12,870 BALES COTTON GINNED AT HEDLEY

A round of the local gins made by the editor Wednesday noon disclosed the fact that 12,870 bales of cotton had been ginned here up to that time.

This is 900 bales more than has ever before been ginned in Hedley during any one season.

The general opinion is that there will be about 160 more bales ginned before the season closes.

RECITAL

The Music and Expression Recital presented at the school auditorium Tuesday evening by the pupils of Misses Mims and Beatr, was highly enjoyed by a large audience of school patrons and friends. Each number on the program was well rendered and generously applauded.

These young ladies are doing splendid work with their classes this year, and the good results were plainly visible to all present at this recital.

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Whitfield and son, Ewell, were in Lella Lake Sunday and enjoyed a big birthday dinner at the home of Mrs. Whitfield's twin sister, Mrs.
B. K. Leathers. Her parents,
Mr. and Mrs. Holland of Clarendon, and her sisters, Mrs. Pierce of Clarendon and Mrs. Beaty of Memphis, with their husbands, were also present. It was a most enjoyable occasion.

Mrs. B. N. Stewart was called
Sunday to McLean to the bedside of her sister, Mrs. L. F.
Stewart, who is seriously ill from blood poisoning. Word came Tuesday that Mrs. Stewart was somewhat better, which is good news to her Hedley friends.

THE GOVERNMENT OUTLOOK FOR 1929

COTTON—Acreage should not be expanded. Holdover fully normal. Prices last year due largely to low acre yield.
High yield this year on same acreage will bring low prices.

SWEET POTATOES—Prices at digging time likely low; prices for storage stock dependent on size of storings.

EGGS—Lower prices first half of 1929 than in first half of 1928. Second half of 1929 uncertain.

POULTRY FOR MEAT—Higher prices during first half of 1929 than in first half of 1928. Second half uncertain.

BUTTERFAT—Probably about the same spread between fat prices and feed prices as during 1928, if industrial activity maintains demand for butter.

HOGS—Smaller supplies expected to bring better prices than in 1928.

SECURITY STATE BANK

Mothers—Try Mild Children's Musterole

Just Rub Away Pain

Of course, you know good old Musterole; how quickly, how easily it relieves chest colds, sore throat, rheumatic and neuralgic pain, sore joints and muscles, stiff neck and lumbago. We also want you to know CHILDREN'S MUSTEROLE—Musterole in milder form. Unexcelled for relief of croupy coughs and colds; it penetrates, soothes and relieves without the blister of the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Keep a jar handy. It comes ready to apply instantly.

Better than a mustard plaster

The Reason, Too?

Wife—You think so much of your poker that you don't even remember the day we married.

Hubby—I do. It was the day after I held that straight flush.—Everybody's Weekly.

Mrs. John Durum Says Could Write All Day and Not Say Enough Good About Milks Emulsion

"Have been thinking for some time of writing you in regard to Milks Emulsion.

"When I wrote you last fall I was very much discouraged. Doctors had told me for five years that I had T. B. Five doctors told me last fall that I was in advanced stages of T. B.

"I have taken your wonderful medicine all winter. Sometimes I would neglect taking it every hour, but would take several doses a day, and this is the first winter for seven years that I haven't spent most of the winter in bed. I haven't been in bed sick this winter, and for two years I had been so sore across my abdomen I couldn't bear to press on it. That is all gone. I do all of my housework now except washing; weight 117 pounds, and feel fine.

"I can't praise your Emulsion enough. I tell every one I talk to what it has done for me and feel ashamed if I neglect it sometimes when I know what it has done for me and what it means for me.

"I could write all day and could never write enough good words about Milks Emulsion." Yours truly, Mrs. John Durum, 451 W. Greca St., Frankfort, Ind.

Sold by all druggists under a guarantee to give satisfaction or money refunded. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind.—Adv.

More Speed Foreseen

Scientists meeting in Paris recently predicted that within a short time man will be traveling 750 miles an hour. They point to the marked increase in auto speed records between 1921, when it was 107 miles an hour, to 1928, when a new record of nearly 215 miles an hour was set.

Attend the Party In Spite of Cold!

Don't despair some day your social calendar is full, and you awake with a miserable cold. Be rid of it by noon! You can, if you know the secret: Paper's Cold Compound soon settles any cold, yes, even one that has reached deep in the throat or lungs.—Adv.

Not Really New

Inventors claim to have produced a mechanical man who can talk without thinking. Something like this has been heard of before.

STOP THAT ITCHING

Use Blue Star Soap, then apply Blue Star Remedy for Eczema, itch, scabies, ringworm, poison oak, dandruff, children's sores, cracked hands, sore feet and most forms of itching skin diseases. It kills germs, stops itching, usually restoring the skin to health. Soap, 25c; Blue Star Remedy, $1.00. Ask your druggist.—Adv.

FOR COLDS ASPIRIN

To break a cold harmlessly and in a hurry try a Bayer Aspirin tablet. And for headache. The action of Aspirin is very efficient, too, in cases of neuralgia, neuritis, even rheumatism and lumbago! And there's no after effect; doctors give Aspirin to children—often infants. Whenever there's pain, think of Aspirin. The genuine Bayer Aspirin has Bayer on the box and on every tablet. All druggists, with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Bayer Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Women may be able to make cake according to directions, but they can't if a man is attentive to his wife or because he is afraid of her.

From Youth To Old Age

THERE are three trying periods in a woman's life: when the girl matures to womanhood; when a woman gives birth to her first child; when a woman reaches middle age. At these times Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps to restore normal health and vigor. Countless thousands testify to its worth.

Voice with smile wins

JUST ask one of the telephone operators who serves you how she manages to maintain such unflinching courtesy at a big switchboard. "It wasn't easy at first," she'll admit. "I found that a sedentary job indoors all day was almost too much for me. I realized that if I was going to make good on the job—and I loved it—I'd have to keep myself in the very pink of condition. "I've done it with Nujol—nothing else. It's kept me from having headaches and colds and that awful let-down feeling. Kept my nerves from getting jangled and fatigued, too. "My doctor tells me that Nujol isn't a medicine. It's simply a pure natural substance. It keeps your system functioning as nature meant it to, even under abnormal conditions. It not only prevents an excess of body poisons (we all have them) from forming, but aids in their removal. "Nujol can't possibly hurt you or upset you. Get a bottle today. Perfected by the famous Nujol Laboratories, 26 Broadway, New York. It's sold at all druggists, in sealed packages only.

Mother's Favorite for all the family

CLEANS and purifies the skin and when used daily, assisted by Cuticura Ointment as needed, it prevents little skin ailments and troubles from becoming serious. Soap 25c. Ointment 25c.

THE AGE OF POWER

It is frequently and familiarly stated that the age in which we live is a "machine age." This is only partially correct. Actually, the present age is a POWER AGE.

Its tempo, its achievements, its prosperity—all emanate to a very great degree from the abundance of cheap electrical power available in this country.

And West Texas realizes this fact as much, if not more, than any other part of the country. The growth and expansion of this part of the state within the past few years has been almost miraculous.

It is the happy privilege of the West Texas Utilities Company to contribute its part to the prosperity of West Texas. Its great metallic highways are carrying a new civilization to isolated villages, towns and hamlets. With 70,000 available horsepower, of electrical energy from three big generating stations and 15 auxiliary plants this company provides uninterrupted service 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

The Dorcas Sunday School Class met Feb 15th in the home of Mrs. Milner, with Mrs. Cason assisting. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Hall, the first vice president, Mrs. Simmons, led the devotional. Each member responded to roll call with her favorite Bible quotation. The stories of the lives of Saul and Hannah were given by Mesdames Alewine and Heath. They were followed by "What the Bible Is For," given by Mrs. Thompson. During the social hour Valentine contests were enjoyed, after which dainty refreshments were served to ten members.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Hall.

MRS. G. O. YOUREE

Mrs. Ruth Youree, wife of Oscar Youree, died Wednesday last week in a Clarendon sanitarium after a vain attempt to stop an attack of blood poisoning. Mrs. Youree was rushed to the sanitarium as soon as it was seen that complications were arising, but nothing could be done to save her life.

Funeral services were held at the B. M. A. church in Hedley at 2:30 p. m. Thursday, conducted by Rev. V. A. Hansard. Interment was in Rowe cemetery.

Mrs. Youree was born in 1891, the daughter of Mr. J. F. Oiler, formerly of this city and now living at Vernon. She joined the Baptist church when a little girl and was an active, consecrated Christian. She was loved by a host of friends throughout this community and will be greatly missed by them.

Surviving her are her husband and three children, one daughter and two sons, her father, one brother and other relatives. To them we extend our deep and sincere sympathy.

Citation on Application for Letters of Administration

The State of Texas, To the Sheriff or Any Constable of Donley County—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to cause to be published once each week for a period of ten days before the return day hereof, in a newspaper of general circulation, which has been continuously and regularly published for a period of not less than one year in said Donley county, Texas, a copy of the following notice:

The State of Texas, To All Persons Interested in the Estate of G. W. Caughen, Deceased

J. W. Caughen has filed in the County Court of Donley county, Texas, an application for Letters of Administration upon the Estate of said G. W. Caughen, Deceased, which will be heard at the next term of said Court, commencing on the first Monday in April A. D. 1929 the same being the first day of April A. D. 1929, at the court house thereof, in Clarendon, Texas, at which time all persons interested in said estate may appear and contest said application should they desire to do so.

Herein fail not, but have you before said Court on the said first day of the next term thereof this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Clarendon, Texas, this the 5th day of March, A. D. 1929.

Tires for the new Ford are specially made to give long wear

WHEN the new Ford was designed, it was immediately apparent that a new tire would have to be made to match the car's performance. It was distinctly a new problem, for here was a car with quicker acceleration, greater speed and more braking efficiency than any car of similar size or weight.

So that every Ford owner might be assured of maximum tire mileage at the lowest cost, the Ford Motor Company devoted many months to research and experiment in conjunction with the leading tire manufacturers.

As a result, certain definite specifications were developed for tires for the new Ford. These specify cords of certain strength and texture, a large volume of tread and side-wall rubber, sturdy non-skid design, and reinforced plies for protection against bruise breaks—all the strong features of construction formerly considered for only the largest tires.

Great care also was taken to secure the best riding qualities in connection with the transverse springs and the Houdaille shock absorbers.

Though the Ford tires are designated as 30 x 4.50, they have the resiliency and air space of much larger tires because of the drop center rim of the steel-spoke wheels.

For best results, the tires on the new Ford should be kept inflated to an air pressure of 35 pounds and checked regularly to insure this pressure all the time. This is important. Low inflation breaks down the sidewalls of a tire. By causing overheating, it also destroys the rubber that acts as an insulation, with consequent separation of the cord.

At the end of each 5000 miles, when you have the front wheels packed with grease, it is a good plan to have the wheel alignment checked. This will prevent premature wear.

When punctures come, as they will with any tire, you will find the Ford dealer particularly well-equipped to make repairs quickly and at small cost. See him, too, for replacements. Then you will be sure of getting tires built specially for the Ford car according to definite Ford specifications.

To Honor Two Great Generals

LEE AND HIS GENERALS

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IN DECEMBER of last year the following news story was sent out from Baltimore, Md.:

"Because they were his boyhood heroes, provision for the erection of a monument to Robert E. Lee and Thomas J. 'Stonewall' Jackson, Confederate generals, was made in the will of the late J. Henry Ferguson, president of the Colonial Trust company, who died November 24 last.

"The will specified that $100,000 be used from Mr. Ferguson's estate for the monument, and provided that it be erected within ten miles of the City hall in Baltimore and that it represent the parting of the two Confederate leaders prior to the battle of Chancellorsville.

"In his will Mr. Ferguson explained the provision for the erection of the monument by saying: 'They were my boyish heroes and matured judgment has only strengthened my admiration for them. They were great generals and Christian soldiers. They waged war like gentlemen, and I feel their example should be held up to the youth of Maryland.'

In most of the states which once were a part of the Confederacy and especially in Virginia, January 19 and January 21 are dates of special significance because they are the anniversaries of the birthdays of Robert E. Lee and 'Stonewall' Jackson respectively. And while other sections of the country do not observe these days, as is done in the South, by the flying of both the Stars and Stripes and the Stars and Bars from public buildings each day from sunrise to sunset on January 19 to January 21 inclusive, all Americans can understand and applaud this latest project to honor the memory of two 'great generals and Christian soldiers.'

The careers of Lee and Jackson up to the opening of the Civil war are as follows:

Robert E. Lee was born at Stratford, Westmoreland county, Virginia, January 19, 1807, the youngest son of Major General Henry Lee, called 'Light-horse Harry.' He entered West Point in 1825, was graduated four years later, second in his class, and given a commission in the U. S. Engineers corps. In 1827 he married Mary Custis, who was the daughter of G. W. P. Custis, adopted son of Washington and the grandson of Mrs. Washington.

In 1823 he had attained the rank of captain and took part in the Mexican war, repeatedly winning distinction for conduct and bravery. After the war engineering work engaged him until 1852, when he was appointed superintendent of West Point, and during his three years there he accomplished many important changes.

The career of Lee from the time of his appointment to the post at West Point until April, 1861, when Virginia seceded from the Union was closely identified with the Federal army. While personally opposed to the principle of secession, Lee felt that his greatest duty was to Virginia. He refused the command of the field army, about to invade the South, becoming instead the highest ranking officer in the army of the Confederacy.

'Stonewall' Jackson was born at Clarksville, Va. (now West Virginia), January 21, 1824. Beginning his military life with a nomination to West Point, Thomas Jonathan Jackson took part, after being graduated in the Mexican war as second lieutenant in the First U. S. Artillery.

In 1851 he obtained an appointment as professor at the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington where for ten years he taught natural science, the theory of gunnery and battalion drill. Though he was not a good teacher, his influence both on his pupils and those few intimate friends for whom he relaxed the gravity of his manner was profound.

A thorough appreciation of this quality of leadership gave Jackson the command of the corps of V. M. I. when Virginia seceded in 1861. By July of that year he had been promoted to the rank of brigadier-general, and had so well employed this short time for training his men that on the first field of Bull Run they won for themselves and their brigadier, by their rigid steadiness at the critical moment of the battle, the historic name of 'Stonewall.'

While those simple biographical details tell of what they did, it is in such records as two books which have appeared recently that the story of what kind of men they were will be found. One of these is 'An Aide-de-Camp of Lee,' being the papers of Col. Charles Marshall, edited by Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice and published by Little, Brown and company. The other is 'Stonewall Jackson, the Good Soldier,' written by Allen Tate and published by Minton, Balch and company. As aide-de-camp, military secretary and assistant adjutant general on the staff of General Lee from 1862 to 1865, Colonel Marshall had an unusual opportunity for knowing Lee as few men had ever known him. That 'the Union of the North and South was made indissoluble at Appomattox,' as Colonel Marshall says, was shown in a dramatic fashion during the Spanish-American war when a son of Colonel Marshall performed for a son of Grant the same functions which from 1862 to 1865 the father had performed for Lee! If the 'real Lee' is to be found within the pages of Marshall's book, it is not less true that the 'real Jackson' is to be found in the book written with rare biographical sympathy by Allen Tate, a southerner.

A reading of these two books will convince one of the appropriateness of the proposed Maryland memorial to the two great generals, for they were so closely associated in their brilliant military careers and, although so totally different in temperament, so much alike in many ways that future ages will probably find it easier to think in terms of 'Lee and Jackson' than in terms of 'Lee' and 'Jackson' alone. One reviewer of Tate's biography has commented upon this fact as follows:

The figure of 'Stonewall' Jackson occupies a unique place in the history of the great struggle. In point of romantic interest, he stands alone, 'wrapped in the solitude of his own originality.' He was the South's greatest crusader—a mystic, a zealot, a Christian soldier in whose character were blended the fanaticism of a Peter the Hermit, the daring and infernal purpose of a Cromwell, and the subtlety of a Francis Marion. For the soldiers of the Confederacy he became, after the first Bull Run, a center of inspiration and a bulwark of confidence. And there are historians who say—among them his present biographer—that it was not at Gettysburg that the backbone of the Confederacy was broken, but at Chancellorsville with the bullet that sped out of the darkness and put an untimely end to 'Stonewall' Jackson's military career. When that event occurred, the one man who understood the heart and soul and genius of Jackson, Robert E. Lee, said, 'I have lost my right arm.'

There were few among his associates in the war who did understand 'Stonewall' Jackson. Perhaps Lee was the only one. Some regarded him as a dullard, some as a fanatic, some even as a madman. He explained himself to no one and his plans only to Lee. There was a strange understanding between these two men—an intuitive trust in each other. They were of a single mind. Had the conduct of the war the first two years been left to these two, unhampered by the vacillations of Jefferson Davis and Judah P. Benjamin and the intrigues of the southern politicians, a different story might have been written of the war—unless the great result was really 'written in the stars.'

Lee was the one man whose military judgment and genius Lee implicitly trusted, whose failures even he never questioned. He sent Jackson alone on the expeditions entrusted to his execution, but he remained with Longstreet, Jackson's peculiar genius for sudden, secret and overwhelming attack, Lee could always depend upon for a master stroke. Longstreet, stout in battle, was given to argument and delay. He argued and delayed at Gettysburg and it was after that battle that Lee paid his greatest tribute to 'Stonewall' Jackson. 'If I had had Jackson at Gettysburg,' he said, 'I should have won the battle, and a complete victory there would have resulted in the establishment of southern independence.' But the God of battles, to whom Jackson prayed, had decreed otherwise—His leader messenger at Chancellorsville, sped in a moment of victory, took from Lee's side the one man he needed in a fateful hour.

One of the most disputed points in Civil war history has been whether or not Lee or Jackson was responsible for the great flank movement at Chancellorsville which sent 'Fighting Joe' Hooker's big army flying out of the Wilderness before the much smaller force of Confederates. In regard to this General Maurice, the editor of the Marshall papers, says:

This is the question which, it seems to me, Colonel Marshall settled conclusively. He says not only that the plan was Lee's, but that Jackson at first demurred to it as being too hazardous. However, on learning that Lee had decided that a frontal attack on Hooker's entrenchments in the Wilderness was out of the question, and that a way had been found round Hooker's flank, Jackson at once accepted Lee's plan and threw himself with enthusiasm into the task of carrying it through.

We now have Lee's statement to Mrs. Jackson that he had told her husband that he was opposed to a frontal attack and that the attack must be made by the Confederate left; Talcott's statement that Jackson said to Lee, 'Show me what to do and I will try to do it'; Jackson's statement: 'Most men will think I planned it all from the first, but it was not so'; and finally Marshall's statement that 'Jackson was at first opposed to the flank movement.' That accumulation of evidence is decisive, and should settle forever a matter which has been debated for sixty years.

The scene at which this plan was discussed is one of the most famous in American history. In the chapter in Tate's book dealing with the battle of Chancellorsville there is a chapter subhead, appropriately called 'Two Cracker Boxes,' in which the scene is described as follows:

After midnight, Lieutenant Smith, Jackson's aide woke, chilled by the damp night air. He sat up and looked round. A hundred feet away, up a slope among the trees two dim figures were gathered. One was holding a cracker box and the other was warming their hands as the blaze rose. They sat down on two cracker boxes left by the retreating Federals the day before. The wind rustled the pines. Their loneliness was absolute; not another man could be seen. One of the figures holding his face so that the flickering light played over it, had on a felt hat and wore a short beard which was gray. The second figure sat humped over the fire, his head drawn down into his coat collar, his long, dark beard on his chest. Down low over his forehead rested the visor of a forage cap, hiding his eyes; the dim light threw shifting beams on his sharp, aquiline nose. To Lieutenant Smith drifted the murmur of voices; the words were caught up in the breeze and lost in the pines; he fell asleep again.

The men talked on in the night. . . . It was just daylight . . . when Lee turned to Jackson and said: 'How shall we get at those people? General Jackson, what do you propose to do?' 'Go round there,' he said, running his finger over the map. 'What do you propose to make the movement with?' 'With my whole corps,' he said. 'What will you leave me?' 'The divisions of Anderson and McLaws.' Lee thought about it a moment, then he said: 'Well, go on.' He took a pencil and moving it up and down gave Jackson his last instructions. Jackson sat smiling and nodding his head. Then getting up from his cracker box he saluted. 'My troops will move at once, sir!'

If the plan was Lee's, the execution of it was Jackson's and the result is history—how this surprise attack on Howard's corps rolled the right of the Union army back in confusion, how the panic spread through Hooker's army and how Jackson saw his chance to destroy the whole Federal force. Then in the moment of his victory this brilliant leader of his devoted 'Stonewall' Brigade, who would have followed 'Old Jack' anywhere, was struck down by the bullets of his own men who saw a shadowy group of horsemen and thought they were Federal cavalry.

Lee, hearing of the tragedy, wrote Jackson a note. He said: 'I cannot express my regret at this occurrence. Could I have directed events, I should have chosen for the good of the country, to be disabled in your stead. I congratulate you upon the victory, which is due to your skill and energy.' There spoke the great man who would give praise to a subordinate for success and who would have been equally quick to have assumed full responsibility for that subordinate's failure, if he had failed. When Lee's aide brought Jackson the note, he said: 'General Lee is very kind but he should give praise to God.' The next morning Jackson seemed to be getting better and Lee sent this message: 'Give him my affectionate regards and tell him to make haste and get well and come back to me as soon as he can. He has lost his left arm, but I have lost my right.'

But though his wounds were healing, pneumonia brought on by his exposure before Chancellorsville, developed. Tate described the end of this great warrior as follows:

His little girl was brought in, and he brightened then he fell into delirium. He talked, talked. He was on the battlefield. Now he was at Lexington. For a long time he lay still. Then he cried: 'Order A. P. Hill to prepare for action! Pass infantry to the front! Tell Major Hawks—' He lay still again. After awhile he said in clear voices: 'Let's cross over . . . and rest in the shade.'

DISCARD AMBER TRAFFIC LIGHT

Red and Green Alone Accomplish Desired Results.

The amber traffic light, designed to increase safety of pedestrians and prevent intersection collisions, is fast being forced into the discard.

While traffic experts are still at odds as to the value of the amber light in combination with red and green lights, there is a widespread movement to discard the 'warning' or 'get ready' signal because drivers misinterpret its meaning.

New York, Buffalo, Albany, and dozens of smaller cities throughout the country have adopted a system of red and green traffic lights, omitting the yellow light, and have reported their success.

Most cities still use the three-color lights, but there is a widespread difference in the combinations used and the interpretation placed upon the center light.

The experts agree that if the yellow or amber light is used mainly as a warning of a change it should be discarded. There is a tendency for traffic to start while the yellow light is showing, which is undesirable. Many of the experts say that the red and green alone accomplish the desired result with less confusion.

That there are wide differences in interpretation of the amber light's meaning is shown by a study just completed by the American engineering council. Twenty-six cities using the three-color traffic signal interpret the amber as a caution signal; 27 use it as a warning of change; 17 to clear the intersection of traffic and 11 for pedestrian movement.

Eighty-five cities are using the three-color signal system, of which 76 use the amber after red and green. Eight have recognized the undesirability of using it after the red, and consequently use it only after the green is flashed. Eighteen cities use the amber in combination with the red or green.

The experts agree that use of the amber in combination with red, as is the custom in Washington and several other large cities, should not be continued. The amber light in such cases is taken as a signal to start.

Most of the men who have studied the problem see some merit in the use of amber with the green light, because it should bring moving traffic to a halt in preparation for a change. The exponents of the two-color system, red and green only, say that the desired result can be obtained without the amber light.

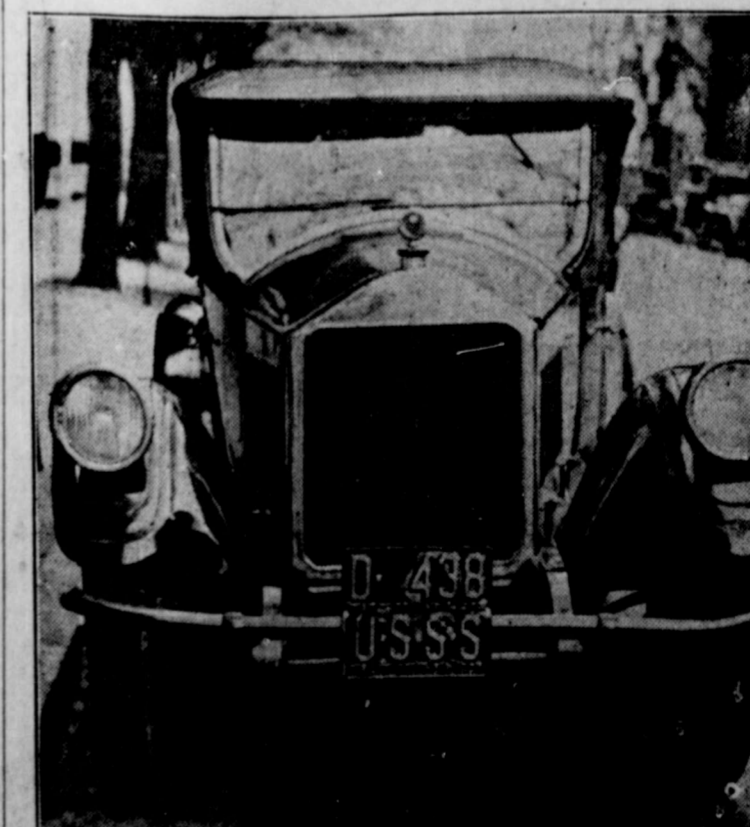

Three cities have inaugurated systems of only red and green lights, but provide a period of darkness to clear the intersection for the change. Nine have overlapped the red and green in all directions.

Working on the information that persons who are to some extent color-blind constitute 5 per cent of the population, the bureau of standards has selected colors which are distinguishable to most if not all persons having defective color vision.

Chicago Man Using Home on Wheels to Travel

F. H. Buzzacott, aged sixty-nine, of Chicago, has completed a cruiser car which he believes is unique among vehicles used in overland travel. The car is 20 feet long and 8 feet high from the ground. It has sleeping accommodations for four people, front and rear observations, radio, kitchenette, shower bath, and other conveniences. He plans to travel abroad in the car until 1933, when he will return to Chicago to exhibit it at the World's fair.

Horn Blowing Irritates and Also Meaningless

Only the thoughtless motorist blows his horn when his car is in a traffic jam, according to President Charles M. Hayes of the Chicago Motor club, who pointed out that horn blowing under these conditions is useless and meaningless.

Such a practice hinders rather than helps, Mr. Hayes declared. It irritates the nerves of the man in front and of the traffic policeman on duty; it doesn't clear the jam; it frequently angers all concerned and further delays the movement of traffic, Mr. Hayes asserted.

The proper place to make liberal use of the horn, according to Mr. Hayes, is when driving on curves; on mountain roads or when approaching blind intersections on country roads. In such places the motorist who has the horn-blowing habit may indulge to his heart's content with a resultant reduction of the accident hazard.

Cleaning out an automobile exhaust pipe from end to end, removing all the carbon, can be readily done by means of the device shown in the picture. In use, the exhaust pipe is slipped over the rope and the scraper, and by moving the pipe back and forth, the carbon will be removed in a short time.—G. A. ## AUTOMOBILE FACTS

A campaign has been started in Illinois for a state drivers' license.

The most dangerous part of a car is often the nut that holds the steering wheel.

It might have a suggestive salutary effect to make steering-wheels in the form of a harp.

Among the distances shortened by the automobile is the one between the introduction and the altar.

According to rubber companies, the average tire expense per car is now less than any other item required by a motor vehicle.

A new French eight-cylinder car is equipped with eight small neon tubes mounted on the dashboard. If a spark plug fails to function properly, it is noted by the failure of one of the tubes to glow when the switch is turned on.

Blanket for Soldiers Is Best Yet Devised

That an army advances on its stomach is not news and many will also agree that one of its greatest enemies rides on its back. This enemy is in the form of weight of the pack which necessity demands be carried. The announcement by the quartermaster general of the army of a new blanket is a matter of considerable importance.

The principal features about the new blanket are that it contains twice the warmth of other blankets of the same weight and is water resistant.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. You have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueller pangs of colic, constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Congress Determines We Shall Build 15 Cruisers Within Three Years.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD DISREGARDING the wishes of President Coolidge and defiantly rejecting the demands of the powerful lobby of church and peace organizations, the senate passed the fifteen-cruiser bill with the time limit clause included. The senators—with the exception of twelve who voted in the negative—decided that fifteen cruisers and one airplane carrier were necessary to the national defense, and that those vessels must be built within a set time. The airplane carrier and five cruisers must be begun before July 1 next, five more cruisers before July 1, 1930, and the remaining five before the middle of 1931.

The twelve senators who voted against the bill were: Black (Dem., Ala.), Borah (Rep., Idaho), Brookhart (Rep., Iowa), Burton (Rep., Ohio), Dill (Dem., Wash.), Frazier (Rep., N. D.), McMaster (Rep., S. D.), Norris (Rep., Neb.), Nye (Rep., N. D.), Shipstead (Farmer-Labor, Minn.), Thomas (Dem., Okla.), and Walsh (Dem., Mont.).

The house bill was amended, at the instance of Senators Borah and Reed of Missouri, by the adoption of a clause declaring "that the congress favors a treaty or treaties with all the principal maritime nations regulating the conduct of belligerents and neutrals in war at sea, including the inviolability of private property thereon," and that "such treaties be negotiated, if practically possible, prior to the meeting of the conference on the limitation of armaments in 1931."

Two days later the house concurred in the senate amendments without sending the measure to conference and thus a plan of the pacifists to filibuster on a conference report was frustrated. The bill went to the President and it was expected he would sign it despite his dislike of the time limit clause.

Representative Britten said that if the President failed to act promptly in sending in a budget recommendation for the funds to start on five cruisers, an amendment to the naval bill would be offered appropriating the necessary amount. During the senate debate over the cruiser measure Hefflin of Alabama precipitated an angry dispute by offering an amendment forbidding the flying of any flag or pennant above the American flag on any navy vessel. He was hitting at the church pennant flown during religious services aboard ship, in the ignorant belief that the St. George's cross which it bears is the symbol of the Catholic church. Bruce of Maryland, Walsh of Massachusetts and others squelched the Alabamian as completely as he is capable of being squelched and his amendment had only ten affirmative votes.

ONE member of the Hoover cabinet is now known to a practical certainty, although the information does not come from the President-Elect. Henry L. Stimson, governor general of the Philippines, issued this statement in Manila:

"It is true that at the request of the President-Elect of the United States I am about to leave the Philippines in order to take up another duty. What the nature of that duty is I prefer to leave to Mr. Hoover to announce. I expect to sail in about two weeks."

It was stated in Manila that Mr. Stimson told Manuel Quezon, president of the island senate, that he had accepted the post of secretary of state, which accorded with the opinion of the political correspondents.

Mr. Hoover is reported to be much interested by the guesses as to his cabinet. The only definite info-

THAT $24,000,000 additional appropriation for prohibition enforcement, which the house rejected in defiance of orders from the Anti-Saloon league, was the death of the deficiency supply bill to which it was attached as a rider. The conference committee could not reach an agreement on this item and it was admitted that the bill would be allowed to die. House leaders made plans to include the more urgent appropriations in a second deficiency bill, and thereupon the dregs, mostly those from the South, came forward with the statement that they would not abandon the fight. Senator Harris of Georgia, author of the $24,000,000 amendment, asserted he would offer the same proposal as an amendment to every appropriation bill still to come before the senate.

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, flying a big Sikorsky amphibian plane and accompanied by a mechanic and a radio operator, opened a new international air mail and passenger route last week, between the United States and Panama. He started from Miami and, stopping briefly at Havana for refueling, ended the first leg at Belize, British Honduras. The second day found him at Managua, Nicaragua, and on the third day he landed at France field in the Canal zone, finishing the flight of 2,327 miles. Lindy tried to avoid ovations at his several stopping places but was not very successful in this. When he had checked out his mail at Balboa he was the guest of Admiral Wiley aboard the battleship Texas, and next day witnessed the aviation part of the tactical fleet exercises. Sunday he started on the return flight to Miami.

Capt. Frank Hawks, a veteran air mail and racing pilot, established a new record for a nonstop flight from Los Angeles to New York. In a Lockheed Vega monoplane he covered the distance in 18 hours 21 minutes 50 seconds, bettering Art Goebel's record by about 37 minutes. He encountered stormy weather throughout most of the route and lost considerable time by reason of it.

ELIHU ROOT, former secretary of state, has consented to be President Coolidge's unofficial emissary in an effort to seek an understanding among world powers on America's reservations to her adherence to the World Court. Last week Mr. Root was in Washington conferring with members of the senate foreign relations committee. President Coolidge still hopes and believes the stumbling blocks in the way of this country's membership in the court can be removed. The chief of these is the senate reservation denying the right of the court to render an advisory opinion involving the United States without the previous consent of this country to consideration of the case.

USE of federal reserve credit for speculation, either directly or indirectly, must be restrained, declared the federal reserve board Wednesday evening in a statement calling attention to the growth of speculative credit during the year, the loss by the country of some $500,000,000 in gold and advances in the cost of credit for commercial uses. Whereupon the stock gamblers—and that includes a considerable part of the population—threw a fit and unloaded a lot of their holdings, bringing prices down with a rush. The bear movement was aided by an increase of 1 per cent in the Bank of England's discount rate, checking the flow of gold from England to New York.

Some of the lawmakers in Washington and various other persons severely criticized the federal board, not so much for its action as for its alleged subservience to the urgency of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, who had just made his first visit to the national capital. He was the guest of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and conferred with members of the board, and would have advised the board to check stock prices.

orate the British financial situation. As for the stock market financiers, one authority had this to say:

"It is not the fear of an increase in the rediscount rate that alone is causing all the uneasiness in Wall Street—it is the danger of even more drastic measures. The financial district is growing more and more convinced that the latest 'gesture' of the board has something big behind it, and Wall Street knows the present speculative situation will not bear too close investigation."

CARDINAL GASPARI, papal secretary of state, announced to the diplomatic body accredited to the Vatican that the Holy See and the Italian state had reached an agreement that ends the estrangement between them which has existed since 1870. On Sunday the pact was signed. It is a two-fold treaty, one part dealing with conciliation between church and state and the other part composed of three sections, containing a concordat regulating the future relations between the Holy See and the Italian kingdom.

In the agreement the Vatican has subordinated claims to added temporal power to recognition of its principles of moral law in Italy.

Various concessions are made the church by the Italian state relating to the power of the pope in the Vatican area. Regarded as even more important than these, however, is the agreement of the Italian government to do its utmost to secure observance of the church's canon law throughout Italy. The canon law, codification of which was completed only in 1927, contains 2,414 canons, or rules, regulating faith, morals, conduct and discipline of church members.

While there is to be only a small addition to the Vatican grounds—the pope having refused the Villa Doria enlargement offered him—the pope is to be ruler supreme within its confines. His domain is to be known as the "Vatican City" or the "Vatican State."

A monetary indemnity of 2,000,000,000 lire (about $105,000,000), of which 1,000,000,000 lire is payable in cash or Italian government bonds immediately, is allowed. The remainder will be paid in yearly installments with interest being paid meanwhile.

STALIN'S determination to deport Leon Trotsky and his followers from Soviet Russia is said to have caused a serious split in the government at Moscow. Commissar Rykov and fifteen other Communist leaders demanded that Stalin drop his severe measures, but the dictator was unwilling to compromise. It was reported from Latvia that Trotsky was on his way to Moscow to face Stalin's charges of plotting to overthrow the present regime.

WHAT A DOCTOR KNOWS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

There IS a way of overcoming the tendency to constipation. And here is how you can PROVE it.

The next time your bowels need any assistance, don't take the first laxative that comes to mind. Take one of the druggist can assure you is made with CASCARETS. Just as effective as using force, and it's good for the system. Indeed, it helps make good blood. For cascara is nothing but the bark of a tree. The Indians chew this bark, and live to an old age without a day's sickness.

What happens when you cascade the bowels? They will usually function well for SEVERAL DAYS. One more dose—no larger, and perhaps smaller than the first—and the bowels function of their own accord for a still longer time. Until you don't feel the need of any aid of any sort for weeks on-end.

So, the only habit you get from cascara is that of natural and normal regularity. How different from things one must usually repeat on the morrow! Cascara is the ideal laxative; and the familiar little candy Cascarets is doubtless its ideal form. Children beg for these tasty tablets, and many men and women wouldn't think of taking ANYTHING else for the purpose. And EVERY drug-store has them.

Girl at the Top in Health Test

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Allgie, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful, little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

Elaboration Cut Out of Chinese Weddings

The wedding of the Chinese couple was formerly a very elaborate affair, consisting of six rites which covered almost as many days, and part of the ceremony was the transportation of the bride to her future home in a flower-decked sedan. This vehicle was a gorgeous affair, but recently it has been displaced by a compromise in the shape of a glorified automobile. This is not quite so resplendent as the old-time sedan, but it answers all purposes.

"You can't make a contract that will hold a man to turn over his homestead after it's proved up," he said. "Half of them would keep their land."

"Of course," she agreed. "But then you'd have half instead of nothing at all. Do you want the world?"

"I want you!" he said, "throw in with me, girl. I'm going to fight these nesters off—the Three Bar among the rest if you don't quit. I'll smash the Three Bar into mince-meat unless you run this d—d Harris off and quit this game."

It was the first time Slade had ever threatened her spirits had soared over the prospect of the Three Bar and she was suddenly afraid for her brand if Slade, who had whittled down a dozen outfits at once, should suddenly turn his whole attention to the Three Bar.

"I've got it to do," Slade stated. "Since you've started this deal there's been nesters filed papers on every good site in my range, waiting to rush in as soon as I lose my grip. Do you think I'll let them crowd me out? Not in a thousand years! I'm telling you—I'll break the Three Bar if you keep it up."

"All right!" she said. "And what about the homestead laws?"

"I'm the law out here," he asserted. "It came to her that Slade was fighting on the defensive, that he feared to let the Three Bar succeed and set up a precedent in defiance of the signs that dotted the range."

"Then it's war!" she said. "And you'll go under yourself, from your own size, if you haven't the judgment to hedge yourself now like the rest. The Three Bar is going ahead—and we're going to win."

She turned her horse but Slade caught her arm and whirled her around. He jerked a thumb at the two men down the ridge.

"What can Deane, a half-baked boy give you?" he demanded. "You want an outfit of your own. I'll give you that—the biggest in the state."

She shook her head without an answer.

"Then I'll break you," he predicted a second time. He drew a folded slip of paper from his pocket and held it out to her. "That's the exchange slip," he said. "It calls for three hundred odd head of mixed stuff. You can send yours over any time. He turned his horse and followed after the ranger while the girl joined Harris and Deane."

Harris had slipped the strap of his glasses and handed them to Deane who had dismounted and was peering off at the spot Harris had pointed out. A few scattered shacks, showing as they were from the distance, stood in the center of a broad open basin, sheltered on all sides by the choppy mass of the Breaks. A solid corral, almost a stockade, stood near the buildings.

"That's Arnold's stockade," Harris explained to Deane. "Arnold was an old-time rustler that finished at the end of a rope fifteen years ago. Now all the drifters in the country stop over here if they want a place to hole up."

"Can't the sheriff clean them out of there?" Deane asked.

"He could," Harris said. "But no man will make a complaint. They can rustle every steer in the country, and the losers are afraid to make a report. Every outfit is supposed to protect its own. If Alden should ride up to almost any ranch within a hundred miles and ask them if they'd missed any stock in the last three years they'd shake their heads and swear that they hadn't lost a hoof. But the Three Bar has a clean page. We're not afraid he'll get a line on us while we're having him round up some one else. The first time we get a scrap of real evidence on any man we'll call Alden in."

"You told me the Three Bar herds have been cut in half," Deane said. "How much evidence do you need?"

"It's like this," Harris explained. "Rustling is about the hardest thing in the world to prove. There's a dozen ways they can work it. I could catch some of them driving a bunch of Three Bar cows toward the Idaho line. They'd look up and see me and calmly ride on past the cows. They could say the bunch was just drifting ahead of their horses—that they weren't driving them at all. Who can't prove a case of rustling even if you see it, unless you actually catch one after the brand. The only way to convict a rustler right now is to kill him and swear that you run up on him changing a brand. I expect that's what we'll have to do."

Deane looked at the girl to determine how she met this suggestion. In stead of the silver of disaster which he rather expected her lips were pressed tight.

"A little of that would help Slade, too," she said. "He told me just now that he'd smash the Three Bar."

The man reflected that this sort of a life could not help but wear off some of her natural fitness and harden her.

They followed the rims till they had cleared the Breaks, then they died down to the foothills and headed for the Three Bar. They held a head-on until a half-hour after and the thought was an ache that remained with him.

As they sat round the little fire the girl handed Harris the paper Slade had given her. It was a scrawled bill of sale calling for three hundred odd head of Circle P cows, listed in the exact numbers of all ages and sexes. In return she would send him an exchange slip for the same number of Three Bar stock. This exchange system was one of Slade's own devising, intended to eliminate the time and expense of sending riders to scour adjacent ranges in search of drifted stock. Each outfit exchanged slips based on the round-up tally with every other brand and so could show bill of sale for off-brand stuff in their beef shipments or for any rebrands on the range.

Deane was regarding the penciled memorandum signed by Slade.

"Not a very impressive document," he observed.

Harris laughed at the other's evident disapproval of such a slipshod method of property transfer.

"Not very," he agreed. "But it's absolutely good. You could borrow money against that at the bank. Slade doesn't get us that way but here's how he does: He's mapped out a rebrand system. His rebrand is Triangle on the hip. When he gets our exchange slip all he has to do is go on his range and run the Triangle on the hip of the number of Three Bar stock it calls for. There are Three Bar cows ranging a hundred miles from here, just as there's brands a hundred miles off whose stock turns up here—with a triangle on the hip. Who's going to check Slade up? It would take three crews to cover his range and tally the fresh Three Bar rebrands of this one season—a few here and a few there. He ships train loads of cows in a year. There's some old rebrands in each lot, say; maybe more than last year's exchange. Well he simply has holding them over. He can easy explain that. It would break a small outfit to tire enough brands to cover his range and check him up—and he'd buy part of those. The albino's men are petty-larceny bandits compared with Slade."

Deane turned to the girl.

"Billie, why don't you get out of a game where everything is crooked—a game of who can steal the most and every man for himself?" he asked.

"Why don't you fold your hands and give up your business the first thing that goes wrong?" she countered. "In stead of trying to remedy it?"

"But you don't have to do it," he urged.

"Neither do you," she said. "I've the same pride in the Three Bar that you have in anything you've helped build up. You'd fight all the harder for one of your schemes that was hard-pressed—and so would I."

She turned to her teepee and ended the discussion, her pride a little hurt that Deane should so little appreciate her work—and the spirit that made her hold on instead of giving up.

That evening they rode up to the Three Bar just as Waddles announced the evening meal.

"She's hot!" the big voice wailed. "She's re-e-ed hot!"

The hands were gathering at the ranch, coming in from the range for a frolic before the beef round-up should keep out for another month. Deane's time was up and he had planned to leave on the following day.

"You can't do that," Harris said. "Two more days for you. I've given orders not to let you off the place till after the dance at Brilla. This is Tuesday and the big frolic will be staged Thursday night. Then you're free to go."

Deane shook his head and prepared to offer an excuse but Harris smilingly refused to consider it.

"No use to try," he said. "The boys won't let you go. We've had you out in the rain and now we'll try to make amends for it. Billie, don't let him leave the place. I'll detail you as guard."

"You hear the orders," she said. "You're stuck for two more days at the Three Bar whether you like it or not."

"That settles it," Deane said. "I do want to see that dance."

Harris strolled up to them as they reached the corral.

"Another of the wild bunch down, he said. "Magill this time. Got it just the same as Barton did last week. Shot from in front; one empty shell in his gun. The Breaks is getting to be a hard place to reside in."

Again the girl felt that queer sensation of having expected this to transpire, as if possibly she had helped plan the deed herself and had forgotten it. That night as she lay in her bed her mind was concerned with it and at times the solution seemed almost to reach the surface of her consciousness. Two belated riders came up the lane. As they rode past her open windows she heard the name of Magill.

"That's two for Bangs," said a voice she knew for Moore's.

The evasive sense of familiarity, of being in some way identified with the killings, was suddenly clear to her—so clear that she marveled at not having known at once.

Old Rile Foster was haunting the Breaks near Arnold's, imposing grim and merciless justice on all those whom he suspected of having had a hand in the finish of Bangs.

CHAPTER VIII

Harris had left the ranch an hour before daylight, his ride occasioned by the reports of several of the men. In the last three days each couple that worked the range had found one or more of the new white-face bulls shot down in their territory. The evidence, as Harris pieced the scraps together, indicated that a lone rider had made a swift raid, riding for forty miles along the foot of the hills in a single day, shooting down every Three Bar bull that crossed his trail. A dozen dead animals marked his course. A few more such raids and the Three Bar cut crew would be extremely short the following spring. He rode back to the corrals in the early afternoon and joined Billie and Deane.

"Not a track," he said. "We must expect more or less of that. They'll cut in on us wherever there's a chance."

As Harris left them the girl pointed out a horseman riding up the lane.

"The sheriff," she volunteered, and Deane noted an odd tightening of his lips.

The sheriff came over to Deane and the girl.

"Billie, I expect you can tell me who's doing this killing over in the Breaks," he said.

Her eyes fell under the sheriff's steady gaze. Deane was looking into her face and with a shock he realized that she could pronounce the name of the assassin but was deliberately withholding it. She raised her head with a trace of defiance.

"No. I can't tell you," she said.

Deane expected to hear the sheriff's curt demand that she divulge the name of the man he sought. It must be easily apparent to him, as it was to Deane, that she knew. But Alder only dropped a hand on her shoulder and stood looking down at her.

"All right, girl," he said mildly. "I reckon you can't tell. He can't be such a rotten sort if you refuse to turn him up." He pushed back his hat and smiled at Deane. "We have to humor the women-folks out here," he explained, as he turned toward the barn-house.

Deane, already at a loss to grasp the mental attitude of the range dwellers, was further mystified by a sheriff who spoke of humoring the ladies in a matter pertaining to a double killing.

"Billie, you know," he accused "why wouldn't you tell?"

"Because there's a good chance that he's a friend of mine," she stated simply. "Those men had it coming to them and some way I can't be any regret."

"Billie, let me take you away from all this," Deane urged again. "Let me give you the things every girl should have—but all the rough spots out of your path. I want to give you the things every girl needs to round out her life—a home and love and shelter. This is not the life for a girl," he insisted.

"You've told me a hundred times that I was different from other girls. But now you're wanting me to be like all the rest. Where would the difference be then?" she asked a little wistfully. "Why can't you go on liking me the way I am, instead of making me over?"

Poet's "Silvery Moon" Set Down as Illusion

Another illusion has been swept away by the observant scientist.

Most of us have heard so frequently of the "silvery moon" that we have taken its silverness for granted. Now an astronomer declares our satellite is not "silver," but yellow.

It appears he once had the good fortune to observe a white star come very close to the crescent moon, when as he described it to the British Astronomical association, "the star looked like a globe of mercury on a dull brass ball."

The poets, however, will doubtless continue to sing of the "silvery moon," the greatest of our poets, Tennyson, singing of the white stars coming by one, whereas to the astronomers stars show a wonderful variety of color. Some are red, some orange. And how many people have ever seen a green moon? The writer is one who has.—London Tit-Bits.

Webster's definition of a ha-ha is a sunk fence, wall or ditch not visible till one is close upon it. The brick ha-ha walls at Mount Vernon were so called because they were not visible from the house, being built on a terrace. They inclosed the field where the cattle grazed.

Some Polish Imperative Virtus and talents, though allowed them, due consideration, yet are not enough to procure a man a welcome wherever he comes. Nobody content himself with rough diamonds, or wears them so. When polished and set, they

MORE ABOUT DIET

Most authorities upon such subjects agree that overweight in an adult is less desirable than underweight, if not extreme. Ten pounds of surplus fat is a menace to health. The lean, wiry person is able to combat sudden epidemics, stand more fatigue, and accomplish more than the fat and sluggish individual.

It is neither faddish nor foolish (as many will lead us to think) for every one to so govern his food and exercise that his weight may be normal, if this is possible.

A man or woman at sixty, who has lived rightly, that is, having had the proper food, exercise and sleep, should be as fit for anything as they ever have, except perhaps endurance.

The proper study of mankind is one's own self. Know what causes intestinal or stomach trouble and avoid that food or see that it is prepared or cooked in some other manner.

As the average person likes sweets and often overeats, sour stomach, ulcers, heartburn are the common ill of man. Sugar is an invaluable food—we need it, but it is the most easily assimilated of foods and when used wisely is good for the body.

The use of the automobile has almost taken away the desire for walking. One can get to and from one's home in such a short time that we are gradually becoming sluggish from inactivity. Dancing is a splendid exercise for the muscles, but nothing can take the place of long walks in the pure air, to keep one fit.

Notice the habitual auto rider; the trunk is overdeveloped, face sags with the fat and the eyes become dull from lack of exercise. Such people are prey to all sorts of diseases and rarely live to a good old age.

Simple food, fresh, green vegetables once or twice a day, good sleep in a well aired room, will keep one physically fit, with proper exercise. A hard and wearisome day will find one very tired, but a good night's rest will restore one to normal again.

Starches and sugars are fat producers as well as energy makers. If one burns up his food in work and exercise so that there is no excess of fat, the food is probably well balanced and the body will be normal in weight and in good health. Certain processes of absorption and elimination are entirely different in different individuals.

It seems incredible that with all the literature open to the public, club talks—and social service, such as county nurses—ready at all times to give help and advice, there is still such a lack of knowledge in regard to the kind, amount and proper cooking of foods.

Economical Foods. Where economy is of the utmost importance there needs to be more knowledge of food values and greater care in marketing. A sustaining soup with whole wheat bread will furnish a good meal, will supply waste and build tissue. If a bit of green vegetable in the form of salad is served with a glass of milk and perhaps a little fruit or a most simple dessert, it will be a perfect meal.

As potato is one of our cheapest and most common vegetables it may be used for a good soup. Here is one for the husky members of a growing family:

Potato Soup.—Put to cook three to six medium sized potatoes cut into eighths. Cover with boiling water, adding a little salt (one-half teaspoonful). In a saucpan place one to three finely sliced onions and fry them until soft in two to four tablespoonfuls of butter. When the onion is partly cooked add from time to time some of the potato water; cook until well done. Drain the potatoes, adding what water is left to the onions. Mash the potatoes, add the onions, more salt and a few dashes of white pepper, one to two quarts of good rich milk and when hot—not boiling—serve with croutons or toasted crackers.

Fresh Rhubarb Pie.—This wholesome vegetable fruit may be found in the markets even in the winter. Wash, peel and cut into inch pieces two cupfuls of rhubarb. If very tender do not peel. Add one cupful of sugar mixed with two tablespoonfuls of flour and one egg lightly beaten; mix well and bake with two crusts. If the rhubarb is scalded before mixing less sugar will be needed.

Orange Pecans.—Shell sufficient pecans to serve a cupful or more. Prepare a sirup of two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of water and one-half of a chopped orange peeling. Strain and reboll until a hard ball is formed in water, add the nuts, stir and mix until well covered, then spread out to cool.

Right and Wrong Representative Bulwinkle at a Gastonia musicale was talking about the younger generation.

"The older generation," he said, "from time immemorial has always upbraided the younger one. But the upbraiding is louder today, because today's younger generation is the first one that ever thought it was right to do wrong."

"In fact, where the young girl of 25 years ago was proud to be known as a little pet, today she's proud to be known as a little petter."

A WOMAN'S HEAD is level and her judgment good when she puts her faith in Dr. Pierce's Prescription. There is no beauty without good health. Nobody expects to become really beautiful from the use of complexion beautifiers. Bright eyes, clear skin, and rosy cheeks, follow the use of the "Prescription." All Dealers.

Every woman requires a tonic and nerve at some period of her life. Whether suffering from nervousness, dizziness, faintness or general debility, the "Prescription" benefits. Mrs. K. B. England, 224 Caddo St., Dallas, Texas, said: "Dr. Pierce's Prescription was so very beneficial to me when I was growing that I recommend it to all young girls who suffer from backward development. My nerves were upset and I became weak and pale, but after taking the 'Prescription' I experienced no more trouble."

MRS. G. G. HENSON

Mrs. G. G. Henson (Iris Cleo Spier) was born at Whitehouse, Texas, Nov. 6, 1906; died Feb. 27, 1929. Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock last Saturday afternoon in the First Baptist church of Hedley. Interment in Rowcemetry.

Mrs. Henson joined the Missionary Baptist church at the age of fifteen. She was married to Grady G. Henson Nov. 6, 1924. To this union were born two children, Redell, age four, and Wilma, age three.

She was a devoted wife and mother, always ready and willing to perform her duties, at home and elsewhere.

She is only resting from the task God assigned her. May her life be a shining light on the pathway of those left here.

Resides her husband and two children, she is survived by her father, D. C. Spier, of Hedley, one brother, L. M. Spier, Hedley, four sisters, Mrs. Ralph Davis, Hedley, Mrs. Donley Boyet, Sabine, Texas, Thetis and Juanita Spier, of Hedley, and a host of relatives.

MOREMAN-EWING

An event of much interest to Hedley people occurred at Estelline last Sunday when Mr. Thos. R. Moreman Jr. of this city and Miss Katie Mae Ewing of Estelline were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, the pastor of the Methodist church of that city officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Moreman Sr. and Mr. Ray Moreman were present from Hedley.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Ewing, one of Estelline's prominent families. She is a young lady of gracious manner and charming personality—a favorite among her acquaintances, both old and young.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Moreman, one of the first families of our town, and a leading young business man, being connected with his father and brother in the Moreman hardware and furniture store. He is capable and industrious, and bids fair to become a business leader in this section.

The young couple left shortly after the wedding for a trip to Dallas, Fort Worth and other points. They will be at home in Hedley after March 16th.

The Informer joins the host of friends whose good wishes are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Moreman. May success and happiness be their portion.

"FASHION SHOW" IS GOOD

"The Fashion Show at Hickville," presented in the school auditorium last Friday evening under the auspices of the Hedley Parent Teachers Association, proved to be one of the most entertaining events ever staged in our town.

Included in the cast were a number of Hedley's most prominent citizens, and each part was presented in masterly fashion. A large amount of histrionic talent emerged that had long been dormant—and, in many cases, unsuspected.

An audience that taxed the auditorium enjoyed every minute of the program—and bowed for more. The performance netted the P. T. A. more than $80.

A Home IS a Home

IT ISN'T THE AMOUNT OF MONEY you spend that matters when it comes to owning your home. It's the fact that it's YOURS, and that it's a real home that is important—be it ever so humble. What it represents—not what it is—in the material sense—is what gives it its personal value.

Ever think what a nice wedding anniversary present for the wife a home would make? We are able to provide you with a practical knowledge of constructive planning.

YOU TELL EM

Poultry Possibilities

Poultry authorities will tell you that the use of incubators and brooders which assure larger hatches and the raising of more birds is the first essential of poultry success.

Heat insulation in the Buckeye Incubator is practically perfect. The outside layer being California Redwood. The automatic regulator is the most perfect device of its kind invented.

Buckeye Incubators come in two different sizes. Let us show which one will better suit your needs.
