MORE ABOUT THE ROAD BOND ISSUE

This editor favors progress, and good roads head the list of progressive movements.

But we call on every fair mind and tax paying voter to help defeat the issue to be voted on in this county next Wednesday, Nov 21.
If we have ever known of a more unfair and unjust proposition being put before any people for their approval, such proposition has entirely escaped our memory. If there are those who do not understand the proposition, we hope they will make inquiry. And vote—don't stay away from the polls. More rotten measures are put over, and meritorious issues defeated, in that way than in any other. Get the correct information. If you can't get it elsewhere, this editor will give it to you—truthfully. He would be foolish to lie about it, because the biggest liar in Texas couldn't make it worse than it is. We could fill this paper with good reasons for voting against it, but that shouldn't be necessary. We believe the people of this county know when a thing is on the square—and when it isn't. And even the "daddies" of this movement, and the comparatively small per cent of our people who would profit by its adoption, have proved they're ashamed of it—at least, they have not come out OPENLY and given the taxpayers any sound reasons for supporting it. They don't seem able to muster that much "gall"—though it is a well known fact that some of them have plenty.

As for Hedley and the adjacent community, a blind man can see that we lose everything if this issue carries—and gain nothing.
We do not charge that it was drawn with that intent. But we do say that if it had been drawn with that intent, it could not have been more perfectly done.

We urge in all sincerity that the taxpayers investigate this proposition—get ALL the details —and then VOTE your HONEST convictions.

Before leaving the road bond subject, we wish to inquire, timidly, if some six or eight leading citizens of the county seat remember making any promises to a small group of Hedley men some months ago concerning same? (This is simply a memory test).

The following has no connection with anything, but a puzzled reader would like to know: If a man is elected to a county office, and his pay is drawn from all the taxpayers, do his time and talents belong to the county, or to just one certain part of the county? Now isn't that a awful foolish question?

And here's another one (we surely are getting foolish in our old age): Is it either honest or good business to build up the big town of the county at the expense of the balance of the county?

Doesn't the big town get its principal support from the balance of the county? Wouldn't it be better business, not to mention fair play, if the county could grow some along with the big town? If the big town, in order to grow bigger, 'knocks the rest of the county in the head,' who's going to keep up the big town?
Gosh, ain't some folks inquisitive?

The main reason given for the resurvey of Highway No. 5 is to avoid railroad crossings—make it safe for tourists. Yet the new survey makes it impossible for 90 per cent of Hedley community people to get to the highway without crossing the track here in town where sidetracks, boxcar screens and switching trains make the crossing a real danger.
The fact is that a tourist who can not safely cross a track out in the open, with nothing to obscure his vision of the track for a full mile each way (as is the case at both railroad crossings between Lelia Lake and Memphis)—he's got no business being a tourist, and even if we should get him safely across Donley county, he would likely break his fool neck, or somebody else's, before he ended his touring. But the slogan seems to be: "Save the dear tourist; d—the homefolks."

Highway 52, coming by way of Wellington, Quail and McKnight into Hedley, is probably traveled by more Donley county people than any other 11 mile stretch of road in the county, and traverses one of the best producing agricultural districts in the Panhandle.
And how do the "high and mighty's" dispose of 52? Why, that's easy; they just abolish it—demote it into a common country road. What business has a well traveled road running into Hedley, anyway, we'd like to know?

The Informer doesn't believe there are enough of the right (or wrong) kind of people in Donley county to put over a deal as raw as this road bond issue.

We repeat: If you haven't full information—GET IT. And then VOTE—don't let anything keep you from the polls next—Wednesday, Nov 21st.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of good water.

"Reputations Ten Years After"

The tumult and the shouting dies— The captains and the kings depart; Still stands thine ancient sacrifice, An humble and a contrite heart, Lord God of hosts, be with us yet, Lest we forget—Lest we forget! —Rudyard Kipling's "Recessional."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

TEN years ago, on November 11, 1918, the greatest war in history came to an end. Ten years ago the cannon which had thundered unceasingly for more than four years were suddenly still and the dead silence which followed was more awe-inspiring than had been the mighty diapason of the guns.

And now, a decade later, they know but little more than they did one minute after 11 o'clock on November 11, 1918. Ten years after it soon thins to give the mind of man a proper perspective on as mighty an event as the World War.

But even though the meaning of that conflict cannot yet be written down, because the reverberations of the pistol shot fired by a madman in Sarajevo in the summer of 1914 are still being heard in various parts of the world, there is one chapter in the history of the World War that can be written with at least a fair degree of accuracy. What of the "captains and the kings" in whose hands lay the destiny of nations in those years and in whose minds momentous decisions had to be made not once but repeatedly? It was the common soldier, of course, the poilu, the Tommy, the Anzac, the Canuck and the Yank, who fought the war, and there is no need to examine into how well he did his job.

Let an English officer who is generally accepted as a military critic of the first rank answer that. He is Capt. B. H. Liddell Hart, successor to Colonel Repington as military critic of the London Daily Telegraph and military adviser of the Encyclopedia Britannica, and in a book "Reputations Ten Years After," published by Little, Brown and Company, he evaluates the "captains" of the World War. The preface to the book states his method of doing so as follows:

These studies have been approached essentially in the spirit of an historian. They have been treated in the manner of a portrait painter. The moment for them has been chosen in order to achieve the closest possible reconciliation between the advantage of contemporary experience of events and personalities on the one hand, and, on the other, the evidence of the documentary records which are now available to throw light on the critical actions and discussions which influenced the course of the World War. Thus may history approximate the most nearly to truth.

After this introduction, the "portrait painter" proceeds to depict Marshal Joffre, "The Modern Delphic Oracle"; Erich von Falkenhayn, "The Extravagance of Prudence"; Marshal Gallieni, "The Real Victor of the Marne"; Haig of Berrersyde, "The Essence of Britain"; Ferdinand Foch, "The Symbol of the Victorious Will"; Erich Ludendorff, "The Robot Napoleon"; Petain, "Military Economist"; Albeny of Megiddo, "The Evolution of a Leader"; Hunter Liggett, "A Professor of War—and Human Nature"; and "Black Jack" Pershing, "The 100-Per-Cent American."

was chosen to lead their sons and brothers in battle will be more interesting than his "portraits" of any of the other "captains." Here is his summary of Pershing:

The phrase "100-per-cent American" has become both a description and a motto since the war. If General Pershing was not the prototype, he deserves to be—for it fits apply both as a description of him and as a motto for him.

In the study of Pershing's uncompromising advance toward his own goal (i. e. that American troops should be under American command and not divided up among the allies) lies the main historical interest of his first year in France. Grant is held up as history's great example of a man who, having fixed his goal in his mind, pursued it unwaveringly and with almost pertinacity despite all obstacles—and without hesitating over the cost.

Yet even this remark has an undercurrent of chastened yet grudging admiration which is a tribute to the driving force of Pershing and to the fortitude of his men. He lacked the personal magnetism which can make men lay down their lives gladly—He was far from a Robert E. Lee. But he had the character which compelled men not only to die, but to work—cursing him, perhaps, but respecting him. He was hard, but life had tried him hard, and if he gave affection to few it was generous when given—to those who had shown themselves MEN by his high standard.

As for the allied generalissimo, Marshall Ferdinand Foch, Captain Hart compares him to Napoleon and says:

As Foch developed a deeper insight into human nature and the nature of a national war, so he gained a clearer vision of the goal of the war—and he knew when to stop. Thus, if he will rank below Napoleon as a strategist, he may be placed higher as a grand strategist, for of such the security and prosperity of the nation after the war are a better test than brilliancy of maneuver. In his centenary oration on Napoleon, Foch himself foreshadowed this verdict: "He forgot that a man cannot be God; that beyond the individual there is the nation; that beyond man there is morale; and that war is not the supreme goal, for beyond that there is peace."

In one of the leaders of the enemy, the military expert sees another Napoleonic figure, but in this case he was a "Robot Napoleon." That figure is Erich Ludendorff, the German chief of staff under Hindenburg, of whom he writes:

It is still too early to estimate Ludendorff's stature in world history. It is possible through the thinning mists to perceive the outline of a figure molded on a great scale, perhaps the greatest of all among the leaders of the war of 1914-1918, and with the attributes, save of personal magnetism, which may even inspire a second Napoleonic legend. Should this legendary magnification come to pass, the verdict of today may be a true mean between the nadir of 1919 (when Ludendorff was "the scapegoat of defeat, as execrated by the mass of his countrymen and as belittled by the mass of his victorious foes as Napoleon on the morrow of Waterloo") and the zenith of tomorrow.

Of the other "portraits" which are presented to aid in appraisal of these "captains" of the World War there is that of "Petain who 'has been reproached for excessive caution. It would be more true to say that he was excessively careful—of lives. While the motto of a brilliant fighting leader like Mangin was 'victory at any price,' Petain's motto was 'victory at the smallest price.' . . . It is almost certain that the French army would never have recovered if Petain had not been called to command in 1917. He made victory possible. . . . Thus the verdict of history on Petain is likely to read: 'The man who, like Fabius, saved his country by avoiding battle, and who, like Carnot, was the organizer of victory.'"

Then there is the British general who, "As a gentleman and as a pattern of noble character, Haig will stand out in the rolls of history, chivalrous sans peur et sans reproche, more spotless by far than most of Britain's national heroes. Most of all, perhaps, because in his qualities and defects he was the very embodiment of the national character and the army tradition."

Two others, whose "portraits" are presented in this book should be noted together since their names are likely to go down in history together. One is Marshal Joffre who, "If his brain was as solid as his appearance, lacking in flexibility and imagination, his external effect on the minds of others enabled him to become the rock on which France held and Germany founded." And of this man, popularly known as the "Hero of the Marne," Captain Hart declares, "Joffre was not a general, but a national nerve sedative." Although at a dark hour in the war when it was necessary to maintain French morale Joffre was held up to the world as "the symbol of France triumphant," Captain Hart declares that "Today, when this need has passed with the emergency, justice and gratitude demand that the world should recognize Gallieni, rather than Joffre, as the victor of the Marne. For it was Joseph Simon Gallieni, marshal of France, who 'in the dark days of early September, 1914, saved France and changed the face of the World war by bringing about the 'miracle of the Marne.'"

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1114 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says:

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

Ancient School Reader

M. A. Dunlap, farmer living northwest of Ponca City, Okla., has an old reader which he believes is an improvement over the modern type. It is called "Murray's English Reader," published in 1822. The book was used by Dunlap's father back in Virginia many years ago. It was published by James B. Smith and company of Philadelphia and is made up almost entirely of excerpts from the classics.—Daily Oklahoman.

To the first half-million
new Ford owners

TO THE half-million men and women who have received new Fords in the last eleven months, there is no need to dwell on the performance of the car.

You have tested its speed on the open road. In traffic you have noted its quick acceleration and the safety of its brakes. You know how it climbs the hills. On long trips and over rough stretches you have come to appreciate its easy-riding comfort. Continuous driving has proved its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep.

This is an invitation to you to take full advantage of the service facilities of the Ford dealer organization so that you may continue to enjoy many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring.

The point is this. You have a great car in the new Ford. It is simple in design, constructed of the best materials and machined with unusual accuracy. It is so well-made, in fact, that it requires surprisingly little attention. Yet that doesn't mean it should be neglected. Like every other fine piece of machinery, it will serve you better and longer if given proper care.

One of the best ways to do this is to take your car to the Ford dealer every 500 miles for oiling and greasing and a checking-up of the little things that have such a great bearing on long life and continuously good performance.

Such an inspection may mean a great deal to your car. To you it means thousands upon thousands of miles of motoring without a care—without ever lifting the hood.

Ford dealers everywhere have been specially trained and equipped to service the new Ford. You will find them prompt and reliable in their work, fair in their charges, and sincerely eager to help you get the greatest possible use from your car for the longest period at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the true meaning of Ford Service.

NAZAENE PASTOR RETURNED

Rev. Mrs. Maud Busby, her husband and daughter have returned from Plainview where they went to attend the District Assembly of the Nazarene church. She was unanimously called back to the Hedley church for another year. Sister Busby has been a great help to the church here, as well as to the town and community. She is a consecrated pastor, devoted to the church. Her members love her, and the way she has built up the work here can be plainly seen by the outside world and is keenly recognized by the church. Not every one can carry on a work as she and her faithful husband who backs her in every undertaking. Realizing as we do how they carry a burden for the lost, we feel that we will go forward as a church and see souls born into the Kingdom this year. They have pushed the work of building a new parsonage that would grace any town. It is almost impossible to name the many things they have done for the church and community. There is a growing spirit of unity among the members, much of it due to the gentle, Christlike spirit of Sister Busby. She has taken into the church 27 members the past year. The prayer meetings are a feast and good crowds attend. If the Sunday School increases next year as it did last, we will be compelled to build a new church or prepare a place in some way to take care of the people.

Bro. Busby is our faithful superintendent, who is ever ready to do what he can for the Sunday School.

Miss Edna Merle is our splendid pianist, who is always present and has been such a help in building our choir.

We are so thankful these noble hearted people ever came our way, and we believe the Lord sent them this way.

We welcome one and all to our little church, and invite all who do not attend Sunday School at any other church to come and be with us. We have a splendid Young People's Society which meets at 8:30 every Sunday afternoon and all young people are welcome.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES

The Sunday morning preaching hour was in charge of Lattimore Ewing, a young ministerial student, who brought a fine message. It makes us realize that God still calls people into service and that "the still small voice" can be heard above the hubbub and hurry of the modern day.

Attendance in the young people's unions was fairly good. The intermediates are planning a social for this week.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Smith's Trip Through Border States and to Chicago — Hoover at Boston.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

POLITICALLY speaking, the news of the week centered in Al Smith's tour of the border states, which carried him as far as Sedalia, Mo., whence he passed up through northern Illinois to Chicago for a stop of several days. The trip demonstrated the personal popularity of the Democratic candidate, for everywhere he was greeted by wildly cheering throngs. In Louisville he spoke mainly on the tariff, and the Republicans asserted that he "ditched" the traditional dogma thereon in that speech. Next day the governor paid a reverent visit to the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln at Hodgenville, Ky., and from there passed on to St. Louis, which city gave him what was described as the biggest and loudest ovation he had received since his nomination. He made no set speech there, but moved onward to Sedalia and there delivered an address on the topic of "Coolidge Economy." He declared the Coolidge administration was actually guilty of willful waste, giving facts and figures supposed to support this assertion, and attacking the statements made by Director of the Budget Lord and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Chicago came next on the itinerary, though when Smith's train passed through Springfield he was induced to talk when a loud speaker on wheels was brought alongside the rear platform on which he was displaying himself. A tremendous and noisy crowd welcomed him to Chicago, and after a day of rest and work on his address he made a tour of the city, appeared at banquets and, Friday night, spoke to an enthusiastic crowd that filled the One Hundred and Thirty-first Infantry armory to bursting.

HERBERT Hoover's personal contribution of the week to the campaign was his address in Boston, where before 9,000 friendly listeners in the city arena he told of the country's economic prosperity for which the Republican party claims the credit. Continuance of the protective tariff, he argued, is necessary for the continuance of this prosperity, and he sought to refute Smith's assertions in that connection. In replying to the Democratic attempt to show that changes in tariff would be made by them that would hurt business or labor, Hoover said that eight months ago every Democrat in the senate voted for a resolution designed to reduce the tariff. In Springfield and other Massachusetts cities through which he passed Hoover made earnest pleas that every citizen should take an active interest in the Presidential campaign and that every Republican should loyally support his party.

Senator Borah, big gun of the Republican-speaking battery, invaded the South last week and delivered two rousing speeches at Salisbury and Charlotte, N. C. In the former he appealed especially to the women voters to help defeat Smith and so prevent the overthrow of prohibition. In Charlotte the senator defended at length the record of Hoover as food administrator during the war, asserting that he always showed himself to be the friend of the farmer and was ever vigilant to do the very best for the protection of the American producers. Reviewing the agricultural situation after the armistice, the senator declared that Hoover opposed the proposal of the agricultural advisory committee in 1918 to fix a minimum price for wheat of $2.46 a bushel because it would not "be just to the consumers." From North Carolina Senator Borah moved into Tennessee, speaking at Chattanooga.

EXCEPT for the stupid and boorish behavior of the customs official detailed to Lakehurst, the arrival of the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin and the reception accorded its commander, crew and passengers, were all that could be asked. Before going to the hangars in New Jersey the huge airship spent an hour circling over New York city, and next day Dr. Hugo Eckener and his men were received formally by the metropolis with the usual accompaniments of parade through streets filled with confetti and ticker tape, speeches at the city hall and a banquet. On Friday Doctor Eckener was the guest of President Coolidge at breakfast in the White House.

Meanwhile the injuries sustained by the Zeppelin just before reaching America were being repaired and the airship was being made ready for a two days' tour of the Midwest which would take it over Chicago, Cleveland, Akron, Cincinnati and Detroit with probable stop at the last named city, which has a mooring mast.

While in New York Doctor Eckener announced tentative plans for the formation of a trans-Atlantic Zeppelin mail and passenger service to be capitalized for $14,000,000 and discussed the details with several financiers. He said to interviewers that he wanted American capitalists to entrust the $14,000,000 to him and his German confederates. The sum would be used to build four new Zeppelins, each bigger than the Graf Zeppelin, and to use them on regular all-year-round voyages between Germany and an American airport near Washington or Baltimore. If the money can be obtained Doctor Eckener said $8,000,000 would be spent on the four new gas bags and $6,000,000 would be paid out for new hangars in Germany and the United States. Two of the dirigibles would be built in Germany and two in America.

Dispatches from Buenos Aires said the Argentine post-office officials had signed a contract with a Spanish Transaerial company for the carrying of mail monthly between Spain and the Argentine, and the company named is reported to have leased the Graf Zeppelin for two years.

Several delegates to the convention of the Investment Bankers' association at Atlantic City started for an airplane ride Thursday. The plane went into a nose dive and crashed and W. O. Chanute, a banker of Denver and grandson of Octave Chanute, "the father of aviation," was killed. Seven other men were injured.

Baron von Huenefeld, who was flying from Germany to Tokyo, made a forced landing in a suburb of the latter city and his plane was badly smashed. The baron and his two companions escaped unhurt. They had lost their way in a rainstorm.

NEW YORK'S big sewer scandal reached its climax with the conviction of Maurice E. Connolly, who resigned under fire as borough president of Queens last April, and Frederick Seely, who was design engineer in the Queens' sewer bureau. They were found guilty by a jury of conspiring with the late John M. Phillips, sewer pipe manufacturer, to defraud the city in contracts for $20,000,000 public sewers. Connolly was given the maximum sentence of one year in prison and $500 fine. The evidence in the trial indicated that Phillips crafted more than $10,000,000 in ten years. It is expected to recover from Connolly and the Phillips estate the money illegally expended.

ANOTHER interesting instance of fundamentalism in the southern border states has arisen. Charles Smith of New York, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, went down to Arkansas to work against a proposed anti-evolution law to be voted on in the general election next month. He was arrested in Little Rock on a charge of distributing printed material "calculated to provoke a breach of the peace" and was fined $25 and costs, not being permitted to testify in his own behalf because he refused to take the customary oath. Smith decided to serve out his fine in prison as a protest, he said, against the state laws that prohibit atheists from testifying in courts or holding public office.

ATTORNEY GENERAL SARGENT ruled that the contract of December 20, between the United States government and the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company, for the sale of the government's royalty oil in the Salt Creek field in Wyoming was invalid. Mr. Sargent based his decision on two circumstances: First, that the contract was not let in a manner required by law, and second, that the secretary of the interior did not have legal power to sign a contract containing an option provision in favor of the Sinclair Oil Purchasing company.

The original award to the Sinclair concern granted a lease for five years with option of renewal for another five years. The option was renewed February 20, 1928, by Hubert Work, secretary of the interior, after consulting departmental counsel. Doctor Work says this renewal was required by the contract and that criticism of his action "is entirely of campaign origin."

COMMERCIAL and municipal activities in the city of Lodz, Poland, were brought to a standstill by a general strike enforced in behalf of striking textile workers. City employees were forced to quit work, street cars and taxis were stopped, theaters were closed, and even the members of the municipal council, most of them Socialists, closed their desks. Printers were out only a few hours, and soldiers kept the telephone exchanges open. Street riots provoked by Communist agitators were numerous, and later the strike spread to other cities.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy in a radio address informed the farmers of the country that he intended henceforth to devote the major reconstruction efforts of Fascism to agriculture and that the government would place billions of lire at their disposal. Thousands of acres that have lain idle since the days of the old Romans are to be brought under cultivation, and irrigation and reforestation are to receive much attention. The duce then distributed about $55,000 in prizes to grain growers. Already Italy is growing almost enough wheat to support its population.

For the first time since the Italian kingdom was established in 1870 a death sentence for murder was passed and executed the other day in Rome. Capital punishment for certain degrees of murder was introduced in the new Fascist code, and Michele Maggiora, who murdered two Fascists for political reasons only, was the first victim.

STEPHEN BETHLEN, premier of Hungary, has announced that the people of that country will soon be called on to vote for the selection of a king to sit on the throne that has been vacant since the abdication of King Charles in 1918. Bethlen said he was opposed to the choice of Archduke Otto, the sixteen-year-old son of Charles, and it appears that Archduke Albert, son of the Hapsburg Archduke Frederick, is the leading candidate. Premier Mussolini of Italy has let it be known that he will oppose the selection of any Hapsburg for the Hungarian throne.

WILLIAM EDWARD HICKMAN, the youth who kidnaped and murdered twelve-year-old Marion Parker, daughter of a Los Angeles banker, paid for his crime with his life on Friday. He was hanged at San Quentin prison, all efforts to save him from the gallows having failed. Hickman confessed to many other crimes "to ease his conscience," and after embracing the Roman Catholic religion said that he was assured of salvation.

DEATHS of the week included those of Dowager Empress Marie of Russia, mother of the last czar; William J. Flynn, former chief of the United States secret service, and Benjamin Strong, governor of the New York Federal Reserve bank.

DID you know that there were any royalists in the United States? Well, there are, for a meeting of the "Royalist League of America" was called for Sunday in the city hall auditorium of Dallas, Texas. Richard Potts, secretary-general, who issued the call, said "the time has come to begin active propaganda for the conversion by orderly processes of the United States government into a monarchy."
