like cold lead.

From Lac Bain to Pierrot's cabin the trail cut within half a mile of the beaver pond, a dozen miles from where Pierrot lived; and it was here, on a twist of the creek in which Wakayoo had caught fish for Baree, that Bush McTaggart made his camp for the night. Only twenty miles of the journey could be made by canoe, and as McTaggart was traveling the last stretch afoot, his camp was a simple affair—a few cut balsams, a light blanket, a small fire. Before he prepared his supper the Factor drew a number of copper-wire snares from his small pack and spent half an hour in setting them in rabbit runways. This method of securing meat was far less arduous than carrying a gun in hot weather, and it was certain. Half a dozen snares were good for at least three rabbits, and one of these three was sure to be young and tender enough for the frying-pan. After he had placed his snares McTaggart set a skillet of bacon over the coals and boiled his coffee.

Of all the odors of a camp, the smell of bacon reaches farthest in the forest. It needs no wind. It drifts on its own wings. On a still night a fox will sniff it a mile away—twice that far if the air is moving in the right direction. It was this smell of bacon that came to Baree where he lay in his hollow on top of the beaver dam.

Since his experience in the canyon and the death of Wakayoo, he had not fared particularly well. Caution had held him near the pond, and he had lived almost entirely on crawfish. This new perfume that came with the night wind roused his hunger. But it was elusive: now he could smell it—the next instant it was gone. He left the dam and began questing for the source of it in the forest, until after a time he lost it altogether. McTaggart had finished frying his bacon and was eating it.

Enter the villain, Bush McTaggart! How does Baree fit into the situation.

SUMMER BRINGS COOL FULLNESS MOV

GOOD sense and fashion are getting better acquainted—although they still have occasional differences. In the matter of summer frocks they are going hand in hand. Fashion is devoted to sheer fabrics and good sense is devoted to comfort; neither of them has to make any sacrifice to provide cool frocks for hot days and this is what has been done for morning, noon or night in town or country.

In either place the average woman gets into a crisp house dress in the morning or into a casual day dress of some sort, made of washable material. Much attention is given to the styling of these morning frocks, which must

Just now black lace over a pink slip has many admirers, but nothing outranks the graceful, soft frocks of plain or printed chiffon in pastel colors that dine and dance at the end of a perfect day. These airy gowns are pleasant things to think about and the pleasantest of reflections concerns their inexpensiveness.

Feathers Go Into Fabric

A new fabric of great softness and durability is about to be offered in the smart European stores. It is a cloth woven from ostrich feathers. The feathers used are plucked from the quills and woven together with other materials after being specially treated. It is described as being lighter than thistle down, softer than the finest crepe and it displays a different pattern with every movement of the wearer.—Exchange.

Huge Twilight World

Man lived for ages on this little earth before he knew that on the outskirts of our solar system, about 27,000 million miles away, was a huge twilight world 85 times larger than our earth, but so far away and receiving so little sunshine, that it was not actually discovered until 1846. Now it is known Neptune has an immense cloud-laden atmosphere, far beneath lies the real Neptune blanketed everlastingly with mist, its short day of seven hours alternating between twilight and darkness. Although far out in space Neptune is not a frigid world, the clouds and water vapor prove that. It probably has sufficient internal heat to sustain a tropical vegetation. Haze as Neptune is, few earthlings have seen it, as it is visible only through a telescope and at certain times of year.—Capper's Weekly.

Feed for Young Turkey
Is of Great Importance
Young turkeys should not be hatched for 36 to 48 hours after the eggs are laid. As soon as they are hatched, however, they should be given water and allowed to eat and drink freely. It is a good idea to keep them in a clean, dry place, which is perhaps the most important thing to do.

The first feeds usually stale dry bread crumbs with sweet milk. This is a little of this about 24 hours. It is not a little of this about 24 hours. Other eggs, boiled and mashed and bread crumbs, in a thin layer, in a pan.

Pinhead soon usually called good feeds to give. But with the animal protein product usually used, some use it and some use it. Use it generally poultry feed the thick part.

Poultry Notes

Overheating is bad for hen but for duck eggs it is fatal.
Only strong, sturdy chicks into profitable, mature birds.
While chickens can't live on light, they can neither live without.
The wise poultryman will cull the lying members from the laying flock.
Geese should be mated several months in advance of the breeding season.
Plowing up the ground helps to rid the soil of disease germs and intestinal worms.
A multitude of products are derived from poultry, meat and eggs being the principal leaders on the market.
Rigid culling throughout the growing season cuts the cost of raising chicks and lowers the mortality among them.
Avoid filling the poultry house with chickens beyond its capacity. Each bird ought to have at least 8 inches of space on the roost.
To secure the highest winter egg production, the birds must be well fed, mature and healthy and the housing conditions must be good.
Limberneck may be caused by worms or by botulism poisoning or it may be a symptom of such diseases as fowl typhoid, cholera, etc.
Remember that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure and that the best remedy for worms is prevention—the use of new ground and colony houses.

ARE you familiar with the outstanding figures in the history of the human race? How large is your knowledge of the outstanding facts of present-day civilization? Here's an opportunity to test yourself on these questions. Following is a questionnaire presented to one hundred students representing four college years in a large American university. About one-third of the number were third or fourth year students. There were seven foreigners in the group. The test was given toward the end of the college year, with the work of the second semester nearing completion.

"It might well have been assumed that the college study in English, history, mathematics, the languages and the sciences, should have refreshed the memory in regard to many of the leading points in the questionnaire," says the originator of the test writing in a special educational number of the New Republic. The article disclosed neither the identity of the writer nor, for reasons which can only be guessed at, the name of the university.

"There were sixty questions in the list originally given," he continues. "The highest grade, 98 per cent, was made by a student of Slavic descent, twenty-two years old. The second rank, 97 per cent, was made by a more mature Russian. The highest grade made by a native American was 89 per cent; the lowest 10 per cent.

"It may be asked what is the purpose of such a questionnaire. Do the answers indicate with any degree of certainty the trend of thought of the modern college student, or justify our drawing any definite conclusions? First, the results seem to emphasize the current belief that a majority of young people go to college today a diploma. The memorizing of it seems important insofar as it brings about an end. They are as quickly forgotten, and leave little or no lasting impression. In the modern college there is no time for meditation; no assimilation or digestion. Students hurry through classes and hurry away; the car fare and the departure. An hour of jazz, a movie, a party to the next town assists in eradicating the impression which may have been received in the classroom.

How many of these questions can you answer? Any good dictionary ought to provide most of the answers against which you can check your replies.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE PART I

Tell why the following men and women were great. Give their nationality and, if possible, give the century in which they lived. Mention at least whether they are living or dead:
