DISTRICT COURT IS BUSY THIS WEEK

The District Court for the Fall term convened Oct. 18, and from the number of cases pending this term promises to be a very busy one, there being 19 new civil cases and several new criminal cases pending, waiting the action of the Grand Jury.

There were only eight criminal cases and seven civil cases left from last term of court. The length of the term will depend largely upon the number of cases which will require juries.

The Grand Jury was organized with Joe Goldston as foreman. On account of the need of the farmers in their fields, Judge Templeton excused several of the men who were most needed.

In his charge to the grand jury Judge Templeton called their attention to the laws relative to murder, perjury, forgery, swindling, fraudulent mortgages, burglary, and theft of automobiles and parts of automobiles. The jury was told that those who dealt with home brew and choc were as much violators of the law as those who deal in whiskey. In his charge the Judge said he had heard much about the falling down of law enforcement, and the causes and remedies, but that he attributed most of the law violations to a lack of a Christian conscience, either in the individual violator or in people generally, and he thought that a person of conscience is least likely to commit wrong.

Judge Templeton said that he would try to hasten the trials, so that jury men would not be kept out of their fields long, because at this time they have in their fields the earnings of a year's work, which need saving.

When in need of an Oil Cook Stove, Heater Stove, a good Mattress, Furniture, Monitor Washing Machine, or anything in the shelf line—go to Hedley Hardware.

HEDLEY SCHOOLS ARE AIDING THE FARMERS

In order to help relieve the cotton picking situation, Hedley schools have made a change in their daily schedule for a while. They now open for business at 7:45 and turn out at 2 p. m. This will allow pupils to put in several hours a day in the cotton fields, and be quite a lot of help. Also it will allow the school to keep right up with its work.

Some thought the school ought to be closed for a few weeks. J. T. Curtis, of the School Board, wrote the State Department of Education at Austin to find out what effect that would have on our rating. The following reply caused the abandonment of that idea:

Austin, Texas, Oct. 15, 1926
Mr. J. T. Curtis,
Hedley, Texas.

My dear Mr. Curtis: Mr. Marrs is unwilling to make a ruling in regard to the stopping of school for cotton picking without consulting the Committee on Accredited Schools. It is evident that the law contemplates an undivided session and our ruling heretofore has been against division. We have decided in the case of accredited schools, however, to refer it to the Committee to decide what will be done. The bad part about this from your standpoint is that the Committee does not meet until next summer and you will be taking a chance if you close the school. If you should not close for more than a week, and should make up the time at the end of the year, I should be willing to recommend unqualifiedly that no action be taken on cancelling credits. For a longer period, I would simply leave it to the Committee. Very truly yours,

Mary Jo Popplewell,
Chief Supervisor High Schools.

MY JERSEY COW AND CALF FOR SALE

I am not claiming the best cow in the county, but I do claim to have a good one. Her record for November to July, this past, was a little better than 32 pounds, or four gallons, per day for the nine months. I dried her up then to give a rest before the next calf. She was fresh Sept. 29, with a heifer calf from a male that has World Record blood in him. I might sell either cow or calf separate.

If you are really interested in a good cow that comes cheap, considering quality, see me. I sold, during the above named nine months, $292.05 worth of milk from her, besides all the milk and butter we could use.

The Chicago Fire

MASONIC TEMPLE, DEARBORN STREET

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE POST OFFICE RUINS

GRAND PACIFIC HOTEL

FIFTY-FIVE years ago this month occurred a disaster which takes rank as one of the leading events in American history. For October 9 is the anniversary of the great Chicago fire, and although this country has known many catastrophes since 1871, it holds a unique place in the minds of most Americans. Just why this should be is not easy to determine. One reason may be because it was not only the first great catastrophe in our history to send its thrill of horror and sympathy to its victims all over the nation, but it was the most overwhelming calamity that had ever visited any community.

roads, the development of manufactures and its strategic location as a trading center had caused Chicago to forge ahead until it was becoming truly a "wonder city." By 1871 it had a population of 350,000—from 4,000 to 350,000 in 34 years!

From this the fire spread to the tower of the waterworks and soon the entire mechanism was disabled and the water supply cut off. With it went the last hope of checking the flames—If indeed there still was any hope.

Perhaps the better reason is that its aftermath was what we like to think is so typically American. Here was a city that by persistent energy, daring enterprise and far-reaching plans had been built up to a high position with unlimited possibilities for the future. In one night all the effort of 44 years was swept away. A hundred thousand people were homeless and out of employment, 20,000 buildings had been destroyed and property worth nearly two hundred millions of dollars had vanished. In the face of all this it would seem that human nature would give way to despair.

Into the midst of all this peace and prosperity came the fire dragon one Sunday evening. As churchgoers were returning to their homes, they were startled to hear the alarm of fire from the courthouse bell. It was the second alarm that had been sounded within 24 hours, for the night before the city firemen had battled a stubborn blaze all night long before they had succeeded in subduing it.

As the fire swept on toward the lake Gen. Phil Sheridan, commanding officer of the department of the lakes, whose headquarters were in Chicago and who had taken charge of the situation, tried to check the spread of the fire by blowing up buildings along Washab and Michigan avenues. A few structures were saved in this manner, but against the gale that was blowing but little could be accomplished. So from early in the evening of October 8 until late at night on October 8 the conflagration raged, a vast ocean of flame, sweeping over the city in mile-long billows and breakers.

But the hardy pioneer stock of Chicago's citizenry was not the kind that was easily daunted. For them there was no sitting down among the desolation of their city and giving themselves up to mourning over their shattered hopes. The moment the telegraph wires had been repaired, her bankers, with nothing but the future greatness of their city to offer as security, were borrowing millions from eastern capitalists and her merchants were ordering new stocks of goods. The case of one merchant was typical. Before the smoldering ruins of his store had cooled, he put up a sign on the site which read: "All gone but wife, children and energy!"

Cackling geese once saved Rome and a kicking cow destroyed Chicago. The fire of October 8 originated in the barn of Mrs. Patrick O'Leary, an Irishwoman living at 137 De Koven street, who kept a cow and sold milk to her neighbors. Tradition has always had it that Mrs. O'Leary was milking her cow that fateful night, but recent researches into the history of the event shows that it was one of the neighbors, and not Mrs. O'Leary, who was milking the cow at the unseemly hour of 9:30 p. m. Perhaps if Mrs. O'Leary had been doing it, the history of Chicago would have been different.

Before it fled a horde of humanity in a frenzied search for safety along the lake front. But the refugees soon found that standing in the water was unsafe and they sought to escape by a mad rush to the south. The horrors of the scene as well as some of the ludicrous phases of it, are described by an eyewitness as follows:

Out of her travail Chicago with her motto of "I will!" arose to begin building again and within three years there stood a new city beside the lake, new in brick and stone and new in spirit. Within twenty years congress had chosen Chicago as the site for the world's fair to celebrate the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America and the World's Columbian exposition of 1893 set a new mark in such celebrations. Fifty-five years later finds Chicago citizens planning an even greater exposition for 1931, one which will celebrate her centennial and will show to the world that in a hundred years she has arisen to a position which challenges the achievements of any city, no matter how many hundreds of years of history it has behind it.

Blown by a terrific gale the fire had enjoyed a devastating sweep of four miles through a line of wooden buildings which were dry as the proverbial tinder, for there had been no rain for weeks. The fire department, driven back steadily by the onrushing flames, had hoped that the barrier of the river would check the flames. But when the fire reached this barrier about midnight and leaped across, they all but abandoned hope. Buildings of stone, brick and iron in what is now the loop district, which were supposed to be fireproof, crumbled and melted before the terrific heat.

A torrent of humanity was pouring over the bridge, drays, express wagons, trucks, and conveyances of every conceivable species and size crowded across in indiscriminate haste. Collisions happened almost every moment. The same long line of men dragging trunks was here, many of them tugging over the ground with loads which a horse would strain at. Women were there staggering under weights upon their backs. Now and then a stray schooner came up and the bridge must be opened. Then arose a howl of indignation along the line audible above the tumult.

To appreciate how great was the disaster that overtook this city on October 9, 1871, it is necessary to review her brief history before the blow fell. The first permanent inhabitant on the site of Chicago was Jean Baptiste Point du Sable, a West Indian negro, who built a rude cabin at the mouth of the Chicago river in 1793. A Frenchman "jumped" his claim and later sold it to John Kinzie, who is often called "the father of Chicago." In 1803 the War department built a fort on the banks of the river—the first Fort Dearborn whose history was to end so tragically in the massacre of 1812. A second Fort Dearborn was built in 1816 and occupied for 20 years. But even the protection it afforded failed to attract settlers and in 1827 Chicago could claim only three families. First platted and named in connection with the survey for a canal route in 1830, the town covered only some three-eighths of a square mile and when it was incorporated in 1837 its population was only 4,100, although there had been a boom after the Black Hawk war.

Apparently stung at the courthouse, the fire now selected as its avenue of approach La Salle street, the financial center of the city, and steadily ate its way along Madison and Monroe streets. Only one structure, the Nixon building, proved to be really fireproof. As for the others, the limestone and even harder stone melted before the terrific heat and ran down like lava from a volcano. The cupola of the courthouse was a framework and burst in flames long before the remainder of the structure succumbed. Long after two o'clock in the morning, when the framework burned, the bell, operated by a mechanical device, continued to toll its warning to the citizens, but it was sounding the knell of a doomed city.

By Monday determined efforts already were being made to bring order out of chaos. Two thousand extra police were sworn in to stop the plundering, state troops were called out and Sheridan's regulars took charge. Relief bureaus were organized by the city officials. Immediately other cities came to the rescue of their stricken sister. Carloads of food and clothing were sent by St. Louis and Cincinnati, Chicago's trade rivals. To counterbalance the scenes of horror and baser human passions which had swept the city during the fire was the wave of sympathy and help which came from all parts of the country. It was in the form of money and provisions and offers of all kinds to help.

The panic of 1837 caused a period of stagnation and all that kept Chicago alive was the canal project and the indomitable grit of men who foresaw a great future for the city. A steady growth began after 1842, with a temporary setback by the panic of 1857, and continued through the Civil war. By this time the entrance of railroads, the development of manufactures and its strategic location as a trading center had caused Chicago to forge ahead until it was becoming truly a "wonder city." By 1871 it had a population of 350,000—from 4,000 to 350,000 in 34 years!

For several weeks the problem of living among the ruins was a real one for even people of wealth. The thousands of homeless people found shelter in hastily constructed shanties and lean-tos and did their cooking in the open. Gradually, however, conditions were bettered and Chicago emerged from the devastation and began the task of rebuilding. The debris from the fire was dumped into the lagoon that formerly separated the tracks of the Illinois Central railroad from the lake front, filling it up and paving the way for later improvements. Within a year the new Chicago had sprung, phoenix-like, from the flames and exactly two years later the great glass-domed building of the Interstate industrial exposition, erected where the Art institute now stands, marked the rehabilitation of a great city after one of the greatest disasters in history.

How to Get Rid of Colds and Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Inexpensive Method That Clears Out the Head, Nose and Throat.

There are many people suffering from chronic catarrh who would like to know how they can stop catching cold after cold. They realize that sooner or later this may lead to deafness and other serious troubles.

Dr. Blosser, for years a specialist in catarrh, was the discoverer of a pleasant, direct method that can be used by women and children as well as men. His remedy is made from medicinal herbs, flowers and berries which you smoke in a small pipe or cigarette, and inhale the vapor into the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs, carrying medicine where sprays, douches and salves cannot possibly reach. It contains no cubes, tobacco or habit-forming drugs.

Dr. Blosser's Remedy is effective in all forms of colds, catarrh, catarrhal headaches and ear troubles that may lead to deafness. You will breathe better and feel better after using it.

If you suffer from catarrh, catarrhal deafness, asthma, hay fever, bronchial irritations, or, if subject to frequent colds, you should try Dr. Blosser's Remedy. Get one of the pocket size packages from any drug store and prove for yourself the pleasant, beneficial effects.

JAMES MICHEL RETIRES

It is reported in mining circles that James Michel, who for three years worked as a common mucker in a small Gold Mine near Lead Springs, Colorado, has retired with a huge fortune.

Michel came to Colorado ten years ago and like hundreds of prospectors found his funds insufficient to purchase a claim, so was finally forced to accept a job as a common mucker. There was a time when the mine did not have sufficient funds to meet their payroll, and it was at this period that Michel used his German ingenuity, accepting a small interest for his labor. However, within a few months all liabilities were paid from the sale of ore and claims, and Michel's little old investment of $12.25 grew and grew and when he retired his income was in excess of $1,000.00 per month.

Write to 410 Railroad Building, Denver, Desk 12, and they will send you information of opportunities and experiences that have eclipsed that of Michel's. (No obligation.)

Ceremony Jinxed

After three unsuccessful attempts within a week, Mrs. Henrietta Wool-smith and Henry Howard were married at Camden, Pa. The first attempt failed when the couple arrived too late to procure a license. The second time the best man left them waiting at the church. Selecting a different church for their wedding they were dismayed to find it had no pastor for the summer. Even at the fourth attempt, the schedule was not perfectly kept, for the bride's daughter failed to show up.

His Ambition

"Looky yur, Gap?" said Zeke Yaw-key. "What the Sam Hill did you have your boy, Banty, tied to a tree when I driv' by yesterday? Was he trying to run away and jine the circus?"

"No, I reckon not," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "As nigh as I could make out he wanted to go to town and pick a fight with a circus man, and see if he could—put—whip him."—Kansas City Times.

Merchant Regains Health

Well-Known Citizen, Threatened with Permanent Ill Health Brought on by Constipation and Severe Stomach Troubles. Tanlac Restores Good Health.

"Before taking Tanlac I had little appetite. Even what I did eat seemed to lodge in my stomach causing severe pain in my left side," says H. F. Rieden, 1819 Buena Vista St., San Antonio, Tex.

"I suffered from indigestion and gas bloated my stomach, pressing against my lungs. Constipation ravaged my system. I looked scrawny and thin and felt weak and generally worn out.

"Nothing seemed to do me any good. After reading about Tanlac I decided to try it. Immediately I began to feel stronger. My appetite returned and my intestinal troubles left me. Tanlac helped me and I call it a really remarkable medicine."

This amazing tonic, Nature's own remedy made from roots, barks and herbs, helps build up weak bodies, drive out causes of pain. Take wonderful Tanlac. Ask your druggist for a bottle—today! Over 40 million bottles sold.

Southern Florida Ravaged by Hurricane—Life and Property Losses.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
PROBABLY five hundred men, women and children dead. More than six thousand injured, many of whom may not recover. Property losses approximating $200,000,000. Between 50,000 and 75,000 persons homeless and great numbers of them rendered destitute.

That in a few words summarizes the situation in southern Florida after the terrific West Indian hurricane that swept across the state from the region of Miami, moving northwest and across the gulf to Pensacola and Mobile, where the property loss was heavy though no fatalities there were reported.

Miami, the "wonder city," and its beautiful suburbs were the worst sufferers, though Fort Lauderdale, Hollywood, Moore Haven and other towns were virtually ruined and scores of other places were devastated. With the wind blowing 150 miles an hour, the waters of the Atlantic ocean were driven clear over lovely Miami Beach and far inland at Miami and all along that part of the coast. Vessels of all sorts and sizes were piled upon the beaches totally wrecked, thousands of houses and other buildings of wooden construction were leveled and nearly all the towering palms, Australian pines and other trees were torn up by the roots. Automobiles by the thousand were swept off the Miami causeways into Biscayne bay or piled up in heaps of junk in the streets. The buildings of steel construction in Miami resisted the hurricane in most cases, and the handsome homes of many millionaires, though damaged by the invading waters, were not ruined. But the palatial hotels of Miami Beach were badly shattered. Of the Miami suburbs, Coral Gables, where there are few wooden structures, came off best.

The Miami storm relief executive issued this appeal:
"To the American People:
"The city of Miami is compelled to issue an appeal to the people of the United States for the relief of Miami and Dade county. Six days ago this city of 200,000 was one of the most prosperous, beautiful and delightful communities in this country. Today, as a result of a disastrous tropical hurricane which devastated our coast last Saturday, it lies prostrate.
"We have 100 dead and nearly 1,000 patients in hospitals, hundreds of whom are grievously injured. While conditions are being rapidly restored by means of most wonderful and efficient co-operation of its citizens along all important lines, the problems confronting them are almost insurmountable. Food and other necessary supplies are coming in in great quantities and we have been blessed by the arrival of a sufficient number of physicians and nurses and ample medical supplies for the immediate present.
"But more than 5,000 homes have been either entirely destroyed or made unfit for human habitation. Twenty-five thousand people have been made homeless. These are being cared for in thousands of instances by neighbors who themselves are suffering. Miami needs money quickly and in large amounts.
"It needs it to take care of the poor, sick, and injured. It needs it to rehabilitate the homes of thousands who have lost everything in the world and who will die of exposure if assistance does not come promptly and amply.
"Instantly upon receipt of the first news of the disaster relief measures were organized by the American Red Cross and by communities all over the country, and along every railway to the southeast the trains streamed carrying physicians, nurses, medical supplies and food. The trained workers of the Red Cross were speedily on the field, as they always are. Sanitary measures and steps to prevent disease that follows so often in the wake of storm disaster marked the first steps taken after the work had been organized. Workers and persons remaining in many areas were required to submit to typhoid vaccination, and residents of Davie and Moore Haven were ordered to evacuate those towns because the water supply was polluted and an epidemic threatened. Vessels of the United States navy were put at the disposition of the Red Cross, and the destroyer Downe was rushed from Charleston to Miami with serum and the destroyer Cassin carried a load of general supplies. Under the direction of Henry M. Baker, national disaster director for the Red Cross, great numbers of refugees from the shattered towns were removed to near-by cities in trucks, special trains and automobiles.

Moore Haven, which was overwhelmed by the waters of Lake Okechobee with a loss of more than 100 lives, may never be rebuilt. But steps already have been taken for the reconstruction of Miami Beach, Hollywood and other places, while of course Miami itself purposes soon to regain its former splendor.

Damage done at Pensacola was estimated at $3,000,000, and it was heavy at Mobile and other places on the gulf. St. Petersburg and other towns in that vicinity reported no loss of life but considerable property. The hurricane, before reaching Florida, had killed a score or more in the Bahama islands and done tremendous property damage, and Bimini island was ravaged.

From Buenos Aires comes the report of another hurricane that struck the town of Encarnacion, Paraguay, on the Parana river, killing about 400 persons and leveling thirty of the city's blocks.

CAPT. RENE FONCK, the French aviator, undertook to hop off to his non-stop flight from New York to Paris in the giant Sikorsky plane built for the project. Overloaded at the last moment, the machine rushed down the prepared runway at Roosevelt field on Long Island, staggered along for a short distance with two wheels collapsing, nose-dived into the earth and burst into flames. Fonck and Lieut. L. W. Curtin, the alternate pilot, crawled from the wreckage unhurt, but Charles Clavier, the French radio operator, and Jacob Islamof, the Russian mechanic, were trapped in the fuselage and were burned to death. Grief-stricken but undefeated, Igor Sikorsky, the Russian designer and president of the Sikorsky Manufacturing corporation, briefly announced his plans.

"Officers of the corporation," he said, "are shocked at the tragedy, but we believe the best tribute we can pay to their memory is to begin immediately the building of another plane to carry out the project for which these men gave their lives."

THE states members of the World court agreed to accept the United States' reservations for adherence to the court with the single condition that by a two-thirds majority the court powers could repudiate their acceptance of the reservations regarding advisory opinions and the right to amend statutes without the consent of the United States.

The forty states participating approved the drafting committee's protocol covering their terms on America's entry, and the joint note which will be circulated to the various signatories as the basis for framing their individual replies to the United States. The United States will be invited to take part in a conference with the court states to frame a special protocol to translate the five American reservations into the language of the court.

BRIAND and Stressemann, motoring near Geneva to a French town near the border, laid plans for a rapprochement between France and Germany that promises great things for both countries and for Europe generally. Briand reported to the French cabinet and was given a free hand to proceed with the agreement, while Doctor Stressemann, returning to Berlin, prepared to fight the Nationalists and Communists who alone oppose the negotiations. It is understood the projected accord includes a plan for the immediate flotation of reich railway debentures, as provided in the Dawes plan, and that France's share of these amounts would be 750,000,000 gold marks, which would help to stabilize the franc. Germany demands reduction of allied forces of occupation and complete evacuation of the Rhineland earlier than had been intended. The first fruits of the negotiations were the departure of detachments of French troops from the occupied area, with the prospect that by the end of September about 6,000 of them would be withdrawn. This was immensely pleasing to the Germans.

GEN. GEORGE KONDYLIS, premier-dictator of Greece, has dissolved his own party and will retire from politics because political leaders have been complaining that he was working for his own interests. He advises his friends to join other parties and announces that his government will continue to function for the time being and that parliamentary elections will be held under the proportional representation system. Dispatches from Athens say it is believed the former king of Greece is in Bucharest awaiting a possible recall to the throne.

SO SUCCESSFUL is the Red army of Canton in its operations against the troops of the north that the British cabinet has been seriously considering abandoning its policy of the last two years and recognizing all de facto provincial governments in China, especially the Canton regime. This would mean the abandonment of the fiction of a central government in Peking. Meantime the third British destroyer flotilla has left Malta for Chinese waters to protect British interests. The Cantonese are pushing back Marshal Wu in Honan province and are attempting to make a junction with the army of Marshal Feng Yushiang, now their ally. Wuchang, several times reported taken by the Cantonese, is still holding out though the garrison is facing starvation. All the women and children and 21 Americans were permitted to leave the city.

QUEEN MARIE of Rumania insists that she is going to leave Bucharest for a visit to the United States about October 2, and she has had her hair bobbed in preparation for the trip. The Rumanian foreign office some time ago denied the queen was going to make the journey, but it now declares it has approved of her plan. King Ferdinand, who is ill, says nothing about it for publication. Court circles are criticizing her majesty, who is past fifty, for cutting off her golden hair.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has given his approval to the selection of Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall as the next chief of staff of the army, to succeed Maj. Gen. John L. Hines in December. General Summerall entered the war as a colonel and made a brilliant record in France, where he commanded the artillery brigades and afterward the First division. He is considered a stern but just disciplinarian, highly respected by his subordinates for his forcefulness and his ability to get things done.

NEARLY eight thousand veterans of the Civil war gathered in Des Moines for the sixtieth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the members of the auxiliary organizations and members of the delegates' families swelled the number of visitors in the Iowa city to about 50,000. Much of the time was given up to entertainment and to reunions of various units.

MAJ. GEN. ROBERT LEE HOWZE, commanding officer of the Fifth corps area, United States army, died in Columbus, Ohio, following an operation. He gained fame in the Indian warfare in the Northwest, for which he was given the congressional medal of honor; in the Philippine revolt, the Mexican border troubles and the World war.

GENE TUNNEY, ex-marine, is the new heavyweight champion of the world, having taken away Jack Dempsey's crown in ten rounds of rather odd fighting in the stadium at Philadelphia. The spectators numbered 132,000, and the gate receipts were about $2,000,000. Dempsey's power and judgment of distance were gone, and Tunney won easily on points. The victory was popular with all except those who had bet on Dempsey.

Close to the deep, dark pool in which he and the Willow had deposited so often Baree, too, had stopped. He could hear the rippling of water, and his eyes shone with a gleaming fire as he gazed for Nepeese. He expected to see her there, her slim white body shimmering in some dark shadow of overhanging spruce, or gleaming suddenly white as snow in one of the warm splashes of sunlight. His eyes sought out their old hiding places; the great split rock on the other side, the shelving banks under which they used to dive like otter, the spruce boughs that dipped down to the surface, and in the midst of which the Willow loved to screen her naked body while he searched the pool for her. And at last the realization was borne upon him that she was not there, that he had still farther to go.

He went on to the tepee. The little open space in which they had built their hidden wigwam was flooded with sunshine that came through a break in the forest to the west. The tepee was still there. It did not seem very much changed to Baree. And rising from the ground in front of the tepee was what had come to him faintly on the still air—the smoke of a small fire. Over that fire was bending a person, and it did not strike Baree as amazing, or at all unexpected, that this person should have two great shining braids down her back. He whined, and at his whine the person grew a little rigid, and turned slowly.

Even then it seemed quite the most natural thing in the world that it should be Nepeese, and none other. He had lost her yesterday. Today he had found her. And in answer to his whine there came a sobbing cry straight out of the soul of the Willow.

Carvel found them there a few minutes later, the dog's head huggled close up against the Willow's breast, and the Willow was crying—crying like a little child, her face hidden from him on Baree's neck. He did not interrupt them, but waited; and as he waited something in the forest seemed to whisper to him a bit of the story of the burned cabin and the two graves, and the meaning of the Call that had come to Baree from out of the south.

Chapter XVII

That night there was a new campfire in the open. It was not a small fire, built with the fear that other eyes might see it, but a fire that sent its flames high. In the glow of it stood Carvel. And as the fire had changed from that small smoldering heap over which the Willow had cooked dinner, so Carvel, the officially dead outlaw, had changed. The beard was gone from his face; he had thrown off his caribou-skin coat; his sleeves were rolled up to the elbows, and there was a wild flush in his face that was not altogether the tanning of wind and sun and storm, and a glow in his eyes that had not been there for five years, perhaps never before. His eyes were on Nepeese. She sat in the freight, leaning a little toward the blaze, her wonderful hair glowing warmly in the flash of it. Carvel did not move while she was in that attitude. He seemed scarcely to breathe. The glow in his eyes grew deeper—the worship of a man for a woman. Suddenly Nepeese turned and caught him before he could turn his gaze. There was nothing to hide in her own eyes. Like her face, they were flushed with a new hope and a new gladness. Carvel sat down beside her on the birch log, and in his hand he took one of her thick braids and crumpled it as he talked. At their feet, watching them, lay Baree.

"Tomorrow or the next day I am going to Lac Rain," he said, a hard and bitter note back of the gentle worship of his voice. "I will not come back until I have—killed him."

The Willow looked straight into the fire. For a time there was a silence broken only by the crackling of the flames, and in that silence Carvel's fingers weaved in and out of the silken strands of the Willow's hair. His thoughts flashed back. What a chance he had missed that day on Bush McTaggart's trap-line—if he had only known! His jaws set hard as he saw in the red-hot heart of the fire the mental pictures of the day when the Factor from Lac Rain had killed Pierrrot. She had told him the whole story. Her flight. Her plunge to what she had thought was certain death in the icy torrent of the chasm. Her miraculous escape from the waters—and how she was discovered, nearly dead, by Tuboa, the toothless old Cree whom Pierrrot out of pity had allowed to hunt in part of his domain. He felt within himself the tragedy and the horror of the one terrible hour in which the sun had gone out of the world for the Willow, and in the flames he could see faithful old Tuboa as he called on his last strength to bear Nepeese over the long miles that lay between the chasm and his cabin; he caught shifting visions of the weeks that followed in that cabin, weeks of hunger and of intense cold in which the Willow's life hung by a single thread. And at last, when the snows were deepest, Tuboa had died. Carvel's fingers clenched in the strands of the Willow's braid. A deep breath rose out of his chest, and he said, staring deep into the fire:

"Tomorrow I will go to Lac Rain."

For a moment Nepeese did not answer. She, too, was looking into the fire. Then she said:

"Tuboa meant to kill him when the spring came, and he could travel. When Tuboa died I knew that it was I who must kill him. So I came, with Tuboa's gun. It was fresh loaded—yesterday. And—M'sieu Jeem"—she looked up at him, a triumphant glow in her eyes as she added in a whisper—"You will not go to Lac Rain. I have sent a messenger."

"A messenger?"

"Yes, Oookimow Jeem—a messenger. Two days ago. I sent word that I had not died, but was here—waiting for him—and that I would be Iskwao now, his wife. Oo-oo, he will come, Oookimow Jeem—he will come fast. And you shall not kill him. Non!" She smiled into his face, and the throb of Carvel's heart was like a dream. "The gun is loaded," she said softly. "I will shoot."

"Two days ago," said Carvel. "And from Lac Rain it is—"

"He will be here tomorrow," Nepeese answered him. "Tomorrow, as the sun goes down, he will enter the clearing. I know. My blood has been singing it all day. Tomorrow—tomorrow—for he will travel fast, Oookimow Jeem. Yes, he will come fast."

Carvel had bent his head. The soft tresses gripped in his fingers were crushed to his lips. The Willow, looking again into the fire, did not see. But she felt—and her soul was beating like the wings of a bird.

"Oookimow Jeem," she whispered—a breath, a flutter of the lips so soft that Carvel heard no sound.

If old Tuboa had been there that night it is possible he would have read strange warnings in the winds that whispered now and then softly in the tree-tops. It was such a night; a night when the Red Gods whisper among themselves, a carnival of glory in which even the dipping shadows and the high stars seemed to quiver with the life of a potent language. It is barely possible that old Tuboa, with his ninety years behind him, would have learned something, or that at least he would have suspected a thing which Carvel in his youth and confidence did not see. Tomorrow—he will come tomorrow! The Willow, exultant, had said that. But to old Tuboa the trees might have whispered, why not tonight?

It was midnight when the big moon stood full above the little open in the forest. In the tepee the Willow was sleeping. In the balsam shadow back from the fire slept Baree, and still farther back in the edge of a spruce thicket slept Carvel. Dog and man were tired. They had traveled far and fast that day, and they heard no sound.

But they had traveled neither so far nor so fast as Bush McTaggart. Between sunrise and midnight he had come forty miles when he strode out into the clearing where Pierrrot's cabin had stood. Twice from the edge of the forest he had called; and now, when he found no answer, he stood under the light of the moon and listened. Nepeese was to be here—waiting. He was tired, but exhaustion could not still the fire that burned in his blood. It had been blazing all day, and now—so near its realization and its triumph—the old passion was like a drunken wine in his veins. Some where, near where he stood, Nepeese was waiting for him, waiting for him. Once again he called, his heart beating in a fierce anticipation as he listened. There was no answer. And then for a thrilling instant his breath stopped. He sniffed the air—and there came to him faintly the smell of smoke.

With the first instinct of the forest man he fronted the wind that was but a faint breath under the starlit skies. He did not call again, but hastened across the clearing. Nepeese was off there—somewhere—sleeping beside her fire, and out of him there rose a low cry of exultation. He came to the edge of the forest; chance directed his steps to the overgrown trail; he followed it, and the smoke smell came stronger to his nostrils.

It was the forest man's instinct, too, that added the element of caution to his advance. That, and the utter stillness of the night. He broke no sticks under his feet. He disturbed the brush so quietly that it made no sound. When he came at last to the little open where Carvel's fire was still sending a spiral of spruce-scented smoke up into the air it was with a stealth that failed even to rouse Baree. Perhaps, deep down in him, there smoldered an old suspicion; perhaps it was because he wanted to come to her while she was sleeping. The sight of the tepee made his heart throb faster. It was light as day where it stood in the moonlight, and he saw hanging outside it a few bits of woman's apparel. He advanced soft-footed as a fox and stood a moment later with his hand on the cloth flap at the wigwam door, his head bent forward to catch the merest breath of sound. He could hear her breathing. For an instant his face turned so that the moonlight struck his eyes. They were aflame with a mad fire. Then, still very quietly, he drew aside the flap at the door.

It could not have been sound that roused Baree, hidden in the black balsam shadow a dozen paces away. Perhaps it was scent. His nostrils twitched first; then he awoke. For a few seconds his eyes glared at the bent figure in the tepee door. He knew that it was not Carvel. The old smell—the man-beast's smell, filled his nostrils like a hated poison. He sprang to his feet and stood with his lips snarling back slowly from his long fangs. McTaggart had disappeared. From inside the tepee there came a sound; a sudden movement of bodies, a startled exclamation of one awakened from sleep—and then a cry, a low, half-smothered, frightened cry, and in response to that cry Baree shot out from under the balsam with a sound in his throat that had in it the note of death.

In the edge of the spruce thicket Carvel rolled uneasily. Strange sounds were rousing him, cries that in his exhaustion came to him as if in a dream. At last he sat up, and then in sudden horror leaped to his feet and rushed toward the tepee. Nepeese was in the open, crying the name she had given him—"Oookimow Jeem—Oookimow Jeem—Oookimow Jeem—" She was standing there white and slim, her eyes with the blaze of the stars in them, and when she saw Carvel she flung out her arms to him, still crying: "Oookimow Jeem—Oo-oo, Oookimow Jeem—"

In the tepee he heard the rage of a beast, the moaning cries of a man. He forgot that it was only last night he had come, and with a cry he swept the Willow to his breast, and the Willow's arms tightened around his neck as she moaned:

"Oookimow Jeem—It is the man-beast—in there! It is the man-beast from Lac Rain—and Baree—"

Truth flashed upon Carvel, and he caught Nepeese up in his arms and ran away with her from the sounds that had grown sickening and horrible. In the spruce thicket he put her feet once more to the ground. Her arms were still tight around his neck; he felt the wild terror of her body as it throbbed against him; her breath was sobbing, and her eyes were on his face. He drew her closer, and suddenly he crushed his face down close against hers and felt for an instant the warm thrill of her lips against his own. And he heard the whisper, soft and trembling:

"Oo-oo, Oookimow Jeem—"

When Carvel returned to the fire, alone, his Colt in his hand, Baree was in front of the tepee waiting for him.

Carvel picked up a burning brand and entered the wigwam. When he came out his face was white. He tossed the brand in the fire and went back to Nepeese. He had wrapped her in his blankets, and now he knelt down beside her and put his arms about her.

"He is dead, Nepeese."

"Dead Oookimow Jeem?"

"Yes. Baree killed him."

She did not seem to breathe. Gently, with his lips in her hair, Carvel whispered his plans for their paradise.

"No one will know, my sweetheart. Tonight I will bury him and burn the tepee. Tomorrow we will start for Nelson House, where there is a Missioner. And after that—we will come back—and I will build a new cabin where the old one burned. Do you love me, ka sakahet?"

"Oul—yes—Oookimow Jeem—I love you—"

Suddenly there came an interruption. Baree at last was giving his cry of triumph. It rose to the stars; it wafted over the roofs of the forests and filled the quiet skies—a wolfish howl of exultation, of achievement, of vengeance fulfilled. Its echoes died slowly away, and silence came again. A great peace whispered in the soft breath of the tree tops. Out of the north came the mating call of a loon, about Carvel's shoulders the Willow's arms crept closer. And Carvel, out of his heart, thanked God.

[THE END.]

Probable Reason

"Well! well! Look at that fellow running and turning his head first one way, then the other, as he flies!" exclaimed a guest. "What do you suppose he is doing that for?"

"Not knowing the gent, can't say for certain," replied the landlord of the tavern at Peewee-cuddlyump, "but probably it is 'cuz he ain't able to turn it both ways at once."—Kansas City Times.

Coat of Superior Styling.

WE ARE so apt to think of the coat-dress as conveniently tailored and of cloth. In the strictest sense of the word, this is true, but it happens this season that fashion is not carrying out very many of her schemes in the "strictest sense." The trend is toward a degree of dressiness throughout the newer styles. That accounts for the presence of so many charming coat-dresses, not always of cloth but often of a suitable silk weave, preferably satin or faille, these showing a fetching feminized styling which employs cunning trimming treatment.

One of the smartest notes is the introduction of hemline fullness achieved by plaitings or circular movement. It is noticeable among recent imports that a very fine plaiting is favored, such as is used in the coat-frock in this picture. It happens that this particular model is black, but it might just as well have been in any of the new shades—say ruby, garnet, chanel red, jungle green, rust or cin-line and bell-shaped sleeves. There is a cunning intermingling of metal thread stitching until the entire suggests an intricate embossed effect, quite like handsome tooled leather-work. The fact that this wrap-around coat accents the slender silhouette confirms the style-message that straight, narrow lines are still decidedly in good form. Of course, there is a fur collar, this time of black lynx, for a fur collar is inevitably in the season's styling of coats.

A lavish machine stitching done in gold and silver threads strikes a new note in cloth decoration. Most alluring is a navy suede-like cloth coat stitched with gold and silver in rows just above a banding of black shaved lamb. There is a narrow belt of glided kid, while the lining is of vivid red crepe.

Among fabrics of elegance black velvet and black suede-cloth take precedence for daytime as well as an evening wear.

W. M. S.
The women who met for a study of the Moslem World last Monday afternoon discovered some striking facts about Islam and its followers.

Germany's seats in the League of Nations held at San Diego for violating neutrality after the hurricane that devastated...

W. M. S.
For instance, there are more than twice as many Moslems in the world as there are people in the United States. A traveler proceeding due east from Morocco across Africa and Asia to the tip of Java would find Moslems constituting a great majority of the population.

The bulk of the Moslem world is medieval in its illiteracy, superstition and ignorance. Orthodox Moslem theology makes men the slaves, rather than the sons, of God.

The Koran or Bible of the Moslems acknowledges that Jesus was a prophet, but claims that Mohammed supercedes him; but numbers of Moslems have been converted to Christianity in different parts of the world, and there is great political unrest among the millions of Moslems in Arabia, Egypt, Syria and India today.

Islam will probably meet more changes in the next fifty years than in the past thirteen hundred. The Turkish Republic has already passed many laws contrary to the sacred law of Islam.

These and many other vital facts were brought out in the course of the lesson. The class feels that we can enter into a deeper understanding of the problems of this great part of the world if we can study these people in a detached frame of mind.

It will be necessary to lay aside preconceived ideas and prejudices, but this will prove a whole some exercise. It is very stimulating to lay aside old ideas in the light of real facts.

By the time the study is finished we shall be able to form some clear cut conclusions, because we have learned the real truth about this religion.

Again we invite all who will join with us in this study.

Gold Mine of Ideas for Farmers

Here's "the most remarkable book ever published for farmers," says one authority. It is remarkable in the extreme practical nature of its contents, in the wide range of farm subjects covered, in the world of illustrations it contains, and in the extremely low price.

561 Discoveries
One discovery sometimes makes a fortune. Here are 561 of them, any one of which may be of many dollars value to you. These discoveries may be classified as follows:

128 for the farm shop	700 greenhouse work
25 on fencing	22 on farm tools
95 on auto, truck, and tractor	24 on garden work
10 on farm buildings	34 on poultry
10 on field machinery	17 on the lawn
49 on concrete work	140 on household help
22 on orchard work	24 on miscellaneous farm work
22 on painting	14 on hunting, fishing, and trapping
12 on electricity	25 on electrical work —and every plan has been tested and found to be a money saver. Most of the articles are illustrated with photographs or drawings. The devices described are easy to make because of their pictures and clear descriptions.

653 Illustrations

Suppose you could live your life 417 times
How could you forge ahead of other farmers in a way that would insure you liberty and steady profits? This book enables you to do the next best thing — you may have the experience of 417 lives — experiences of successful farmers as told by themselves — briefly, clearly, completely. And many of these experiences are illustrated with accurate drawings. Imagine 270 pages chock full of ideas — 563 crystal clear illustrations. Just think of the value to you!

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
 the services as usual next day.

Sunday is our regular Mission ary Day, the last for this year.
 It is also a Sunday in the Roby-Hedley contest. Each penny in the offering counts one point.

We have gone ahead of Roby every Sunday, except the two that were so rainy here. They got a long gain on us those two days. And yet with an attendance of about 150 to 175 for the next three Sundays we would be well ahead. And we ought to have that attendance every fair Sunday.

The text at the morning hour is to be the text you hear quoted more than any other verse in the Bible, and yet, in all probability, have never heard preached from. I expect to give you a chance to tell me Sunday morning what the text is before I announce it.

The Leagues will meet as usual at 6:30. Preaching at 7:30. Bro.
 Griswold is to be with us at the evening hour. The time for holding the fourth quarterly conference will be announced Sunday morning.

Every one who wants to worship with us will find a cordial welcome at any of these services.
 J. W. Hawkins, Pastor.

If you want a real Wagon you will find it at Hedley Hardware.
 Quality and price are right. A careful inspection will convince you that they are real wagons.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Trent and daughters, Mary Elizabeth and Mildred, visited their uncle, Col.
 Charles Goodnight, last Sunday at Goodnight. Col. Goodnight has been seriously ill, but was better Sunday. He is in his 93rd year.

 week from Tucumcari, N. M., for a visit with his sister, Mrs. R. E.
 Mann. He left later in the week for Tascosa, where he will be connected with the Denver R. A.
 His son, Robert, is attending the Healy school again this year.

HEDLEY-ROBY METH-ODIST S. S. CONTEST

Rules: All members of the school (new or old) count ten points when present, and the offering counts one point for each cent. Contest began Sept. 19 and is to close Nov. 7.

The standing of the contest will be reported through the In-former each week, also there is a poster in the window of the drug store showing the standing.

Hedley, Oct 17:
 Previously reported, 6184 points
 Present today, 114 1140 points
 Offering $11.33 1133 points
 Total 8777 points

Roby, Oct 17:
 Previously reported, 8851 points
 Present today, 101 1010 points
 Offering $10.59 1059 points
 Total 10920 points
 Roby leading 2163 points.

Hedley is still gaining—204 points last Sunday. We should have easily had 50 or 60 more present last Sunday. And still that for the next three Sundays will put Hedley ahead, unless Roby beats anything she has done. Hedley can win; why not come on and let's do it?

First Baptist Church Notes

The B. Y. P. U. enjoyed a "tramping party" Friday night of last week. Many of the "handouts" received were delicious and many of the speeches were excellent and indicative of much natural talent and latent ability.

The Co-operative services last Sunday were interesting and successful in enlisting the people and the cash. There were more present at the evening hour than we had dared to hope for. Everything is getting better and better every day in every way.
 We certainly have been blessed with spiritual life in every department of the work. People who love the Lord love to meet Him at church, but those who do not really know Him do not care to meet Him anywhere. We shall all come out better in the end of the year, if we continue to be true and faithful to our Lord.
 Let nothing whatever draw us away from His church and from assembling ourselves on the first day of the week. Heb. 10:25

Next Sunday morning we will consider "Spiritual Teaching."
 The evening hour text will be Eph. 1:4 and Rom. 9:6-24. On a special request from a number of young people we will discuss
 "What the Lord's Word Says Concerning Predestination." We shall discuss this doctrine as we go all doctrinal sermons in a reverent and spiritual manner without vituperation and malice to ward any denomination. Any body interested in the teachings of the Bible rather than sectarian bias and denominational prejudice will feel it was an hour spent in religious service. Everybody invited, and all who love the Scriptures especially.
 J. H. McCauley, Pastor.

Go to Hedley Hardware for your Wagon Sheets, Cotton Picking Sacks and Knee Pads. The price and goods are right.

Bob Mann came in the past week from Quanah. He expects to go to San Angelo within a few days, he tells us.

Only two more of those Wagon Sheets left at Kendall's. Priced on the present market. Better hurry.

TO COTTON FARMERS

Much has been said about the difference in weights on cotton put up in Round Bale as compared with the usual square bale method

The point is: Square Bale bagging weighs 20 pounds, whereas Round Bale bagging weighs 5 pounds, which makes 15 pounds more weight to add to Square Bale,—commonly called tare difference.

The following table explains this difference in figures:

Difference in weight on Bagging	Square Bale Price	Money Difference	Difference reduced to Points	To equalize, Round Bale Price Should Be
15 Lbs.	10c	$1.50	30	10.30
15 Lbs.	10½c	$1.58	31½	10.82
15 Lbs.	11c	$1.65	33	11.33
15 Lbs.	11½c	$1.73	34½	11.85
15 Lbs.	12c	$1.80	36	12.36
15 Lbs.	12½c	$1.88	37½	12.88
15 Lbs.	13c	$1.95	39	13.39
15 Lbs.	13½c	$2.03	40½	13.91
15 Lbs.	14c	$2.10	42	14.42
15 Lbs.	14½c	$2.18	43½	14.94
15 Lbs.	15c	$2.25	45	15.45
15 Lbs.	15½c	$2.33	46½	15.97
15 Lbs.	16c	$2.40	48	16.48
15 Lbs.	17c	$2.55	51	17.51

We have the Square Bale press, as well as the Round Bale, and earnestly wish you to have your choice of the method which seems to you most advisable.

Our desire is to gin your cotton and let you name the method. Service as well as to please is our motto.
