Wall of Water Carries Hundreds to Death in California.

A TREMENDOUS wall of water turned loose into San Francisquito canyon when the giant St. Francis dam burst under pressure of 12,000,000 gallons of water, carried more than 400 sleeping residents of the narrow valley to death.

The great concrete retaining wall, 185 feet high, built less than two years ago to impound water for the city of Los Angeles, gave way with-out warning, releasing the flood upon the sleeping inhabitants of the picturesque valley. Everything was swept away-human only a few more than a hundred have | January 24, instead of March 4.

THE United States senate published the report on conditions in the bituminous fields of Pennsylvania by the subcommittee which the senate sent, into that area on an investigation that lasted five days.

The report declared the conditions to be dangerous to public order and deplorable as to morals, housing, sanitation, and general living conditions.

It was unfavorable to the methods of most of the operators and it praised "the splendld courage" of the women folk of the striking miners in the face of "privations which make the mothers' lot always the hardest to

"We most respectfully urge," the senators concluded, "that the investigation by the whole interstate commerce committee of the senate be searching and severe in every detail, looking forward to some solution by legislation that will put the great coal industry of America on a reasonably prosperous basis."

WILLIAM M. BUTLER, chairman of the Republican national committee, denied that he received or handled any part of the $260,000 in Continental Trading company Liberty bonds advanced by Harry F. Sinclair to help wipe out the committee's 1920 Presidential campaign deficit.

Butler's denial was made public almost simultaneously with the text of a letter in which Senator Borah (Rep., Idaho), called upon Butler to lead the

The letter suggested that Butler would have only to make the appeal and thousands of honest Republicans would willingly contribute "from one dollar up to any reasonable sum" in order that the money advanced to the party's war chest by Sinclair out of the same fund he used to pay Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, for the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve might be returned.

THE White-Norris constitutional amendment to abolish "lame duck" sessions of congress, and change the Presidential inaugural date was rejected by the house. The vote was 209 to 157, with two members answering present. This was 36 votes less than the two-thirds necessary for approval of constitutional amendments.

The amendment sought to change the meeting date of congress from March 4 to January 4. This would have abolished the "lame duck" ses beings, houses, cabins, workmen's sions of congress, or those in which tents, orchards and live stock. About Cascara

It is unfortunate that many people judge the thoroughness of a laxative by its violence. # Millions of Model T Fords are still in active service

FOR nearly twenty years, the Model T Ford led the motor industry and it still is used by more people than any other automobile. More than eight million Model T Fords are in active service today—an indication of their sturdy worth, reliability and economy.

Because of the tremendous investment which people have in these cars and because so many of them will be driven for two, three, and even five more years, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make replacement parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

For the Ford Motor Company has always believed that its full duty consists not only in making a good automobile at a low price, but also in keeping it running efficiently for you as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

No matter where you live, therefore, you can still buy Model T Ford parts with the same assurance as formerly, knowing that they will give you the kind of service you have a right to expect, and at the same time protect the money you have invested in your car.

All Ford replacement parts, as you may know, are made of the same materials and in the same way as those from which your car was originally assembled, and are low in price because of the established Ford policy.

So that you may get the greatest use from your Model T Ford over the longest period of time, we suggest that you take the car to the nearest Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of any replacement parts which may be necessary. You may find that a very small expenditure will maintain the value of your car and will be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional service.

Wheat

MAN and wheat seem always to have been together. Wheat is in the picture of the life of mankind at the earliest point at which science. research and investigation have been able to give that picture an outline. Its cultivation in China goes back at least 2700 years B. C. In the remotest civilizations of the Valley of Mesopotamia of which any record has been obtained, wheat was a staple crop and staple food. The scientist Unger found grains of wheat in the bricks of a pyramid at Dashur, Egypt, which is believed to date from 3359 B. C., and wheat grains of the same form have come from Stone age remains and rubbish heaps in the Swiss lake country and in Hungary.

Whether Aryan, Chinese, or Stone age European of a type long since disappeared, mankind has had wheat at every point at which science has revealed anything accurate of his

The distribution of wheat, there fore, and the manner in which it was spread from one country to another cannot be described. The dispersal of this immensely valuable feed grain had been accomplished by the most primitive men before history begins to depict them.

From this situation it might seem probable that wheat ages ago, grew wild at a great many different places and was brought under cultivation by man, not at one isolated spot, but at different places about the globe. This assumption is probably a wrong one. The best evidence obtainable, which is slight, together with the greatest probability, which is very strong is that wheat is a native of the Mesopotamian region.

That wheat did originally grow wild in Mesopotamia was stated by one Berosus, a Chaldean priest, whose statement has been preserved by the historian Herodotus. The "Odyssey" of Homer, telling of the travels of Ulysses, relates that wheat was found wild in ancient Sictly. Others have made the same claim, but as yet It remains unsubstantiated as far as modern science is concerned.

Wheat is frequently referred to in the Hebrew scriptures. Ancient Greek and Italian writings attribute its origin to some deity, such as Ceres, after whom the cereals are named, Isls or Triptolemus.

There is no exact proof of the iccality in which wheat originated, but the best guess, if guess it must be, is that it came from the principal region of ancient civilization, the Mesopotamian district between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates.

. . . Tea

TEA grows wild in abundance in the mountainous region that separates China from India. It also is found in Cochin China and other parts of the Flowery kingdom. Records show that it has been known in China for more than 4,000 years, so little doubt remains that it came into cultivation in that land, where it is also native. From there its cultivation spread, little by little, probably reaching into India earlier than to Japan.

A Japanese legend relates that a priest who came to China from India about 519 A. D., having gone to sleep at a time when he wished to remain awake for the purpose of praying, was so angry with himself that he cut off his eyelids and hung them on a bush. From this bush sprang the tea shrub, with its qualities of sleep pre-

This legend, however, has as little truth with respect to the time of tea's discovery as it has with the "origin of species," for the Chinese book, "Pentsao," a compendium of knowledge, mentions tea as far back as 2700 B. C. Other books written 300 to 600 B. C. also reveal a full knowledge of the plant and of the drink made by steeping its leaves.

Although tea-growing is today one of the major agricultural industries of Indian and Ceylen, and tea probably spread into those countries from China before it reached Japan, it is not of very ancient cultivation in the Indian peninsula as there is no word for tea in the Sanskrit, or ancient Indian language.

Up to the middle of the Eighteenth century tea was little known in western Europe and was one of the delicacles brought from the Spice islands of the Far East by the trading fleets of Holland, Portuga. France and England. Of the plant which produced it almost nothing was known, and the great Swedish botanist, Linnaeus, writing of it, said there were two principal varieties, the green tea and the black. Today to is known, however, that the same plant, generally speaking, produces all teas, the difference in color being due to different processes of curing and manufacture and to the different places on the plant from which the leaves are plucked.

Brazil is the country in the Western hemisphere where tea growing has been introduced most successfully. (@ 1928. Western Newspaper Union.)

New Location Found for Garden of Eden

Europe may have been the Garden of Eden, and the "missing link," which has so far eluded scientists, may be found on that continent, according to the theory of Sir Arthur Keith, one of England's most prominent scientists, one of the leading officials of the Royal institution and head of the British association. Sir Arthur advanced this theory following the discovery by a German geologist of a "Heldelberg jaw," which the British scientist said is the earliest European human now known to science. He asserted that the discovery is one of the biggest of its kind concerning the origin of humans "There thus really seems to be a chance that Germany is going to produce the 'missing link,' and it looks very much as though Europe really was the 'Garden of Eden,' " Sir Arthur said.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetaable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to ald sound, nat ural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of bables that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

CHAPTER X

The Hidden Room A few moments later Jack Bailey, seeing a thin glow of candle-light from the attic above, and hearing Lizzie's protesting voice, made his way up there. He found them in the trunkroom, a dusty, dingy apartment lined with high closets along the walls-the floor littered with an incongruous assortment of attic objects-two battered trunks, a clothes hamper, an old sewing machine, a broken-backed kitchen chair, a pair of dilapidated dress-sultcases and a shabby satchel that might once have been a woman's dressing-case-in one corner a grimy fireplace in which, obviously, no fire had been lighted for years.

But he also found Miss Cornella holding her candle to the floor and staring at something there.

"Candle-grease!" she said, sharply, staring at a line of white spots by the window. She stooped and touched the spots with an exploratory finger.

"Fresh candle-grease! Now who do you suppose did that? It leads straight to the fireplace!" she murmured in tones of Sherlockian gravity. Bailey repressed an involuntary smile. But her next words gave him genuine food for thought.

"It's been going through my mind for the last few minutes that no chimney flue runs up this side of the house!" she said.

Bailey stared. "Then why the fireplace? "That's what I'm going to find out!"

said the spinster grimly. She started to rap the mantel, testing it for secret springs.

"Jack! Jack!" It was Dale's voice. low and cautious, coming from the landing of the stairs.

Bailey stepped to the door of the trunk room. "Come in," he called in reply. "And tock the door behind you." Daie entered, turning the key in the lock behind her.

"Where are the others?" "They're still searching the house. There's no sign of anybody." "They haven't found-Mr. Ander-

Dale shook her head. "Not yet." She turned toward her aunt. Miss Cornelia had begun to enjoy herself once more. Rapping on the mantelpiece, poking and pressing various corners and sections of the mantel itself, she remembered all the detective stories she had ever read and thought, with a sniff of scorn, that she could better them. She rapped on the wall above the mantel-exactly-there was the hollow echo she wanted. "Hollow as Lizzie's head!" she said triumphantly. The fireplace was obviously not what it seemed-there must be a space behind it unaccounted for in the building plans. Now what was the next step detectives always took Oh, yes-they looked for panels; panets that moved. And when one shoved them away there was a button or something. She pushed and pressed and finally something did move. It was the mantelpiece itself, false grate and ail which began to swing out into the room revealing behind a dark, hollow cubbyhole, some six feet by six-

"Oh, Jack, be careful!" breathed Dale, as her lover took Miss Cornelia's candle and moved toward the dark hiding place. But her eyes had already caught the outlines of a tall iron safe in the goom, and in spite of her fears, her lips formed a wordless the bidden room at last!

But Jack Bailey said nothing at all. One glance had shown him that the safe was empty.

The tragic collapse of all their hopes was almost more than they could bear. Coming on top of the nerve-racking events of the night, it left them dazed and directionless. It was, of course, Miss Cornelia who recovered first.

"Even without the money," she said, "the mere presence of this safe here, hidden away, tells the story. The fact that some one else knew and got here first cannot alter that."

But she could not cheer them. It was Lizzie who created a diversion. Lizzie who had bolted into the hall at the first motion of the mantelpiece outwards, and who now with equal precipitation came bolting back. She rushed into the room, slamming the door behind her, and collapsed into a heap of mouning terror at her mistress' feet. At first she was completely inarticulate, but after a time she muttered that she had seen "him" and then fell to mouning again.

The same thought was in all their minds, that in some corner of the upper floor she had come across the body of Anderson. But when Miss Cornelis finally quieted her and asked this, she shook her head.

"It was the Bat I saw," was her astounding statement. "He dropped through the skylight out there and ran along the hall. I saw him, I tell you.

He went right by me!" "Nonsense," said Miss Cornelia, briskly. "How can you say such a thing?

But Bailey pushed forward and took Lizzie by the shoulder. "What did he look like?"

"He hadn't any face. He was all black where his face ought to be." "De you mean be wore a mask?" "Maybe. I don't know."

She collapsed again, but when Then you didn't !

made a move toward the door, she ! broke into frantic wailing. "Don't go out there!" she shrieked. "He's there, I tell you. I'm not crazy.

If you open that door, he'll shoot."

But the door was already open and no shot came. With the departure of Bailey and Miss Cornella, and the resulting darkness due to their taking the candle, Lizzie and Dale were left alone. The girl was faint with disappointment and strain; she sat huddled on a trunk, saying nothing, and after a moment or so Lizzie roused to her condition.

"Not feeling sick, are you?" she asked.

"I feel a little queer." "Who wouldn't, in the dark here, with that monster loose somewhere near by?" But she stirred herself and got up. "I'd better get the smelling salts," she said heavily. "God knows I hate to move, but if there's one place safer in this house than another, I've yet to find it." She went out, leaving Dale alone

The trunk room was dark, save that now and then as the candle appeared and reappeared the doorway was faintly outlined. On this outline she kept her eyes fixed, by way of comfort, and thus passed the next few moments. She felt weak and dizzy and entirely desparing.

Then-the outline was not so clear. She had heard nothing, but there was something in the doorway. It stood there, formless, diabolical, and then she saw what was happening. It was closing the door. Afterward she was mercifully not to remember what came next; the figure was perhaps intent on what was going on outside, or her own movements may have been as silent as its own. That she got into the mantel room and even partially closed it behind her is certain, and that her description of what followed is fairly accurate is borne out by the facts as known.

The Bat was working rapidly. She heard his quick, nervous movements; apparently he had come back for something and secured it, for now he moved again toward the door. But he was too late; they were returning that way. She heard him mutter something and quickly turn the key in the lock. Then he seemed to run toward the window, and for some reason to recoil from it.

The next instant she realized that he was coming toward the mantel room, that he intended to hide in it. There was no doubt in her mind as to his identity. It was the Bat, and in a moment more he would be shut in there with her.

She tried to scream and could not. and the next instant she was in a dead faint on the floor.

Bailey meanwhile had crawled out on the roof and was carefully searching it. But other things were happening also. A disinterested observer could have seen very soon why the Bat had abandoned the window as a means of egress.

Almost before the mantel had swung to behind the arch-criminal, the top of a tall pruning ladder had appeared at the window, and by its quivering showed that some one was climbing up, rung by rung. Unsuspiciously enough he came on, pausing at the top to flash a light into the room, and then cautiously swinging a leg over the sill. It was the doctor. He gave a low whistle, but there was no reply. save that, had he seen it, the mantel swung out an inch or two. Perhaps he was never so near death as at that moment, but that instant of irresolution on his part saved him, for by coming into the room he had taken himself out of range.

Even then he was very close to destruction, for after a brief pause and a second rather puzzled survey of the room, he started toward the mantel itself. Only the rattle of the doorknob stopped him, and a call from out-

"Dale!" called Bailey's voice from the corridor. "Dale!" "Dale! Dale! The door's locked!"

cried Miss Cornelia. The doctor hesitated. The call came again. "Dale! Dale!" and Bailey pounded on the door as if he meant to break it down. The doctor made up his mind. "Wait a moment!" he called. He stepped to the door and unlocked it. Bailey hurled himself into the room. followed by Miss Cornelia with her candle. Lizzie stood in the doorway.

timidly, ready to leap for safety at a moment's notice. "Why did you lock that door?" said Balley, angrily, threatening the doc-

"But I didnet," said the latter, truthfully enough. Bailey made a movement of irritation. Then a glance about the room informed him of the amazing the incredible fact. Dale was not there! She had disappeared!

"You-you," he stammered at the doctor, "Where's Miss Ogden? What have you done with her?"

The doctor was equally baffled. "Done with her?" he said indignant-"I don't know what you're talking about-I haven't seen her!" "Then you didn't lock that door?"

The doctor's denial was firm. "Absolutely not. I was coming through the window when I heard your voice at the door!" Balley's eyes leapt to the windowyes-a ladder was there-the doctor might be speaking the truth after all. But if so, how and why had Dale disappeared?

The doctor's admission of his manner of entrance did not make Lizzie any the happier.

"In at the window-just like a but!" she muttered in shaking tones. She would not have stayed in the doorway if she had not been afraid to move anywhere else. "I saw lights up here from outside."

longer. He saw ruin gaping before him-a bottomless abyss. "Damnation!" he cursed, impotently, under his breath.

Bailey turned on him savagely, "Dld you shut that mantel?

"I'll see whether you shut it or not!" Bailey leapt toward the fireplace. "Dale! Dale!" he called desperately, leaning against the mantel. His fingers groped for the knob that worked the mechanism of the hidden entrance. The doctor picked up the single lighted candle from the hamper, as if to throw more light on Bailey's task. Balley's fingers found the knob. He turned it. The mantel began to swing out into the room. As it did so the doctor deliberately souffed out the light of the candle he held, leaving the room in abrupt and obliterating darkness. "Doctor, why did you put out that candle?" Miss Cornella's voice cut the blackness like a knife. "I didn't-I-"

"You did-I saw you do it." and denial took but an instant of time, as the mantel swung wide open. The next instant there was a rush of feet across the floor, from the fireplacethe shock of a collision between two bodies—the sound of a heavy fall.

"What was that?" queried Bailey, dazedly, with a feeling as if some great winged creature had brushed at him and passed Lizzie answered from the doorway.

"Oh, oh!" she grouned, in stricken accents. "Somebody knocked me down and trampled on me!"

"Matches, quick!" commanded Miss Cornelia. "Where's the candle?" The doctor was still trying to explain his curious action of a moment before. "Awfully sorry, I assure you-it dropped out of the holder-ah, here

He held it up triumphantly. Bailey struck a match and lighted it. The wavering little flame showed Lizzie prostrate but vocal, in the doorwayand Dale, lying on the floor of the hidden room, her eyes shut, and her face as drained of color as the face of a marble statue. For one horrible instant Bailey thought she must be

He rushed to her wildly and picked her up in his arms. No-still breathing-thank God! He carried her tenderly to the only chair in the room.

"Doctor!" The doctor, once more the physician, knelt at her side, and felt for her pulse. And Lizzie, picking herself up from where the collision with some violent body had thrown her, retrieved the smelling salts from the floor. It was onto this picture, the candle light shining on strained faces, the dramatic figure of Dale, now semi-conscious, the desperate rage of Bailey. that a new actor appeared on the scene.

Anderson, the detective, stood in the doorway, holding a candle-as grim and menacing a figure as a wan just arisen from the dead.

"That't right!" said Lizzie, unappalled for once. "Come in when everything's over!"

The doctor glanced up and met the detective's eyes, cold and menacing. "You took my revolver from me, downstairs," he said. "I'll trouble you for it."

The doctor got heavily to his feet. The others, their suspicions confirmed at last, looked at him with startled eyes. The detective seemed to enjoy the universal confusion his words had brought.

Slowly, with sullen reluctance, the doctor yielded up the stolen weapon. The detective examined it casually and replaced it in his hip pocket.

"I've something to settle with you pretty soon," he said through clenched teeth, addressing the doctor. "And I'll settle it properly. Now-what's this?"

He indicated Dale-her face still and waxen-her breath coming so at all, as Miss Cornelia and Bailey tried to revive her.

"She's coming to-" said Miss Cornelia, triumphantly, as a first faint flush of color reappeared in the girl's cheeks. "We found her shut in there, Mr. Anderson," the spinster added, pointing toward the gaping entrance of the hidden room.

A gleam crossed the detective's face. He went up to examine the secret chamber. As he did so, Doctor Wells. who had been inching surreptitiously toward the door, sought the opportunity of slipping out unobserved. But Anderson was not to be caught napping again. "Wells!" he barked. The doctor stopped and turned. "Where were you when she was locked in this room?"

Grain Trade Periled by Railroad Rebates

Serious troubles were encountered by Chicago traders in the early nineties through the practice of accepting railroad rebates. The railroads of the time were keenly aggressive, and they inaugurated a war of cutthroat competition, giving rebates to heavy and regular shippers-a sort of bidding for business. At first the rebates were welcomed by shippers, who were flattered by the thought that they were getting something for nothing. The practice became such an abuse that more than one grain firm faced financial disaster because of it. No one ever knew just how great was the rebate that his competitor obtained and the whole situation added a trade hazard that was immeasurable. The rebates ran from 10 to 25 per cent of the published tariff. It was, of course, difficult for the concern that was able to obtain only 10 per cent rebate to compete with the one that got the 25 per cent reduction. Another phase of the rebate system was that the rebate was merely a sort of "gentlemen's agreement" between the trader and some high official of the railroad. Nothing ever was written about the rebate. The "gentlemen's agreement' sometimes became a disagreement and there was then no way to force the railroad to live up to the understanding .- James A. Metal Burial Caskets

A patent for the manufacture of metal burial caskets in this country was granted about the year 1850, and they were first made in Cincinnati, Ohio, and Providence, R. L.

He gestured at the hidden room. "Ask these people here."

Miss Cornelia caught bim up at once.

"The fact remains, Doctor," she said, her voice cold with anger, "that we left her here alone. When we came back, you were here. The corridor door was locked, and she was in that room-unconscious!"

She moved forward to throw the light of her candle on the hidden room as the detective passed into it, gave it a swift professional glance, and stepped out again. But she had not finishel her story by any means.

"As we opened that door," she continued to the detective, tapping the false mantel, "the doctor deliberately extinguished our only candle!"

"Do you know who was in that room?" queried the detective, fiercely, wheeling on the doctor. But the latter had evidently made up his mind to cling stubbornly to a policy of complete denial. "No," he said sullenly. "I didn't put out the candle. It fell. And I didn't lock that door into the hall. I found it locked!" A sigh of relief from Bailey now centered everyone's attention on himself and Dale. At last the girl was recovering from the shock of her terrible experience and regaining consciousness. Her eyelids flutteredclosed again-opened once more. She tried to sit up, weakly, clinging to Bailey's shoulder. The color returned to her cheeks-the stuper left her eyes. She gave the hidden room & hunted little glance and then shuddered violently. "Please close that ewful door," sha said in a tremulous voice. "I don't want to see it again."

The detective went allently to close the iron doors. "What happened to you? Can't you remember?" faltered Bailey, on his knees at her side. The shadow of an old terror lay on the girl's face.

"I was in here alone, in the dark." she began slowly-"Then, as I looked at the doorway there, I caw there wes somebody there. He came in and closed the door. I didn't know what to do, so I slipped in-there, and after a while I knew he was coming in, too for he couldn't get out. Then I must have fainted." "There was nothing about the fig ure that you recognized?"

"No. Nothing." "But we know it was the Bat," put in Miss Cornelia. The detective laughed sardonically The old duel of opposing theories be tween the two seemed about to recom mence.

"Still harping on the Bat!" he said with a little sneer. Miss Cornelia stuck to her guns.

"I have every reason to believe that the Bat is in this house," she said. The detective gave another jarring, mirthless laugh.

"And that he took the Union bank money out of that safe, I suppose? he jeered. "No, Miss Van Gerder." He wheeled on the doctor now. "Ask the doctor who took the Union bank money out of that safe!" he tacked me downstairs in the drawing room, knocked me senseless and locked me in the billiard room! There was an astounded silence.

The detective added a parting shot to his indictment of the doctor. "The next time you put handcuffe on a man, be sure to take the key out of his vest pocket," he said biting off the words. Rage and consternation mingled on the doctor's countenance-on the faces of the others astonishment was followed by a growing certainty. Only Miss Cornelia clung stubbornly to her original theory.

"Perhaps I'm an obstinate old wom an," she said, in tones which obvious ly showed that if so she was rather proud of it, "but the doctor and all the rest of us were locked in the living room, not ten minutes ago !

"By the Bat, I suppose?" mocked Anderson. "By the Bat!" insisted Miss Cornelia inflexibly. "Who else would have

"Yes." The doctor bowed his head. "And you knew the money was in the room?" "Well, I was wrong, wasn't I?" parried the doctor. "You can look for yourself. That safe is empty." The detective brushed his evasive answer aside. "You were up in this room, earlier tonight," he said in tones of appar ent certainty. "No, I couldn't get up!" the doctor still insisted, with strange violence for a man who had already admitted such damning knowledge. The detective's face was a study in disbelief.

"You know where that money i Wells, and I'm going to find it!" This last taunt seemed to goad the doctor beyond endurance.

PRESIDENTIAL YEAR! Politics popping all over the lot!

Remember "Twenty-four votes for Underwood" four years ago? Remember how you said the thrill of that one convention repaid many times the price of your radio set? Remember what you missed if you had no radio-or a poor one?

This year radio is playing a much bigger part. Both parties are preparing for a campaign inside American homes-by radio.

Tunney is signed to fight twice. Man! What a year-by radio.

And the programs NOW. Tonight! Tomorrow night! The headliners of music-of politics-of everything-are on the air-NOW. Don't put off buying your new Atwater Kent A. C. set until the last moment before the conventions. Enjoy the wonderful things radio brings now. When summer comes-you're ready.

Get the set that's always readyfor a convention, a concert, a fight or a frolic-the modern set-the set that has changed everybody's conception of radio-that is going into far more homes than any other-the new, self-contained A. C. set-the Atwater Kent 37.

current costs only a fraction of a cent an hour. And the FULL-VISION Dial, which you read at a glance! How swiftly and surely and clearly it brings in your station!

The modern, satin-finished cabcase. The price is compact, toobecause public demand has permitted us to effect amazing economies of manufacture. The program you can't afford to miss is EVERY NIGHT. Listen with the Atwater Kent 37. You'll see!

EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

By PAUL H. SEYMOUR Author of "Highlights on Auction Bridge" (Copyright, by Hovle, Ir.)

> Article Twenty-Nine. The Squeeze Play

THOSE who followed the radio auc-I tion bridge games will probably renember that the squeeze play was used quite frequently and may have wondered why they have never encountered it in their own playing. The reason is very simple-it is an unusual play and is, as a rule, recognized only by unusual players. Cases where it might be used occur with great frequency but the declarer, all unconscious of the possibility, plays his winning cards and concedes the last trick or two to the adversaries. The conditions which make it possible should be studied with care and every player should be on the alert to detect the preliminary setting for it.

Simply explained the squeeze play is compelling the adversaries to discard either a commanding card of a suit in which declarer holds the secand best, or a guard for a stopper of a suit in which declarer holds several.

This may be done by leading a numper of good cards in no trump or in a trump declaration after the trumps have been exhausted. For instance. suppose that declarer is playing no trump and his hand is reduced to the ollowing four cards: hearts-King and nine; diamonds-ten; clubs-five. Senor has; hearts-Queen, eight and six; Batteries can't run down-for diamonds-Jack Dummy has: hearts there are no batteries. The house Ace. ten seven and two. Junior has no diamonds or clubs, and two small hearts have been discarded. Declarer leads his good five of clubs and senior is caught in the squeeze. If he discards his Jack of diamonds declarer will win the last three tricks with the ten of diamonds and the Ace and King inet is no larger than a child's suit of hearts; and if he discards a heart declarer will lead hearts, catch the Queen on the second lead taken by dummy's Ace. and the ten of hearts will be good for the last trick.

The following complete deal illustrates this play and is also worthy of note regarding the bidding:

East deals and bids one spade, the higher suit of his "two-suiter." South bids three hearts, jumping the bid unnecessarily in an effort to stop West from supporting his partner's spades. West and North pass and East shows his second suit by bidding four clubs South can count only six sure tricks and so must pass, hoping for help from his partner. West decidedly prefers spades to clubs; therefore changes the bid to four spades. This is not a raise and does not indicate to his partner that he has a raising hand, but simply states that he prefers spades. North bids five hearts and all pass.

West leads his singleton club, dummy spreads his cards on the table and declarer counts his losing cards. One spade and one club seem to be losers -can he get rid of them? He can finesse the diamonds and if he is successful and can establish the suit a grand slam will be easy; otherwise he must wait and see what develops.

The play of the hand follows: 18 . . . DQ Declarer wins a grand slam.

At trick 7 declarer saw the possibility of a squeeze play and so discarded a spade and saved his small club. Upon the tricks 9 to 11 the discards from dummy were governed by West's discards. If West had thrown away his Queen of diamonds dummy's six would have been made good, but It was discarded on trick 11 because West still held the Queen. On trick 11 East was caught-his discard of the King of clubs made declarer's eight good; while if he had thrown the Queen of spades dummy's two of spades would have been good.

Derogatory Appellation

The word "doughface" was first coined by John Randolph of Roanoke It means a person who is pliable and ylelding. Randolph applied the term to northern politicians who truckled to the slave-power. He branded the Missouri compromise as "a dirty bargain, helped on by eighteen northern doughfaces." The epithet immediately passed into the slang vocabulary of politics. One authority suggests that possibly Randolph was improperly quoted and that what he really meant vas "doe-faces." referring to the meekness of the doe. It seems more probble, however, that in its original ap plication the term compared certain vielding politicians with the knead able character of dough. James Rus sell Lowell defined "doughface" as : contented lickspittle, a common variety of northern politicians."-Kas sas City Star.

If Back Hurts Flush Kidneys

Drink Plenty of Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water-you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salfs is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot infure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Roses in Profusion

One thousand varieties of roses are included in the vast rose garden of the University of Texas at Austin. Every known variety of rose grown in Texas and many varieties from other states are among the specimens in this remarkable garden, one of the largest in the world. The garden is under the supervision of Dr. B. C. Thorp, professor of botany at the University of Texas. The rose garden is a part of the Texas Botanical garden, which was established two years ago.
