The Constitution is the only safeguard of the people against extravagance and unwise and uncertain action by lawmakers. Certainly the people have the right to change the Constitution But the desire should emanate from the people, and no change made without the most careful study and deliberation.

These four proposals are not demanded by the people. They come to us only half baked; they were hurriedly framed; they have been hurriedly launched. Only ast May the Secretary of State scurriedly telegraphed newspa pers in our 254 counties to publish immediately such amend ments even if it required special editions. It did necessitate many special editions. The public paid for these wasteful telegrams. The people paid for these waste ful special editions. Even the regular editions cost much. The bill of one Abilene paper was $394 08. of which the State has aid $211 40, and the Secretary of State has advised that the $173 68 balance can not be paid until the Legislature meets and appropriates more money. Esti mate this cost of publication in the 254 counties. The people will pay election expenses.

Oriskany and Blue Licks:

SUCCESSION AT THE BAPTELS OF CRESTRANY BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

E hundred and fifty years ago this summer there was fought on the frontier of New York one of the most body corrested battles of the American Revolution. This was the he harde of Oriskuny on August 6, 1777, where a facce of New York militia led by Gen. Nicholas Herkimer. marching to the relief of Ft. Scharer, won a victory over a force of Tories and Indiana communical by Sir John Juhnson and the great Medawk chief Joseph Brant. Five years ater out in the wilderness of Kentucky a similar restrictmen, led by Cols. John Twol. Stephen battle was fought between an army of Kentucky Trigg and Duniel Boone, and a force of Canadians and Indians, commanded by Mai, William Caldwell, who had with him the renegades Alexander McKee, Mathew Elliott and Simon Girty, This was the battle of Nine Licks, often referred to as "The last bettle of the Bevolution," fought on August 18, 1782

Although there is no direct connection berives the two engagements, they exhibit a strikby parallel of the circumstances which brought them about that is worthy of more than passing notice. In both cases the headstrong fully of stherdbates recruied the coaler beigment of the commanders, thereby bringing upon themmires the disaster which could have been swerted.

The battle of Oriskany was a part of the at the present site of Rome, N. Y. in 1777. The stirring events of that year are to be recalled this summer in a series of sesquicentranial relebrations which will be held at various places in the Midawk valley. Chief among these will be the Orishany releasing where the memory of the nea who fought in this dramatic and bloody engagement will be honored by their descendants and hundreds of visitors from all parts of the country. The events leading up to the battle of Orbitaly were these: As a part of the British plus to more a decisive success during the sum per of 1777 and he crush the Bernelation, Col. Barry St. Lager had been sent to sweep through the Mohawk railey to Albany where he was to Min the army of General Burgosme who was com-M fewn from the parth. But there was one istacle to St. Leger's success. This was Ft. Scharter, beld by a force of Continentals under the estimate of Col. Peter Gansemort and Col. Marines Willest, On August 1 St. Leger appeared below Ft. Schapler with a force of some 1,700 British requires, Bisseans and Tories-led by Sir John Jahnson, John Butler and his son, the between Walter Stoder, and Ireques Indiana. Colonsi Ganserourt had appealed to the Commilities of Sodery in Treas country for being and the chairman of this committee, Nicholas Herkiner-"Cid Boulkel Berkiner" was the affect tifests nickname for him-(who had been appointed a brighder peneral the previous year inmediately mised the ufficia of Tryon county and set out for the relief of Ft. Schupter. Herkiner's army, a farres of about elight hundred net, was directed into four regiments. The for was led by Col. Thenever Con and was from the district of Canajoharie. The second from Pulatitie was commanded by Col. Bacob Klock. the third from Moltawit was under Cal. Frederick Cascher, and the fronth, from German Flace and Engaged, was communicated by Cal. Peter Beillager. This force assemblied at Ft. Duging near the north of West Camein creek and on August i started not crossed the Mehawk near the present sits of the city of Thirm and reached Whiteenen at August L.

at this point Sertituer sent an express to Colonel Guttermort to arrange for co-operation in nowing against the enemy. Gaussmoot was to fre three cuspon shows to a signal that a force from the fact was ready to make a sortle, wherethat Sections was to afrence with his army. He was then about eight miles from Ft. Schapler and it would be easy to hear the report of the hig puns at that distance. But his messengers were delayed in perting through the enemy to the for and Sertimer's new waited impatiently for the sound of the cannon. Finally, chading at the felay, they demanded to be led against the enemy. Berkiner somifically refused. Then some of his offency, printilly Colonelle Cox and Paris, began to represent him and even went so far as he peruse him of being a covered and a Tury. But the wise sid commander resisted their urgings until they became unbearable. Finally, string to madness by their unjust accusations, he pare the communic to advance.

It was note of a discriptive new them an array that arrespect out of the encomponent. At Orio trest the rest lef stress a secret cause of ther side. St. Leger had sent a large body of fories, many of them neighbors of Herkimer's men in Tryon county, the noted "Johnson's Greens," under Major Watts, accompanied by a body of Mohawk Indians led by the famous Joseph Brant, who prepared the ambush for Herkimer's men. Just as the head of the column marched onto the causeway the Indians impetuously epened fire. Herkimer's rear guard retreated almost immediately, but the rest stood at once sought shelter behind trees and immediately there took place one of the flercest buttles in American history. For the most part it was a hand-to-hand fight. Colonels Cox and Puris. whose rushness had precipitated the fight, were among the first to be killed. Herkimer was disabled early in the fight by a builet which shattered his knee. His officers arged him to retire to safety, but his reply has become a historic byword in the Mohawk valley-"I will face the ememm."

During the battle, Herkliner's nessengers reached Gansevoort, who had been wondering what the distant firing meant and who fired the three signal cannon. Herkimer's men heard them, but they could not advance now. They were fighting for their lives. So great was the slaughter in both armies that the Indians finally raised the cry of retreat-"Comab, Cound"" and left the field. The Tories, seeing this and being alarmed at the sound of the firing made during the sortie from the feet which had been led by Col. Marinus Willect, also retreated. Herkilmer and his men beid the field on which they had won their dearly bought victory. The losses inflicted upon the snemy and Williett's sortie which had fullen apon St. Leger's camp stampeded a portion of the British force and engineed a great store of supplies. resulted in St. Lager's giving up the siege of Ft. Schapler. So victory came out of defeat after all, for Ft. Schapler was saved and the threat of St. Leger's invasion of the Mohawk varies collapsed. Berkimer died a few days after the battle.

Five years later occurred the other buttle in which the feelbardness of benistrong nen brought about another disaster equal to that of Oriskany. On August 18, 1782, a mounted nessenper dushed up to Buene's Station, a small frencier fact which this famous pioneer had built across the Kentucky river a short distance from Bounesbournigh-with the news that Bryon's Station, on impertant point further west, about five miles from the accessed city of Loxington, but been atmeked by an averwhelming force of listings and Canadians. The men of Boone's Station immedandy palloped to the slif of their brethren, and the next day found Boone, who happened to be at Boonesbourough at the time, on the way to Bryan's Staffen, with all the men of the vicinity that he could collect. When they arrived they frond that the enemy had already retreated, but since, he the evening of August 17, the Kenmekians assembled at Bryan's Station numbered nors than 180, and as many more under Cal. Senjamin Legan were expected hourly, they fererained to observe the principle of berief warfare that so savage from should go mounshed. So, without waiting for Lagun, they decided to pursue the enemy at once, even though then regilized that the enemy, remposed of ferre Wynndettes and accompanied by the renegades McKee, Ellion, and the inflaments Simon Circle prestly estimantered them. Early the next merning the party, communicated by Cuis. Total, Trigg and Bosne, set forth. They fromd that the enemy had left a plain trail, but beedless of this indication that the alies invited pursuit, the Lentuckings finded on rapidly. On the marning of Angust 15 to the Licking ofter at a pince collect Livin & few Indiana were sent en the ridges across the river. Boone was certain the indians were lying in ambush and advised his men to select a strong position on their side of the river and wait there until Logan and his nen arrived.

But this wise counsel was disregarded by the impatient Kentuckians who were annious to strike a blow at the enemy who had besieged their stations. Boone then preposed that a party be detached march up the river and full troo the reer of the enemy at a prearranged signal, while the main attack was delivered in front. While the proposition was being discussed, a decision was forced by a Major McGary, who had supported Boone in the proposal to await the arrival of Logan and had been taunted with cowardire by some of his fellows for doing so. McGary suddenly broke up the council by spurring his berse to the ford and dashing across it, shouting "Let all who are not cowards fallow me "

It was just the sort of an arrowal which would influence such muchin contractores men as most of these Eestuckings were. They streamed across the river in disorderly fashion and there was nothing for Boome, Todd and Trigg to do but to follow, and to try to restore some order in the struggling med. They crossed the river safely and advanced up a buffale trail to the top of the ridge beyond. By this time some semblance of arrive had been restored, with McGary legding an advance party of reemy-fre. 3s they approached the top of the ridge a ride shot rang out as a signal for the crushing valley which then followed. Twenty-three of McGary's twenty-five men went down at this first fire. The bendstrong McGary who had precipitated the fight was one of the two who escaped. After this first roller, the Canadians showed themselves on the ridge and from the ravine on either fank, the Indians opened a deadly fire. The Kentnethnas stood their ground and recurred the fire. Instantly the Wyandottes, always point as reckless and despecte fighters, came bursting chrough the smale with poised townshowks. There was a short hand-te-band conflict until the Kentucklians, greatly enturmbered almost surrounded and in imminent danger of being slagethoose where they stood broke and fed back prepared the river. Nearly every officer of rank was killed. Boone escaped across the river

The Kentuckians, body pursued, streamed back across the river. There Major Netherland rallied his men and offered resistance, ending the pursuit and preventing a massacre. Of a force of approximately one hundred eighty men, sixty-seven had been killed entright or were murdered as they by wounded on the field of battle, and seven had been expensed, four of whom fied at the parture stake. Nearly every man who exaped was wounded in some way. Half-way back to Brean's Station, the survivors met Colonel Large with 400 nen. coming to their support. How hitter must have been their regret when they resilized how different the result might have been if they bud beeded Bunne's advice and awalted Lagur's coming, and had not been swept into action by Michary's rash appeal. Blue Licks was perhaps the greatest defeat ever sufbered for the glunners of the Sitte Grass state, but it was also a high-water mark in her history. #### ******** FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

BY THOMAS E. STEWARD

, "Discovering" Salted Mines

FROM the earliest days of mining the practice of "salting" a mine, or dropping into the pit, or test ore, some material of an average value far above that which the ground actually contains, has been one for prospective buyers to guard against with all their wits. "Salting" probably has succeeded thousands of times, and in thousands of other instances the examining expert has been keen enough to detect the attempted frauds.

Some years ago a young man with a high squeaky voice, whom the miners thought to be effeminate and probably an easy one to "slip something over" on, was sent into a western state to examine a placer deposit. The owners had salted several pits and expected him to take the bait like a trout. When, therefore, the examiner asked them to go off for a day's hunting, as he wished to dig his own pits, they were more surprised than pleased. But next day he allowed the men to go to the river with him while he washed out his collected samples.

While he was washing, the owners of the property showed great interest in the proceedings and crowded around him. While one of them distracted his attention for a moment, another would slip some gold dust into the pan. This they did ten times, and every time, when he had come to the bottom of the pan, he reported no gold whatsoever, Finally he stopped work, "Gentlemen," he said, "I regret to say that there is no gold at all on your property." They could not believe their ears, for they had put in the gold themselves. The explanation was that he had been alert to their action all the time, and had washed the gold out of the pan as fast as they put it in, so that nothing appeared when he got through.

It is related that in South Africa a group of overeager miners went so far as to install a stamp mill at a point where they hoped, but did not know, that gold existed. They operated the mill for some time, but no gold was found adhering to the stamps. Rather than admit that the stock was worthless, they decided to "salt the mill." They withdrew $4,000 in gold coins from a bank and gave it to an assayer to be run down into the form of bars, which they intended to represent as the product of the stamp mill. In a day or two they received the bars, but found they were worth only $2,500. Naturally they were eager to know what had happened to the $1,500.

"Oh, well," the assayer said, "It seems to me that the difference is no more than it is worth for me to keep my mouth shut about this matter."

And they agreed with him, for there was nothing else that they could do.

Treasure of Central Africa

UST as the African wealth in gold and diamonds astounded the world in the last decade of the Nineteenth century, the discoveries of tremendous copper deposits and of other important minerals, platinum among them, in the southeastern part of the Belgian Congo, has again startled the mining world in recent years. Some reports have gone so far as to say that the copper deposits in what is known as the Katanga district would come to control the world's market for the red metal as soon as adequate transportation facilities gave the output free access to the markets of the world. A Belgian concern, the Compagnie Miniere du Haut Katanga, is in control of some of the choicest deposits in this region and is partly owned by the Belgian government, a condition that gives it a particularly favorable position for development,

Just across the boundary line that divides this part of the Belgian Congo from Rhodesia, the British protectorate, other important copper deposits have recently been discovered n British territory,

The platinum discoveries in the Congo are said to be as relatively important to that industry as are the copper deposits to the copper industry, and together with the copper and platinum, gold and dlamonds have come to light there, increasing the already great predominance in the two that Africa now holds by reason of the vast mines in the Transvaal district.

For more than twenty years scientists and promoters have been struggling with the tremendous problems of opening up this mineral wealth of Central Africa. They have had to contend against disease, the lack of reads over which to bring in machinery and supplies, the absence of either water routes or adequate railroads over which the ore or smelted metal could be shipped to market, and against the complete disruption of their efforts that came during the World war. In the past three or four years, however, progress and development have rushed ahead at a greator rate than ever before, and it seems likely that the promised development of these districts would seen be ap parent in full farce.

Africa's reputation as a haven for missionaries and hig game hunters seems likely to be lost as the dark continent gradually assumes more and more the guine of an inexhaustible El Dorade, the "gilded place."

Cling to Custom of Carrying Off Mates A curious marriage custom persists

h Abchasia, a district of the Caucasus. On the wedding day the bride withdraws to the darkest room of the house. At dusk the bridegroom, supported by a bodyguard of friends, an fully armed, rides up to the house, dismounts, and hammers on the door with a dagger hilt.

The door opens to reveal the bride's male relatives, just as ferociously equipped, and the two parties promptjoin in a mock combat.

Eventually the derenders retire, the bridegroom rushes in, seizes his bride, flings her across his shoulder, and, carrying her out, leaps on his horse and gallops off with his capture to the accompaniment of the victorious yells of his supporters.

Shortly after, the defeated relatives of the bride mount their horses and give chase. When the bridegroom's house is reached both sides join in a contest to see who can drink mest wine!

Abchasian girls decline to give up the rite, and few would accept any sultor who did not intend to carry them off by force.

Make Your Aprons of Paper DOZEN basting stitches, a half roll of cheap crinkfed crepe paper, and an apron is made which never knows the labor of froning or washing day. Its life is shorter than cotton, but its expense is infinitely less, and its labor is nil.

A half roll is taken for the skirt, a double band for the waist. A small section for the bib and two crinkled straps frilled at the edges make quick decoration to take the place of lace or embroidery. There is enough paper left from the single inexpensive roll to make another shorter apron.

The new paper table cloths are also a great saving in ironing, and they can be purchased in packages of one dozen, with the varied designs of linen cloths put into them. Crepe paper dust caps are a better protection to the hair while cleaning than those made of loosely woven cotton. We also get the message that at the smart boarding and day schools the little girls are wearing generous bows on their hair of bright erape paper to take the place of expensive ribbons. The bows are first made and then fastened to the hair with the usual small comb or loop of tape.

To Make an Unusual Basket Pillow

To MAKE an unusual cushion in the shape of a basket, an ordinary square pillow may be used as the base. Chalk lines or pencil marks may then be drawn upon it the shape of the basket, and the sides of the pillow sewn on these lines, pressing the feathers inward as the sewing progresses. The sides may then be cut off leaving the pillow in a basket

Gray, green or old rose moire silk makes an excellent basis for the cover, its heavy weave suggesting a basket texture. Two yards will be sufficient for the cushion. Strips of dull gold braid sewn onto the moire silk crosswise give an added basket effect.

An effect of overhanging flowers is made by sewing different shades of pale green colored satin ribbon, leaf shaped, upon each other. Full blown flowers at the top are made with rosecolored satin or taffeta, buttonholed with chenille.

Chains of gilt braid form the handles at the side of the basket, and the rings are made of thin curtain rings buttonholed with heavyweight embroidery silk.

GINGHAM, most versatile of fabrics, has come into popular use for interiors as well as for the wardrobe. With the present peasant mode in interiors now sweeping the country, decorators are turning more and more to gingham. Some are even using it as a wall covering in place of paper with great success. The plains come in colors to match the predominating shade in the design. It will require about seven yards with three yards for trim.

The "lazy pad," as it is called, sketched just under the dresser, is for the beach, yachting, lawn or picnic, where one may like to take a slesta in the open. It is simply made from two strips of gingham of the width required. All ginghams come in 32-inch

To make the tablecloth will require one yard and a quarter of the designed gingham and three-fourths of a yard of the plain for a five-inch border. The cloth will be about forty-one inches when finished. Each napkin requires one-fourth of a yard of designed material and an eighth of a yard of the plain.

Smart women of fashion are at this moment looking their smartest in short-jacketed, short-skirted tailleurs topped with plain-banded straw hats of enormous dimensions. That's the interesting part of these bigbrimmed hats (some quite floppy)they are not confined to dressy modes. Rather do they compete with entrancing so-thin-you-ean-see-through-them picture types. For that matter many of the large tailor-banded black hats are themselves transparent, but these are not as frequent as are the very elegant milans, with their velvet bows and bands.

Modishly banded, with either grosgrain or velvet ribbon, this is the regulation trim adopted by fashion for huge straw hats, such as the one pictured to the left in this group. If it isn't a milan which milady wears then it's a legborn wide of brim or very likely one of the new paillassin straws. STORY FROM THE START

Garth Guthrie, Canadian war veteran, having to live in the open on account of weakened lungs, is factor of a Hudson's Bay post at Elkwan. He came back from the conflict with a permanently scarred face, which he realizes cost him the love of his flancee, Edith Falconer. Sir Charles Guthrie, his brother, is a millionaire war profiteer. With Etienne Savanne, halfbreed, his firm friend, Garth meets Doctor Quarrier, geologist, and his sis-ter Joan. Their schooner has drifted ashore. Quarrier complains he has been robbed by a man known as "Laughing Mc-

Guthrie flercely resented the presence of the people whose boat was slowly approaching the landing. Why had they been sent him at this timethese strangers? This bearded ass of a geologist would spread himself all over the place, demanding attention; would doubtless ask him to go to Akimiski and save the stuff salvaged on the beach. Well, he would pack them off to Albany at once. But the sister seemed a different sort-nice eyes she had, straight, direct, but something sad about them; a sense of humor, too, for she laughed flat in Quarrier's face at the McDonald story. So the freetrader was in the bay still? Strange, that! Did be mean to winter there? If he did, it would cut into the Christmas trace in foxes-would be bad for Elkwan. Daring chap, this McDonald. Who was he, anyhow?

The arrival of the boat cut short his rumination.

"I see you brought plenty of food," commented the factor with a smile, as the sailors, under the direction of Etienne, began unloading boxes from the heavily freighted craft.

"Yes, we didn't want to run short before reaching Fort Albany," replied

"But the excess weight will bother you on these tide-flats." Then he continued, "Doctor, I regret that I shall have to put you in the trade-house with your men. I have a spare bedroom for Miss Quarrie. You will eat at my quarters, of course."

"On, we don't expect much at a small trading post, Mr. Guthrie," replied Quarrier, magnanimously. "If jou can make my sister comfortable, It's perfectly satisfactory." The girl laughed. "As sister has put up for three months with a most uncomfortable two-by-five berth on a wobbly schooner, Mr. Guthrie," she said. "I know I shall revel in your hospitality."

She had shed her coat and sou'westwith a quick glance. Taller, he thought, than she seemed in the boat, and cleanly made. The eyes which had seemed black, he saw were brown. Young, too, she was; much younger than her brother, and what hair!

As he led the way across the clearing he wondered how the presence of this white woman would affect the girl with the dark skin who was slowly coughing her life away. He found himself embarrassed-at a loss for an explanation of the situation to his

"Miss Quarrier," he forced himself to begin, "we have a very sick girl in the house-it is unfortunate we are so crowded, but I have no other room. I'm giving you mine."

He had stopped as he spoke, and stared down at his moccasins; then continued, while her questioning eyes studied his face.

"She came here at the spring trade -very sick-would have flickered out in weeks without proper food. Old Anne and I have done our best, but canned milk and broth are all we had for her. And now it may be any day -I was terribly anxious about herto get home. You noticed it-when we met you?"

"Yes, I noticed it," replied the girl. "I knew you were worried about something. I'm so sorry, Mr. Guthrie. We shall be a great burden at such a time."

"No. It's not that. I have room for you, and the others don't matter. But it will be unpleasant for you-in the Miss Quarrier straightened, threw back her head and held his embarrassed giance as she quietly said: "Would it help you to know that was a nurse overseas through the last three years of the war?"

He went red under the deep tan. She would not mind Ninda, then-she, to whom agony and death had been commonplaces "I am glad-you will understand. You see she, somehow, wants me with her at the end-fears I'll not be there. I've promised her." As he spoke, the quizzical look of the girl softened to one of pity.

"I know. I will hesp you."

Under a sky flushed with the rose of the northern twilight, Joan Quarrier and her brother stood on the high shore of the Elkwan, whose flat surface caught and held the warm tones of the heavens. On guard before the factor's house, inside the stockade, lay the great alredale, satisfied, since his introduction, that these people were ut Elkwan with the consent of his master, but nursing, nevertheless, a deep dislike of the man with hairy face, who had dared attempt to rub sniffed Quarrier. The girl's straight brows contracted with irritation. "No, I don't think so. It's a matter of big heart. Old Anne, the Cree cook, found her sick in a tipl, when the Indians were here in June for the trade. Out of sheer humanity, they took care of her."

"You believe that story?" scoffed the man of science.

The eyes of the girl hardened. "Well, Mr. Grundy, it's none of your business or mine, is it?"

"I should distinctly say it was my business-to have my sister, without so much as an apology to me, sharing his house with his-squaw," protested Quarrier in tones of outraged

"Very well. How would you like to have me sleep with you and the men in the trade-house? He's given me his room. What more could be do? And I'd advise you as a guest of Mr. Guthrie to be careful what you say. Did you notice his face?"

"You mean the scar?" "No, I mean the mouth and the

"What about them?"

"Just this, blind man. I'd feel very sorry for the person who was the cause of Mr. Guthrie losing his temper. Whether it's pity or affection, 1 don't know, but rather than have the last hours of this poor child disturbed, he'd throw you into the river and the rest of us with you."

"Nonsense. I'll report him to his superiors at Albany if he comes any high-handed business with me."

"Arch," she taunted, "you know that you're really a bit timid, underneath." The man flushed angrity and started to reply, but the girl stopped him with her raised hand. "You were pretty scared when that blow struck us-rather lost your head, brother." Then she said, soberly: "I advise you to be very careful how you bluster to the factor of Elkwan."

Guthrie appeared at the door of his house and called them in to supper. As Dr. Archibald Quarrier followed his sister into the living room where the table had been set for three, little in its meager furnishings escaped his roving eyes.

"We are very primitive here, you see," Guthrie said as he watched the geologist's minute inspection of his quarters, which terminated at the bookshelves. "And I cannot guarantee Anne's bread, it varies, but her caribon stew and broiled whitefish I hope you will like."

"My brother, as a scientist, Mr. Guthrie, is nothing if not thorough in his inspections," apologized Joan Quarrier with a grimace which failed to conceal from her host her embar- watched, surmise followed surmise

Quarrier turned netulantly, "There you go again, Joan, always making remarks at my expense," then addressed Guthrie. "I see from your books that you are not interested in science."

With a significant glance at the girl, Guthrie soberly answered: "No. I fear I haven't the scientific mind. I waste my time up here reading fiction and history-poetry, too."

"Poetry?" With silent deprecation, Quarrier shook his head as he took the chair Gordon offered at the table. Old Anne shuffled in with the steaming stew and crisp whitefish, her wide, wrinkled face alight with pride in the dignity of her office. Quarrier was deep in the narrative of his summer voyage to the east coast of Hudson's bay in the interest of a Toronto syndicate, which had been formed to explore the region and to exploit, if commercially practicable, the copper and iron deposits known to exist, when the sound of coughing from an inner room brought Guthrie to his Quarrier's thick eyebrows knotted. 'He's paying the piper now. How an educated man, as he seems to be, can come up here in this Godforsaken country in the first place, and then take up with a squaw-Pah!"

The girl he addressed sat tense. with chin up, listening, as though she had not heard. In a moment Guthrie opened the door, his face gray with anxiety. "Could you come-a moment?" he asked the girl who had risen from the table. "You said you could help-

There, to the annoyance of the man who ate heavily of Anne's cooking, they stayed until he had finished. At length, when the opiate had brought respite to the sufferer, Joan and Guthrie returned to the living room.

"I'm sorry, sir," said Guthrle, "that you should be disturbed-that I should need the services of your sister, but she's been a godsend."

Quarrier nodded stolidly, without removing his pipe from his mouth. Then, as if spurred by a sense of duty to the performance of a task not too disagreeable, cleared his throat and

"Mr. Guthrie, may I ask how you, a man of education and family, find yourself in a-minor position, so to speak, with the Hudson's Bay company?"

A corner of Guthrie's mouth lifted. His rather deep-set eyes shifted from the questioner to meet the glance of the girl, half amused at the abrupt question, half wondering at his an

"Ah, I see. Where was your home, may I ask?" "Montreal."

"You-you can't be a relative of Charles Guthrie?" demanded the other, his interest suddenly aroused.

"Brother." "You, a brother of Charles Guthrie!" Quarrier's prominent eyes bulged in amazement at the factor of

"I don't know. I rather like the "Charles Guthrle is a member of

"I'm not so sure of that. He's rather given me up as a black sheep, you know." "For staying up here, I presume?"

"Yes, for not coming home-this summer."

Guthrie rose, and lighting a candle, for the September night had fallen, carried it to the sick room, where old Anne was on guard. Returning, ne lit the small living-room lamp. And in the mind of the woman who

Honesty of Indians Shown by Old Record

John S. Rappe, who conducted a | tavern and general store in the vicinity of the old Wyandotte Indian reservation in Ohio for many years prior to the removal of those Indians to another reservation west of the Mississippi river, adds his testimony to the volume of evidence on record as to the essential honesty of the Indian, comments the Dayton News.

When this tribe was transferred west of the Mississippi there were many members of it who were indebted to Rappe. Most of the indebtedness was in the form of small sums. but the aggregate was five or six thousand dollars. It was not a tribal debt : so the collective lands of the tribe could not be attached, and the individual debtors were beyond the serv-were practically all judgment proof anyhow. But Rappe testified that he did not lose a dollar of it. Principal and interest were paid, to the last penny, and often, because of the inadequate means of transmittal in those days, it cost the absent debtor as much as the entire payment to send it; but it all came, in one way or an-concerning the factor of Elkwan, for in the room he had given up to her were three autographed likenesses of a beautiful girl. Then Quarrier described in detail the accident to his power schooner off Cape Jones, the wild night on the bay with an improvised and useless rudder, and the stranding on the beach of Akimiski island.

"It was the next morning that this red-headed pirate, McDonald, discovered us and sent a boat ashore."

"You say he took some of your stuff?" asked Guthrie. "Yes, he said he needed flour and in the autumn. This year he told some of the Indians that he would winter in a cove at the south end of the island. Akimiski is famous for silver and black fox."

"I can't understand why the company doesn't run him out of the bay if he's hurting their business." Guthrie laughed. "Why, man, he has as much right here as we, or the Revillon Freres. And as to running him out, I'm inclined to think that McDonald would take a lot of running. Did you happen to go aboard his schooner?"

"Yes, I went board to get my money." "You didn't notice a machine gun or two lying around?" "Well, the Crees say he has them.

Evidently, he has come to stay." "So you're going to sit calmly here and let him get the fur?" snorted Quarrier, contemptuously. "That's it," agreed Guthrle. "You see, we're a bit afraid of this wild man with the scarred face. The rumor has drifted up here that he had an impressive war record." The irony was lost on the geologist. "Afraid to fight for your rights, eh?" he ridiculed, oblivious of the bulletfurrowed cheek of the man who faced

At the reproach, the face of Guthrie ift with amusement, but a glint in the half-closed eyes prompted Joan Quarrier, mortified by her brother's gaucherie, to intervene. "To a Canadian veteran, that remark is positively insulting. I fail to recall anything of a warlike nature in your manner with our pirate.

Arch. As a matter of fact, you seemed quite overawed." "Overawed? Ridiculous!" snapped Quarrier, "I was glad to sell flour and gas we couldn't take with us."

Guthrie's twinkling eyes met those of the girl. "They say his scarred mouth is rather awe-inspiring. Possibly scars are repulsive to your brother," he suggested. "They are-to some people." The tone of the last-the sudden tightening of face muscles-the swift sobering of the eyes, spurred the quick intuition of the girl to pierce the armor of his raillery, to surmise what the seared cheek of the speaker might have brought to him of bitterness and pain. But why? she wondered. The red line from eye to ear only lent dignity-distinction, to the cleanly modeled features. Why should this hadge of service be the source of secret humiliation? But she was confident that it was. Quarrier changed the subject, "By the way, Mr. Guthrie, when can you send for the stuff I left on the beach and take it to Albany? I can pick it up next spring when I return to the bay."

Evidently deeply occupied with his thought, for a space the man addressed made no answer; then he said, indifferently: "Some time this winter, possibly, when the ice sets hard in the strait."

"What? Not before then? There are some valuable ore specimens and stores-boxes of them. That pirate will come back for them." "We'll be hunting geese until cold weather drives them south." "You're not hunting geese here, are you? Why couldn't you go before you go on your hunt-tomorrow, in fact?" "Archie!" The sharp challenge of Joan Quarrier at the callous insistence of her brother was checked by the level tones of the factor.

AUTO-TRACTOR LATEST IN TRANSPORTATION

The latest vehicle for army transportation is the convertible automobiletractor, which was demonstrated by the British war office. The experimental car, a reconnaissance, has a lengthy chassis and between the front and rear wheels is a tractor which can be lowered or raised at will, depending upon the topography of the land.

MOTOR JAUNT IS ONE OF DELIGHT

Have Car Overhauled, Brakes Properly Adusted and Tires Inspected.

Vacations remind me of our two weeks' motor trip to Estes park last summer, and I remember how we planned what to take and what to leave at home. It's a problem. Some tourists take dogs, canaries, even victrolas. But on a camping trip, you want to forget some marks of civilization, says Aunt Aggie of the Kansas State Agricultural State college.

Perhaps the experiences we had in selecting things to take will help some would-be campers.

Things to Get.

First, get a waterproof tent-try the hose on it before you leave home to be sure it won't leak. A wall tent, or one that goes over the car, is satisfactory. Steel stakes are better than wooden.

We took a steel spring auto bed, but although it was comfortable, it was too heavy to handle. A bed with woven rope bottom and wooden supports rather than steel is better for an auto bed. Take a folding cot apiece for the rest of the family. You'll need plenty of warm comfortables-newspapers help out because they are good insulators.

We took as few clothes as possible and packed them in some old suitcases-new bags would have been ruined on that trip. We wore hiking

A short-handled spade helped us out of mud holes, and an ax was always useful. If you plan to fish, take your fishing tackle.

Cooking Utensils. For meals, we had a small alumimum pan apiece, unbreakable cups, forks and spoons apiece, two or three case knives, a good butcher knife, a sirup pail for making coffee or heating water, a gallon pail for carrying water, salt and pepper shakers, skillet, and a large spoon for stirring. We took along a home-cured ham and saved a number of meat bills. One of the children kept a notebook of expenses, and immediately after we bought anything-gas, oil, food-she recorded the amount. It cost us just $150 for six of us to take the trip, and of course we have all our camp goods left to take another jaunt.

Our expense keeper also kept a diary of the trip in her notebook and, with our snapshots, we live over again our experiences. Before leaving, have the car thoroughly overhauled, brakes adjusted, and a good set of tires put on, with a spare. A half-gallon can of oil is enough for emergencies. If you want to, take a trailer to pack things into. but one car is much easier to manage than two, even if the one is crowded.

Car Greatest Necessity

for the Wife of Farmer The American farm housewife can get along without a lot of things, but she must have her automobile. Running water in the kitchen, a telephone and a radio are regarded as necessities, but the motor car ranks

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has announced that replies to 40,000 questionnaires sent to housewives living on farms disclosed that nearly four-fifths of them have automobiles, one-fifth radio sets, more than a third have running or pumped water at kitchen sinks.

Top of Steering Gear Post Repays Lubricant

It pays to keep in mind many of the less conspicuous parts of the car which are not properly lubricated because they are overlooked so easily. One of these, almost invariably forgotten in the lubricating process, is the top of the steering gear post. A few drops of light oil applied at this point every few thousand miles will take away the grinding noise when one tugs at the wheel as in parking. Clutch and brake pedal shafts need a little lubricant once in a while. Neglect causes excessive wear, resulting in noisy pedal action.

Two Plans for Stopping Car in Right Position

The usual garage is just large enough to accommodate one, two or three cars, and the space in front of and behind the cars is rather limited. To prevent running the car into the garage too far, one owner suspended a card from the ceiling, so that it would just touch the windshield when

Handy Methods of Stopping a Car in

Australia Is Big Buyer of Heavy-Duty Trucks

Australia is the largest purchaser of American-made heavy-duty trucks, ontrary to the public belief ada imports more of that type of vehicles than any other country. This is due, perhaps, to its nearness but the facts, do not bear it out. Last year, according to the government figures, 647 trucks of more than two and a half tons capacity were imported from the United States by Australia. The agricultural development of the Antipodes is given as a reason. together with a lack of rail facilities, As a matter of fact, truck experts believe, there never will be any extensive rall development in Australia, modern highways being built between the important cities which will afford ample transportation routes for the heavy trucks that also serve the rich farming districts that lie between. Canada imported a little more than a third of the number of heavy-duty trucks that Australia did, the total

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

What the world needs now is an automobile that will carry its own parking place. Automobile drivers are getting their brakes tested for nothing, but pedestrians are still paying to have their eyes tested. Some of our ancestors left footprints on the sands of time, but you can't do much with a rubber tire on a concrete pavement. A large proportion of "blowouts" of tires are due to rim cuts, and these are caused by not keeping rims free from rust and grit. To start an engine when the ignition is locked and the key is lost, ru. a wire from the underground side or the horn to the ignition coll.

The average worker gets $2,000 a year, we read in a reliable fournal. Of which, we would say, the average automobile dealer always gets some thing.

One person is struck by an automobile in this country every 42 seconds, a government statistic says Once upon a time our national sport was baseball.

While a car may seem to ride beter at 40 miles an hour than at 30 over a rough road, the higher speed sacrifices longevity and efficiency of axtes, wheels, wheel bearings, differential, steering rods, brakes and other important parts below the springs.
