SCHOOL OPENING SEPTEMBER 10th

Hedley Public School opens as previously announced Monday, Sept 10. Students will assemble as usual in their respective rooms for enrollment and to receive text books. Then at 10:00 a short program will be rendered in the auditorium. Parents and friends of the school are cordially invited to attend.

The faculty have been in Institute at Clarendon for two days; local institute will be in progress for the remainder of the school week. The program for the following year includes the following:

1. The big bell will ring at 8:30 when all teachers and all students present must take their places; students are tardy if not present by 8:55.

2. Students are not to be permitted to leave desks during quiet period; during the day written permission must be secured from room teacher to speak to any other teacher.

3. Telephone calls (except out of town or emergency calls) forbidden except during the hours between 11 and 12 and 2 and 3.

We as the faculty of Hedley Public School intend to give our best work toward making the year 1928-1929 the best year Hedley has yet seen. But, although we are self confident to a certain extent, we know we must have the co operation of parents and friends of the school in order to carry out successfully our proposed program. Show your interest in the school and your friendship for the boys and girls we are trying to help by being with us at our opening program:

WORK STARTS ON F. E. U. BUILDING

Work was started on the new Farmers Equity building this week, and is going along nicely. It will go up in record time, if materials arrive as needed.

A forced wait for brick shipments is interfering badly with progress on the four buildings on the west side of Main street. The quality of brick wanted had to be manufactured and shipped out of St. Louis, and some delay was expected. These buildings will probably be ready for occupancy about October 15.

The new B. M. A. church is receiving the daily attention of a force of workmen and will soon be in readiness for the finishing touches.

Paul Crozier is having a new residence erected on the lot adjoining his home in west Hedley. From present appearance, it will when completed be one of the "niftiest" homes in town. We understand Mr. Crozier may soon build another. More rent houses are needed badly.

Plans are in the making for more building in both business and residence districts. Hedley is coming alive. Already more building has been and is being done this year than in the twelve years immediately preceding.

And, as we told you last week and the week before - the end is not yet.

FOR QUICK SALE - One 2 room house, one 3 room house, one 6 room house, and one five room house. Will sell cheap if taken at once, and give good terms. See J. T. Curtis.

REVIVAL MEETING AT CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

Our Revival Meeting begins on Thursday, Sept 13, and continues through Sept. 23rd. Rev. Lee L. Hamric is the evangelist. He has had years of experience preaching holiness, a man that is filled with the Holy Ghost, loves God and a lost world.

We are expecting a great time in the Lord. All, far and near, are invited to come and feel that this is your meeting.

Labor Day 1928

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

MONDAY, September 3, marks the forty-sixth anniversary of a holiday which is a red letter event on all American calendars. For that is Labor day, the day which all workers, if they observe the tradition of its founding, should make a "festival day with parades, speech-making and picnics." Of course, the manner of our celebrating all of our holidays undergoes a change through the years, and this applies to Labor day, even though it is one of the "youngest," as well as to the others. But it is interesting to note how Labor day first came into being and how it was celebrated four decades ago.

The history of Labor day, as told by a chronicler in the Herald-Tribune of New York, where it originated, is as follows:

A little group of workers in New York city heard the suggestion marking the birth of Labor day and creating a holiday which has enraptured the globe. The idea originated May 8, 1882, at a session of the then newly formed Central Labor union of the metropolis. Its sponsor was P. J. McGuire, who was one of the best known labor leaders of his day, for many years secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and a vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

McGuire's thought was that one day in the year should be set aside as a general holiday for the men and women who toil. In its initial form the plan contemplated a Labor day, pure and simple, for observance by those who work with hands and muscle. The first celebration of the holiday took place in New York September 5, 1882.

Since that modest beginning the world has taken Labor day to its heart as one of the most important holidays on the calendar. The voice of McGuire has been heard round the world, and by all classes of the population. Labor's holiday has become an international institution for millionaires and workers alike—a festival of relaxation and recuperation for all strata of the structure. No holiday of the year has greater popularity.

A basic reason for the vogue of Labor day is to be found in the wisdom shown by its originator in choosing the date for the celebration. McGuire's choice was the first Monday in September as a strategic date midway between the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving day. His feeling that this was the most suitable day of the entire year for a new holiday found ready echo in the minds of the workers, offering a respite from toil after the blistering weather of July and August. Everybody was ready for a rest at this particular season, and there was prompt response to the suggestion of a double holiday over Sunday and Monday. In recent years there has been a pronounced tendency toward a triple holiday, causing the rest period to extend from Friday evening to Tuesday morning. No other holiday of the year offers similar advantage year in and year out.

After the New York celebration of 1882 the popularity of Labor day grew with increasing swiftness until it had extended to practically every state in the Union. It now covers the island possessions of Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

THE THINKER

Back of the beating hammer,
Back of the workman's clamor,
The seer may find the thought,
The thought that is ever master
Of iron and steam and steel,
That rises above disaster
And tramples it under heel!

The drudge may fret and tinker
Or labor with dusty blows,
But back of him stands the Thinker,
The clear-eyed man who knows,
For into each plow and sower,
Each piece and part and whole,
Must go the Brains of Labor,
Which gives the work a Soul!

Back of the motors humming,
Back of the belts that sing,
Back of the hammers drumming,
Back of the cranes that swing,
There is the eye which scans them,
Watching through stress and strain,
There is the Mind which plans them—
Back of the brain, the Brain!

Might of the roaring boiler,
Force of the engine's thrust,
Strength of the sweating toiler,
Greatly in those we trust,
But back of them stands the Thinker,
The Thinker who drives things through;
Back of the Job—the Dreamer
Whom making the dream come true!

—Berton Braley.

Columbia and the territories. Oregon has anticipated the federal law by legislative act passed in 1893. Other states fell in line one by one, until the day now ranks as a legal holiday throughout the United States. In most states the status is established through statutory provision in Wisconsin and Wyoming the observance comes through proclamation by the governors. In the Philippines the celebration takes place on May 1, in accordance with European custom.

The May day celebrations in Continental Europe owe their origin to American initiative. This foreign adoption of the McGuire idea came about in connection with the eight-hour movement inaugurated by the American Federation of Labor in 1889. The same year brought a meeting of the International Labor Congress in Paris. To this meeting a letter was addressed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American body, urging that the international organization should cooperate with the eight-hour movement by making a declaration of sympathy. In his letter Gompers appealed for demonstrations in all European countries to be conducted on May 1 of the following year. The congress complied and started the machinery for widespread continental demonstrations on May 1, 1890.

In this way it came about that the Gompers suggestion was the instrument which created May 1 as the Labor day of Europe. The start, made in 1890, caught the fancy of European workers and May day became the recognized time for demonstrations all over the continent.

In one respect there has been an important difference between the observance of Labor day in the United States and the practice of European workers with reference to the first of May. The American holiday is of recreational character, while European workers have tended to exaggerate the demonstrational system as a means of emphasizing their organized demands and grievances. The result of the early demonstrations was to invite governmental opposition, with frequent clashes between the workers and the police or military forces. In latter years, however, the May day observance has been given more largely to cessation of work, parades, meetings and commemorative exercises devoid of violence or disturbance.

Europe has been slower than the United States in granting legal status as a holiday to the day selected by labor as the time for annual celebration. The countries which have recognized the first of May as a legal holiday are Austria, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland and Madeira. South American nations recognizing the date are Colombia, Ecuador and Uruguay. Latin America in general follows the European custom of celebrating May day, and the day is a legal holiday in Haiti and Panama.

That the McGuire idea has spread round the world is shown by the circumstances that many British colonies and possessions have their own Labor days. Canada celebrates the first Monday in September, in keeping with the United States custom. Newfoundland observes September 3. Queensland and Western Australia follow the European practice and observe the first of May. "Eight-Hour day" is observed on April 21 in Victoria, Australia, on October 6 in New South Wales, and on October 14 in South Australia. The basic idea in all these countries is that which was voiced by P. J. McGuire in 1882.

Mention of the difference between the observance of Labor day in this country and in Europe, where it was the occasion for demonstrations to "emphasize their organized demands and grievances," recalls the fact that there was a time in the early history of Labor day in this country when the greatest concern of American workmen was for the "right to labor." That concern was expressed in an editorial uttered by the late Samuel Gompers in the first Labor day editorial which he wrote after congress had made it a legal holiday. The editorial, which appeared in the American Federationist for September, 1894, follows:

In the cycle of time we are again on the dawn of our most important national holiday—Labor day. Most important since it for the first time in the history of the world devotes a day to the recognition of the fact that the wage earners must hereafter be regarded as the important factor in the economy of life. In this day when so many look upon the dark side of the progress of the labor movement and predict worse things in store for the laborer, it is not amiss to direct attention to the fact that the life of the human family is one vast struggle, and that though the progress is not as swift as we, as well as our impatient brothers and sisters of labor, would like it to be, yet the fact that in our decade we can see the rights of labor more clearly defined, the vantage ground obtained, and obtaining a clearer insight into the existing wrongs, the more intelligent perception and determination to achieve labor's rights. The past year has witnessed several conquests, some of them defeats, but though defeated in the immediate object sought, they have awakened a new conscience in the American people, and will contribute more to the thorough organization of the wage workers of our country than hundreds of meetings, speeches or pamphlets. The great conquering armies in the history of the world have had their reverses, and the labor movement cannot expect to be an exception to that rule. Each defeat acts as a trenchant warning to the toilers of America that error must be avoided, that intelligence must prevail, and that no success can come to them unless it is through their own efforts and their own organization, and by their persistency manifested.

Pessimism results in indifference, lethargy and impotency and this in turn simply permits the corporations and trusts and the entire capitalist class to flinch from the toiler rights which have been dearly bought.

The organizations of labor must be thorough and complete and above all must be permanent. Those organizations which arise like a flash in the pan only go to show how arduous is the struggle before the toiler, in order to overcome the antagonism of the wealth-producing classes of our country.

Today more than ever the toilers recognize how essentially they are thrown upon their own resources; that they have few if any outside their own ranks who sympathize with them in their efforts for the emancipation of mankind.

Toilers, organize. Let us carry on the good work and in a few more revolutions of the earth upon its axis we shall have a better world—a better mankind. Waiting will not accomplish it; deferring till another time will not secure it. Now is the time for the workers of America to come to the standard of their unions and to organize as thoroughly, completely and compactly as is possible. Let each worker bear in mind the words of Longfellow:

In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,
Be not like dumb, driven cattle!
Be a hero in the strife!

There is one significant statement in that editorial by the "Grand Old Man of American Labor," for when Samuel Gompers uttered the words "intelligence must prevail" he was giving it the keynote of what was destined to prove its soundest and most successful policy.

In the years which have followed since that editorial was written, however, the spirit of American labor, as exemplified in Labor day, has changed. It is still steadfast for the "right to labor," but it is also conscious of the responsibility of labor as well. Today the American laborer is the most prosperous of any in the world and that is because he has brought to his task an intelligent conception of both its rights and its obligations, a consciousness of the dignity of his job, no matter what it may be so long as he does it well, and as a thinker, as well as a doer, he is the backbone of the American nation today.

HINTS FOR AUTOISTS ON CAMPING TRIP

Enjoying a Sojourn in the Open in the West.

Autocamping is just like any other business or play activity of man—after you think you know it all, you find you have just begun to learn.

This article sets forth little, but nevertheless important, things for the prospective autocamper to bear in mind.

Here they are: Should you find yourself without enough bedding, folded newspapers make a good substitute. They exclude cold well and form a fairly comfortable mattress.

Avoid pitching your tent on sandy soil, because such ground will not retain the pegs during a high wind. Sand also has a faculty of creeping into all sorts of food containers.

A toilet kit, similar to those carried by doughboys during the World war, is excellent for outdoor use. Include a steel mirror rather than a glass one.

Should Take Along Ax. Canvas wash basins should be thoroughly soaked before using and usually will leak a little when filled with hot water.

A short-handled ax, like those used by Boy Scouts, is literally worth its weight in gold on a camping trip.

Brilliant leggings and trousers are indispensable when one is hiking about the woods.

If you bunk on the ground, a bit of cotton should be placed in the ears to exclude bugs.

Guy ropes which have not been waterproofed will shrink when wet. Therefore loosen them during a storm and before leaving camp for a considerable length of time. This will prevent them tightening and pulling up the stakes.

Keep copious notes and take plenty of pictures. They will repay you many times over for troubles and money expended.

If you want a sleeping bag and don't want to invest in one, pin two woolen army blankets together with heavy pins.

To prolong the life of camp shoes smear the soles with heavy glue and sawdust. This covering will wear well and may be renewed.

Cook Food Over Embers. A short-handled, strong spade should be a part of your equipment.

For a quick-burning wood fire build it up with sticks, leaving air space between the layers. This forms a draft. Confine your cooking fire to a small space for safety and comfort. Cooking on the embers is best for you to avoid the annoying smoke.

Don't forget to take along a good compass. It may save your life in heavily timbered country. If you ever get lost and haven't a compass, locate a stream, if possible, and follow it to its source.

Unload firearms when in camp. A heavy pistol and cartridge belt may prove most discomforting to the amateur woodsman.

To kill small of fish in pots and pans boil a little vinegar and water in them.

Keep supply of matches in tightly corked bottle so as to always have a few usable ones on hand.

Watch Drinking Water. Be careful of drinking water. Inquire of natives about conditions.

Keep camp clean all of the time for the sake of health as well as appearance. This is easily done if each member of the party has certain tasks to perform, thus making the job a hardship for no one person.

To cool contents of a bottle wrap it in a well-soaked cloth and hang in the breeze under a well-leaved tree.

A sewing kit and mending bag are valuable adjuncts to the camp equipment.

Blisters and tired feet may be prevented by wearing heavy hobnailed shoes, a pair of light socks next to the feet and heavy woolen socks over them.

The novice must remember that while a camping trip is chiefly pleasure it is not entirely a bed of roses, and therefore it behooves him to go well equipped and determined to joyful take a little bitter with the sweet.

CARRY LIBRARIES TO RURAL PEOPLE

"Book Automobiles" Becoming Popular in Various Sections of Country.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) "Book automobiles" have made books available to rural communities not within easy reach of city or town libraries. In Los Angeles, Calif., about 300,000 county people, living outside of Los Angeles and 15 other cities having libraries, are supplied with books from the county library. Two book automobiles make daily trips averaging 100 miles each between the central library and over 200 branches located in communities and schools. These automobiles have covered delivery-type bodies containing shelves for several hundred books and are usually driven by a librarian. The most distant branch is 110 miles from the central library.

In Burlington county, N. J., the county library includes a staff of four people and a central building, with 135 branches in stores, garage halls, and farm homes. This library distributes by "book automobile" not only books, but pictures, films, and phonographic records. At each branch the number of books varies from 50 to 1,000, changeable monthly.

In Coahoma county, Miss., which has a population of only 41,511, about 600 books are distributed daily to various branches in the county. This library service is maintained by a contract with the Clarkdale (Miss.) library at $4,000 a year.

There are several hundred county libraries of various kinds in the United States, most of which have been established by popular vote. Some of these are maintained through their connection with a city library in the same county and some are separate county libraries supported by a small county tax.

Sand Box for Auto

Sand on the rails is a great help to the railroad train and now this aid has been brought to the motorist in a simple way of applying it for greater safety when the streets are slippery, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. On a touring car, a container is attached to the front of the radiator and the sand poured under the front wheels through two spouts. A similar installation for larger busses or trucks will have the desired effect.

Taximeters Given Test on Washington Streets

streets of the capitol. Mr. Smith has found that while it made little difference in the registration whether the meter was connected to either the front wheels or the transmission, the amount of air in the tires made a considerable difference in the meter reading.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

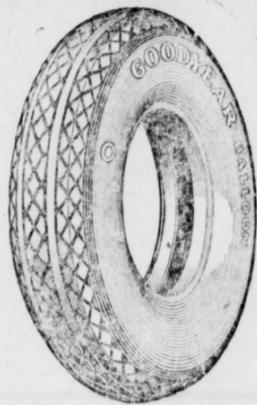

Every man has moments of vindictiveness when he wishes he were a king or a truck driver.

Strange some song writer has not parodied that popular old-timer to "Where Is My Motoring Boy Tonight?"

It is a foolish assumption that a swiftly moving motor car can stop quicker than a pedestrian can jump.

Open water at the North pole again suggests the need of landing stages to show explorers exactly where they have arrived.

Hitting a bad hole with the brakes set is sure to result in broken springs. There is a double strain on the front springs if the brakes are applied when the front wheels strike a hole or similar obstruction.

QUAINT FORMAL EVENING GOWNS; VELVET JACKET AND PRINT GOWN

HERE we are, we of this generation, turning over the pages of the now passe family album greatly amused at the bouffancy of the gowns of our feminine ancestors, smiling indulgently and perhaps in a somewhat superior way at the little bouquets and festooned flowers and frivolous bows which adorn them. Later we modernists don our frocks for the party, and opera and dance, we look at ourselves in the mirror and behold! the quaintness, the yards-and-yards program? A simple problem this which a colorful velvet jacket like the one in the picture will easily solve. Let the weather turn even slightly cool and as if by magic the velvet coat, either long or short, makes its appearance upon the scene. Perhaps the full-length are a bit dressier than the jackets, but the latter are wonderfully youthful looking. The new velvet colorings are entrancing, whether in solid tones or prints. Of course if the jacket or coat is around headlines of the long ago reflected by our very own costumes. It is history repeating itself. It is a fact in point of full-skirtedness and picturesqueness, portraits of belles of the long ago, who in bouffant gowns and danced and cast their pretty glances differ not a great deal from that of modern sophisticates whose formal evening gowns fashion is beflouncing to the point of enchantment. To be sure there are many charming innovations which distinguish the present mode. One of them is the longer-at-the-back hemlines. The gown of white chiffon, in which the pretty screen star Barbara Kent is posing for this picture, shows the grace and charm of the new short-in-front and lengthened-at-the-back hemline. The tiers of deep ruffles are elaborated with lace, for lace enters conspicuously into most every modern style picture. Fashionables of the present moment are going in strong for evening gowns of tulle. The tulle is styled flounce upon flounce for the skirt, with the bodice usually of some other material such as satin, silk or velvet. The interesting thing about the new tulle frocks is their color, which is to be worn over a printed gown, solid tones are preferable, although the very newest ensembles are sometimes in velvet print from start to finish. However, assuming that you have decided upon a monotone velvet to top your most beloved printed silk gown, the thing to do is to let the outstanding color of the patterned dress material be your guide in selecting the proper shade for the coat. If one of the so very popular browns predominates in the silk print then the velvet coat should repeat that brown, and so on and so on. In the instance of the frock in the picture the jacket is a very dark red, the huge dots of the silk being printed in beige and reds ranging from light to dark. One really cannot escape velvet this autumn and be fashionable. Not only is it making its appearance in coats and jackets to wear with sheer and other midseason frocks, but it is acknowledged the chief of chief materials for coming costumes. As presented for fall, the velvet mode is infinite in scope, not only as to the weaves themselves, but just as much so in regard to the intriguing styling given to them. The two-piece theme and the ensemble, also the one-piece dress, are as apt to be dark as light. A cinnamon tulle much beflounced, with a simple bodice of satin which accurately repeats the color of the tulle, thus does fashion draw a picture of what's what among formal evening gowns. You have a favorite frock of silk print and would like to continue wearing it through midseason and early autumn days, providing it would smartly tune in with the new style equally significant. Often the jumper effect is achieved in what are really one-piece models. Some of the handsomest have tops of supple metal brocades attached to skirts of solid colored sheer velvet. Models are also shown with separate blouses of patterned velvet in small or medium-sized design. JULIA BOTTOMLEY. (© 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

He Ought to Be Happy

"When two people like the same things their married life is bound to be happy," sighed the romantic girl. "Well, you and Herbert ought to be happy," remarked her friend, who wanted Herbert and didn't get him. "I know you love him, and I notice he is very fond of himself."—Answers, London.

Just That

She—How could you live without me?
He—Much cheaper.

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. Here are children in your family, here's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks, Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, ways safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless, Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

From his belt the wizard next pulled a long arrow and apparently thrust it down his throat up to the feathers. I had accepted the knife-swallowing as being genuine, for I had seen a white man do it; but the barbed arrow I could not accept. Beaujeu whispered to me:

"Little Wolf is a cunning rogue. The red shaft is made of short sections which are driven together when he wants the barb between his teeth and presses down. But applaud him generously. Should he make the Voice in the lodge tell the Indians not to fight against Braddock we would find ourselves without a red force."

We clapped our hands and pressed them to our lips, and Little Wolf was much pleased. Picking up the bow and red-tipped arrow, he sang a song in which were repeated several times, "Scarlet is its head."

I became keenly interested when, after a slight pause he fiercely shouted: "It finds its way into a Wolf."

He held the arrow so those staring in at the window might look on it, and among the spectators was the circle-covered visage of Round Paw. The wizard had uttered a threat three times during the last hour, and a "wolf" was always the victim. The dead bear had been accepted as a symbol for Braddock's army.

I did not believe the sachem meant the English when he promised death to a wolf. But I was convinced that the fellow for some reason intended harm to the Onondaga. There must be a logical cause for this professed enmity, and naturally I believed my friend had incurred suspicions. I dared not attempt a signal although I did glare into the Onondaga's eyes. Little Wolf gathered up his belongings to retire, but Beaujeu detained him by inquiring:

"Why does not the great wizard shoot the medicine-arrow into the wolf now?"

The Onondaga allowed two braves to crowd in from each side so only his head partly showed between theirs.

"A ghost in the medicine-lodge will shoot it. It will find its way to the Wolf."

Those at the window were very quiet, their eyes glowing as they began to sense a dramatic climax.

"Onontio's sons wish to see the arrow when it finds its mark," insisted Beaujeu. He too had detected some significance in the fellow's mysterious talk.

"Onontio's sons cannot see the ghost. Only medicine-eyes can see that. Their eyes can see the arrow when it goes through the Wolf's neck. Their eyes can see that without their moving from their places."

We crowded closer together so that all might have a fair view of the lodge, and the savages at the window drew aside. A fire was lighted on each side of the lodge so as to illuminate brilliantly the front of the structure. Beaujeu whispered:

"Little Wolf is now inside. But name of the devil! What did he mean about his arrow finding a wolf? One can never tell how the red mind is working."

"He may have an enemy he wishes to kill and credit the killing to a ghost," I suggested.

Maybe, I hope not. If their minds start running away with them they'll outrun a wolf-pack in getting back to their northern villages. However, it can't be serious. Pontiac must know what he meant and approves; and Pontiac is one leader I will count on."

The drum thudded monotonously for two or three minutes, gradually increasing in volume, then abruptly ceasing. A weak voice, talking in the language of the Delaware, called out:

"What do my children want? Why do my children call me back to this lodge? I am the first of your grandfathers. You have called me over a long path."

There followed the shrill voice of a woman; but in a tongue I did not understand. Next the wizard's voice, husky and hoarse, entered the dialogue, and in Delaware he asked:

"O Grandfather of all the red people, tell us of the Impishman. Is he strong? Will he fight strong? Will your children be struck in the head?"

"The answer to that can easily spill all my plans!" grunted Beaujeu.

The medicine-lodge rocked and swayed as if buffeted by a mighty wind. Discordant noises arose—evil forces striving to prevent the Voice from answering. There sounded the barking of dogs and the scream of the panther and the piping wail of a child. A fearful visage showed for an instant at the small opening and was succeeded by another. Then with a single booming note from the medicine-drum silence returned to the lodge. After a few moments the weak voice of the first of all grandfathers spoke, saying:

"Little Wolf is a mighty wizard. He drives away the black spirit that wants to stop my mouth. I am the first of your grandfathers. I tell you this—the floor of the forest will be red with the blood of the Impishman. The Manito is angry to see his red children losing their villages and land. Let the arrow find the false Wolf and then go into battle without fear."

Silence again, and Beaujeu wiped the sweat from his brows and muttered:

"Nom de Dieu! What devilry is he up to? It's some of Pontiac's work. He should have told me first. Getting a light out of the Indians is conditional on their killing the false wolf. Monsieur Beland, I fear you are right. Little Wolf has a rival. If so he must kill him, or else the flag of France must be lowered."

He became silent as from the lodge came the voice of Little Wolf. It sounded very weak and we had to strain our ears to catch his words. Panting for breath he called out:

"The Voice is very far away. I can hear it, my brothers cannot. It rests but will come very soon— Wait. The little white dog is barking. He is leading the voice back."

Another pause and then we heard the yelping and ki-ying of a puppy. Then came the voice, this time sounding much louder. It commanded:

"Have the warriors who danced about the war-post pass around the lodge four times, and let each ask himself if he is a true man."

"Ah! Now it develops. Soon there will be a killing," hissed St. Therese.

There followed more shaking and swaying of the lodge. Pontiac's voice rang out, calling on the dancers to fall in line and begin circling the lodge and for men with straight tongues to fear nothing. Painted faces in profile began passing the window. Each savage kept his face averted from the lodge and each seemed to step in greater haste when abreast of the small opening. I sought the Onondaga in the long line, but failed to behold him. I took note of the first man to pass the window, and when he appeared for the second time there sounded a gurgling cry from the interior of the lodge, after which the sides flapped and fluttered violently and the long-drawn-out howl of a wolf took the place of the puppy's yapping. The savages quickened their pace until they were moving almost on a run. The barking of the little white dog came back, followed by a deep voice chanting:

"Ha-hum-weh!"

I held my breath and waited for the

Laments Passing of the "Good Old Times"

Times have changed and people have grown so serious that the old light in holidays has vanished. Is the complaint voiced by the writer of an editorial in Liberty Magazine.

"April Fools' day was one of the bright spots of the year," points out the editorial. "There was a brick under the hat; the stuffed pocketbook with the string tied to it. Breakfast muffins filled with cotton were a rare jest, and so was candy shot through with cayenne pepper. It was a long time anticipated and long remembered as were St. Valentine's day, Christmas eve, Halloween, and the night before the Fourth of July. On Thanks giving we went to grandmother's house and ate gorgeously. There aren't such grandmothers any more, or such cranberries.

"Christmas now means bills to meet," continues the disillusioned writer. "Independence day has been made a Sane Fourth. We no longer get any fun out of April Fools' day. Those unofficial childish holidays were a kind of possession peculiar to the past. They are not the same now. We are grown up and serious, and time 'have changed.'"

For Your Scrap Book

There are two kinds of writing, both great and rare; one that of genius, or the inspired, the other that of intellect and taste, in the intervals of inspiration.—Thoreau.

climax, whatever it might be. Beaujeu whispered:

"I think it is our friend, who stands at the door talking with the young Englishman with the French heart. The young man is timid. He will not come in unless strongly urged. Ah! Excellent. It is our friend, the good Beaujeu. He presses the young man to enter. When this damnable marching and yowling stops I will call out for the stranger to join us and become better acquainted."

I turned my head slowly, my heart thumping like an Indian drum. Beaujeu stood with his back to us. He was speaking very earnestly to the Dinwiddie girl, one hand resting on her slim shoulder. He was trying to induce her to enter and she was striving to detain him. I gathered my feet under me and made ready to leap over the table and to trust to luck in plunging through the window and into the red mob. Beaujeu straightened and removed his hand from the girl's shoulder and started to turn about and enter the room. The girl seized his arm and frantically essayed to hold him back. He was motionless for a moment, as if amazed at her action; then shook off her grasp and stepped backward through the door.

The Onondaga's terrible war whoop jerked my gaze to the window. The front of the lodge bulged far out, and the Frenchmen, as well as I, exclaimed in astonishment as a fluttering mass of something that looked to be neither beast nor human, emerged from the structure and dashed through the fire-light and came flying through the window.

A startled cry at the door caused my head to swing in that direction. Beaujeu, now glaring at the table, was pointing a finger and yelling:

"Seize the Englishman! Braddock's spy!"

Several things were happening simultaneously which I can narrate only as separate incidents. My companions sat stupefied as Beaujeu called out, for even as he was sounding the alarm the muffled figure from the lodge rushed toward him and with a swing of a blanket extinguished the candles on that side of the room.

"The English spy!" hoarsely called Beaujeu, and then went down with a crash as the muffled figure bowled him over and with a quick turn raked the candles from the wall behind me, leaving the illumination of the roof confined to the light from the fire outside.

Beaujeu's brain resumed working.

"Treachery!" he screamed. "I heard his chair tip over as he sprang to his feet. But none at the table knew wherein lay the treachery, as was proved by the failure of the company to lay hands on me. Or possibly all were so dumfounded they could not for the moment take intelligent action. Something crashed against my chair, and over went the table. I felt a muscular arm slip around my waist. A blanket fell over my head. The next moment we were tumbling through the window and into the midst of the pandemonium now reigning outside. I freed my face enough to see the Indians scattering and falling back from the lodge. Pontiac's voice was thundering:

"Surround the lodge!" But there was none among his followers who dared to draw close to the sacred structure.

My conductor pressed heavily on my shoulder and we went to our knees and crawled under a flap of the lodge, and the light from the fires in front briefly revealed the distorted face of Little Wolf. His red medicine-arrow was through his throat, the head and several inches of the shaft showing under his left ear.

"Ha-hum-weh!" chanted my rescuer.

The red arrow had been discharged in the medicine-lodge even as Little Wolf had prophesied, and it had found its way into a wolf, but not into the man of the Wolf clan as I had feared. We had no time to linger. From the uproar outside, I assumed that the Indians were still bewildered and believing that the startling appearance of the muffled figure outside the lodge and his flight through the window was but the workings of the wizard's manito.

Even now, with the Frenchmen stumbling about in the commandant's house and calling for lights, with Beaujeu madly shouting that there was an English spy inside the stockade, and with Pontiac darting among the terrified red men and fiercely exhorting them to catch my friend the Onondaga, we yet had time to take advantage of the confusion and make off into the darkness that encroached up to the rear of the lodge. Round Paw pulled the blanket over, my head and drew his own covering closer, and seizing my arm raised the rear wall and pushed me before him.

Is THIRTY the Love? Deadline!

Fannie Hurst was born in St. Louis. After post-graduate work in literature at Columbia she married Jacques S. Danielson of New York in 1915. This was an unusual marriage arrangement which attracted world-wide notoriety—husband and wife agreeing to live separately but seeing each other at certain regulated intervals. The arrangement has apparently worked out successfully. She has made special study of the stage and shop girl and her environs and has served as saleswoman, waitress, and has made a trip across the Atlantic in storage to obtain material for a novel. Besides contributing regularly to magazines, she has written "JUST AROUND THE CORNER," "EVERY SOUL HATH ITS SONG," "GAS LIGHT SONATAS," "HUMOR-ESQUE," "STAR DUST," "THE VERTICAL CITY," "LUMMOX," and "MANNEQUIN." She is over thirty.

By FANNIE HURST

Apparently Mr. Durant will have Als Joke! A man past thirty is incapable of love, he says, (if he said it) in manner grandiose enough to fill one with philophobia.

From the black hinterlands of mid-die-age comes a composite host of query: Is man capable of love before thirty?

Biologically, yes. He may go wild or broke over a blonde (or even a brunette) chorine. But accepting the Durant-distilled definition: "Love is absolute devotion—the desire to give full service to another," what does under-thirty know of the kind of love that comes when a man has gained mastery of his passions and they no longer ride him, but are ridden by him?

To a man between his adolescence and his thirties, it is perpetually "sex o'clock." Those are the years when he needs to be reminded that the knee of a Ziegfeld beauty is, after all, only joint.

What youth under thirty, in the tortuously ecstatic years of discovering sex, can hope to know, before he has turned the corner of middle age, the large, the homely, the sedentary joys of eschewing the ballet slipper for the carpet-slipper.

What are the delirious and tormenting pangs of servitude at twenty-five, compared to the quiet joy of service that comes with thirty-five?

The emotion of love, except in its strictly biological sense, is a development. It is no more natural for a man to be better equipped to take his Pil D. degree before taking his college course, than it is for a man to be better equipped to love at twenty than at thirty.

Live, learn, and maybe you will love successfully.

Maybe. Paolo and Francesca, Pelles and Melisande, Romeo and Juliet have immortalized sex! But have they immortalized love?

What do we know about these beautiful young people beyond the point of palpitation and osculation? How far are we permitted to follow into their love lives? How deeply does poetry infiltrate us into their futures, when the dawn of the morning after comes up to the thunder of milk bottles on the dumb waiter.

Those are the years; the morning-after years after the fires have died to embers (or ashes) when a man begins to come into sufficient maturity to realize that it is better to give than to receive; that it is better to love than to be loved, provided you are the lover. Therefore the giver.

No two people love one another equally. One must always give more. It is apt to take the wisdom of past-thirty to realize the blessedness of that kind of giving.

I'd rather be thirty than Romeo. Young love is lyrical, but dumb.

A favorite indoor sport for wintry evenings is to figure out the obvious, the two hundred and forty-first in which those two nice Capulet and Montague youngsters caught in the tempestuous trap of youth could have celebrated their way out of their diffculties into a happy, if unsung marriage.

Sex and youth are only the vanguards of maturity and love.

It is both erudite and sometimes enlightening to call in the Greeks when in doubt. The Greeks had a great deal to say about rationalization and love. It does, however seem to this observer that here is a subject upon which we have a certain advantage over the Greeks. We have had many hundreds of years in which to experiment beyond the point where they left off. We no longer accept their astronomy or their geology or their physics. Why take their love-science too seriously?

Mr. Durant, however, seems to have accepted the Greek conclusion that, biologically speaking, no rational man ever falls in love after thirty.

This observer is inclined to believe that the rationalization of man and the rationalization of love go hand in hand.

The vantage ground of her observations is unassailable. She has been twenty. She has been thirty. She is after-thirty.

Soap Lake

FOR years past, it seems, various tribes of Indians in our great Northwest country have been familiar with the curative properties of Great Spirit (Smoklum) lake and regularly made pilgrimages thereto for the purpose of drinking its antiseptic waters and sweating away their aches and pains in the mud baths—Smoklum being Indian for "Healing Salts."

Superstitious members of the tribes are said to have regarded it as a "witch doctor" sent by the "Great Spirit." The white man called it Soap Lake, because its waters are strongly alkaline and soapy to the touch.

It is located in the great central portion of the great state of Washington, in what is known locally as the Columbia Basin country, and regarded as one of the most remarkable medicinal lakes in this or any other country. It occupies a deep basin, more or less walled in by basaltic cliffs, is two miles long, almost a mile wide and varies from 40 to 125 feet in depth. Its waters are as clear as crystal, unusually buoyant and, it is said, no stream flows into or out of it.

No fish live or vegetation grows in it. Government analysis shows the water to contain silica, sodium sulphate, chloride and carbonate, borax, ammonium and iron oxide, magnesium sulphate, potassium carbonate, phosphorus and iodine. This great, natural healing fount has been found to be particularly beneficial in the treatment of numerous ailments which beset the human race.

The Polaris Chronometer

IN 1829 Uncle Sam purchased a chronometer known as the "Negus 1306"—of foreign make, but American assembly. In accordance with custom, it was sent to the Naval Observatory at Washington for adjustment and regulation for ship service.

On June 28, 1871, it was assigned to the good ship Polaris which went north on a polar expedition. The Polaris was crushed in the ice. Some four years later this chronometer was found in the snow at Newman's bay, Alaska. y Captain Nares of the British navy, who sent it to his government which, in turn, returned it to Uncle Sam.

The observatory had it carefully overhauled, wound and started. Despite the fact that it had been exposed to a temperature estimated to be 104 degrees below freezing point—so other chronometer probably ever was exposed to such an extreme degree of cold—the Polaris (which the observatory now dubbed It) astounded the officers, after it got "warmed up," by keeping time with a variation of not one-tenth of one second per day. Wearing a "Distinguished Service" medal, so to speak, Polaris long was a resident of the observatory—being pointed to with pride when anyone wished to know how accurately a good chronometer could be when it took a notion.

It formed a part of the naval exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco in 1915 and saw service at the Mare Island navy yard, California. After a time it was returned to Washington for reconditioning, was dispatched to the navy yard at Brooklyn, N. Y., for duty and later was viewed by the throngs that visited the naval exhibit at the Sesqui-centennial in Philadelphia in 1926, at the close of which it went back to Washington.

Poor Kin

Caruso was a common sort of man, born with a glorious voice, which made him famous and rich. In the days of his prosperity, he had 21 relatives living at his house, and they nearly drove him crazy. Caruso was less satisfactory as an artist because of his poor kin; they may have killed him at a time when he still had a good deal of value in him. Every useful man is hampered by poor kin.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Mistletoe Under Ban

A world-wide tradition has it that the mistletoe was the tree from which Eve plucked the forbidden fruit in the Garden of Eden, and the tree was punished by having its fruit reduced to berry size and being forbidden to grow in the ground. All attempts to raise a tree from seed have failed. It remains a parasite, feeding on the life of other trees. But its other use unites us forgets its bad habit in that respect.

Fireproof Linoleum

Introduction of a kind of linoleum that is almost incombustible, cheap, easy to handle and durable, has been announced in England. When it is heated to a high temperature, a chemical in it gives off a gas which stays close to the floor, cuts off the air supply and so smother the blaze.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Fruits Used by Indians

Many of the fruits that grew wild in America were utilized by the Indians. In Ohio they used the cranberry, wild strawberry, pawpaw and plum, and carefully guarded and preserved the thickets in which they usually grew. The Indians dried some of these fruits for winter use.

How Much Will Poor Ginning Cost You This Year?

In these days of high production costs, there is little profit in raising a cotton crop only to have it improperly ginned.

Not the size of your yield, but the way it is ginned, determines how well you are paid for your work.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Smith, Resenting Preacher's Attack, Challenges Him to Public Meeting

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
GOV. AL SMITH, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, does not propose to be hit in public without defending himself, and his capacity for self-defense is considerable. Rev. John Roach Straton, militant and fundamentalist pastor of the Calvary Baptist church of New York city, saw fit to declare from his pulpit that Governor Smith was "the deadliest foe in America of the forces of moral progress and true wisdom." The governor promptly challenged the preacher to repeat the statement in his presence in the church during the week of September 2 and give such proof as he might be able to advance, and permit Smith to reply in full. He suggested that the meeting might be conducted by question and answer if the pastor wished. In his letter to Doctor Straton the governor said:

"I do not know why you should make a statement of that kind, but I do know that I will never permit it to go unchallenged. I have spent 25 years in the service of the state in elective office, and the record of that service is open to the public. I do not feel that I should charge you with making this statement for any political purpose, as it was made in a church devoted to the teachings of Christ, one of which was 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.'"

Doctor Straton said he would give Governor Smith the satisfaction he sought, and suggested the meeting be held in some auditorium larger than that of his church. He also proposed that he and Smith should tour the South in a series of debates. After reviewing two New York National Guard regiments in camp at Peekskill, Governor Smith devoted most of the week to his executive duties. Among other things he ordered the officials of Saratoga county to clamp the lid tight on gambling and other forms of vice prevalent at Saratoga Springs. Then he journeyed to Chicago for the Brennan funeral.

IN THE death of George E. Brennan of Chicago the Democratic party, both of the nation and of the state of Illinois, suffered a great loss. Mr. Brennan was national committeeman and, since the death of Roger Sullivan, had been the undisputed leader of the Democracy of Illinois; and for years he was high in the councils of the party. Always frankly a "wet," he was one of Al Smith's strongest friends and most valued advisers. He worked for the nomination of Smith in 1924 and largely brought about the selection of Davis when it was seen that Smith could not win. This year he was among the most determined advocates of the nomination of the New York governor. Mr. Brennan was an example of the best type of practical politician, the kind that makes innumerable friends within and without his party and that plays the game hard but cleanly, keeping his own reputation for honesty unsmirched. He sought office but once. In 1926 he ran for the United States senate and came not very far from defeating Frank L. Smith, Republican, whom the senate refused to seat.

SATURDAY was the big day for Herbert Hoover and the Republicans. The candidate received the formal notification of his nomination in the great stadium of Stanford university at Palo Alto, Calif., and delivered his eagerly awaited speech of acceptance. The ceremony was preceded by a concert and stunts by the students. Mr. Hoover's speech was heard by many thousands who were present, and by yet more millions all over the country who were served by the hookup of 100 radio stations. Party leaders from practically every state went to Palo Alto and for several days before and after the notification the candidate was busy discussing with them details of campaign work. Friday was the fifty-fourth anniversary of his birth and he was the guest of newspaper correspondents who accompanied him across the continent at a birthday dinner at a Palo Alto hotel.

REPRESENTATIVES of 31 dry organizations who attended the Kansas City and Houston conventions as observers made public a report in which they denounce Governor Smith for his attitude on the liquor question and call on prohibitionists to disregard their political or religious affiliations and join in defeating Smith by supporting Hoover.

Trays gained a victory in Missouri in both the Republican and the Democratic primaries. The Republicans nominated Roscoe C. Patterson of Springfield for United States senator and Henry S. Caulfield of St. Louis for governor. The Democrats put up Charles M. Hay of St. Louis for the senate and Francis M. Wilson of Platte City for the governorship. Hay's opponent, James A. Collet, is a wet and a protege of Senator Reed.

In the Kansas Republican primaries the farmers scored by nominating Clyde M. Reed for governor over five other aspirants. The Democrats nominated Chauncey B. Little, former congressman.

ONE more attempt to fly the Atlantic ocean from Europe to America failed when Majors Idzikowski and Kubala, Polish aviators, were forced to come down in the water because of a faulty gas feed pipe. Fortunately the German steamer Samos was near by and picked them up. The aviators had started from Paris for New York and reached the vicinity of the Azores before they were compelled to turn back. Their plane was wrecked when it struck the surface of the ocean 60 miles off Cape Finisterre.

POOR Florida was struck by another fierce tropic storm during the week. The central east coast towns received the first blows, and then the storm swept across the state to the golf, doing vast damage in the south central portion. Houses were unroofed, orchards ravaged and roads made impassable, but strangely there was no loss of life.

Related reports from Java tell of the destruction of the island of Paloeu, Dutch East Indies, by the eruption of the Ikatando volcano and resulting earthquake and tidal wave. Six villages were wiped out and the death loss was believed to be about one thousand.

SUBMARINE F-14 of the Italian navy was sunk by collision with another vessel during maneuvers in the Adriatic and for 34 hours rescue crews labored heroically to raise the craft and save the crew of two officers and twenty-five men. Most of this time the imprisoned men were in communication with the salvagers by telephone, but their messages ceased suddenly and when the submarine was finally hoisted to the surface it was found the entire crew had been killed by chlorine gas liberated when salt water flooded the storage batteries.

IN ONE respect the future of Gene Tunney is now settled. The following announcement was given to the press last week:

"Mrs. George Lauder, Jr., of Greenwich and New York wishes to announce the engagement of her daughter, Mary Josephine Lauder, to Mr. Gene Tunney of New York. No date has been set for the wedding, which will likely take place in New York in the late autumn or winter."

Mrs. Lauder is listed in the social register and is heiress to a large fortune. She is twenty-one years old and was educated in fashionable schools in this country and France. She is an Episcopalian, while Tunney is a Catholic. The retired champion already has purchased a residence in Greenwich, Conn. His departure for Europe for a walking tour with Thornton Wilder was set for August 16.

CHINESE Nationalists were called to time sharply in a note from American Minister John Van A. MacMurray concerning the continued occupation of American mission property by Nationalist troops. The note said that China has not heeded repeated past protests and declared that "the American mission property in China is treated as though it belonged to an enemy warring with China rather than as the private property of a friendly nation." Mr. MacMurray cited specific instances and declared that this action by the Nationalists had caused an unfavorable impression throughout the world and was painfully disappointing to the American government.

STEFAN RADITCH, leader of the Croatian peasants, who was shot in the Belgrade chamber of deputies some time ago, is dead of his wounds, and observers in central Europe believe there is a chance of civil war in Yugo-Slavia unless outside influences are exerted strongly. The Croats bitterly resent the Serbian domination over the government of the kingdom and recently set up a separate parliament in Zagreb, their own capital.

THOUSANDS of British men and women made a peace pilgrimage to the battlefields of France and Belgium to mark the fourteenth anniversary of the beginning of the World war. They were led by the prince of Wales, Lord Jellicoe, Lady Haig, widow of the British commander, and other notables.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, British foreign secretary, who has been quite ill for some time, will not be able to go to Paris for the signing on August 27 of the Kellogg anti-war treaty. His place will be taken by Lord Cushendun, appointed acting secretary by the king. Germany is perturbed by Chamberlain's prolonged illness for it had been hoped the question of the early evacuation of the Rhineland could be brought up by Foreign Minister Stresemann at the Paris meeting and settled at Geneva in September. The German press does not like the appointment of Cushendun.

THE Obregon party of Mexico, finding no capable leader in its ranks, has practically disbanded, and its general secretary has announced that he is squarely behind President Calles. This gives Calles a free hand in carrying out his reconstruction program, which includes agrarian laws, rehabilitation of haciendas, creation of agrarian credit and agrarian banks and the encouragement of foreign capital and immigration. Congress, which is 85 per cent Obregonist, is supporting Calles. It is still considered likely that Aaron Saena, governor of Nueva Leon, will seek the Presidency in succession to Calles.

Bishop Miguel de la Mora of Mexico City issued a signed statement repudiating the charge that the clergy was responsible for the murder of General Obregon. He said the fact that one Catholic priest and one nun were involved in the crime did not mean that the clergy as a body was responsible. The statement asserted that it was publicly known that the Mother Superior Concepcion Aceveda de la Lata was mentally deranged and that several cases of insanity have been reported in her family.

ONE of President Coolidge's callers at Cedar Lodge on the Brule was Gen. Herbert Lord, director of the budget, who conferred with the Chief Executive on government department estimates. They discussed especially the anticipated Post Office department deficit, which was predicted by Postmaster General New when the interstate commerce commission ordered increased payments to railroads carrying department mail. In the President's opinion this deficit comes because of postal laws enacted by the last congress over his vetoes.

IN THE Olympic track and field games at Amsterdam the United States won first place with a total of 173 points. Finland was second with 102 points, and Great Britain third with 46. In women's competitions Canada stood first with 34 points and the United States second with 28. The Marathon race of 26 miles was won by El Quasi, a young Algerian metal worker from Paris. Manuel Plaza, a newsboy from Santiago, Chile, finished second. Jole Ray, the veteran American runner, could do no better than 45th.

for Hot or Cold Starching
USE FAULTLESS STARCH

More Economical than Lump Starch
MANY say: "Does twice as much as ordinary Lump Starch" and is the best hot starch they have ever used.

FAULTLESS STARCH is starch plus. It contains everything that a perfect starch must have to give perfect results.

This starch comes to you fully prepared and ready for instant use.

Whether you wish to starch a single collar or a full-sized family washing, FAULTLESS STARCH is so prepared that you mix exactly the needed amount.

If you want a hot or cooked starch simply add boiling water. If you use a cold starch merely mix FAULTLESS with water.

That is why for 40 years it has been the favorite starch in millions of homes.

When you make jelly with PEXEL

EVER had jelly fail?—everything done according to Hoyle and the cook-book—yet jelly like soup? Mad-dening—but now unnecessary!

PEXEL makes jelly just as soon as it is cold. It is tasteless, colorless, odorless. Doesn't affect most delicate flavor or color. Repays from one to three times the 30c it costs by reducing boiling to a minimum and saving fruit juice, sugar, flavor, time and fuel. Not a liquid. Keeps indefinitely.

Get Pexel at your grocer's. Recipe booklet in each package. 30c. The Pexel Company, Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH OF CHRIST REVIVAL

Good interest is manifested in the revival meeting now going on at the Church of Christ.

Evangelist G. E. Wallace, from Abilene, is doing the preaching and is arousing the people with his strong gospel messages.

Go out and hear him tonight and throughout the week.

The revival that closed Sunday night at the First Baptist church resulted in the addition of about forty members to the church, with others expected to follow. The preaching, the singing and the music were of the very best.

The new Buick is the new Style

More than handsome... more than luxurious... a wonderful new type of motor car beauty... a thrilling turning point in body design

It will be imitated, of course! The new, the fine and the beautiful always inspire emulation. But so great is the cost of building the magnificent new Fisher bodies for the Silver Anniversary Buick that imitation will be possible only to much costlier cars, and even these will find difficulty in following where Buick leads!

$1,500,000 has been expended in manufacturing the dies alone for the new Buick bodies; and the gracefully curving side panels which form one of their distinguishing characteristics represent the most expensive steel paneling work employed on any automobile in the world!

But it is not in the matchless grace and beauty of exterior design alone that the Silver Anniversary Buick eclipses other cars. In fleet, powerful performance too, the world holds no equal for the Silver Anniversary Buick with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher. And the motor-public, buying in such tremendous volume as to force the great Buick factories to work day and night to supply the demand, is elevating it to the prominence of a vogue!
