HEDLEY SCHOOLS AMONG THE BEST

The Hedley School Board met several days ago and re-elected all members of this year's Faculty who applied for re-election. Supt Maxwell was again elected to head the schools, at an increased salary. The work is progressing smoothly, with everybody busy--only six weeks remaining of the present term.

This has been one of the best years to date in the Hedley schools, and of course a large share of the credit is due the Faculty. All of the teachers have shown efficiency and faithfulness of a high order. We know of no school in a town of Hedley's size that can compare with our school--which is a natural consequence of a Faculty such as we have, a School Board that is unexcelled anywhere, and a live, earnest Parent Teacher Association.

All Hedley is proud of the Hedley schools--a Class A institution that takes a back seat for none. We owe a big debt to the officials and teachers who have made it what it is.

Remember, we have Bargains every Saturday. We appreciate your business.

HEDLEY STUDENTS DESERVE CREDIT

This has been a busy week for all the students in Hedley High School. Examinations for the fifth semester were given April 1st and 2nd.

We are indeed proud of our high school, for on April 1st several cars and trucks of high school students from neighboring schools drove by our building to let us know that they were celebrating "April First." A carefree week was made several times during the day, and every boy and girl in Hedley High School was in school and at work during the entire day.

The student body should be complimented for this showing that our students are improving in more ways than one.

A New Chief Justice Takes Office

Charles E. Hughes

John Marshall Statue in Philadelphia

R. B. Taney

John Jay

John Rutledge

Wm. H. Taft

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE recent installation of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice of the United States Supreme court, succeeding William Howard Taft, who resigned on account of illness, has added another chapter to the interesting history of that high tribunal. Although the Presidency is the highest office in the land, in some respects it is more of a distinction to be a chief justice than it is to be President. During the 141 years of the existence of this nation, we have had 31 Presidents. Mr. Hughes is only the eleventh chief justice, so a part of the distinction in holding that office lies in the fact that in the ordinary course of events only a limited number of Americans can ever gain that honor.

Involved in the recent change were some interesting "historic firsts" and "historic parallels." The previous chief justice, William Howard Taft, was the first American to have served both as President and as chief justice. He was President from 1908 to 1912 and chief justice from 1921 to 1930. The new chief justice, Charles Evans Hughes, is the first American to have served as an associate justice of the Supreme court, to have retired from that position by resignation and then to have returned to the court as chief justice. Two associate justices have been elevated to the position of chief justice while members of the sitting bench—John Rutledge in 1795 and Edwin D. White in 1910. Mr. Hughes also shares with John Marshall the distinction of being the only American who has served in the important post of secretary of state as well as chief justice. Marshall served as secretary of state under John Adams and Hughes held the same position in Harding's cabinet. Three other chief justices have served in other cabinet posts. Roger B. Taney was secretary of the treasury and attorney general in President Andrew Jackson's cabinet; Salmon P. Chase was secretary of the treasury for Lincoln and William Howard Taft was secretary of war for Roosevelt.

Chief Justice Taft's nine-year term of service is less than the average term of a chief justice which has been fourteen years. The longest term was that of John Marshall who presided over the Supreme court for 34 years. The second longest was Taney's with a record of 28 years. The shortest term was that of John Rutledge who served less than six months. In view of the opposition to Hughes' appointment by President Hoover, as expressed by the debate in the senate over the confirmation of the appointment, it is interesting to note that only once in history has the senate refused to confirm such an appointment. Rutledge was appointed chief justice by President Washington on July 1, 1795, when the first chief justice, John Jay, retired. Because of Rutledge's attitude toward the Jay treaty with England, the senate in December of that year refused to confirm the appointment and he retired from the court.

In the elevation of Mr. Hughes to the chief justiceship, New York has given another of her sons to hold that high position. The first chief justice was a New Yorker—John Jay. He was born in New York city in 1745, graduated from King's (now Columbia) college in 1764 and became a lawyer. He was a member of the first and second Continental congresses, wrote the state constitution of New York in 1777 which remained the organic law of that state until 1822, and held office as chief justice of the state Supreme court while serving as a member of the Continental congress. He served as president of the Continental congress from 1778-79 and then was sent to Spain as United States minister to that country. In 1782 he went to Paris and there with Franklin and Adams arranged the terms of the treaty of peace which ended the Revolution. After his return to this country in 1784 he was elected secretary of foreign affairs by congress and retained that office until the Constitution superseded the Articles of Confederation.

Jay was one of the originators of the Federalist, writing five of the weightiest of those essays which did so much to secure the adoption of the Constitution. President Washington offered him his choice of the federal appointive offices and he chose the chief justiceship of the Supreme court which he held until 1795. His next service was to go to England at Washington's request to try to avert a threatened war between the two countries by making an adjustment of the boundary disputes and concluding a commercial treaty. The result was the famous Jay treaty which brought down upon his head such a storm of criticism and prevented his being the Federalists' candidate for President at the end of Washington's second term. However, he was elected governor of New York and again appointed and confirmed chief justice of the United States, but declined to accept the position. He retired to private life and died May 17, 1829. To him as chief justice Daniel Webster once paid this high tribute: "When the spotless ermine of the judicial robe fell on John Jay, it touched nothing less spotless than itself."

The second chief justice, John Rutledge of South Carolina, appointed by Washington, but not confirmed by the senate, was succeeded by Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut, who became chief justice in 1796. He had served as a member of the Continental congress and the Constitutional convention, playing a leading role in framing that great document. He was one of the first senators from Connecticut under the Constitution, was elected and was first to bear the title of "Watchdog of the Treasury." He served as chief justice from 1796 to 1800, was sent as envoy to France and died November 26, 1807.

Historians are virtually unanimous in characterizing John Marshall, the fourth chief justice, as the greatest of them all. His strong Federalism did more to entrench that policy in the law of the nation than did the famous Alexander Hamilton, despite the fact that most of his service was during the years when the Jeffersonian leaders dominated the nation, and the strength of the federal government today is founded on his interpretation of the Constitution. Born in Virginia September 24, 1755, he served brilliantly as an officer in the Continental army during the Revolution. After the war he studied law and had no sooner begun to practice it than he was recognized as the equal of any of the great attorneys of Virginia, not even excluding Patrick Henry and Edmund Randolph. After several terms as a state legislator, during which he further added to his reputation and experience as an envoy to France, he was offered successively the positions of attorney general in President Adams' cabinet and associate justice of the Supreme court, both of which he declined.

At the request of Washington he ran for congress and was elected in 1790 and in 1800 was appointed secretary of state under Adams. While still holding that office he was appointed chief justice of the United States and for the next 34 years he "continued to be the absolute head of the supreme judicial tribunal of the United States with a published result of filling thirty volumes of reports. His decisions are monuments to the vast judicial powers and learning which he possessed. They are referred to constantly at this day as standard authority on constitutional questions. Displaying as they do, a clearness of thought and impregnable logic rarely met with, combined with a grasp of great public questions, which was that of a statesman, these decisions rank with those of the highest judicial authorities of the world." Marshall died July 6, 1835, and Americans have always regarded it as significant that the Liberty Bell, which first pealed out the news of the independence of this nation, should have been cracked while tolling for the death of the man who did so much to guarantee the permanence of the nation whose advent it heralded. Marshall is remembered for two other reasons. One is that he presided over one of the most important trials ever held in this country—the trial of Aaron Burr, former vice president and one of the leading political leaders of his day, for treason. The other is that he was the author of a "Life of Washington," a monumental work which was the first important biography of the Father of His Country and which stands today as one of the best. Marshall was succeeded as chief justice by a man who was second only to him in length of service and importance in making judicial history. Roger Brooke Taney was his name and of Marshall and Taney it has been said that they "were more important than most of our Presidents." Taney was a native of Maryland where he was born March 17, 1777. He was admitted to the bar in 1799 and later elected to the state legislature. Failing of re-election he settled in Frederick, Md., in 1801 where he soon became the leading lawyer of the state. In 1827 he was appointed attorney general of Maryland and in 1831 President Andrew Jackson called him to his cabinet in the same capacity.

As attorney general Taney participated in the bitter political strife of the Jacksonian era and attained his first fame. He supported Jackson in his fight on the United States bank and in 1833 when Duane, secretary of the treasury, refused to remove government deposits from the bank, he was dismissed and Taney was made secretary of the treasury. He immediately ordered the removal of the government deposits and this action was declared by Jackson's enemies to have caused the financial depression which followed. It resulted in a bitter debate in congress and that body refused to confirm it. Soon afterwards he retired to private life but, after the death of Marshall, Jackson appointed him chief justice and, despite the opposition of Clay and Webster, he was confirmed by the senate.

Taney's chief claim to fame lies in the fact that in 1857 he handed down the famous Dred Scott decision which seemed to open up all parts of the United States to the extension of slavery, and brought down upon his head a storm of denunciation from the North. This decision widened the gulf between the North and the South and was one of the prime factors in hastening the Civil war. "From this time the chief justice, if not his court, was practically in abeyance. In May, 1861, he attempted to release a prisoner from Fort McHenry and to attach the commandant for ignoring his writ, although he expected to be arrested and imprisoned for his action. The authorities had no wish to molest the veteran, lagging, superfluous, on the stage; they simply disregarded him and his technicalities and he died in Baltimore October 12, 1864, lamenting the low estate into which his court had fallen."

Taney was followed as chief justice by Salmon P. Chase, born in New Hampshire January 13, 1808. Chase emigrated to Ohio at an early age, practiced law in that state and became an authority on financial affairs. He took a prominent part in the slavery dispute and was counsel for so many fugitive slaves that he became known as the "attorney-general for runaway negroes." After serving as United States senator and governor of Ohio, he was one of the leading candidates for the Republican nomination for President in 1860. Lincoln, however, secured the nomination and when he became President he appointed Chase as his secretary of treasury. He resigned this post in 1864 and was appointed chief justice soon afterwards, serving until 1873.

He was succeeded by Morrison R. Waite, born in Connecticut November 26, 1816, but like Chase an emigrant to Ohio where he rose high in the legal profession. He was appointed chief justice by President Grant in 1874 and served until his death March 23, 1888. His successor was Melville Weston Fuller, born in Maine February 11, 1833, but appointed to the chief justiceship by President Cleveland from Illinois, where he went to practice law in 1859. Chief Justice Fuller died July 4, 1910, and was succeeded by Edward D. White of Louisiana who served from 1910 to his death on May 10, 1921, when he was succeeded by William Howard Taft, appointed by President Harding.

Best in home, says factory sup't.

"The last thing we'd try to economize on," says the superintendent of a large eastern factory, "is lubricating oil. By using cheap oil we could 'save' hundreds of dollars each year—but it would cost us thousands of dollars for repairs, replacements and lessened efficiency of equipment."

The same is true in the home. If all housewives knew what factory men know about lubrication, few of them would use anything but 3-In-One Oil for their expensive sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, electric fans, lawn mowers, washers, and other household devices. 3-In-One, a blend of mineral, vegetable and animal oils, is the best oil for household use, for it cleans and protects as well as lubricates.

Ask for the old reliable 3-In-One Oil at good drug, grocery, hardware, department and general stores; in 15c and 30c sizes. For your protection, look for the trade mark "3-In-One" printed in Red on every package.

Oklahoma Girl Strong as Boy

"Louise Alice was fretful, nervous and all run-down from whooping cough," says Mrs. F. J. Kolar, 1739 West 22nd St., Oklahoma City, Okla. "The little I could force her to eat wouldn't ever digest. She became underweight, sallow and weak."

"Then I decided to try California Fig Syrup, and the results surprised me. Her bowels started working immediately, and in little or no time she was eating so she got to be a pest at the table, always asking us to pass things. Her weight increased, her color improved and she began to romp and play again like other children. Now she's the picture of health, and strong as a boy."

Pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable California Fig Syrup acts surely and quickly to cleanse your child's stomach and bowels of the souring waste that is keeping her half-sick, bilious, sallow, feverish, listless, weak and puny. But it's more than a laxative. It tones and strengthens the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. Ask for it by the full name, "California Fig Syrup," so you'll get the genuine endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Hoover Makes Move to Avert Collapse of Arms Conference.

IN AN effort to avert the collapse of the arms conference, or failure to reach a five-power agreement to reduce armaments, threatened by the attitude of France, President Hoover has sent new instructions to the American delegation.

The President is said to have offered alternative proposals designed to make a five-power agreement possible, if not for actual reduction of naval strength for at least placing a limit near present figures.

It is understood that he suggests concessions on the part of the United States and Great Britain which would make it easier for Japan, France and Italy to agree.

The collapse of the conference was threatened when Foreign Minister Briand had announced his withdrawal because the United States, backed by Great Britain, had flatly refused to accede to the demands of France for a security pact as a condition of their consenting to any reduction in naval armament.

Later Mr. Briand relented and announced that he would remain with the conference, and that he still had hopes of reaching an agreement.

The break with France came at a private meeting between Prime Minister MacDonald, Secretary of State Stimson and Foreign Minister Briand of France. Mr. MacDonald demanded that Briand produce his real figures. Mr. Briand replied, partly:

"I have no figures. I came over here to get a pact. If you want figures you must talk to Premier Tardieu. I am finished."

Mr. Briand demanded point blank of the British prime minister and the United States secretary of state why they are suspicious of France's naval requirements and why they refuse to permit her to maintain adequate sea power for self-defense, but accept Italy's demand for parity in silence.

"I don't think that it is fair to ask France to produce all of her figures and make out her case," he said. "We are willing to discuss every point without being asked. But there is another country at the conference occupying the same status as France, but she is left alone and says nothing beyond demanding parity with us—making no justification of her claims."

The Japanese delegation indicated that the absence of France from further negotiations, which automatically disposes of Italy also, will prevent Japan from proceeding in detail toward any extensive reduction of armaments, because her strength is contingent upon the naval forces of the European powers.

However, it is practically assured that Great Britain and the United States will write a treaty. If the other powers refuse to come in Uncle Sam and John Bull will sign it alone.

SECRETARY OF LABOR J. J. DAVIS has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States senator for Pennsylvania. Mr. Davis' announcement came after he had been informed that William S. Vare had withdrawn from the senate race and would throw him his support. Mr. Davis denied that he intended to withdraw from the cabinet to make the race.

THE great importance of teaching civic responsibility to the youth of today, along with the ability to read and write, was stressed by President Hoover in a short address at a dinner given by the Boy Scouts of America.

Four hundred business and professional men, gathered in Washington to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scout movement and to launch a big expansion program, listened while the President spoke of the necessity for training the boys of impressionable age in the duties and obligations of citizenship, "if the country is to continue as a successful democracy."

Mr. Hoover spoke in the highest terms of the Boy Scout movement, asserting that it is one of the most valuable educational and training forces for democracy in the nation. The President also praised the leaders of the Boy Scouts for offering the boy of today an opportunity for real adventure and of directing his interests toward "constructive joy" instead of "destructive glee."

MAHATMA GANDHI, Indian leader and mystic, is conducting a campaign for civil disobedience against British rule in India. Demonstrations have been held in various parts of the country, but they have been orderly. Gandhi defies the British government to arrest him and warned his followers that they must be prepared "for the worst, even death, in plans for defiance of the salt tax." Production of salt in defiance of the government monopoly is the first disobedient step of the Indian program.

The British authorities are taking every precaution to prevent trouble.

IMMEDIATE appropriation of more than $173,000,000 for multiple government projects was voted by the senate in passing the first deficiency bill.

Of this sum $100,000,000 is for the farm board, giving that newly established government organization a total of $250,000,000 of the $500,000,000 authorized for its revolving fund by congress. The additional fund was approved without opposition.

A NEW financial and diplomatic era dawned for Germany and Europe when the reichstag, following the plea of Chancellor Mueller, voted to accept the Young plan, which provides for the final liquidation of Germany's war debts.

In his address in the reichstag Chancellor Mueller hailed the expected liberation of the Rhineland, its recovery of sovereignty and control of finances, railroads and taxes. "We no longer will depend on decisions of the uncontrolled and uncontrollable office in the hands of foreigners as was the case under the Dawes plan," he said.

WITH the body of William Howard Taft resting beneath the newly turned sod in Arlington cemetery, the affection which he bore for Mrs. Taft, his three children, and Yale university was attested when his will was opened.

To "my dear wife, Helen H. Taft," the final testament of the former President left virtually his entire estate. Filed for probate, it disclosed no valuation.

Yale university, where Taft spent many of the happiest years of his busy life, first as an undergraduate, and then as the Kent professor of law from 1913 until 1921, when he rose to the chief justiceship, received the largest single sum mentioned in his will—$10,000. It will be added to the principal of the alumni university fund and credited to his own class, that of 1878.

To his three children, Robert A. and Charles P. Taft, and Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, the former chief justice left some of his most prized possessions—his papers, manuscripts, correspondence, addresses, and copyrights. They are to be used as the recipients think best, after consultation with Mrs. Taft.

POLICE COMMISSIONER WHALEN of New York has started a campaign to drive all active Communists from their jobs in shops, factories and commercial establishments. He supplied heads of industrial corporations with a proscription list of 300 names of Communists who have been operating in their places of employment as organizers, agitators and propagandists.

A COMMITTEE of the New York County Lawyers association, after a two-year study of the question, decided by a six to one vote to challenge the Eighteenth amendment as a defiance of the Tenth amendment to the Constitution. The committee also voted to submit their contentions to the Supreme court for a test ruling.

The Tenth amendment reads: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the states are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people."

The fact that the Eighteenth amendment conflicts vitally with the older Tenth amendment has never been presented to the Supreme court for a ruling.

THREE states—New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio—are to spend more than a billion dollars this year for construction and maintenance of state, county, and municipal public works, according to figures assembled by Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont. Gov. John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania has just reported to Secretary Lamont that the total for that state is estimated at $305,988,118. The total for New York state is $475,275,442, while that for Ohio is $225,225,000.

"On the basis of complete reports from more than two-thirds of the states covering all types of public construction and maintenance to be carried out in 1930, together with reports from federal departments and commissions and public utility companies," said Secretary Lamont, "prompt decisive action in speeding up this year's $7,000,000,000 program of construction work of these types seems well established."

IN VIEW of the issue raised by senate radicals in opposing the nomination of Charles Evans Hughes for chief justice, it is likely that unless President Hoover names a man of known liberal tendencies to succeed the late Associate Justice Edward Terry Sanford there will be another long-drawn out fight in the senate.

THE government is preparing to count noses again. An army of 100,000 census-takers will begin knocking at your doors April 2 in the nation's fifteenth decennial count of its population.

Many new questions, along with the old ones, are to be asked this time. The 1930 census will delve deeply into the country's economic life as well as providing the usual basis for reapportionment of seats in the house of representatives.

LEGISLATION to place the power industry under the controlling hand of the federal government is now before congress, sponsored by Senator Couzens of Michigan, chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee.

The bill is the second to follow months of inquiry into and discussion of activities of the giant power industry and its relations with the federal trade and power commissions.

Couzens, a Republican, is the author also of another bill, to reorganize the power commission, and was confident of getting both the reorganization and the regulatory proposals before the senate this session.

VOLUMINOUS evidence showing the breakdown of prohibition enforcement, especially in the large cities, has been amassed at secret hearings by the Wickersham law enforcement commission during the last few weeks, it has been learned.

Although the commission's sessions have been held behind closed doors, reports leaking out unofficially are that shocking conditions have been pictured before the investigators by witnesses from Chicago, New York and other urban centers. It is known that among the witnesses have been prohibition officials from these cities, some of whom have testified dry law violations are widespread despite honest enforcement efforts.

THE army engineers are ready to proceed with $35,000,000 of flood control construction along the main stem of the Mississippi river as soon as congress makes the money available.

Selecting work not involved in the controversy over the merits of the Jadwin plan, the engineers have virtually completed all plans and specifications and their field forces are ready to go to work after the pending appropriation bill is passed.

Coincident with this announcement, Secretary Hurley made known that condemnation proceedings will be brought immediately to obtain levee and floodway rights across railroad and state highway lines in the Bonnet Carre floodway in Louisiana. (© 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

That Tired Feeling

A POPULAR song of some years ago carried the expressive line, "I'm so very, very, very tired." Since then we have seen the development of the tired business man, later the appearance of the tired business woman, and now one is introduced to the tired high school pupil!

It cannot be denied that today's attainments for both the old and the young are extremely fascinating. Nevertheless, the mature individual is not compelled by any law to be physically victimized by them. Commonsense and a measure of respect for one's physical well-being are all the restraints required, provided he employs them. But with the children it is a different proposition. Unquestionably today's high-speed recreations consume too much of the youngster's time and energy. And for this situation the parents are much to blame.

A recent examination disclosed that of 50,000 pupils in the higher grades, more than 21 per cent were seriously under weight. The majority of these deficiently displayed undeniable signs of fatigue. Moreover, subsequent investigation indicated that most of these young people had self-determined their rest hours. Drawn to the night's pleasures like moths to a flame, they had little but their own immature judgment to guide them—and that had failed.

Too many evenings at movies, too many nights at dances, too many inhaled cigarettes, too few hours spent in bed and too much ill chosen food, are some of the factors that are causing school boys and girls to exclaim, "I am so very, very tired."

Feel tired yourself if you prefer it. But prevent the children from feeling that way even though they insist upon it. They may not like you for it now, but they'll thank you later on.

Look Out for This!

MAN and his wife who apparently were in the best of health retired one night recently and never got up. Investigation indicated that asphyxiation was the cause of their deaths. Which suggests the fact that one need not step out of the house to get killed.

An individual may be ever so careful regarding the annual physical examination, the semi-annual dental visit, diet, rest, exercise, fresh air and the other living rules, and yet have all these things count for naught because of carelessness or thoughtlessness in the home.

For instance, millions who are using gas appliances must understand that even though the manufacturers have taken every precaution to prevent the misuse of their products, they are compelled to rely upon the exercise of ordinary care in their operation. That this fact is not properly appreciated is clearly indicated by the many accounts of asphyxiation.

Leaky gas pipes, worn out valves and especially, deteriorated hose connections, in this manner, continue to take an entirely preventable toll of life.

Mechanical devices, no matter how perfectly manufactured, require a periodic overhauling and inspection. Lacking this attention it is easily possible for serious or fatal accidents to occur.

Don't imagine that modern household appliances, notwithstanding their scientific construction, can be purchased and then safely left for years without repairs. They cannot!

Remember this, also. Gas heaters need sufficient air for proper combustion. This is not possible to obtain in an unventilated room. Incomplete combustion means carbon monoxide. And carbon monoxide is an insidious and deadly gas.

English Village Sets Feast for Thousands

One of the biggest pots of soup ever made was a feature of a "gypsy party" which took place at Baildon in Yorkshire, England, a short time ago.

Centuries ago there was an annual gathering of the gypsy tribes at Baildon. Later on the people of the district carried on the custom by having a gypsy camp of their own on the moor, preparing and eating a gypsy soup, and taking part in a number of ceremonies. This custom was revived, and the soup contained, among other ingredients, 500 pounds of meat, 600 pounds of peas, 300 pounds of potatoes, and 900 pounds of other vegetables.

Yorkshire seems to take a special delight in gargantuan repasts of this kind. Denby Dale is famous for its giant pies. One made some years ago contained the beef of four bullocks and fifteen hundredweight of potatoes. It was served to about 20,000 people, all of whom voted it excellent.

Preparing a giant dish of this kind is a ticklish job, but there was only one Denby Dale pie that was a failure. It was that baked in 1887, professional bakers being employed. Since then the women of Denby Dale have insisted on baking the pies themselves, and have always made a good job of it.

A Plot That Changed

By DUFORD JENNE

(Copyright.)

FROM his comfortable chair in the rear of the village store, Lynn watched the whole scene with growing interest and concern. He saw the slight, pretty girl come in, and go to the window of the little post office division of the store. Her eagerness and hope were clearly perceptible to him. He saw old "Pop" Allen, the village storekeeper and postmaster, hand her a letter. She went swiftly to the wall desk, opened the letter with trembling fingers, read it; and then Lynn saw the letter slowly crumpled in one hand as the other carried her handkerchief to her eyes. She stood swaying a moment, and then went unsteadily out of the door.

Lynn felt suddenly moved by the quick sympathy that had got him in trouble before; there was something tragic in that letter or he missed his guess. When "Pop" came back to his chair, Lynn said: "That girl is in trouble or I sure have sized up the situation entirely wrong."

The old man sighed. "When she first came for her letters—some chap is writing her—she was chipper and pretty as a picture. I figger she thought he loved her; an' I figger he's droppin' her. She writes him long letters, I judge, an' his have been gettin' shorter. Looks like a busted romance to me. I feel sorry for her; she's been gettin' pale an' haggard—worryin' her. That chap must be a darn fool to pass up a girl like her. Say—" "Pop" looked up—"why don't you take a hand in it? Move up to the Elms—she's a sort of companion there—and be nice to her?"

Lynn laughed, but at the same time, he knew inwardly that the suggestion had a quick appeal. "Suppose I do, 'Pop,' and then find out if she's bearing for a wayward brother?"

"Pop" shook his head. "The chap's name and address is on his envelope," and he named them.

Lynn swung his feet to the floor. "Is that right? Well, by Jove, I have a friend in the same line of business on the same street." He thought a moment. "I guess I will take a hand in this affair."

He acted without delay. That evening he shifted to The Elms, the little summer hotel, and the deep-dyed plot he had in mind began to move. His next step was to meet the fair-haired girl who had certainly won his sympathy.

His first close glance at her took his breath a bit. "As sweet and pretty as a rose" was the first thought that flashed through his mind. "Or she would be if she did not look so pale and a mite worried. However, we'll see."

The letter Lynn sent to his city friend brought a prompt reply to this effect: "This man Welsh is long on money and short on character, and he has the reputation of having a way with the girls, and besides—put this down in your little book—he's married!"

Lynn stared at the phrase and whistled; then he pondered long; and another phase of his plot was developed.

He and the rose girl had a joyous tramp back among the hills. He came back, knowing her name, "Adele," and something else—that if he did not "watch his step," he would be heard over heels in love with this charming maid.

The week went by. His village ally, "Pop," reported that Adele had sent her usual long letter.

Lynn, on his part, debated the situation. He 'new he had information that would settle the matter, but he knew also that he wanted her in another way.

One afternoon, they were resting on a hillside from which they could see the far blue vistas of the friendly hills.

"Adele, this summer is coming to an end—and I have been wondering—" He caught her slight start. "If it is going to end for us?" he asked her gently.

Her dark eyes were full of pain as she turned to him. "Lynn, I have been happy with you—but I have been so desperately unhappy—I'm—I'm afraid," she said with a slight shiver.

He gathered the meaning in her broken sentences, and he knew what suffering lay back of her fear. He slipped a comforting arm around her. "Listen, Adele, I am going to give you the rest of the summer, but before I leave, I am going to ask you if you love me enough to trust me with your love and your life!"

She trembled, but with what emotion he could not guess. "I will tell you," she said so softly he hardly heard the few words.

The walk homeward deepened the feeling between them, for the hill dusk and sunset were glorious; but she was silent most of the way—just why, Lynn could not guess.

That evening, he went down to "Pop's" store. The old man was selling a pound of butter, but the butter could wait. He hurried Lynn to the rear of the store.

"Lad, here's news for you. She didn't open that feller's letter—heaved it into the wastepaper basket after tearing it up—an' she sent him a short one! Don't know what it means, but I kin guess!" he announced with a wide grin.

"Pop" went back to his butter, and Lynn stood dreaming. One of these days, he would have his rose-girl in his arms—all his.

Tree Planting Worthy of Special Attention

The choice and arrangement of trees on the small country or suburban place are matters deserving of more attention than they appear in many cases to have received. A limited knowledge of trees, a random selection of nursery specimens and an unwise choice of locations are sometimes represented in tree plantings.

Many a tree is not adapted to its location in character and effect or suited to the size of the place on which it is planted. Even where, from the purely practical standpoint, no mistake is made, it is obvious that an exercise of imagination may result in dullness and monotony.

Where possible the native trees on the place may well form the nucleus of the planting. There may be no native trees, however, which are suitable to retain. Existing trees, if any, may have to be sacrificed, due to their interference with approaches or with the house itself. In this respect the problem of the small place is perhaps more difficult, and differs essentially from that of the large country place where there is more leeway as to placing the house with respect to contour of ground, vistas and lighting or future trees.

Civic Barnacles Clog Pathway to Progress

Barnacles attach themselves to the hulls of vessels and other submerged objects. They retard the speed and efficiency and cause loss of time and revenue, to say nothing of the loss of energy that could have been directed in a profitable way. Every so often a thorough cleaning is necessary by scraping off the barnacles and otherwise cleaning up the object, says the Miami (Fla.) Herald.

Civic clubs and other organizations may be likened to ships and therefore find it imperative to scrape off the "barnaced" members. After a most thorough and complete cleaning the organization presents a bright appearance. It is cleaner, brighter and carries a more wholesome spirit into the various endeavors by the membership.

As a result of this cleaning activity greater work can be done and the returns will be twofold; a better member and a better club that will serve more effectively the needs of the city. There might be a "Barnaced" day each year so that this cleaning process could be done all at one time.

Beautifying the Roadside

After an improved road has been made, little attention is paid as a rule to the roadside. From the point of view of the driver, the road may be a marvelous piece of work, but to the esthetically inclined passenger the outlook may be quite different. The average highway is lined with jagged cuts, homely banks, tree trunks and refuse of one kind or another. The Vermont Chamber of Commerce has started in upon a campaign to beautify the roads and roadsides and is endeavoring to make it a nation-wide movement. Connecticut sets out rambler roses, woodbine and honeysuckle. Many other states set out trees in large numbers. This, together with the efforts being made to overcome the billboard nuisance, may have the effect of restoring the rural scenery to an acceptable condition.

Proper Planning Saves Money

"One of the greatest blights of our cities, one of the biggest and hardest problems to be solved, is that of the disfigurement and upset to surrounding property caused by railroads and other transportation agencies. Great economic losses ensue, with depressing and deteriorating influence upon the poor creatures of humanity who generally drift to the depreciated neighborhoods along railroad rights of way.

There is also the great loss of time and inconvenience to whole cities by misplaced or outgrown yards, terminals and other facilities, that proper cooperation and planning, on the part of public and carriers, should make wholesome, esthetic and compatible with the reasonable amenities of life.

Beauty Essential

To meet the demand of the present day, buildings must be not only efficiently planned and soundly built, but they must also be beautiful.

"It is being found that good architecture in commercial and apartment buildings is a real asset and a sound investment." Rollin C. Chapin of the Minnesota chapter of the American Institute of Architects pointed out.

Work Reflects Materials

Inferior materials are not conducive to good workmanship. Rather, they invite poor workmanship, for the carpenter, plasterer or other artisan takes his cue as to the quality of workmanship desired from the quality of materials furnished. To state the fact explicitly, no carpenter can do a good job with inferior materials.

Roofing Material

When the roof covers a large surface and as it comes down close to the eye of the observer, the selection of its material has much to do with the architectural success of the house.

Finds Youth's Fountain!

"JUST one thing has contributed more than anything else in my life toward making me the radiantly happy woman I am today," writes Mrs. Walter Ruehl, of Glenbrook, Conn. "If this was selling at ten dollars a bottle instead of the few cents it costs, I would scrape the money together, and I don't mean maybe!"

"I guess a good many others feel the same way, judging by the number of people I know who swear by this 'Fountain of Youth.'"

Millions of people all over the world have discovered this simple secret, which is nothing but giving our bodies the internal lubrication that they need, as much as any machine. After you have taken Nujol for a few days, and have proved to yourself how it brightens your whole life, you will wonder how so simple a treatment can make such a great change in your health and your happiness. The reason is this:

Regularly as clock work, Nujol clears out of our bodies those poisons (we all have them) which slow us up, make us headachy, low in our minds.

Colorless and tasteless as pure water, Nujol cannot hurt you, no

It may be the little stomach; it may be the bowels are sluggish. No matter what coats a child's tongue, its a safe and sensible precaution to give a few drops of Castoria. This gentle regulation of the little system soon sets things to rights. A pure vegetable preparation that can't harm a wee infant, but brings quick comfort—even when it is colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance. And don't forsake Castoria as

Any COLD

That cold may lead to something serious, if neglected. The time to do something for it is now. Don't wait until it develops into bronchitis. Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin as soon as you feel a cold coming on. Or as soon as possible after it starts. Bayer Aspirin will head off or relieve the aching and feverish feeling—will stop the headache. And if your throat is affected, dissolve two or three tablets in a quarter-glassful of warm water, and gargle. This quickly soothes a sore throat and reduces inflammation and infection. Another Wichita Falls Fire Fighter Declares He Feels Like a New Man

"A few bottles of Orgatone actually put an end to my indigestion and made me feel like a new man," said C. F. Gregory, a well known Wichita fireman at the Central Fire Station and who resides at 604 9th street, Wichita Falls, Texas. "Often after eating," he continued, "I would have attacks of indigestion that would make me feel miserable for hours at a time. My gall bladder bothered me a great deal and I had a very severe sharp shooting pain along the margin of my ribs in the right side. I started doctoring myself but nothing I took would help me. I became much worse and suffered so much agony that I surely thought nothing would ever do me any good."

"One of my friends advised me to try Orgatone, and I began to improve right from the start, and a few weeks treatment fixed me up all right. I have gotten entirely over my indigestion and can now eat anything I want. I believe everybody in my neighborhood is taking Orgatone and praising it for the good that it is doing them."

Genuine Orgatone may be had in Hedley at Wilson Drug Co.

Only the man who doesn't want his home town to prosper, and who cares nothing for the welfare of his neighbors, can afford to acquire the bad habit of buying away from home.
