Chicago Books Back & Back & Books Back & Bac

Chicago in 1820

The Second Fort Dearborn

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

dE city of Chicago is planning to celebrate its one hundredth birthday and when it does it will invite the whole world to join in the celebration. Recently ground was broken on the site where in 1933 will be held "A Century of Progress Exposition" and work on the erection of buildings already has begun. Although that event is two years hence, Chicago this year began to look back upon its century of existence. For it was on August 4, 1830, that the town was platted, the streets and lots laid out and the first map made.

In 1830 the total area of Chicago was threeeights of a square mile. It had a population of less than 100 persons. In 1930 Chicago covers an expanse of 210.5 square miles and it has a population of more than 3,000,000 people. And that tells the story in brief of the most amazing growth of a city in all history. Chicago is the fourth largest city in the world. With its 100 years of history it bows only to London with its 2,000 years, to New York with its 250 years and to Berlin with its $800 years.

Although this "child of a swamp"-for the greater part of its present area was once nothing but a mosquito-ridden tract of sodden ground-can count back only 100 years as an organized comunity and only 97 years (it was incorporated in 1833, hence the celebration in 1933) as a municipality, in reality its recorded history goes back nearly 200 years. Its name was first spoken by an Indian some time far back in the unrecorded years before the white man came to the Middle Vest. A party of Indian fox hunters, so runs the legend, pursued a large skunk, which made its home along the southern shore of Lake Michigan, Into the lake and killed it. From that time on the southern part of Lake Michigan was known to the Sauk, Fox and Kickapoo tribes as "shekagua" ameaning skunk, or "shekakoheg," meaning the place of the skunk. That is the version of the origin of the name Chicago as given in the publications of the American Bureau of Ethnology,

Another version is given in the journal of a certain Joutel, companion of La Salle until the death of that ill-fated explorer in Texas in 1687. Leading the survivors of La Salle's Texan expedition back to Canada, Jontel arrived at the present site of Chicago on March 29, 1688. Bad weather compelled them to remain there ten miserable days, during which time they almost starved to death. They had only a small amount of corn meal, but they supplemented this with edible plants, among them woods garlic or the wild onion. And Joutel records the fact that the Indians called this place "checaque," meaning wild "Checaqua," a slight variation of the word, is said to have been the Indian adjective for strong, powerful, mighty or strong-smelling, Joutel, however, was not the first white man to visit the site of the present Chicago, for countrymen of his were there nearly 20 years earlier. It is believed by some that La Salle visited the place in 1670, but the first authentically recorded visit by white men was that of Joliet and Marquette who passed that way on their return trip from the expedition down the Mississippi in the autumn of 1673. Marquette returned there again in December, 1674, on his way to establish a mission among the filinois Indians, and because of illness was forced to spend the winter there.

The next French visitor to Chicago was Father Claude Allouez, successor of Marquette, who reached there in the spring of 1677 on his way to establish the mission promised to the Illinois Indians. La Salle was the next visitor in 1678 and no doubt others passed that way for the Chicago portage, the short connecting link between the two great waterways of the continent, the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence and the Mississippi, made it the natural path of the explorers, just as in later years it was to become the natural path of commerce and settlement and to be one of the main factors in building up the mighty city of the present. As previously stated, Joutel was there in 1688 and he was followed in 1689 by La Hontan, explorer extraordinary (according to his own according to the state of the same contract of the same contract

Chicago has been the butt of many jokes and one of the earliest ones was the product of Indian one of the earliest ones was the product of Indian hamor. For it was the red man who said that the first white settler of Chicago was a negro." His name was Jean Baptiste Point du Saible. There is much dispute about this man. One account represents him as a native of San Domingo, while another states that he was a runaway slave while another states that he was a runaway slave the vicinity of Lexington, Ky. It is known that he was at Chicago as early as 1779 although the base of his trading operations was on the present site of Michigan City, Ind. The year 1790 found him established at Chicago near the mouth of the river, but how long he remained there is unknown. Certainly he seems to be more entitled to the honor of being the first settler (non-Indian) than does John Kinzie, the reputed "father of Chicago."

That title might be applied to one of several men, depending on what your definition of "father" might be. For George Washington, "Father of His Country." might also be called the "father of Chicago." In 1795 President Washington ordered Gen. Anthony Wayne, who had just con-cluded his successful campaign against the Indians of the Northwest and was preparing to make a treaty of peace with them, to purchase from the Indians "a piece of land six miles square at the mouth of the Chicago river emptying into the southwest end of Lake Michigan where a fort formerly stood." And this was included in the Treaty of Greenville which was signed on August 7, 1795. Washington clearly saw that this site was the key to possession of the Old Northwest and no doubt decided that if the United States government held it they could hold that vast empire against the British and the Indians.

That title also might be applied to Capt. John Whistler who arrived there in 1803 with a body of troops to build a fort, for when he erected the first Fort Dearborn, named in honor of Secretary of War Henry Dearborn, it marked the real be ginning of the present metropolis. Around that fort was to cluster the settlement which eventually was to become a town of 100 inhabitants and a hundred years later, a city of more than 3,000,000. When Whistler and his men came to Chicago they found four huts or cabins there belonging to some French Canadian traders. One was occupied by Le Mal, who had bought out Du Saible; one by Antoine Oullmette (whose name is preserved in the present Chicago suburb of Wilmette) and a third by Louis Pettle and his Indian wife. The fourth belonged to John Kinzie, a trader and silversmith who apparently had his headquarters elsewhere at that time, probably at St. Joseph, Mich. Kinzle did not come to Chicago to make it his home until early in 1804. He then occupied the hut in which Du Saible and Le Mai had in turn lived, continued his trading business, which prospered and made him the leading member of the civilian population around Fort Dear-

The story of the first Fort Dearborn is so familiar as to need no repetition-how for nine years a small body of American troops, commanded first by Captain Whistler and later by Capt. Na than Heald, endured the privations of this lonely outpost on the frontier, how the threat of an Indian uprising became more ominous as the certalaty of war with Great Britain increased and how that threat culminated in the tragedy of August 15, 1812, popularly known as the Fort Dearborn massacre, For on that day Captain Heald, in obedience to orders from a superior officer which left him no alternative but to obey, evacuated the post and marched south along the sand dunes, there to be attacked by the fierce Pottawatomies in an orgy of bloodshed which will forever remain one of the tragic memories in the history of Chicago. That night the Indians burned the fort and the next five years marks a hlatus in the story of Chicago.

On July 4, 1817, another body of troops arrived and began the construction of another Fort Dearborn which was occupied for four years when the government ordered its evacuation. In 1827 occurred the Winnebago war, which for a time furnished plenty of excitement for Chicago and led eventually to the reoccupation of the fort.

But this war was a short-lived one and in the spring of 1831 the fort was again abandoned. Less than a year later, however, it was again garrisoned and the outbreak of the Blackbawk war saw Fort Dearborn and the recently platted village of Chicago crowded with panie-stricken settlers. The next few months were filled with suffering, both from fear of the red man and from an epidemic of cholera. But the plague and the war ended almost simultaneously and with the inrush of white settlers which followed the smashing of Blackhawk's power, the rise of the future great city began.

Fort Dearborn had not only been an important military post, but it was also the center of the government's relations with the Indians. The outcome of the Blackhawk war was the handwriting on the wall for the red man and as the tide of 1mmigration into the rich Illinois country set in it became evident that the Indian must move on Visitors to the exposition in 1933 will be able to see a landmark which symbolizes the passing of the red man and the final conquest of the Old Northwest by the whites. It is a giant eim (curiously bent by the Indians while still a sapling) which stands in a part of Chicago, known as Sauganash, because it includes the reservation of 1,600 acres granted Chief Sauganash (Billy Caldwell), leader of the Pottawatomies and one of the heroes of the Fort Dearborn massacre. Under this elm were held the negotiations for the treaty made in 1835 after Chief Sauganash had persuaded his tribesmen to accept the government's terms and leave their ancestral home forever.

Another such landmark is in the heart of the famous Chicago Loop. It is a bronze tablet marking the site of the Sauganash hotel, established by Mark Beaubien in 1829 as Chicago's first hostime of the Civil war. Then came chroages great disaster, the fire of 1871, to wipe out nearly all that had so far been accomplished. But instead of "killing" the city, the conflagration seemed to only spur the young giant on. Chicago rose from the asies to build and grow on an even greater scale and 60 years after its organization as a municipality found it playing host to the World in one of the greatest celebrations ever held—the World's Columbian exposition of 1893.

It was about this time that one of Chicago's leading citizens, Daniel H. Burnham, father of the city improvement plan which is now making Chicago not only one of the greatest but one of the most beautiful cities of the world, uttered these words: "Make no little plans; they have no magic to stir men's blood, and probably themselves will not be realized. Make big plans. . . . Remember that our sons and grandsons are going to do things that would stagger us. Let your watchword be order and your beacon beauty." And it is to show how well this "child of a swamp" has heeded those words that Chicago is inviting the world to "come to the party" in 1933.

SPARK PLUGGARE CAUSE OF FAULTS

When Worn Out or Improperly Adjusted Hard Starting Results.

Spark plugs that are worn out, improperly adjusted or dirty, cause missing of the engine, resulting in hard starting, excessive drain on the battery, poor engine performance, higher gasoline consumption, and targer engine repair expense.

All that is needed to correct such faults is to clean or re-gap the plugs; or if the car has gone some 10,000 miles with the same spark plugs, to replace them with new ones.

Limit of Mileage.

This mileage is about the limit at which engineers put the efficient life of spark plugs.

If the spark plugs need cleaning, fill the lower part of the plug with alcohol or equal parts of ammonia and water, and let stand for a few minutes. Rub the carbon from the insulator with a cloth-covered stiff wire or wooden peg. Then wipe the plug dry. Clean points with emery cloth.

The spark plugs are equipped with two electrodes set in such a manner that the electric current must jump across a small gap from one to the other. In making this jump a spark occurs. It is this spark that ignites the mixture of gasoline and air in the cylinder. The size of the gap between the electrodes affects the type of spark adjustment. The gap for use in average motors should be no wider than ,025 inch. For high compression mo-tors it should be .020 inch. At the same time the distributor contact points should be adjusted. These should be between .015 inch and .020 inch in width of gap.

Horse Power Reduced.

Tests show that a motor in which spark plugs had been used for a little over 10,000 miles developed 31.2 horse power, when run at an engine speed equivalent to 20 miles an hour. The same motor run at the same speed equipped with a new set of spark plugs gave a horse power reading of "3.0, an increase of 6.8 horse power.

the Importance of inspecting the spark plugs and breaker contact points at least twice a year cannot be over emphasized as high compression engines of today impose a greater demand upon them than ever before.

Figures Are Given on Gasoline Consumption

Each motorist in the United States last year used an average of 571 gallons of gasoline per motor vehicle and paid an average of $18.36 gasoline tax, according to estimates of the American Motorists' association.

The highest per capita gasoline tax was paid by the motorist of New Mexico, paying an average of $37, based on a 5-cent-per-gallon tax, and consuming an average of 740 gallons of gasoline. The lowest was Massachusetts paying an average gasoline tax of $8 per motor vehicle, based an a 2-cent tax, using an average of 400 gallons of gasoline per motor vehicle.

Many Methods of Fixing License Fees Now Used

Sixteen different methods are used by the states to fix registration fees for passenger automobiles, and weight is used in the largest number of commonwealths, according to the research department of the American Automobile association.

Weight is the basis in 20 states, horse power in 13 states. Other methods used are: Flat rate, three states; cost of the automobile, three states; horse power and weight, five states; value, one state; flat rate and weight, two states; value in weight, one state, and cubic inch displacement, one state.

Car owners paid a total of $344,-794,953 in registration and license fees in 1929, says the A. A. A., on a total of 23,542,108 passenger cars.

THE MOTOR QUIZ

Q. What is the cause of an engine back-firing through the carburetor?

Ans. Improper valve or ignition timing, crossed or defective ignition wires, lean mixture or sticking valves.

Q. What is the cause of backfiring in the muffler?

Ans. An intermittent spark caused by improper adjustment of distributor breaker points, sticking breaker mechanics, loose or badly worn distributor brush, short-circuited wires or loose connections. Turning off the switch and coasting with the car in gear will cause gas to collect in the muffler which will often ignite when the switch is

2.000.000 Chevrolet Sixes now on the road

Since January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobiles-nearly five times the record of any other manufacturer over an equal length of time.

These 2,000,000 buyers have chosen Chevrolet because it offers scores of desirable qualities not obtainable in any other car so low in price.

Yet, despite its many fine car advantages, the Chevrolet Six is unusually economical. Its gas, oil, tire and upkeep economy is unsurpassed. And any model can be bought for Dirigible R-100 Makes Safe Flight From Britain to Montreal, Canada.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD GREAT BRITAIN'S big dirigible, the R-100, made a successful and uneventful crossing of the Atlantic ocean, taking off from Cardington, Wales, and reaching Montreal about 76 hours later. There, at St. Hubert airport, she was tied up to the mooring mast that had been built for the purpose, and her passengers landed, well pleased with the trip.

Until the airship reached the vicinity of Newfoundland she maintained a speed of between 50 and 70 knots, but the ever-present fogs then forced a slowing down until she got well into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, having passed over the Belle Isle straits. While passing over Quebec the airship sustained some damage to the fabric covering one of the fins, and the motors were shut off until repairs had been made. This delayed the arrival at Montreal somewhat and prevented the tleing up of the ship to the mooring mast until early Friday morning. Throughout the voyage radio communication was kept up with bases in England and Canada and with ocean liners. The northerly route was tak en, following the great circle by way of north Ireland to a point south of Cape Farewell, Greenland, then to Belle Isle and along the St. Lawrence river to Montreal.

Squadron Leader R. S. Booth was in command, with four officers and a civilian crew of 39 men. Among the few passengers were Lieut. Com. Charles Dennistoun Burney, managing 100; Lleut, Com. R. St. John Prentice of the British aircraft carrier Coureous, and Mat. G. H. Scott, famous British airship commander, CANADA'S parliamentary elections were watched with great interest because the results are likely to be important to the United States as well as to the Dominion. The Liberal gov. ernment, headed by Mackenzie King. was decisively defeated by the Conservatives, and Richard B. Bennett. Conservative chief, will be the new premier. Mr. King himself was reelected to parliament, but many members of his cabinet lost out, these including Finance Minister Charles A. Dunning, who drew up the budget increasing tariffs against the United States and lowering them to Great Britain, which constituted the main issue of the campaign.

A quick call to a session of the Canadian parliament is considered one certain result of the political upset. Canada's extension of tariff preferences to Great Britain, without exacting tariff preferences in return, can be expected to be withdrawn or modified the result of the election. The eters turned it down in defeating the government candidates. Canada, in other words, will make its trade treaties with the world, irrespective pire ties and sentiment,

The St. Lawrence seaway plan is more thrown in the realm of potical controversy and uncertainty. her tariffs against the United ites, in the absence of a Canadiancan trade agreement, are to be ministered by a Communist leader with a group of riflemen. All power was centered in a supreme Soviet committee. Gangs of Communists, headed by squads of Red troops, surrounded buildings marked off by the supreme command for depredation. Orators proclaimed the Communist purpose "to distribute the surplus wealth," and selected followers entered the buildings and transported furniture and valuables to the street, where they were auctioned off,

The proceeds were pocketed, after which the coolies and town riffraff were invited to enter and complete the looting. After this the places were burned and the crowd moved on to the next building scheduled for destruction.

More than 200 foreigners, 20 of them Americans, were at the summer resort at Kuling, near Kluklang, and were considered to be in grave danger. On Wednesday the American gunboat Palos, which was approaching Changsha, was fired upon by Communists and five of her crew wounded. The Palos returned the fire, using machine guns and three-inch rifles at close range, and finally dispersed the Reds. The Palos had previously helped evacuate foreigners from Changsha and was returning to survey the ruins of the city. Two American missionaries, Rev. William Lingle of Salisbury, N. C., and Rev. Allen Cameron of Lawrence, Kan, remained in Changsha because they had conscientious objections against accepting protection from gunboats.

UNDER the guidance of Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock, dry enforcement is to be carried out in a manner that will not be so likely to arouse the rage of the citizenry. Mr. Woodcock proposes to have the dry law agents trained "to act always as gentlemen" and to resort to the use of firearms only in self-defense. He called the administrators and spe-cial agents all in to Washington and laid before them a statement of his policies which was said to have been approved by President Hoover and Attorney General Mitchell. Schools will be set up to teach the agents to use their brains rather than their brawn in discharging their duties," to train them in methods of gathering evidence, in knowledge of the law and in habits of discipline."

Five major points were emphasized in the Woodcock statement aside from the proposal to maintain high personal standards for agents. These were: (1) Establishment of a system of daily reports to Washington by deputy administrators: (2) scientific research into such problems as drunkenness statistics, alcoholism deaths, and hop and corn sugar production (3) efforts to obtain more state ale in dry law enforcement; (4) efforts to secure more uniform sentences for violators; and (5) concentration upon the commercial liquor traffic rather than upon "pitiful, picayunish, noncommercial cases."

Supervisors of industrial alcohol permits also met in Washington and. with their chief, James M. Doran, considered how they might best combine their efforts with those of the pro hibition enforcement unit.

President Hoover's law enforcement commission will issue a second formal report of its work this fall. Arrangements for formulation of the document will be completed at a meeting here early in October.

Leaders of nearly all the dry organizations in the country issued a signed declaration of policy which was looked upon by many as a recognition of the growing antagonism to prohibition enforcement as it has been carried on in the past. In it they repudiate all enforcement policies that do not regard and safeguard every personal right guaranteed by the Constitution, and pledge themselves to a campaign of education. The declaration states it the paramount purpose of the Eighteenth amendment to destroy traffic in intoxicating beverages, and that the enemies of prohibition try to make this appear as offensive sumptuary legislation.

OUT of the welter of Democratic aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination in Texas, "Ma" Ferguson, former governor, and Ross S. Sterling, wealthy Houston publisher, emerged in the lead, and the victor will be de-termined in a run-off primary, since was divided into 50 wards, each ad- | neither of them had a majority. State Senator Love, who led the successful bolt in Texas from Al Smith in 1928, was among those badly beaten. United States Senator Morris Sheppard was renominated.

There will have to be a run-off election in Oklahoma also. The leaders in the Democratic race for governor were "Alfalfa Bill" Murray and Frank Buttram; and for United States senator, Thomas P. Gore, the blind for-mer senator, and Charles J. Wrights-

WITH virtually no opposition the London naval treaty was passed by both houses of the British parliament and then was made effective so far as Great Britain is concerned by receiving the formal approval of King George under quaint procedure instituted during the reign of Henry VIIL Senator Hiram Johnson of California, leader of the opposition to the treaty in the United States, declared that the alacrity with which parliament ratified the pact was proof that the British were only too eager to seal a bargain perpetuating their control of the seas.

I N LINE with the Hoover program helping business, representatives of the various branches of the building industry and allied agencies of finance met in Chicago and created a permanent national conference on contruction. Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the national building survey conference last fall, presided and was made head of a committee to complete arrangements for the organization of the conference. A statement issued

"The meeting was held for the purpose of reviewing the principal inter-group problems of the construction industry and to determine the practicability of developing a continuing organization to assist in the solution of such problems, Aspects of realty finance, incli ing problems of legislation, appraisals of property, methods of home financing and credit practices were discussed. Possible means of securing greater stabilization of the construction industry, a number of aspects of taxation and practical methods of introducing economies in the building and financing of residences and income properties, were considered."

DRESIDENT HOOVER has created a commission to study the question of unemployment statistics and has invited labor, business and economic groups to select its members. Ethelbert Stewart, commissioner of labor statistics of the Department of Labor; William M. Steuart, director of the bureau of census for the Department of Commerce, and a representative of the Department of Agriculture will be ex officio members.

In announcing the appointment of this commission the President defended his practice of naming such investigating bodies, and added: "As we need the best brains of the country to assist in government and in the coordination of public efforts I shall appoint others."

R USSIAN goods will not be kept out of this country merely because they come from a Soviet state. This in a sentence was the stand taken by President Hoover, and consequently Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman had to reconsider his decision denying the entry of two shiploads of Russian wood pulp at New York imported by the Amtorg Trading corporation. Any action barring Soviet goods the President held must be based solely on the law applicable to all nations and designed to exclude convict made goeds and prevent "dumping" practices on the part of countries competing in American trade.

F THE Wafdists or nationalists of Egypt succeed in their campaign against King Fuad, Abbas Hilmi, former khedive who was deposed by the Brit-ish, may be restored to the throne. The British government is said to be disposed to accept this result, though both Italy and France have declared their opposition. The Wafdists assert that so long as Fuad is on the throne there will be no peace in Egypt and no possibility of settling disputes with Great Britain.

He passed over many a Living Map mountain. They were unlike mountains he had ever seen for one-which had a sign upon it, Mt. Ranier or Mt. Tacoma-was capped with snow.

As he walked along many little men hurried by him. They looked exactly like patrolmen or policemen except that their uniforms seemed to be of different colors. He caught up with a group of them and as they marched along they sang:

"We are patrolmen you may never see, But we always do our work; We're policemen too you really might

Our jobs we do not shirk.

We're the boundary men, the boundary men, the boundary men forsooth,

And a state or a town or a country itself can't tell us a single untruth."

"I wonder if I could come along too," David suggested. "I've nothing very special to do-that is I don't have to go anywhere I don't want to

The patrolmen didn't seem to think this was astonishing in the least. "We hoped you'd come with us. In

It was all David could do to keep up with them; they walked so quickly. "It's the first news I've had of it." David exclaimed. "Perhaps you sent my invitation home."

David thought it was rather strange not to be invited beforehand to a banquet which was given in his honor but he decided it was best not to talk. It took all his breath to walk so rap-

At last they stopped and from every direction more and more patrolmen kept arriving. Though they were different colored uniforms each had brass buttons and each carried a stout, play hours. The neckline is finished round stick attached to the helt. Some of the uniforms were of such bright colors too, some green, some blue, some pink, some lavender, some brown, some yellow. David noticed that on one side of a great, long table was a sign which said Dominion of Canada and on the side he was still standing by there was a sign which said United States.

So he had come up to the border line! The table was very long and now the different patrolmen were taking their places. As they did so they stopped and chatted with each other about the different kinds of weather they had been having in the parts of the country from which they came. They called each other by names of states.

There was Patrolman Wyoming and Patrolman California and Patrolman Arkansas and so on, and now David decided that that was why they had different colored uniforms.

Just as the states were in different colors on the map so the patrolmen of the Living Map from the various states were in different colors.

Four somewhat bigger patrolmen came now and bowing low before David said:

"You're to sit at the head of the table "

The table was covered with all kinds of food. It seemed as though David had never seen so much food and that pleased him for he was quite bungry. As each patrolman had seated himself. he had put something good to eat upon the table.

It had been some time since David had last eaten-and just shortly before he had left home he had not been able to get at that cookie jar. He won dered what the cook was thinking

He'd be able to tell her something about a good dinner.

"Has everyone brought something?" asked the patrol gentleman who sat at David's right. He seemed to be a kind of master of ceremonies.

"Everyone has," they shouted. "I haven't," said David. "You're the guest of honor," he was told, and all the others looked at him and shouted: "Three cheers for the guest of

For the making of juvenile palama costumes shantung is proving a most adaptable material. It has so many arguments in its favor, first among which is the fact of its perfect laundering qualities. Then too the lovely colors of shantung fit charmingly into the happy scenes of the lilliputian world.

Shantung in a delightfully cool-look ing light green was the choice of the designer who styled the attractive and very practical suit illustrated. Borderings of white shantung make a pretty trimming. A unique feature is the group of tucks down the front, the blouse buttoning at the shoulders. In all children's style displays nowadays particular attention is called to pajama fashions. Just now the sories, especially white millinery as an accent for black costumes, makes way for a program of perfectly charming berets styled of white velvet. These are manipulated in every conceivable way. A favorite type has a long shoulder drape, as shown first in the group below. Wide white velvet ribbon works out very successfully for models of this type. Frequently the piece-velvet is shirred, and being thin and dainty as chiffon, the effect is all that one can wish for

A new fall inspiration is the white beret worn with the very chic neck ruches pleated of white maline or starched chiffon. Add to this ultra combination white gloves and white purse and the black frock or ensem ble is set off to perfection.

SCENIC PLAYGROUNDS OF AMERICA

By G. M. KILBOURN Creek That Flows to Both

Oceans A GOOD many scenario writers, probably, have had Old Jim Bridger in the movies already, as "atmosphere" for their western thrillers. But some day a drama both entertaining and powerful will be built around Old Jim as a principal figure-and the "theme song" of the picture, if the theme song habit still lives, will be something like, "Well, I'll Be Darned!" Jim Bridger probably ejaculated that phrase or some more picturesque equivalent as often as any man who ever fived. He was credited by many of his contemporaries with having the most imaginative tongue that ever talked; but if men could not believe Jim's tongue, it was mostly Mother Nature's fault, because there was many a moment when the old trapper could scarcely believe his own eyes, either. Born in Richmond. Va., in 1804. Bridger wandered out to the Rockies so early that at thirty years of age he was already "the Old Man of the Mountains," and with the possible exception of the greatest American question-asker, Benjamin Franklin, probably no man in our national history has been the discoverer of as many interesting and amazing facts as was Jim Bridger. He discovered Bridger pass and the Great Salt lake, built the historic Fort Bridger on the Green river, and could make a map of any section of the West, according to the many who engaged him as a guide or scout, with a piece of charcoal and a buffalo skin. Probably only a few rangers today know the Yellowstone region as thoroughly as Jim Bridger did eighty or ninety years ago; but he told the truth with such dramatic exaggeration that the world would heed neither truth nor fiction from

One of the discoveries which must have made Old Jim scratch his eyes the longest, however, came when he high on the plateau in western Wyoming. Jim was approaching the continental divide at a point just south of the present Yellowstone National park boundary; but the creek, which should have dwindled away to noth ing at all as he neared the divide remained just as energetic a young torrent as ever. Finally it turned sly-, into the woods to the north, and the old scout thought he saw the whole story-a steep wooded canyon in a towering mountain to the north, But as he stalked through the trees there was a sudden babble of rushing water on the other side of him, too. Sufferin' cats, this creek was twins! For there, right in front of him, the creek started down across a little delta of rock and split in two, as if to just go around a little island. But Jim was standing on that island, and he hadn't crossed any water getting on it. Then the truth dawned on him. This creek ran to both oceans; the island, instead of being a little one, got wider and wider, finally reaching from the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean!

Jim had discovered Two-Ocean pass. Hall of Two-Ocean creek flows into the Missouri river via the Yellowstone, and the other half into the Columbia through the Snake. People thought the story that the oceans meet-in Wyoming!-just another one of "Old Jim Bridger's lies," but fortunately the old scout lived until 1881, long enough to have this as well as the Yellowstone geyser facts confirmed by abundant authority, and to be honored with profuse apologies from his former doubters. Two-Ocean pass is in the heart of the dude ranch country, and is visited by summer vacationists as part of a seven-day horse trip from Brooks Lake, Wyo. (reached via the Lander gateway, from the Chicago and North Western railway) to Lewis lake within the park. It may also be reached from Moran, Wyo., in the Teton country. The pass may be annexed to the park in the near future if a recent proposal to include the drainage area of the upper Yellowstone, now barely excluded, finds favor.

THE STORY

man calling himself Mazaroff as A traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Shella Merchison. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Merchison. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disapand tells her of Mazzroff's disappearance. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Bownas. Mazaroff's nurdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. A gun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murgun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murder. Evidence at the inquest proves Mazaroff was Merchison. His will leaves all to Holt. Herman Kloop, close friend of Mazaroff, is in London. From him it is learned that Mazaroff possessed two remarkable diamonds, which he had offered for sale to Lord and Lady Locke. Locke which he had offered for sale to Lord and Lady Loeke. Loeke says Mazaroff had one of the stones and his agent, Armintrade, the other. Miss Merchison ar-rives at Holt's rooms with the missing will which she had stol-en from her mother.

"Mervyn!" she whispered. "Par-

alave! Gone in-there!" "Parslave!" I exclaimed. "The man missing from Marrasdale? Impossi-

"I tell you Parslave has just gone into that shop-the tobacco shop! Parslave is in that shop! Come back!" "You're certain?" I said.

"Dead certain! Parslave is in there! Watch for him-let me stand in this shop door." "He'll know you?"

"Of course! If he comes this way, I'll slip into this shop and buy something-anything. If he goes the other -follow. Good Heavens !- what is he doing here !- in London?"

It was a drapery establishment by which we were standing, with a deep doorway-Shella slipped within its shelter; I, half-hidden, kept an eye on the tobacconist's door. And presently out came a tall, wiry fellow, obviously a countryman, bronzed in cheek and neck; he turned along the pavement, away from us.

Shella came out of the doorway and glanced down the street.

"That's Parslave!" she said. "But I knew it was. What next?"

"We must follow him," I answered. "No matter where he goes, I'm going to track him. Look here !- I'll keep a little way behind him; you keep a little way behind me."

So we began our chase of this man who had disappeared from Birnside on the night of Mazaroff's murder, and for whom the police had already instituted a hue-and-cry.

Parslave went slowly away in front. and just as slowly Shella sauntered after me in the rear. He was an easy man to follow, and it needed little watchfulness on my part to see that he had not the ghost of an idea that he was being followed.

He turned to his right sharply, into Praed street, crossed the roadway, and a little further along the other side, turned again. Sauntering after him, at a considerable distance, I saw him enter the side door of a house-a rather bigger, more pretentious house than those that flanked it. Then he disappeared. I hastened my steps, walked swiftly past the house he had entered, and on the side door, on a dirty, uncleaned brass plate read, to my utter amazement:

"Dr. Eccleshare Surgery Hours 9:30 to 11 a. m. 7 to 8:30 p. m."

I hurried back to the top of the etreet, where Sheila was already hanging about.

"Got him?" she asked. I touched her arm with one hand, pointing with the other to the house at the further end of the street.

You see that house down there?the one that stands out from the rest?" "I see It!"

"That's Eccleshare's! Eccleshare's. to you understand? Doctor Ecclechare. Eccleshare's—good Lord! And —Parslave's in there!"

Then silence fell upon us. We stood. matually questioning each other.

Sheila spoke first. "Eccleshare's bouse !- and Parslave in it? Then here's some devilry at work. Mervyn—what's to be done? Of course, I see how things are. Echare sent Parslave here—to hide!" But I had been thinking during that ent of silence—thinking fast. "There's only one thing to be done," said. "Look here—you do just what tell you. Get a taxicab. Go straight Maythorne's-103b Conduit streett that?-and tell him exactly what's anppened. Get him to come back here with you, and to bring his clerk, Cot-Meanwhile, I'll keep an eye Parslave and that house. Now-

She went off on the instant, without much as a word, and I turned to

And I had not watched long before Parslave came out again, and came my way, too. He was carrying a rush basket, such as servants use when they go shopping. I sauntered after him (on the opposite side). He went to a grocer's shop; he bought potatoes and couple of fine cauliflowers. that little domestic mission fulfilled, he went leisurely back to Doctor Eccleshare's. I pictured him and some housekeeper woman in there-Parslave would doubtless be peeling the potatoes, like any tame family man, and exchanging pleasant ta'k with the female presiding genius-and yonder in the Northumbrian wilds, three hundred miles away, the police were wanting him . . . on suspicion of mur-

I was laughing softly over this when a hand was laid on my arm. I looked sharply round-to see Maythorne's queer clerk, Cottingley. He jerked a thumb over his left shoulder, silently, and following the gesture I saw, a few yards away, Shella, Maythorne, and a strange man, somebody or other got up for the part of the confirmed loafer, the type that just hangs about, and hangs about.

"Guv'nor!" said Cottingley, as if introducing Maythorne. "Here!"

I went up to Maythorne and Shella, Cottingley at my heels. The loafer person made a slinking movement to the rear, and began to study the contents of a shop window. Maythorne gave me a glance that meant more things than I could realize

"Mervyn!" She Whispered. "Parslave! Gone In-There!"

"Now then, Holt," he said, plunging straight into business, "Miss Merchison's given us a description of this man Parslave-just you give us another, so that Cottingley and this other man of mine will know him to the last detail. Here-Johnson!"

The loafer individual slid close to us, like a shadow sifted by a moving light, and he kept his eyes on me without blinking while I rapidly but thoroughly detailed a description of

Cottingley nodded at Maythorne, nudged the loafer, and they turned away, with seeming utter indifference, Shella stared after them in obvious wonder.

Maythorne laughed and motioned us toward the end of Praed street.

"You two young people can go off duty now," he said. "Parslave is as safe as if we'd got him inside the jewel case at the Tower! Take my advice-go somewhere and have the day to yourselves. Leave all this to the only thing is that I want you, Holt, to look in at my office at six o'clock sharp this evening. Now-I'm off! Business!"

He was in the taxicab which he had | walk straight in! We'll excuse ourkept waiting and was being driven away before we could say anything. We both looked at each other and laughed.

"That's good advice of Maythorne's, anyhow," I said. "Let's follow it. Let's go somewhere where we can talk about-

"What?" she said as I hesitated. "Ourselves!" said I. "We've had enough of other people."

We had a delightful lunch in a delightful, old-fashioned inn; we spent the afternoon amongst the autumn-tinted lanes, and . . . But that, after all, has nothing to do with this story, though it has all to do with Sheila and myself. At half past five I took her back to her friend's flat, and then went on to Conduit street and Maythorne. He immediately waved a telegram at me.

"Here you are. Holt," he said. "More developments. A wire from your man,

There was no great amount of wording in Webster's telegram, but such words as were there conveyed a good deal of highly important information. This is what Webster said:

"Courthope, Armintrade, Eccleshare. Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone all left here for Carlisle by eight o'clock train this

I handed back the telegram without comment.

"Carlisle, of course, means London," Maythorne said. "The scene of operation's shifted, Holt!-we've got some of the chief actors close at hand." "Mrs. Elphinstone, of course, has come after her daughter," I suggested. "And the will," he answered. "Or to find out what her daughter's done with the will. Well-there are two men we'll have to have a pretty straight talk with tomorrow. We're going to have it out with Armintrade. After that, we're going to interview Eccleshare-and Parslave, possibly with a little police assistance, if need be. But tonight you and I are going to see Mrs. Elphinstone. We know where she's to be found-and we'll go now and find her."

"Where?" I asked, wondering if he had some further information.

"Can you doubt?" he answered with "She'll be found at Ashington mansions-where, I suppose, you've just left her daughter. I want to ask Mrs. Elphinstone a question or two. And I may as well tell you. Holt-she won't answer 'em! Tonight, at any rate.

"That I quite expect," said I. "Just so! But she'll answer 'em tomorrow-or next day-or the day after that," he said, with a significant glance. "The thing is, first, to put them to her." out of our cab some twenty or thirty yards short of Ashington mansions. Maythorne immediately nudged my

"What did I tell you?" he said.

"They're here, now ! In front of the main entrance to the flats a taxicab stood. And within it sat a woman-a tall, angular, elderly woman, dressed in somewhat rusty black, who stared straight in front of her until, attracted by our momentary halt and seeing our eyes turn in her direction, she gave us a quick side glance only to withdraw it sharply and to look ahead again, still more steadily. We passed on and entered the

"So have I" I answered "I saw her about the Woodcock-in fact, I took her for the cook. What can she be doing-here?"

"Mrs. Elphinstone will know," he said, "But-I shan't ask her that, now, Well-what's this Miss Apperley's number?" he went on, as we were whirled upwards, seven? Right! Now then, Holt-we

Early Handkerchiefs

The white handkerchief was considered bad form in ancient Rome, Al-though colored cloth squares were used for such purposes as headpieces, neckerchiefs and barber's accessories. the practice of "mopping" or "blowing" in public was frowned upon by the elite. Commentaries on Roman life cite the lack of the necessity to use a "nose" handkerchief as a desirable quality in a fiancee, and, conversely, the frequent need of a "sweat" hand-kerchief as a just cause for divorce.

selves to Miss Apperley afterward." I did as he bade me. Without ceremony as as much as a tap, I opened the door of Misa Apperley's sitting room, and Maythorne and I entered, abreast. We plunged into the middle of things. An acrimonius debate was already at its full height. Snella stood, indignant and defiant, by the center table. Mrs. Elphinstone was enthroned, obviously in a fine temper, in an elbow chair by the hearth. Elphinstone was perched on the edge

"Your daughter's in the right, Mrs. Elphinstone," he sald in cool, even accents. "It's up to you to give explanations. Now, come, Mrs. Elphinstone-how did you obtain possession of Mazaroff's will-which is now safe, let me tell you, safe-in Mr. Crole's strong room. Come?"

Elphinstone grouned-wearily. Mr. But Mrs. Elphinstone showed temper -and fight.

"How dare you speak to me-mellike that?" she demanded. "What right-

"My dear lady!" interrupted Maythorne, "Be calm, and don't be foolish. Think a little. Here is a very wealthy man murdered under most suspicious circumstances. He has his will in his pocket, with other papers, and with ever be improved upon for giving your valuables, and with money. He is not only murdered, but he is robbed of everything he has on him. What For fireplaces, sun parlors, vestibules. do you suppose the potice authorities will say to that, Mrs. Elphinstone? I'm asking you."

Mrs. Elphinstone looked at him haifwonderingly, as thoroughly obstinate and slightly stupid people will look at a questioner: I could see quite well that she was wondering how he dared to be so plain-spoken and unceremonious.

Mr. Elphinstone groaned once more -audibly. "Most distressing!" he mur-"Most-unpleasant. Really-I-I think, Marion, that-er-you know-if I were you-I-I think I should say how you got this-er document-I should-really." "Mrs. Elphinstone how she got it, and from whom," observed Maythorne. "That will was without doubt abstracted-stolen-from Mazaroff's pocket by the man who murdered him. And, Mr. Elphinstone, it is later discovered in Mrs. Elphinstone's keeping. How came it there?"

Mrs. Elphinstone suddenly gathered up her wraps and her umbrella and rose from her chair. "What right have you to ask me questions?" she demanded, facing Maythorne, "You're not a policeman, as far as I'm aware, and I don't know that you've any authority. I am going, and whoever wishes to see me will find me at Short's hotel. You'll find me there, Sheila-I snall not run after you again." "That's a useful thing to know, Mrs.

Elphinstone," said Maythorne, still pertinacious. "You will no doubt be called upon at Short's. This is a matter of murder! And whether you like it or not, Mrs. Elphinstone-or, as it should be, Merchison-I am going to know who murdered Mazaroff. If you know, you're already an accessory after the crime.'

Mrs. Elphinstone was at the door by this time, and her eyes were as hard as ever as she swept us all with a half contemptuous glance. "Are you coming, Malcolm? As for you, Sheila, if you want me again, you'll have to come to me. Otherwise-

She made a gesture which seemed to indicate that she washed her hands of her daughter and of everybody present, and without waiting for Mr. Elphinstone, she marched off down the

Mr. Elphinstone shook his headwearily and despondently. He looked round at all of us as if he wanted to speak, but no words came, and he presently turned and went after his wife. Maythorne closed the door, and glanced at us.

"You may think I was too explicitperhaps brutal-with Mrs. Elphin-stone," he said, "but I don't believe any of you understand. Up-to-Date Store Front an Asset to Merchant

"Clever and attractive arrangements of stores and store fronts is a decided irducement to the buying public and to being given careful attention by the progressive merchant when consider ing entering business of any nature," says a prominent Detroit merchant. Scores of such changes have taken place in Detroit's downtown property in the tast few years which resulted in surprisingly large fucreases in retail sales for the merchant.

"Property owners are aware of the fact that a small amount of money spent in aftering and improving a building means an added income from rentals and greatly increases his chances for keeping the building regularly occupied. The comparatively low cost of all lines of building mate rials and the surplus of labor available this season offer property owners of out-of date and rundown buildings the greatest opportunity in years to complete these needed improvements ut a very low cost.

"it is expected that the larger building and improvement programs now maturing with the government, utilities and large industrial manufacturers will soon bring both labor and building material cost back to a normal basis of supply and demand." -Detroit News.

Touch of Naturalness

in Use of Flagstones Oftendines we see an otherwise charming landscape or a beautiful garden and sense that something is missing. It seems to lack naturalness, Your landscape architect would spot the discord at once. He would prob ably suggest that you take out that artificial paving or flooring and substitute natural flagstone.

Nowadays we even have artificial sun langs yet there is no real substitute for natural sunshine in the scheme of nature. Nor will flagstone garden, your grounds, your landscape that elusive naturalness without which the general scheme falls flat.

For the interior, too, where the keynote is a rustic atmosphere or rough finish, flagstones are in excellent taste. for porch floors, architects nowadays specify flagstone. Nature has been free enough with her supplies of flagstone so that it is not a luxury.-Boston Herald.

Plants That Draw Birds

There are many plants which are especially attractive to birds. The planting of these may bring many varieties of birds to the home gar den. Mulberry trees, because of their fruit, bring robins, catbirds, swallows, warblers, thrushes, orioles and scarlet tanagers to the yard. The fall fruit of the mountain ash trees appeals to robins and thrushes. Warblers are sects usually found on them, and elms attract orioles for pesting. Cedars pro tect many birds from stormy weather. and the small chipping sparrow always selects an arbor vitae or spruce in which to ouild a nest. All garden herry bushes, as well as grapes and viburnums, attract many species of birds.

Cutting Fire Loss

The evils of fire-inviting construction have received tremendous publicity of late. Our annual fire loss i estimated at $500,000,000. Builders and owners are coming to realize that all construction should be truly fire resistant, whether built of wood fully protected or of incombustible mate-The superiority of metal lath and plaster protection for wood studs and joints has been recognized for years through general knowledge of the material and successful stopping of fire in many buildings,-Chicage

Hedge Possibilities

The trimmed hedge presents a formal architectural appearance, conse quently it is used extensively in place of low or even high walls, to bound the outdoor living room and also along terraces and as an element in the m: keup of a formal garden. The kind of plants used for hedges of this type varies with the locality and require ments as to height and density Hedges are used in gardens as a boun dary to the garden, or to bound Gower beds, and to parallel walks or divida spaces purely as an ornamental fea

Mr. and Mrs. T R. Moreman received word Sunday of the arrival of a new grandson, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glynn The Rainey Westberry family Shuits of Crowell. Meeting Mr. Moreman yesterday, he told us months absence, during which that his wife left at once for time Mr Westberry has been Crowell and hasn't even sent him a postal card. Which goes to show that a mere man is not as important always as he is sometimes.
