Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

From Confucius

The quotation "One picture is worth a thousand words" is said to be from the writings of Confucius.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

The flapper who is too flip deserves to be a flop.

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Engagement of Anne Morrow and Lindbergh—Doings of Congress.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JUST as he was landing at Havana on his return flight from the Canal Zone, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's engagement to Miss Anne Spencer Morrow was announced by the young lady's father, Dwight W. Morrow, ambassador to Mexico. The colonel declined to talk about it to the reporters. It was understood in Mexico City that he would fly there late this month and that, though no plans had been made for the wedding, it might take place this spring. Anne is twenty-two years old and vivaciously pretty. She is a graduate of the Chapin school in New York and of Smith college, and while in school showed ability to write quite good poetry. When Colonel Lindbergh was in Mexico City as the guest of Ambassador Morrow he took Anne for several short flights, but her sister Elizabeth also was his passenger, and the gossip reporters were uncertain then as to which one might become his fiancée.

Colonel Lindbergh had no sooner landed at Miami from his Central American trip than he started out again on two rescue flights. The first was over the Florida keys in search of a plane from which two persons were taken by a ferry boat after it was forced down; the second was made to try to find Pilot Harry Rogers, who had gone in search of the first plane and was himself missing for a time. Concerning the Panama mail route he had just inaugurated, he said:

"There is not a great deal to be done before daily service can be inaugurated between Miami and Panama. Better facilities for communication are being installed and other facilities to aid flying are being put into condition to augment the service."

As to passenger traffic between the North and South Americas, Colonel Lindbergh said it was not planned to haul passengers "until the most minute details of transportation and communication have been worked out."

THERE is now no doubt that Hoover and Curtis were elected President and Vice President of the United States last November. Congress in joint session last week received and counted the electoral vote and Vice President Dawes announced that the tally sheets showed the Republican nominees had received 444 electoral votes and the Democratic nominees 87. Thereupon he formally declared Hoover and Curtis elected. These proceedings were supposed to be solemn and stately and the Vice President had requested that there be no applause or other manifestation of approval or disapproval, but the senators and representatives soon broke loose and indulged in gales of laughter and vigorous applause, enjoying especially the confusion and mistakes of some of the tellers and declining to be subdued by General Dawes' gavel-hammering.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE feels that the major work of his administration is ended and already is packing up his belongings for return to his home in Northampton, Mass., where he probably will reside for at least a year. He and Mrs. Coolidge expect to leave the White House the afternoon of March 4. Immediately after the inaugural ceremonies, and because of the illness of Mrs. Coolidge's mother they will lose no time in starting northward.

On Wednesday the President signed the bill for the building of fifteen cruisers and one airplane carrier and approved the appropriation of funds to begin the construction of these vessels at once.

Naval officials and adequate navy advocates in congress hailed the approval of the bill with enthusiasm. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur expressed gratification. In his opinion, the construction of the fifteen cruers marks the beginning of a wholesale replacement program which will result in the modernization of the fleet and eventually in an American navy second to none.

Representative Fred A. Britten, chairman of the house naval committee, said his committee will begin new hearings next fall to determine how many more ships should be authorized as replacements for the rapidly aging battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines in the battle and scouting fleets.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine removed himself from Hoover cabinet possibilities by the announcement that he had accepted a position as director of the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers, with his offices in Washington.

CONGRESS was asked by the President to appropriate $9,210,500 for the construction of new public buildings in 92 cities scattered throughout the country. This is the amount needed to meet building costs during the first year. The projects when completed would represent an outlay of $46,790,500. Mr. Coolidge also approved budget bureau estimates for the expenditure of $48,000 to remodel and furnish the weather bureau station at Mount Weather, Va., as a summer home for Presidents, this plan being in accord with his suggestion that last fall. Mount Weather, near Biggeston, Va., and about 60 miles from Washington, is an 84-acre tract, high in the Blue Ridge mountains, on which the weather bureau, until a few years ago, conducted some of its most important observations.

INTERNATIONAL experts selected to consider the matter of German reparations began on Monday in Paris the conference that is expected to result in a revision of the Dawes plan. The fixing of the total sum Germany must pay and the subsequent evacuation of the Rhineland by the allies. Owen D. Young, one of the unofficial American delegates, was the unanimous choice for chairman, and after the necessary ceremonies he lost no time in setting the commission to work. Germany had its innings first and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the reichsbank, presented his country's case in a way that seemed to make an excellent effect on all the delegates except the French. He was moderate and made no specific demands but insisted Germany cannot continue to pay the annuities of two and a half billion gold marks provided for by the Dawes plan. He was questioned closely about the tax burdens of Germany, which the allies assert are less than their own. He offered to prove that this was not true. Doctor Schacht and his associates continued through several days. Correspondents said it was becoming apparent that the French and German points of view were not so divergent as was feared and that the success of the conference seemed assured.

THIS is the most severe winter Europe has experienced for many scores of years, and the suffering throughout the entire continent is most grievous. Extremely cold weather, deep snowfalls, ice and furious storms prevail. Many human beings have perished, and the loss of live stock is tremendous. Transportation is disorganized in many regions and towns are suffering for food and fuel. Harrowing stories of death and suffering come especially from central Europe.

HAVING given Gen. Bramwell Booth his chance to be heard, as ordered by the English courts, the high council of the Salvation Army again voted to depose him as commanding general, and then elected Commissioner Edward John Higgins to succeed him. The final count was 42 votes for Higgins and 17 for Evangeline Booth, head of the Army in America.

General Higgins has been chief of staff since 1918. He was born at Highbridge in Somerset and educated at Doctor Morgan's school at Bridge-water, Somerset.

LEON TROTZKY, with his wife and two children, was taken to Constantinople on a Soviet steamship, secretly landed and confined closely in the Russian embassy. It was said the authorities feared he might be attacked by "white" Russian refugees that are numerous there. The campaign against Trotzky sympathizers in Russia continues, the latest incident reported being the closing of the Kronstadt naval academy and the expulsion of its 3,700 students. Twenty of their leaders were arrested as Trotzkyites. A Leningrad paper says the Soviet war commissariat discovered a lack of loyalty among the students, who are openly discussing the possibility of a new Napoleon appearing in Russia to save the country from the hands of the Communists.

REV. DR. E. S. SHUMAKER, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon league, is now milking cows and cleaning their stalls on the state penal farm at Putnamville. He suddenly abandoned his long fight against the sale of liquor on the farm for contempt of the Indiana Supreme court, and began serving his term. Shumaker was cited for contempt in 1920 by Arthur L. Gilliom, then attorney general, following his criticism of members of the State Supreme court in the American Issue, the Anti-Saloon league publication. He was found guilty by a Supreme court vote of three to two.

MISS BOBBY TROUT went up in the air over Los Angeles and regained the laurels taken from her by Miss Elinor Smith of New York. Bobby not only established a new endurance record for women aviators—17 hours 5 minutes 37 seconds—but also captured the women's night flying and distance records. Bobby is twenty-three years old and flies a Golden Eagle monoplane.

PRESIDENT PORTES GIL of Mexico narrowly escaped death last week when his train was blown up by dynamite in the state of Guanajuato. The explosive had been placed on the track at a point where it ran over a bridge. The fireman was killed instantly when the engine overturned, and two coaches were derailed. Another bomb, unexploded, was found fixed to the track. The attempt at assassination followed closely on the execution of Jose Toral, who murdered General Obregon, and in official circles in Mexico City it was said to be the work of the League of Religious Defense. Several members of that organization were arrested near the scene of the explosion, and it was said a number of prominent persons would be taken into custody.

MOST notable of the week's deaths was that of Lily Langtry, Lady de Bath, who was for years the leading beauty of the English stage. She passed away at her home in Monte Carlo. The Jersey Lily, as she was known, was a good though not a great actress, and was also a clever theatrical manager. In the days when King Edward was the prince of Wales and her admiring friend, she was prominent in English social affairs, and she was also well known in the United States.

John II, prince of the little state of Lichtenstein and dean of ruling monarchs, died at a ripe old age and was succeeded by his brother.

ROME was en fete the beginning of the week because of the signing on Monday of the peace pact between the Vatican and the Italian state. There were imposing ceremonies, gay celebrations and exchanges of rich gifts and decorations. The general feeling throughout the world is that Premier Mussolini scored a great triumph in the negotiation. treaty, settling an old, some dispute with its

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK

COLD SHOULDER THE COLD

TEN to fifteen million people in North America are annually victims of colds during the fall and early winter. When the aggregate inconvenience and economic loss of this disability is considered, it is easy to realize that a problem of major importance confronts us. Add to this situation the reduction of body resistance to other infections such as bronchitis, influenza, pneumonia, and even tuberculosis, and colds assume a gravity usually not appreciated by the average individual.

"Only a cold" is the general expression of indifference attached to this condition. And it is exactly this attitude that has developed the unfortunate power the colds have on the American public today.

Colds are no light matter. One cold per year is bad enough. Many people can boast of three during this period. Assuming that you are going to be among the fifteen million unfortunate this year, what do you propose to do about it? For, after all, it is a very personal matter and one which cannot be controlled by public health measures.

The best medicine for a cold is bed. It is the last medicine usually administered. The time to retire to your couch is when you recognize the cold's presence. This means that you are not to wait until you are so ill that you cannot stay out of bed any longer. With business to attend to or household duties to perform, it will take will power to close up shop because of a few sniffles and coughs. But in the long run it will pay you to do so.

It may be exceedingly hard for an active person to get out of the race for a few days for such a little (?) thing as a cold. But many people who have neglected to do so have been disqualified for weeks through more serious illness and not a few have been finally eliminated. Give this suggestion some thought the next time you contract "only a cold." It may even save your life!

But why get a cold in the first instance? Here are some rules which if followed will make colds weaker adversaries for you than they now are:

- 1—Avoid direct drafts of any kind, this includes your sleeping room.
- 2—Keep away as far as possible from other having colds.
- 3—In the "cold season" avoid crowds and crowded places, even to the point of losing some fun.
- 4—Keep the feet dry.
- 5—Avoid sudden chilling.
- 6—Live up to the general rules of health every day and develop a strong resistance to all disease.

Ten or fifteen million people is a large crowd, but get out of it. And stay out.

WANTED! A CONTINUOUS PERFORMANCE

A GREAT number of people have a very mistaken idea about the annual vacation. Those who use it for rest and the replacement of vital forces lost during the year are decidedly in the minority. But even this class, (not to mention the others who return home more tired than when they left) are likely to argue that two weeks in the open air, with a healthy minimum of physical exercise and a maximum of life restoring sleep, are all they need until vacation time rolls around once more.

It cannot be denied that much good is to be derived from a safe and sane outing. However, it is equally a fact that fourteen days in the woods or shore are not to be considered as an effective antidote to three hundred and fifty days of luxurious inactivity. That is the basis upon which many work, nevertheless.

One must realize that with the conclusion of the formal vacation, the vacation possibilities still remain. Even if one is back on the job, there is still plenty of fresh air to be had, the breezes are still blowing and the night hours are available for sleep.

Those who come home in fine physical trim will do well to remain that way. A bit of daily discipline which will promptly turn into a pleasant habit, is all that is required. Really, the whole plan is so absurdly simple that many will disregard it for that reason. Use the fresh air by walking in it daily at least two miles. Permit the breezes to fan your cheeks by becoming regularly intimate with the outdoors. Do not over or under eat; and lastly, give your bed a fair and healthy chance at you.

Even for that great group who return home with nothing to show for it but black circles under their eyes and flat pocketbooks, "there is much hope"—as the quick medical advertisements say. And the medicine is exactly the same for the foolish excursionists as for the wise ones.

British Taxation
The income tax which was introduced into the United Kingdom as a war levy by William Pitt in 1798-1799—a duty of 10 per cent on all incomes from whatever source derived, except incomes under $50 a year—was lifted in 1815 and not revived until 1842. A duty of 10 per cent on income from certain sources was levied, however, in 1842.

INSTEAD of exercise

Millions of busy men and women are learning the secret of the exerciser in the vest-pocket box for a dime!

Cascarets give your bowels as much real exercise as they get from an hour with the boxing gloves! Oils, salts and ordinary laxatives don't act like Cascarets. These things produce only mechanical or chemical action. They weaken your bowels.

Every time you use Cascarets your bowels become stronger. They are made from Cascara Sagrada, which stimulates the peristaltic action and exercises the bowel muscles. Nothing else does this! That's why Cascarets are selling at the rate of 20 million boxes a year, and people everywhere depend on them to relieve headaches, biliousness, dizziness, bloating, indigestion, constipation, etc.

Early Druggists
The earliest known forerunner of the modern druggist practiced his profession no fewer than 5,000 years ago, according to researches made into the history of pharmacy.

A stone tablet in possession of the British medical museum has been identified as a pharmaceutical prescription the approximate date of which is 3700 B. C.

This is the oldest existing trace of the evolution of pharmacy and dates 4,700 years before the first recorded apothecary shop in Europe was opened at Wetzlar, Germany.

Use Blue Star Soap, then apply Blue Star Remedy for Eczema, itch, tetter, ringworm, poison oak, dandruff, children's sores, cracked hands, sore feet and most forms of itching skin diseases. It kills germs, stops itching, usually restoring the skin to health. Soap, 25c; Blue Star Remedy, $1.00. Ask your druggist.—Adv.

Best Position for Sleep
The public health service says that, in general, any position in which one is comfortable is a satisfactory position for sleeping. It is, however, considered better to sleep on the right rather than on the left side because there is less strain on the heart. Sleeping on the back tends to cause pressure on the abdominal aorta which results, in some cases, in bad dreams.

Children's handkerchiefs often look hopeless when they come to the laundry. Wash with good soap, rinse in water blued with Red Cross Ball Blue.—Adv.

Of interest to every car owner: A statement of General Motors' Policy
 by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President

THE public has been visiting the automobile shows in the larger cities of the country to see new models.
 Suppose you could drop a curtain over the 1929 automobile shows and raise it immediately upon the shows of ten years ago. How vividly the changes would then appear!
 Go back five years, or even three,
 and the contrasts are amazing. So fast have the improvements followed one another that every year has offered you more for your automobile dollar—in performance, in comfort, in safety, in beauty and in style.
 Never was this fact quite so impressive as in the cars now on display.
 This is real progress, and inevitably General Motors has been a leader in it. You cannot have hundreds of engineers, in one organization, thinking and working day and night without knowing more about making automobiles than was known the year before. You cannot have great Research Laboratories, the Proving Ground and the unmatched resources and skill of Fisher body without developing constantly better processes and new ideas. The patronage of the public makes possible all this machinery of betterment; so the public is entitled to each improvement as promptly as it has been proved.

 In this way came the self-starter,
 the closed body, durable Duco finish, four wheel brakes. By the same process one of the remarkable feats in industrial history has just been effected: Chevrolet has been transformed into a six-cylinder car within the price range of the four—almost overnight. Similarly, the new brakes and transmissions of Cadillac and LaSalle are a fundamental improvement; while the new models of Buick, Oldsmobile, Oakland and Pontiac all represent values that could not have been offered before.
 Such progress, born of the inherent ambition of an organization of active minds to do better and to give more, is of benefit to all. It offers you more for your money with each succeeding year. It gives you more value for your present car when you trade it in.
 This is our policy. This is real progress.

Alfred P. Sloan

Phrases About Salt
In the language of many Eastern peoples, we find some very curious phrases about salt which are intelligible only to those who understand the still more curious customs to which they refer. Thus, to "eat the salt of the palace," a common expression in ancient monarchies, is an allusion to the old practice of partaking of the salt of a superior as a sign of allegiance to him. So in Persia the natives speak of a disloyal person as being "untrue to salt." Among the Arabs, again, it is customary when making a transaction or striking up a friendship for the parties to lick a piece of salt; hence their familiar phrase, "there is salt between us."

Young Lady's Elbows No Longer A Hat Rack

"I just couldn't resist any longer telling you of your wonderful medicine, Milk's Emulsion. I have been constipated as long as I can remember. Had typhoid fever when I was eight years old and since then my bowels haven't moved freely. Doctors have given me bowels medicine and I have taken pills, salts, castor oil, and everything a person could think of. They didn't do me any good whatever. Now, whenever I hear anyone say they are constipated, I immediately tell them of Milk's Emulsion. I have taken about 12 large bottles, not all of them regular. Now I keep Milk's Emulsion in the house and take it regular. I have taken so much medicine that I thought it was all alike. I had a sallow complexion, no color, and felt miserable all the time; but now I have the color of health, and health is something I wouldn't exchange with anyone for a fortune. I wouldn't take ten times the price I paid for Milk's Emulsion for the results I have obtained."

"I am 19 years old and weigh 105 pounds. Have gained 5 pounds since taking your medicine and am still gaining. My face is round and my arms are getting round. Before, people used to hang their hats on my elbows, thinking they were hatracks. Now I am going to keep on with Milk's Emulsion until I weigh 125 pounds."

"I mentioned your Emulsion to two doctors. They both admitted it was good, and no one knows better than I that it is not only good, but wonderful."

"You may publish this letter if you wish and anyone that wants to ask me about your medicine may do so. I promise to answer every letter. In fact, I couldn't do enough for Milk's Emulsion to repay them for what their medicine has done for me. I remain, very respectfully yours,

WHAT DID OUR EX-PRESIDENTS DO?

Millard Fillmore

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON.
HEN Herbert Hoover of California takes the oath of office as President of the United States on March 4, Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts will become a member of one of the exclusive organizations in the world. At no time in its history has it had more than five members and that occurred only once, in 1802. Since then there have never been more than two members in this club at any one time and since Wilson's death on February 3, 1924, it has had only one, William Howard Taft. For this organization, a very important one, even though it is small in membership, is the unofficial "Ex-Presidents' of the United States club."

Just what Calvin Coolidge will do when he joins the "Ex-Presidents' club" was unknown at the time this article was written, although it may be announced by the time it appears in print. When that question came up some time ago, he is said to have remarked that he was "just going to whittle," which may have been the New England way of saying that he was going to spend a leisurely vacation before taking up any other occupation. There has been talk of his resuming his law practice in Northampton, Mass.; talk of his joining a New York law firm and also talk of his becoming an important official in various business firms. If eventually he turns to politics there will be plenty of ex-Presidential precedent. Three ex-Presidents occupied important federal positions after they left the White House. John Quincy Adams was elected to the United States house of representatives, Andrew Johnson was elected to the United States senate, William Howard Taft became and is now chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Despite his historic "I do not choose," it is even possible that he may decide sometime to put the so-called tradition against the third term to a test and again run for President. In this he again will have precedent from his predecessors. Martin Van Buren was the first ex-President to attempt a come-back. Before the New Yorker all the American Presidents had served their two terms save the two Adamses. Van Buren slipped miserably in his two attempts, failing despite strenuous efforts to get the nomination of 1844, and, in 1848, with the nomination failing to gather a single electoral vote.

After him Fillmore tried with scarcely better success. General Grant was the first man to attempt to fill a third term, running well for the nomination on a third 36 ballots, but finally giving way to James A. Garfield. That was in 1880. Cleveland was the only ex-President to regain the crown. Several before him tried to turn the trick; Roosevelt exactly twenty years later attempted the same thing. All failed where Cleveland succeeded. For defeated in 1888 by Benjamin Harrison, Cleveland waged a campaign that found him on March 4, 1893, riding to the Capitol. Cleveland was the only man to make this ride more than three times. In 1855, he rode with the outgoing President Arthur; in 1880, he gave over the reins to the incoming President Harrison; in 1893, he took them back from the same man; in 1907, he rode the trail for the last time, carrying with him the ill-fated William McKinley.

Of the careers of the other ex-presidents William A. Miller, writing in the Washington Star, offers this concise summary:

seemed about to break with France, the old ally of the United States, and spent some time reorganizing the army, which he had led so well in the strenuous years of the nation's birth. A cold contracted while riding about his broad acres caused his death, following a brief illness, on December 14, 1799. He was sixty-seven years old.

John Adams, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and veteran of the Continental congress, retired from the Presidency on March 4, 1801. He died July 4, 1826, at his native Quincy, Mass., at the ripe old age of ninety years, having lived to see his eldest son become the sixth President of the United States.

Thomas Jefferson surrendered the Presidency March 4, 1809, and, curiously enough, died on the same day as his predecessor in office, both of them passing away on their birthday of Calvin Coolidge, July 4. He retired to private life at his residence, Monticello, in Virginia. In 1819 he took a leading part in the founding of the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, and was rector of that institution until his death in 1826, at the age of eighty-three years.

James Madison left the Chief Executive office on March 4, 1817. He retired to his estate at Montpelier, Orange county, Va., to enjoy private life. He was a delegate to the Virginia Constitutional convention of 1829, and was rector of the University of Virginia. He died June 28, 1836, age eighty-three.

James Monroe laid down the duties of the Presidency on March 4, 1825, and died July 4, 1831, at the age of seventy-three years. He retired to his farm at Loudoun county, Virginia, and in the Virginia Constitutional convention of 1829, in which Madison likewise served, he was chosen president of that group. He moved to New York city in 1831 and died there.

John Quincy Adams left the White House March 4, 1829, a coincidence in that Coolidge, another man from Massachusetts, stepped out of the Presidency on March 4, 1923. He had first served from March 4, 1825, to March 4, 1829, but the Bay state elected him to the house of representatives as a Whig to the Twenty-second and the eight succeeding congresses, serving from March 4, 1831, until his death near Nashville, Tenn., and died there June 3, 1848, of tuberculosis, at the age of seventy-eight years.

Martin Van Buren bade farewell to the White House officially on March 4, 1841. Defeated for reelection as the Democratic candidate in 1840, eight years later he was the anti-slavery candidate for President. He died in his native Kinderhook, N. Y., July 24, 1862, during the Civil war, aged seventy-nine years.

John Tyler surrendered the reins of office on March 4, 1845. He was delegate to the peace convention in 1861, which tried to avert the Civil war, and served as its president. He had lived quietly on his estate up to that time. With the approach of the conflict he plunged into politics again and after the proposals of the peace convention had failed, he threw in his lot with his native Virginia and voted for secession. He was elected to the Confederate congress, but died before it assembled in Richmond, Va., expiring January 18, 1862, in the Old Dominion capital, at the age of seventy-one years.

James Knox Polk lived but a short while after he was freed from the duties of the Presidency on March 4, 1849. Death came to him on June 18, 1849, in Nashville, Tenn., at the age of fifty-three years.

Millard Fillmore laid down the onerous duties of the Presidential office on March 4, 1853, after having been defeated for renomination as the Whig candidate by Gen. Winfield Scott. He resumed his law practice in Buffalo, N. Y., and was chosen as the National American candidate for the Presidency in 1856. He was president of the Buffalo Historical society, and during the Civil war he commanded a corps of home guards. He died March 8, 1854, at Buffalo at the age of seventy-four years. Franklin Pierce turned over the affairs of state to his successor in the Presidency on March 4, 1857. He spent the latter years of his life in traveling extensively in Europe and died October 8, 1869, at Concord, N. H., at the age of sixty-four years.

James Buchanan, left the White House on March 4, 1861, and died June 1, 1868, at the age of seventy-seven years. He had retired to his home in Wheatland, near Lancaster, Pa.

Andrew Johnson, who was nearly ousted by the senate, left the White House with the expiration of his term on March 4, 1869, and died July 31, 1869, at his home in Greeneville, Tenn., at the age of sixty-nine years.

of fate, he was elected to the very body that would have turned him out of the Presidential office with one vote more. He first retired to his home in Tennessee and was defeated as a candidate for the senate before the legislature in 1870. He was defeated as an independent candidate for the Forty-third congress, but having been a senator before his election to the Presidency, he was re-elected to the senate and served from March 4, 1875, until his death, July 31, 1875, at the home of his daughter in Carters Station, Carter county, Tenn., at the age of sixty-six years.

Clydes Simpson, Grant county, Tenn., laid down the task of the Presidency on March 4, 1877. With his wife and youngest son he made a tour of the world, returning in 1879. He was boomed for a third term in 1880, but popular sentiment against this course proved too strong. In New York city, to which he moved, he became president of the Mexican Southern railway and a special partner of the firm of Grant & Ward, but in 1884 this firm failed, the former general suffering an acute financial loss. In 1885 congress restored him to the rank of general, giving him full pay on the retired list. To recoup his fortunes he began to write his memoirs, but a cancerous growth in the throat placed a painful handicap upon him and he died July 23, 1886, at the age of sixty-three years, at Mount McGregor, N. Y.

Rutherford Birchard Hayes, who also had been a general in the Civil war, stepped out of the Presidential office on March 4, 1881. Until his death on January 17, 1893, his days were given over to education and philanthropy. At the end he was seventy years old.

Chester Alan Arthur left the White House on March 4, 1885, and retired to New York, where death overtook him on November 18, 1886, a little more than a year after he had left the Chief Executive office, at the age of fifty-six years.

Grover Cleveland stepped down from his high office as leader of the nation for the second time on March 4, 1897. He had first served from March 4, 1885, to March 4, 1893, but during the intervening four years this lone American, who is the only one in all history who was able to come back to the White House after he had left it, retired to New York to engage in the practice of law. He was called away from his briefs, however, by reelection to the Presidency in 1893. Accordingly, he served the second time for four years, beginning March 4, 1897. When his second term had been completed, Cleveland settled down in Princeton, N. J. at Princeton university he delivered an annual course of lectures on public affairs and wrote numerous articles. He died June 24, 1908, at the age of seventy-one years.

Benjamin Harrison bade an official farewell to 1600 Pennsylvania avenue on March 4, 1893. This grandson of President William Henry Harrison then returned to the practice of law and delivered a course of lectures at Leland Stanford university on constitutional law. He served as counsel for Venezuela in the Anglo-Venezuelan Boundary Arbitration commission. He represented the United States in 1899 as a member of the Peace conference and became one of the International Board of Arbitration. In 1897 he had written "This Country of Ours." He died March 12, 1901, at Indianapolis, Ind., at the age of sixty-seven years.

Theodore Roosevelt left the White House on March 4, 1909, to plunge into another phase of his spectacular career. Following the outdoor life of which he was such an ardent advocate, he hunted and explored over a wide stretch of territory in Africa and South America. Disagreeing with his successor, Taft, he lost his fight to be chosen as the Republican standard-bearer in 1912 and formed his famous Bull Moose party, making a strenuous campaign and being rewarded for it by the voters in running ahead of the regular Republican candidate. His offer to raise a division to aid America in the World war was rejected, but he was active in its cause with the pen. He died of heart trouble at Oyster Bay, N. Y., on January 6, 1919, at the age of sixty-one years.

Woodrow Wilson, the World war President, who like his Democratic predecessor Cleveland, had lectured at Princeton but later became its president, closed a strenuous and momentous eight years in the White House on March 4, 1921—a broken man. He entered a law partnership with his old friend Bainbridge Colby and maintained an office in Washington. Death summoned him on February 3, 1924, at the age of sixty-seven years, and he was buried in Princeton, N. J.

But Carlos Deane could not see. It was his last evening alone with her and after the meal they rode across the hills through the moonlight. In that hour she was very near to doing as he wished. If only he had suggested that she come to him as soon as the Three Bar was once more a prosperous brand; had only pointed out how she could spend months of each year on the old home ranch—then he might have won his point without waiting. But that is not the way of man toward woman. His plea was that she leave all this behind—for him. And his hold was not quite strong enough to induce her to give up every link of the life she had loved for long years before Carlos Deane had been even a part of it.

"I can't tell you now," she said as they rode back to the corral. "Not now. It would take something out of me—the vital part—if I had to leave the old Three Bar. In the shape it's in today, it's sort of like depending a crippled child."

The next day her stand was unaltered and in the evening, when the whole Three Bar personnel swung to their saddles and headed for the trough at Brill's Deane had been unable to gain her promise.

There were but few horses at the hitch when they reached the post. As the Three Bar girl entered at the head of her men she saw Bentley and Carpenter leaning against the bar, well toward the rear of the room.

Within the last week she had heard that Carp, after being let off by Harris, had started up a brand of his own down in Slade's range. Harris' remarks about Slade's mode of acquiring new brands recurred to her—that he fostered some small outfit for a few seasons, then bought it out. As the men scattered she commented on this to Harris. The Three Bar foreman nodded.

"Likely the same old move," he said. "Like I told you, there's no way to check Slade up on the number of our rebrands. If Carp gets caught it's his own hard luck."

A dozen men from the Halfmoon D swarmed in the door. Mrs. McVey, the owner's wife, stationed herself in one corner with the Three Bar girl while the men gravitated to the bar.

Harris' men came in, the albino, standing half a head taller than any other on the floor, and they mingled with the rest as if their records were the most immaculate of the lot. Two of Slade's foremen arrived with their families.

Bart Epperson, a trapper from far back in the hills, had brought his family to the dance. Mrs. Epperson was a tiny meek woman who had but little to say. Her two daughters, in their late teens, had glossy black hair, high cheek bones and faint olive tinge of skin which betrayed a trace of Indian ancestry.

Lafe Brandon, came at the head of his tribe. Two of his sons were married and living at the home ranch. They came to the dance with the rest of the family. Lou Brandon's wife, Dolly, was a former dance hall girl of Coldriver, and Al Brandon's better half, Belle, was the daughter of a Utah cowboy.

An extra stageload rolled in from Coldriver and four couples joined the throng.

"Ex-school teachers," Harris informed. "They marry them so fast that it's hard to keep one on the job instructing the rising generation in the Coldriver school."

Deane shrank from the thought of the Three Bar girl in such a mixture. Some way she seemed many shades finer than the rest.

"It couldn't be otherwise," Harris said when Deane expressed this thought. "She was raised at the knee of one of the finest women in the world. I remember her mother myself—a little; and I've heard my own mother sing the praises of Elizabeth Warren a thousand times."

The albino interrupted them. "Cal—how come?" he greeted. The three men conversed in the most casual, friendly fashion as if there had never been a hint of friction between Harris and Harper in the past.

A great voice rose above the buzz of conversation filling the big room to the very rafters.

"Those your partners for the dance?" Waddles bellowed from the makeshift platform at one end of the room. "Go get your ga-a-als!"

Deane moved across to the Three Bar girl. There was a general rust for the side opposite the bar where the ladies had gathered. Couples squared off for the Virginia reel, the shortage of ladies rectified by a handkerchief tied on the arm of many a chap-clad youth. To signify that he was free the moment a girl, Waddles picked his guitar; two fiddles broke into "Turkey in the Straw," and the dance was on with Waddles calling the turns. All through the room they shuffled and bowed, whirled partners locked elbows and swung the stork of fiddles and scrape of feet punctuated the caller's boom.

Slade came in alone as the first dance was ended. A croupier and lookout, imported from Coldriver for the event, opened Brill's roulette layout in one corner; the rattle of chips, the whir of the ivory ball and the professional chant of lookout and croupier sounded between dances.

The full enjoyment of a novel scene was spoiled for Deane by the sickening realization that the Three Bar girl was part of it, rubbing elbows with the nondescript throng. He looked again at Harper, the rustler chief; at Slade, with his peculiar turbanlike face, Slade the cattle king—the killer, Willie Warren stood between the two Epperson girls whose faces betrayed the taint of Indian blood, an arm about the shoulders of each of them. The sheriff who had said that men must humor womenfolk was leaning against the bar, Deane turned to Harris but found him looking across the room. He turned his own eyes that way and glimpsed a dark man with an overlong, thin face and a set black stare. Morrow had just come in.

Five minutes later Harris stepped out the back door and Deane followed him. At the sound of a footfall behind him Harris whirled on his heel and when he confronted Deane the dim light from the door glinted on something in his hand.

"Sho," Harris deprecated. "I'm getting spooky. I thought it was some one else." He slipped the gun back in its holster. "There's one or two that would like right well to run across me from behind."

"I followed you out to tell you it was decent of you to insist that I stay over a few days," Deane said. "It was a white thing to do, considering that we both want the same thing."

"We both want her to have what's best for her," Harris said. "And I don't know as she could do any better than to take up with you."

"It may sound rather trite—coming after that," Deane said. "But anyway, I'll have to say that I feel the same way about you."

"Then, if we're both right in our estimates, why she can't go very far wrong, either way she turns," Harris said. "So I reckon we're both content."

Harris moved on and motioned Deane to accompany him.

"I thought I glimpsed a man I knew a few minutes back," Harris said. "I'd like right well to have a talk with him."

They wandered completely round the post and looked in the shadows of the outbuildings but could find no trace of life.

"Likely I was mistaken," Harris said at last. "I saw a face just outside the door. He was more or less on my mind—the party I thought it was. Some one else I expect, and he's gone inside."

They returned to the hall. Morrow stood with two Halfmoon D men at the end of the bar. Harris motioned him aside and Morrow withdrew from the others.

"This is pretty far north for you, Morrow," Harris suggested.

"Is there any one restricting my range?" Morrow demanded. "If there is I'd like to know."

"Then I'll tell you," Harris answered. "The road is open—as long as you keep on the road. Any time you stray off the beaten trail you're on the Three Bar range. I don't figure to get gunned up from the brush more than once by the same name. Every Three Bar boy has orders to shoot you down on sight any time you heave in view anywhere within twenty miles of the Three Bar; so I wouldn't stray off the main-traveled road any time you're going through."

Lanky Evans had detached himself from a group and Morrow looked up to find the tall man standing at his shoulder.

"So you hunt in pairs," Morrow remarked.

"And later in packs," Lanky returned. "Why don't you ever come up and visit us? Every time I'm riding north I keep looking back, expecting to see you come cantering up from the south."

"What's the object of all this conversation?" Morrow flared. "If you've got anything to say to me, why, get it over with."

"Nothing special," Evans said. "I just thought maybe I could lead you into being imprudent enough to come up our way—which I'm sure hoping to observe you north of the line and somewhere within a thousand yards."

Evans turned away and Morrow rejoined the two men he had left at the bar. Deane looked about him. Apparently no one had noticed the little by-play.

"Evans didn't exactly mean quite all of that," Harris explained. Of course if Morrow does come up our way Lanky would prefer to see him first—but he would rather he'd keep away. He staged that little talk as a safeguard for me. Morrow acquires the idea that several folks are anxious to see him, up there, he's apt to be real cautious how he prowls 'round the Three Bar neighborhood looking for me."

Deane crossed over to Billie. The music started but she shook her head as he walked toward her to the floor.

"Sit down. I want to talk with you. Long time no see um after tonight," she said. "I'll be daylight soon and I've a long tale to tell."

As the others danced she gave him a dozen messages to impart to various friends.

"Tell Judge Colton that Three Bar stock is rising," she said. "And that as soon as things are all smoothed out, he can expect me for a boarder."

Through an opening in the dancing throng Deane suddenly had a clear view of the open rear door—one brief glimpse before the crowd closed once more and shut off his view. He had an idea that he had seen a face, hazy and indistinct, a few feet outside the door. He wondered if it could be the friend for whom Harris had searched.

"Make the visit soon, Billie," he urged. "It's been a long month since we've had you with us. We thought maybe you'd deserted us back there. How soon will this visit start—and how long will it last?"

"It will start as soon as the Three Bar doesn't need me," she said. "And last a long time."

Again a lane opened through the crowd, affording a view of the door. Deane saw the face outside in the night, and a foot or more below it some bright object glinted in the dim light which filtered through. The music ceased and the chant of the roulette croupier began, mingling with the "smooth purr of the ivory ball. There came a sudden hush from the vicinity of the rear door, a hush that spread rapidly throughout the room, so swift as the perceptions of a frontier gathering.

Old Rile Foster stood just inside, his gun half-raised before him. Canfield and Lang stood together in the center of the floor, apart from the rest and with no others in line beyond them. Rile tossed a boot heel on to the floor and as it rolled toward the two men he, Canfield through the chest, Lang's gun crashed almost with his own. Rile's knees sagged under him and he pitched face down on the floor, his arms sprawled out before him.

The surge of the crowd pressing back out of the door, threw the albino on the edge of it, his big form towering alone.

The old man raised his head from the floor and crooked his wrist with the last of his ebbing strength.

"Four for Bangs," he said, and shot sharper between the eyes. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

BEADS ENLIVEN SHEER GOWNS; DRAPED COLLARS THE LATEST

AS TO whether the beaded gown is fashionable—depends. If by beaded gown is meant one of those "fearfully and wonderfully made" creations laden with beads en masse until not an inch of the original fabric is visible, their day of triumph has departed.

The modern beaded gown bears little resemblance to the beaded gown of yesteryear. To win fashion's favor the evening gown of the moment must be discreetly touched with beads, not smothered with them. The beaded theme must be interpreted with that delicacy which achieves an elusive also delicately patterned with beads. One of the sweetest debutante gowns in the social picture is of white stiffened chiffon, a fabric of utmost smartness. Rhinestones and tiny mirrors form little flower motifs and these are scattered here and there like blossoms fluttering their way in joyous springtime.

A becoming neckline is greatly to be coveted. It's not far from true to say that a neckline makes or mars a dress. Anyway the neckline has a lot to do with whether you like a dress or prefer another.

In matter of neckline the new spring beauty—now here, now there a bit of a sparkle.

The theory that a few beads are more effective than many works out exquisitely in the instance of the gown in the picture. Here simple motifs are daintily worked with handsome crystals at neckline and at hipline.

Typically new in more ways than one is this exclusive model. In the first place it highlights fashion's latest whim, that of the very sheer gown sparsely worked with beads. At smart functions one sees countless gowns which look as if they came straight from fairyland, being all of frothy billowy tulle or of some other equally ethereal transparency, enlivened with a lightsome touch of glittering beads.

Then there is another feature about this evening frock in the picture. It conveys a new trend—the semi-princess silhouette. Very often the idea is carried out to the point that the top of the frock adopts slender princess lines, contrasted by excessive fullness coming from a long waistline. In this instance, while the hemline achieves frocks are ever so satisfying in that they register one intriguing flattering effect after another.

Evidently the nonchalance draping and tying of the popular triangle and kerchief scarfs has had its influence on designers who are creating necklines this season which reflect these tendencies.

Soft drape effects which involve scarfs, bows, streamers, panels, caplets and what not are played up in every conceivable way. The scarf especially invigiles itself into the picture at every opportunity. One-sided scarf effects are introduced in novel treatments. Then again triangles are worked in to serve as yokes, which also tie somewhere effectively.

The resourcefulness of the designer in the matter of inventing new necklines is demonstrated in the graceful effects which drape across the front and tie at the back. As to bows, necklines without a bow of some kind, somewhere, are in the minority.

The smart street dress of soft woolen in the picture boasts a fetching fullness, a slender one-piece effect is maintained.

Among enchanting versions of daintily beaded modes appears a ravishing gown of peach-pink chiffon. The bodice follows the line of the figure with that slender lovely grace so characteristic of the newer silhouettes. There is also the semblance of a frail little belt worked in rhinestones and a very decoletee sleeveless yoke is new neckline treatment with the soft drape effect as its basic theme.

Another point of interest which invites attention in the detailing of this swagger frock is the cunning peplum at the waistline. It is very new, this idea of a wee apron effect or flaring frill. Many of the print frocks feature plaited peplums.

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful or restless, Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

Drumming Up Trade

The golf pro was giving his wife a lesson. He was very good looking and an interested crowd of girls gathered round to watch.

"Now dearest," said the pro, "you hold the club like this; and then, sweetheart, you take up your stance like this; finally, darling, you hit the ball like this."

"That's enough," snapped his wife. "You're not trying to teach me—you're trying to attract a few clients."—London Tit-Bits.

Are all the horn-blowers a too ensemble?

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid, vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, indigestion, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. B, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Nature's Kindness to People of Green Isle

Among other benefits of being an Irishman there is to be listed. It is asserted, an ability to break one's bones with relative impunity, as compared with Englishmen or persons of other races.

At a recent coroner's inquest at Camberwell, England, Dr. Reginald Larkin, a police surgeon familiar with accident cases, took occasion to report his experience that broken bones of the Irish heal more rapidly and strongly than similar fractures, the victims of which are English; thus justifying, perhaps, the Irishman's traditional preference for the shillalah, a plaything relatively harmless to his countryman.

In all animals the repair of broken bones is the duty of millions of tiny living cells which accumulate at the place where the bone is broken and cement the severed ends together with stiff, cartilage-like tissue which then slowly hardens into bone by deposit of compounds of lime.—Baltimore Sun.

Old Maine Settlement

Kennebunkport, Maine, was one of the early settlements, having been started in 1629. It was incorporated in 1633 as Cape Porpoise, and was almost entirely destroyed by Indians in 1703. As Arundel, it was re-incorporated in 1717 and has been called Kennebunkport since 1821.
