1395 BALES COTTON GINNED IN HEDLEY

Rain and mud the greater part of the past week crippled our cotton receipts, but at that the four local gins turned out a little over 300 bales from Wednesday noon last week to the same time
this week.

Hedley's ginnings to that date were 1395 bales.

We're hoping for continued favorable weather—and, of course, for better prices.

HEDLEY COTTON SHIPPED TO CO-OP ASSOCIATION

There have been a little better than one hundred bales of cotton shipped from Hedley to Texas Cotton Co-operative Association in less than 30 days, with some excellent grades consisting of good staple ranging from strict middling short to 1-32 inch, with an average grade 7-8 inch.
Some few have had some pretty short staple. So let's grow less short staple, and grow better staple cotton.

Yours for cooperation,
C. W. Bain.

ten issue—and it was from anyone usually so cool and collected, that the first excited exclamation broke:

"Good G—d! Mrs. Musgrave!" Mrs. Musgrave burst into tears and turned on Alison Murdoch, who stood close by, grim and defiant.

"You said it would be all right!"
she wailed reproachfully. "You swore to me that we were safe, this way.
You said and said again that there wasn't the least chance of 'em catching us—"

"Hold your tongue, you fool!"
snapped Alison Murdoch.

I stood by, sick, wondering, while Cottingley, under the detectives' supervision, unlocked the women's valises and turned out their contents. There was money there in a surprising quantity—bank notes that had been Maza-roff's, of course—and there were diamonds, and Mazaroff's personal properties. And in Alison Murdoch's valise there was a gold hunter watch, within which was an inscription to the effect that it was a present to James Bownas from his colleagues.

"There's always something that these people forget," remarked Maythorne, when, a quarter of an hour later, he and I were driving back to Short's hotel. "Or, rather, always some absolutely idiotic mistake they make. If Alison Murdoch hadn't thrown that will into the Elphin-stones' library, it would have been hard to get at the real truth about Mazaroff, and if she hadn't been so covetous and grasping that she couldn't refrain from carrying off that poor chap Bownas' presentation watch, we should probably never have convicted her of murdering him. However—there they both are! But . . . Mrs.
Musgrave!"

"Which of them shot Mazaroff?" I asked.

"Ah!" he replied, knowingly. "That's a stiff 'un, Holt! But—Mrs. Musgrave knows, and Mrs. Musgrave will tell!
She'll not face it out like the other."

We hurried upstairs as soon as we reached Short's hotel—to find Corkerdale and Manners talking to the doctor and Sheila in an alcove that opened off the corridor. Corkerdale was evidently still indiscreet; the doctor looked somewhat annoyed and Sheila was obviously angry.

"—you must see, doctor, that it's a question of duty," Corkerdale was saying as we came upon them. "I want some explanation from Mrs. Elphinstone—"

"There's no need now, Corkerdale," interrupted Manners, looking his best.

on Maythorne.

"Got 'em?" he exclaimed. "Who's got 'em?"

"Well, if you want to know, my clerk, Cottingley—smartest man in Europe at your game!—he got 'em.
With the help of your own people, to be sure. But the kudos is Cotting-ley's," replied Maythorne. "Top-hole capture!"

"And who'd he capture?" demanded
Corkerdale, almost incredulously.
"Who?"

Maythorne glanced at Sheila.
"Well," he replied, "there's no secret about it now. Two women! Alison Murdoch and Mrs. Musgrave. And there's no doubt about it, either—they had property belonging to Mazaroff and property belonging to Bownas on them—actually on them!"

Corkerdale turned to Manners, who

No Identical Chapters

No two chapters of the Bible are exactly alike, as so many people suppose.
There is very little difference, however, between the thirty-seventh chapter of II Kings. Other portions of the Bible are duplicated also, but there are no two entire chapters that are the same.—Pathfinder Magazine.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Philip La Follette Defeats Governor Kohler in the Wisconsin Primaries.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHAT'S in a name? A great deal, up in Wisconsin, if the name happens to be La Follette. Philip F., second son of the founder of the dynasty and brother of Robert who holds the senatorial seat the father held for years, decided he wanted to be governor of the Badger state, so the Republicans in their primary refused to renominate Walter J. Kohler and gave the nomination to young Philip by a majority of about 110,000. Mr. Kohler has been admittedly an excellent chief executive and as a large employer of labor he is notably philanthropic; but he is a moderate conservative, is quite wealthy, and his name is not La Follette.

Politicians in Wisconsin held that, besides the great drawing power of the family name, a big factor in the La Follette landslide was the drive made for the factory vote, for Philip and his campaigners laid particular stress on unemployment, bringing in the economic situation in the country generally. In his factories at the town that bears his name Mr. Kohler has kept his full forces at work on full time throughout the period of depression, but Philip made capital out of the fact that Kohler in 1923 campaigned on the Hoover and prosperity keynote. The young man seems to have inherited much of his father's ability as a political orator and the labor vote went to him in imposing numbers. He carried 63 of the 71 counties, and the La Follette group nominated congressional candidates in nine of the eleven districts, gaining one seat.

La Follette is opposed by Charles E. Hammersley, Democratic nominee, but in Wisconsin Republican nomination is considered equivalent to election.

RESULTS of primaries and conventions in other states were evidently influenced by the unfavorable economic and employment conditions, the new tariff law and dissatisfaction of the farmers with the doings of the federal farm board. As for the prohibition question, the dregs had some chances to cheer, though leaders of the wets thought Tuesday was "really a very damp day." In Massachusetts William M. Butler, dry, obtained the Republican senatorial nomination, defeating Eben S. Draper, a wet; and the Democrats put up Marcus A. Coolidge, wet, for the senate. Delaware Democrats nominated Thomas F. Bayard, wet, to oppose Senator Daniel O. Hastings, renominated by the Republicans. The Republicans of Connecticut chose Lieut. Gov. E. E. Rogers, a dry, as their candidate for governor and adopted a platform calling for restoration of liquor control to the states. In November Mr. Rogers will be opposed by Dr. Wilbur L. Cross, the wet Democratic nominee.

Wets in the Republican party in New York didn't do so well as they had expected in the congressional primaries, but they did score some notable victories, and it was certain there would be a hot fight over the liquor question in the impending state convention. United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, leading possibility for the gubernatorial nomination, created something of a sensation by resigning his office and declaring himself in favor of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Prohibition leaders said if he were nominated the state Republican dry vote would "just stay at home" on election day. The liquor question did not enter into the Democratic primary contests in the Empire state.

SENATOR NYE's committee on campaign expenditures wound up its hearings in Chicago with several hectic sessions in the course of which the chairman denied flatly that the committee or its agents were in any way responsible for the tapping of Mrs. Bush Hanna McCormick's telephone wires or for other espionage which she charges to their account. He therefore refused to listen formally to her accusations. However, photographs showing the wire tapping were shown the committee by T. B. Thompson, publisher of a Rockford newspaper which Mrs. McCormick controls, and he also managed to get into the record the charge that this was the work of the committee or its investigators, coupled with the warning that the incident would be kept in the public mind.

PRESIDENT HOOVER named three more men to be members of the new tariff board. They are Prof. John Lee Coulter of North Dakota, at present chief economist of the tariff commission, and E. B. Crossard, chairman of the outgoing board, Republicans; and Alfred P. Dennis of Maryland, Democrat.

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi indicated that the Democrats would oppose confirmation of all three, as well as of Henry P. Fletcher, previously appointed chairman of the commission. He had nothing to say against Thomas Walker Page of Virginia, Democrat, also named some time ago.

SECRETARY of the Interior Wilbur went out to Nevada and formally inaugurated work on the $165,000,000 Boulder dam by driving a silver spike into a tie of the railroad that will be used to haul material. As he wielded the sledge he said: "I have the honor to name this dam after a great engineer, who really started this greatest project of all time—the Hoover dam." Officials from six Colorado river basin states—Nevada, California, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, and Wyoming—attended the ceremony.

GERMANY, and with it all the world, was started by the remarkable victory won in the parliamentary elections by the so-called Fascists, the reactionaries led by Adolf Hitler who organized the Bavarian "putsch" in 1923. When the votes were counted it was found that in the new reichstag of 576 deputies the Hitlerites had captured 107 seats, making them second only to the Socialists with 143. The Fascists had announced they favored a stern dictatorship, and many of them are really monarchists. For this reason it was suggested they might merge with Dr. Alfred Hugenberg's Nationalist party. Such a coalition would have 148 seats and could claim the task of forming a new ministry.

The present cabinet unanimously decided that Chancellor Brüning should keep office and present his program to the new reichstag which convenes on October 13. Brüning's Centrist party has only 68 seats and must rely on help from the Socialists and some of the many minor parties. President Von Hindenburg doesn't wish to let the Socialists form a cabinet. The Fascists announced they would adopt only legal means of obtaining places in the government.

There is no expectation of a revolutionary change in German foreign policy, but France was disturbed by the Fascist victory and Italy was somewhat elated. The French nationalists foresaw the end of the Locarno pact and of Briand's policy of conciliation with Germany. The Italians felt strengthened in their military and other disputes with France, and it was admitted generally that the result of the German elections might retard the disarmament parleys and prolong the unsettled condition in Europe.

GREAT BRITAIN has announced that on October 1 she will return the city and port of Weihaiwei to Chinese jurisdiction. Weihaiwei is in northeastern Shantung. It consists of Likung Island, a few uninhabited islets, and extensive mainland territory, the whole area being 285 square miles.

Before the China-Japan war of 1894-1895 Weihaiwei was a fortified naval port. The Japanese captured Weihaiwei and held the district until peace terms were arranged. In 1898 after Russia had seized Port Arthur Great Britain obtained a lease of Weihaiwei and adjacent territory "for so long a period as Port Arthur shall remain in the occupation of Russia." The Chinese and British governments have reached an agreement

"This New Home Comfort Rate Makes Electric Refrigeration Even Cheaper"

"You've more than likely wanted one of the modern Electric Refrigerators but have hesitated because of operating costs. Let me explain how cheaply you can use electric refrigeration under the schedule of the new Home Comfort rate.

"The average five-room house without an electric refrigerator, electric range, or water heater uses most of the service included on the initial and second rates, so you would simply connect the electric refrigerator on the lighting circuit, use the one meter, and practically all of the additional service for refrigerator or other use would be recorded on the new low rate of 4c per kilowatt-hour—3c where service is also used for heating or cooking. This means that you could use an electric refrigerator at about one-third the initial rate.

"Many other appliances will be just as economical to operate. I'm going to explain some more for you next week."

And Remember—You Can Make Your Own Average Rate

Initial rate 13c
2nd rate 7c

COLUMBUS AND THE EGG

COLUMBUS LEAVES SPAIN

CROSSING THE OCEAN

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS is one of the few names in our school book histories which every American remembers. Along with that name he remembers the date, 1492, and the fact that in that year this man "discovered America." From the information gleaned in those school histories, too, he has a somewhat hazy impression that Columbus was a romantic adventurer who braved the terrors of the unknown which, before his time, had kept lesser men from venturing far out in the Atlantic ocean, and who finally achieved the success due such a dauntless soul.

But how many Americans really know anything about Columbus, the man, or what the sum total of his career actually was? As the day approaches for our celebration of his discovery of America (October 12), it is worthy of note that a new biographer has "discovered" Columbus for us—at least, this biographer presents the famous navigator in a new light. He is a German, Jacob Wasserman, and the result of his 20 years' study of the career of Christopher Columbus is a book, published recently by Little, Brown and Company under the title of "Columbus—Don Quixote of the Seas." If, as one reviewer has declared, "he probably has come as near the real Columbus as is possible with the material available," then the school book idea of this hero in American history needs to be revised.

Instead of being the romantic adventurer, such as we have thought him, Columbus stands out in this study as an impractical dreamer, with little sense of reality and, except when inspired by his one big idea, pitifully weak, a man who frittered away his opportunities by his continual search for gold and who failed to live up to the promise shown by his single great achievement for which he is remembered. In short, he was a man who figuratively "tilted with windmills" throughout his life—hence the characterization of "Don Quixote of the Seas."

"A certain mystery—almost suspicion—hovers around the figure of Columbus from the very beginning," says Wasserman in the first chapter of his book. "Everything is disputed—his character, his achievement, his development, the events of his life, and his origin. Seven towns in Genoese territory contend for the honor of having housed his cradle; Corsica and France have also made similar claims. It may be assumed with tolerable certainty that his father was a poor weaver, although he himself tried to suppress this fact. Such humble origin seemed to him a handicap, for in the days of his glory he used to talk of his noble ancestors. 'I am not the first of my family,' he would assert, 'who has sailed the seas as an admiral.' On this account some of his enemies called him a liar. Those who do so have little imagination, and a sorry notion of this deep, almost unfathomable nature. The course of his life bears much resemblance to a medieval legend. Over a period of 20 years, with certain intervals, I have been engaged on the study of his history; and every time I took it up again I had to ask myself: Is this authentic? Is not this merely legend? Are not such and such events apocryphal and these others no more than probable? He rose from nothing, a vagabond Italian adventurer, to become Grand Admiral of Spain, and viceroy of a mighty empire; he paid for seven years of glory and power by sudden ruin and such humiliation as few men have known; and after a feeble afterglow of fame, he died a lonely death, almost forgotten."

It is, as Wasserman says, truly "a strange destiny," and considering all the mystery that surrounds this man it is not remarkable, perhaps, that we should have many mistaken ideas about him. One mistake lies in the fact that we do not even spell nor pronounce his name correctly. For the man whom we know as Christopher Columbus was in reality Cristobal Colon. We do not know when he was born. It was some time between 1453 and 1460 and although he seems to have gone to sea at about the age of fourteen, virtually nothing is known of his early history. There is evidence to indicate that he wandered in many places, suffered many hardships and endured great poverty which made him prematurely old, for it is recorded that in his comparatively old, for it is recorded that in his comparatively young years he was already gray-haired. If we know very little about his early life it is mainly his own fault. For some reason he never revealed much about those years and Wasserman guesses that "Whenever he makes any statement about his past, it is always with the purpose of creating a hero-myth. He never knew who he was; he only knew who he wanted to be."

But it is in developing the theme of Columbus as a Don Quixote that Wasserman's study of the great navigator is most interesting. He does it, in part, in these words:

"What gives the figure of Columbus its Don Quixotic outline is not the central error that made him passionately deny until the day of his death that he had discovered a new continent and a new world; it is, putting the matter broadly, the orientation and constitution of his inner self—with all its shifts and pleadings, its prejudices, self-defenses, stipulations and extravagances. So much so that I cannot rid myself of the impression that Cervantes must have been influenced in his conception of his immortal knight by this actual prototype. It is not to be believed that so distinguished a genius created his world-famous figure in what may be described as a private literary caprice. The people of the nation have no less a part in such a magnificent vision than the immediate creator who brings it to the light of day. The centuries labor at it in silence until the chosen brain gives it valid form.

"His most remarkable trait, and the one most suggesting Don Quixote, is his pride, even arrogance, in his destiny—undeniably a force, but a very isolating force, the most fatal effect of which is to make its possessor misunderstood and to set him apart from life. Who could love a Don Quixote, except as a figure of romance; who could understand him except three hundred years after his death? I could not have passed a day with him; I should have found his observations intolerable, and everything he did repugnant. And yet, what an abiding prototype of humanity, of human folly, delusion and greatness! Here, his pride in his destiny or what he thought to be his destiny is based ultimately on a profound disposition of stern Spanish Catholic dogmatism, through which the character, as the essence of the national entity, appears greatly sublimated and softened and rich in cross lights."

Wasserman also points out the fact that it is a strange paradox that this man of uncommonly narrow mind was the man who was destined to enlarge the intellectual boundaries of his age and to revolutionize its world of ideas. Columbus had one big idea to which he held fanatically—something which we usually regard as the characteristic of a great man. Yet, the German biographer says "he bowed to every force from without, listened to every whisper and fell a victim to every fraud." Another paradox in the case of Columbus is the fact that although he was practical, astute and competent in making his plans, he showed himself "amateurish, short-sighted and capricious" in carrying them out.

Considering the hardships which he underwent in his youth and the disappointments which he suffered in later years, it is not strange, perhaps, that he should be, according to Wasserman, "more as a monk, crafty as a peasant, without a glimmer of humor—a character unrelieved by a single ray of cheerfulness. A man of sighs and lamentations, misery and gloom. But for all of that, his capacity for suffering and his patience in the bearing of it were prodigious and are strangely touching, like stories from the life of a saint. He learnt almost nothing, and knew almost everything that might serve his ends. He was sickly, and bore the most incredible hardships with iron endurance. He sprang from the lowest level of society, and had the manners of a grandee and the epistolary style of a Machiavelli. He knew no enjoyment of life, a home meant nothing to him, his wants were as few as those of a dervish, yet he died of worry because he could not get the forty thousand pesos owed him by the Colonial Administration."

It was this characteristic of utter confidence in himself, of unbending will—pure stubbornness, some might call it—which made it difficult for him to obtain aid for his great venture. But it was this characteristic also which finally won for him and enabled him to talk the monarchs of Spain into outfitting him for his voyage. "They began by chasing him away, calling him a rascal and a fool," Wasserman says. "Then, when he did not budge, they grew uneasy . . . and gave way, point by point, until at last they yielded everything he asked."

And his demands certainly weren't exactly modest! But they were what might be expected from such a character as Columbus. Consider this list: "The position of viceroy and governor-general over all the islands and continents that he might discover and occupy for Spain; appointment as admiral of the world-sea; a tenth part of all treasures—pearls, diamonds, gold, silver, spices, fruits and properties of all kinds that might be found in the lands; exclusive ownership of one-eighth of the lands to be discovered, including all revenues accruing therefrom; and, finally, the inheritance of all these rights, titles and dignities, by his successors, from first born to first born."

Just as the legends which have accumulated around Columbus over a period of four centuries have invested him with an aura of romance, so has there grown up a popular idea that the man who went with him was a hardy band of adventurers only slightly less daring than the leader himself. The fact is, however, that many of them went on this voyage as a lesser of two evils. When Columbus tried to recruit a crew for his enterprise he found how strong was the superstitious terror of the dark Atlantic among the sailors and other seafaring folk. It finally took a royal proclamation, stating that all criminal proceedings would be suspended against anyone who was willing to take service on the ships of the Captain-General Cristobal Colon, to get the necessary number of men.

"It seems unnecessary to say that men were found in plenty," writes Wasserman, "the most infamous company of ruffians presented themselves—highwaymen, pirates, escaped prisoners, galleys birds, thieves, murderers, coiners, branded convicts from the whole kingdom. Columbus had no choice; he enrolled them. (An odd reminder of the tragic-comic scene in which Don Quixote knocks the fetters off the galleys slaves, talks to them like a knight-errant and is laughed at for his pains.)"

With such a choice set of companions as these and in three frail little ships (judged by modern standards), the Genoese captain set forth upon his quixotic journey. The story of his voyage is a familiar one and Wasserman, depending as have previous biographers upon the writings of Columbus himself, gives much the same account as they have given. What his subsequent career after the discovery and the return to Spain was, has already been alluded to. A Don Quixote he lived, and a Don Quixote he died, according to Wasserman, who writes:

"When he felt his last hour was near, he sent for a notary and witnesses, intending to cancel the will of 1498 and draw up another. It begins with the Don Quixotic dictum: 'As I am making a free gift of India to the King and Queen . . .' He continues in the same style; it is the same fanfaronade, the same pompous grandiosity, the same extravagance, with which he had in former days dumfounded the prior of La Rabida. He was now addressing posterity; and posterity did the best thing it could do in the circumstances: it buried his words in silence and only kept his name and his deed in remembrance. On May 19 he gave his last instructions and on May 20 (1506), the eve of Ascension day, he died."

Community Building

Up-to-Date Community Looks to the Future

The planning of cities and towns is a growing civic activity. It was only a few years ago that the first real city plan was worked out. Now two-thirds of American cities and towns of more than 25,000 population have plan commissions working for the orderly development of these communities. There are 208 in all, according to a report issued by the Department of Commerce. But what is even more interesting, because it has in it an element of surprise, is that of towns of less than 25,000 population, ranging down to as low as 500, there are 483 that have either plan commissions or individual commissioners planning for the growth, the facilities and the attractiveness of their respective places.

While the great possibilities of courageous city planning will be realized in the large centers, some of the most interesting achievements doubtless will be in smaller places, where relatively more can be done with comparatively small outlay. There is increasing incentive for town improvement of towns, large and small. There are the merits of the improvements themselves, the aspiration and satisfaction of better standards of living. But there also is the element of competition, in business and in enterprise.—Kansas City Times.

Home's Value Added To by Proper Landscaping

When conditions make it possible for the family to buy or build a larger and better home, the probable resale value of the property is an important consideration either in obtaining financing for the new structure or in disposing of the old one, and the landscaping of the surrounding plot will in turn considerably affect the value of the property.

Trees, shrubbery and plantings in general give to the house background of traditional hominess that is difficult to obtain in any other way and have a never-ending influence upon those who live within the house as well as those who pass by.

Beauty in the development of the garden is a matter of starting right and then going on in the same direction. Beautiful gardens do not just happen. The placement of the background plantings plays an important part. Informed opinion from your florist and study of garden schemes in standard publications are easily accessible guides against mistakes.

Contractors' Responsibility

As a decisive move in a program launched to safeguard the public from the acts of irresponsible contractors, the bureau of contract information has been incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

Data on the manner in which each general contractor in the United States has fulfilled past contract obligations is to be gathered and utilized in an effort to eliminate conditions that have made for irresponsibility in the construction industry. This was announced by the Associated General Contractors of America and comes as the culmination of several years of debate about practices involved in the writing of surety bonds.

The undertaking is a venture in co-operation between surety companies and organized contractors, although it is independently organized as a fact-gathering and investigating agency.

Shingles Grow in Favor

The picturesqueness of wood shingles for walls and roofs appeals strongly to home builders who prefer the quaintness of the simpler colonial homes. Shingled roofs may be developed in soft colors that mellow with time. A pleasing effect may be had with a blend of two or more colors.

The roof is seen before any other part of the house; therefore, be sure you have chosen the most pleasing color scheme for it. This is next in importance to the kind and quality of roofing selected.

Highways and Cities

Trunk highways around cities, rather than through them, are seen as a solution of traffic congestion. More distributing routes, instead of excessive widening of existing roads, are prescribed by D. R. Lamson, engineer of the American Road Builders' association, after a national survey of traffic conditions. "Population centers are the nuclei of congestion. Traffic in large cities is making transportation by horse-driven trucks cheaper than by motor vehicles."

Trees Aid Brick Designs

Wooded settings are always desirable with the brick house. There is something especially attractive about the play of light and shadow on a brick facade, particularly when the sunlight comes stealing through the foliage, gilding here and there upon an unusually colorful brick.

Co-operation and Business

The right kind of co-operation among business men of a community can be an asset to both business and the community.—Lorain Journal.

Zoning Laws in 856 Cities

Early this year zoning ordinances were in effect in 856 cities and towns in the United States.

BAYER ASPIRIN is always SAFE BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

UNLESS you see the name Bayer and the word genuine on the package as pictured above you can never be sure that you are taking the genuine Bayer Aspirin that thousands of physicians prescribe in their daily practice.

The name Bayer means genuine Aspirin. It is your guarantee of purity—your protection against imitations. Millions of users have proved that it is safe.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin promptly relieves:

No harmful after-effects follow its use. It does not depress the heart.

Aspirin is the trade-mark of Bayer manufacture of monoaceticacidester of salicylic acid.

Outdoing Connecticut

The wooden nutmeg Yankee has been topped by a Detroit soap peddler. He sells 10 bars of pretty, pink soap for the amazing price of 25 cents. But the purchaser who puts the soap in the bathtub discovers in a very few minutes that the soap is only shell over a wooden core. Several North end apartment dwellers are seeking him with a cold look in their eyes and baseball bats in their hands.—Detroit News.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tests of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—no one mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescription product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

THE BARNYARD

"Gobbie, gobbie, gobbie," said the little turkeys. "This is the time of the year we begin to be well fed, for people are thinking that some fine holidays will come in a few months. "Hurrah for Thanksgiving Day and hurrah for Christmas Day! Gobbie, gobbie, gobbie."

"I wouldn't be so happy at the thought of being eaten," said Mrs. Goose in her shrill voice.

"We wouldn't expect you to be," said Mr. Turkey. "All the world knows you're a goose, and we can't expect you to know so much about great matters."

"Now don't be rude to Mrs. Goose," said Mr. Gander in a shrill voice. Both Mr. Gander and Mrs. Goose had very shrill voices.

"Ha, ha, gobbie, gobbie, gobbie, gobbie," laughed the turkeys. "We can't expect you to know so much about great matters such as food, or about any great matters. You're only a gander."

"Quite as fine to be a gander as it is to be a turkey," said Mr. Gander to Mrs. Goose, and she answered:

"Quite. In fact, it is better to be a gander than a turkey."

Just then old Billy Goat came along.

"What's all the shrieking about?" he asked. "Has there been a fuss of any sort?"

"Only an argument, only an argument, gobbie, gobbie, gobbie," said the turkeys.

"Only an argument," shrieked Mrs. Goose, and Mr. Goose added:

"Only an argument. We don't agree with each other—the turkeys have such strange ideas."

"Of course, as they are turkeys it may be all right, but from our way

"What's All the Shrieking About? He Asked."

of looking at it, it is certainly very queer."

"Grunt, grunt, grunt," said Porky Pig. "Let's enjoy life while we may. Let's enjoy our food and our barnyard and have a nice, lazy, eating time."

The other pigs gathered around and squealed and grunted that they felt the same way about it, and the turkeys and the geese laughed.

Perhaps, they decided, after a little while, the pigs were right.

And at this moment the farmer arrived with some food and they all had a splendid meal.

They didn't argue about the meal. They all agreed that it was good.

And after it was over they all went to sleep and had pleasant dreams—dreams of food!

They awoke feeling so refreshed and so happy and they did not argue again for quite awhile.

Subtracting Easy

The mind reader, who can tell your name by merely seeing your initials on a paper, has nothing on the person who is able to pull this clever subtraction stunt. Rarely can an audience tell how it is done, and when you work it they'll all think you have a magical mind.

Show the group you wish to play the stunt on how they must do their subtraction problem. Write a number on a chart or blackboard and underneath it the reverse of the number. It may be anything less than a thousand, but should have three digits. Should the reverse be larger than the first number, put it above. At any rate, subtract the smaller from the larger.

Then tell each in the group to take a different number, subtract the reverse and then tell you the last digit in the number, which is the answer. You will immediately be able to tell them the entire answer.

Here is the solution to the trick: When a reverse number is subtracted from its original the middle digit of the answer is always nine. The sum of the first and last digits also is nine. Given the last number, you can easily tell by subtracting what the first is. Try some numbers and you'll find it always works.

GAY YOUTHFUL BLACK FROCKS; STYLISH BLACK HOLDS ITS OWN

Youthful Black Frock.

THE gay black frock, but you say, "There is no such thing as a 'gay' black frock." Oh, yes there is, and here is a picture to prove it.

This youthful dress is of black faille silk and, having sleeves of a contrasting color, it is very "gay" and debonair. And that's the secret of the gay black frock—the splash of color which designers are adding via contrasting sleeves and other enlivening details.

Other modish black gowns "get gay" in that they take into themselves contrasting yokes patterned with all-over bead work, or else they add a collar-and-cuff set worked in turquoise blue, light green or pale pink beads. Just as often these beaded accessories are done in white, thus sounding the popular black-and-white note.

The matching scarf which adds so much to the attractiveness of the dress illustrated is a very significant style detail. The scarf neckline is accented not only in daytime frocks but evening gowns are graced very often with a "scarf to match."

As to this matter of novelty sleeves, there is no doubt as regards to designers having become sleeve-conscious to the extent that it is very often the sleeve that "makes" the gown. Sleeves of the peasant type, as employed in the fashioning of the gown illustrated, are especially cited in the fall style program. These full-below-the-elbow effects are interpreted in endless ways. Sometimes the lower portion of the sleeve is made of lace. Then again it is prettily beaded, or ing, stamps itself as distingue. In this instance the theme of black is carried out to a nicety, in that milady's hat is black, her exquisitely fine and supple kid shoes are black, likewise her gloves are black kid.

Women who have always had a fondness for black broadcloth will be interested in knowing that this smart-looking coat is made of this "classy" material. The haute couture of Paris declare a revival of black broadcloth, in that they are fashioning many of their smartest afternoon ensembles and dressy coats of this handsome and ever genteel fabric.

The sleeves for the coat pictured invite special comment, for sleeves hold the center of the stage in the realm of fashions of today. Especially true is this in regard to the new fall and winter coats, the sleeves of which are telling a story of thrilling adventure, especially in matters of lavish fur treatments, which are that novel as to be almost eccentric at times.

Most of the latest sleeves accent

A Costume in All-Black.

perhaps embroidered. There is no end to the elaboration of sleeves.

And if you are looking for more style details in the costume which the young woman in upper picture is wearing, please to observe her voguish black pumps trimmed with white. There's her wide-brimmed felt hat, too—a perfect gem in smartness. It is one of those youthful poke-bonnet shapes which has such an exceedingly high crown, it sets the hat way back on the head so as to show quite a bit of the hair.

The Stylish Black.

Of course the new colors are alluring, but their enchantment does not detract from the importance of stylish black. A costume in all-black, such as the smartly dressed woman in the lower picture is wear-the tendency of fur to travel up the sleeve as far away from the wrist as it can possibly go. The trend to get away from stereotyped cuff treatments is made obvious in almost every instance. The sleeve illustrated shows a manipulation of its fur trimming along the new "lines." See how it describes a flaring effect at the elbow, also giving a generously large aspect, and that is exactly what sleeves are this season—anything but small or tight fitting in appearance.

One even sees doorman sleeves and sleeves which call to mind the old-fashioned leg o' mutton types, and if not these, then sleeves which go below the elbow. As to the latter, often the full part below the elbow is made of flat fur with cloth for the top.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

A haze on the far horizon,
An infinite, tender sky,
The ripe, rich tints of the cornfield
And the wild geese sailing high:
And all over lowland and upland
The blaze of the goldenrod:
Some of us call it Nature,
And some of us call it—God.
—William Garruth.

TASTY DISHES

Sugar is not a new seasoning, for it has been used for years by foreign cooks to bring out or point-up flavors, rather than for its sweetening effect.

Tripe a la Creole.—Melt three tablespoonsful of butter, add three tablespoonsful each of chopped onions and green pepper, when well cooked add three tablespoonsful of flour, stir until smooth and add one and one-half cupfuls of strained tomatoes. Season and cook until smooth. Take one pound of tripe, cook until tender, add to the sauce and a teaspoonful of sugar. Simmer ten minutes, then serve.

Veal Dandy.—Cut two slices of fat salt pork into tiny strips, take one and one-half pounds of veal steak with bones removed. Into a frying pan put a little butter, add a pinch of sage, the veal and pork and season with pepper and salt; add a very little water and cook in a hot oven at first, then quite low. The pork should be cooked and disappeared by the time the veal is a rich color. A teaspoonful of sugar added to the dish will help in the flavor and color.

Meat Chowder.—Cut one pound of cheap cut of lamb into pieces. Melt two tablespoonsful of suet, add one onion cut into thin slices, stir and cook until softened, add one teaspoonful of sugar, one quart of boiling water, simmer five minutes, then add the lamb; boil five minutes, then simmer until tender. Cube four potatoes and add with salt and pepper and more water if needed. Cook until the potatoes are soft, then serve.

Tongue in Aspic.—Cook a beef tongue in boiling water until tender. Remove the skin and place the tongue in a saucepan with two onions, one stalk of celery, one blade of mace, one bunch of thyme, one bunch of parsley and one teaspoonful of sugar. Simmer for two hours. Remove the tongue and for each pint of liquor add one tablespoonful of gelatin that has been softened in a little cold water. Chill thoroughly and serve garnished with watercress.

Salad Dressing for Vegetables or Fruit.—Mix one teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one beaten egg, three-fourths of a cupful of mild vinegar or lemon juice and one small can of baby's milk. Mix but do not cook.

FALL DISHES

How tempting the peaches, pears and plums are at this season of the year! Now is the time to put on the shelves of the fruit closet many choice fruits for winter use. A few bottles of pectin to use when preparing jams, jellies and preserves that formerly took long cooking, now makes the work very light.

As long boiling destroys the fresh flavor of fruits and many of the most delicious have very little of the thickening property which we call pectin, the adding of the bottled pectin not only saves work in the heat but it adds to the amount of fruit, which formerly was lost in the boiling.

We all enjoy the fresh blueberries—here is a dish that will delight the palate:

Blueberry Jam.—If the blueberries are gone try huckleberries and any other berry that comes later in the fall. The canned fruit may be used, if one wishes a dish of jam for a special occasion. To four cupfuls of crushed berries add the juice of two lemons and the grated rind of one-half a lemon. Add eight cupfuls of sugar if the berries are fresh, and seven if they have been canned with sugar. Bring to a boil and add a bottle of pectin. Skim and pour quickly into glass jars or glasses.

Peach Ice Cream.—Warm two quarts of milk and dissolve four junket tablets in a tablespoonful of water, stir into the milk to which one cupful of sugar has been added, pour into the freezer can and let stand in a warm place until the mixture is thick. Add one pint of cream whipped, two teaspoonfuls of almond extract and crushed, sweetened peaches to make a pint. Freeze as usual. Serve with sliced, sweetened peaches on top.

Ripe Peach Jelly.—Cook peaches, well washed and pits removed, in one-half cupful of water. Using three cupfuls of pulp, simmer until soft, then drip through a jelly bag. Measure three cupfuls of juice, two and three-fourths pounds of sugar, and bring to a boil. At once add one bottle of pectin and boil one-half minute. Remove from the fire and let stand one minute, skim and pour into glasses. If peaches lack flavor, add a bit of almond extract and the juice of a lemon to the above amount.

Japanese Buddhist Sect to Pay Honor to Saint

A party of 19 priests of the Jodo sect of Buddhism recently left Tokyo for Mukden, Tientsin and Peiping, where they were to take part in ceremonies commemorating the twelve hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of St. Zendo, who is especially revered by the sect. St. Zendo was not the founder of the sect, but his writings in China had a great influence on the priests who started to worshiping according to the Jodo rituals in Japan.

At the same time Japan will observe the anniversary.

The Jodo sect has more followers than most other rites and the ceremonies will be very elaborate and picturesque. The headquarters of the sect are at the famous Chio-in temple in Kyoto, famous all over Japan and known abroad for its huge bell, which is the largest in the world that rings.

More than 500,000 pilgrims will visit the temple and $250,000 has been appropriated by the sect to cover expenses incidental to the celebration. The Jodo sect has been active in Japan for 750 years. It has 6,000,000 members, 30,000 priests and nearly 10,000 temples throughout the country.

"No repairs in 22 years," says home owner

"Visitors are delighted with the noiseless operation of my doors," says a home owner of Monongah, West Virginia. "The locks and hinges have been in active service 22 years, and during this time I haven't spent a cent for repairs. I've never used anything but 3-in-One Oil."

Many housewives who pride themselves on the spotless appearance of their homes are careless about the lubrication of hinges and locks. Try a few drops of 3-in-One Oil today and see how quickly it brings out rust, dirt and squeaks. For 3-in-One, a blend of animal, mineral and vegetable oils, is distinctly different from ordinary oil: it cleans and protects as well as lubricates.

For 25 years 3-in-One has been recognized as the best oil for sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, hinges and general household lubrication. Insist on 3-in-One Oil. At good stores everywhere, in 15c and 30c sizes. For your protection look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

Victorian Era Makes

No Appeal to Moderns

"Women nowadays, if our women novelists portray them truly, think that the old-fashioned or Victorian wife was an idiot. They think that the old-fashioned wife sacrificed herself to husband and family idiotically."

Cass Gilbert, New York architect, was talking about modern novels. He went on:

"According to modern novels, what we call a good wife would in reality be an idiot like Mrs. Jay."

"Mrs. Jay said to Mrs. Jay: 'What a naughty little boy your Jimmy is! Doesn't he know better than to keep striking you over the head with that heavy stick?'"

"Don't blame him," said Mrs. Jay, as she smiled and wiped the blood from her forehead. "Don't blame the little angel. He's only doing, bless his heart, what he sees his dear father do every day."—Detroit Free Press.

Men! Try the New Cuticura Shaving CREAM

A small amount on the brush quickly becomes a rich, creamy lather that remains in moist workable condition throughout the shave. Cuticura Shaving Cream contains the medicinal properties of Cuticura. It softens the beard, invigorates the skin and leaves it free from any tense, dry feeling.

Directions for a Quick Shampoo

Wet the hair thoroughly with quite warm water. Squeeze a small quantity of Cuticura Shaving Cream on to hair and with water work up a creamy lather, and shampoo. Rinse and repeat process. Finally rinse thoroughly. Women will find this method of shampooing quick and easy and the hair will be soft and silky.

GEO. C. HUTTO, Pastor
If you have missed the services
the last two Sundays on account of rain, we shall look for you next Sunday, hoping that it may be a pretty day.

Sunday school attendance was off to 107 last Sunday. Meet with us next Sunday at 9:45.

Preaching at 11 and 7:30 o'clock
by the pastor.

B. Y. P. U. meets at 6:30.

Everyone cordially invited to attend our services. Come praying that the Lord may give us a great day.

There are only five weeks until the meeting of the Annual Conference, which will mark the end of the conference year. Let us make the most of these weeks by every member of the church doing his or her best. During these days of depression let no one absent themselves from the Church because of financial embarrassment. Our Church wants to mean more to our people now when they need the Church most.
Don't let anyone feel that because you have nothing to pay you should stay away from the services. Your presence is needed by the Church, and you need that which you will derive from the services. So let us swell the attendance at all the services by everyone being in their places, loyally and prayerfully to worship our God.

Court is to convene at Clarendon
next Monday, Oct. 18, Judge A.
J. Firas presiding. District Attorney Mahan prosecuting.

There are some twenty cases
on the criminal docket for trial, prominent among which are burglary charges against Bert Hall and Joe Danwoody, who were implicated in the killing of J. H.
Richey, Hedley officer. Most of the other cases involve alleged liquor violations and forgery.

The usual quota of civil cases and suits for divorce will come before the court during the coming session.

W. M. AUX CELEBRATES
PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY

Monday, Sept. 29th, the W. M.
Auxiliary of Hedley met with Mrs. Vinyard to honor our beloved President Mrs. G. L. Armstrong's birthday. Each member took a dish and a lovely dinner was the result. The center of attraction at the table was a very beautiful angel food cake covered with 55 pink candles. After the guests were seated, a box was handed the astonished president which contained gifts from the membership and Mrs. E. B.
Adams. Among the gifts was a silk dress which Mrs. J. B.
Pickett cut and made that afternoon. Our women mixed work with pleasure, as they put in and tacked three comforts. One was presented to the pastor's wife, who was as much surprised as Mrs. Armstrong.

We appreciated the lovely dinner, the home, the spirit of love and fellowship, and felt that it is "more blessed to give than to receive." Those present were Mes. Armstrong, Bain, Webb,
Adams, G. L. Johnson, Swinney,
Noel, Kendall, Masterson, Lowry,
Landreth, Howard, Alexander, Koeninger, Whitfield, Watt and Pickett. May we enjoy many more such pleasant days.
