THE DIPLOMATIC DEALER said to the lady who brought back some oranges she claimed were no good: "My dear lady, you shouldn't complain. You have only half a dozen, while I've got a whole window full of the blamed things."

It's all right to be diplomatic, but it is better still to be HONEST.

these grounds that we ask your patronage.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THREE times I've turned upon my tail. And crossed my toes, but still I fail To win from Luck my simple wish For just one single little fish.

As he said this, Buster Bear sat and stared into the Laughing Brook with wrinkled brows. He had set out that morning to get fish for breakfast, and because he had set his heart on fish, nothing else would do. You know, Buster Bear is sometimes what is called pig-headed—that is, he starts to do a thing, and no matter what happens he persists in trying to do it. He had started out for fish that morning, and fish he would have or else go hungry. Now, everybody knows that it is of no use to try to drink from an empty pail, and every fisherman knows that it is of no use to fish when the fish have gone away from their favorite places. Buster Bear knew that for some unknown reason there were no trout in the little shallow pools where he does his fishing. Of course, he didn't know he looked around first to make sure that no one would see him. And, of course, his luck didn't change. You see, there isn't any such thing as that kind of luck. No matter what happens there is a cause, a reason for it. The reason Buster Bear saw no fish that fine morning was that there were no fish to see. They had all gone down to the Smiling Pool because the water there was deeper and cooler than in the Laughing Brook. You see, the weather had been so hot for so long that the Laughing Brook was growing smaller and smaller, and so the fish had moved down to the Smiling Pool for comfort and safety. If Buster had used his common sense he would have known this and given up all thought of fish.

At last he sat down in a little open place close by the Laughing Brook and not far from where Plunger the Fish Hawk had built his nest. Buster sat down to rest and cool off. He had not been there long when he heard voices, harsh, screaming voices. They came from high up in the air. Buster tipped his head back and looked up. There he saw Plunger the Fish Hawk and King Eagle, and they were quarreling. Plunger was dodging this way and that way, now up, now down, now to this side and now to that. And clutched in Plunger's claws was a great, big, fat fish. At the sight of that fish it seemed to Buster that his stomach just flopped right over. Yes sir, that is the way it seemed. Water began to trickle from the corners of his mouth, water of pure longing. Plunger was high in the air, and it that fish was big enough for him to see at that distance it must be very, very much bigger than any fish Buster had ever caught in the Laughing Brook. Buster could not keep his greedy little eyes off it. He knew by what he saw that King Eagle was trying to make Plunger give up that fish.

Buster Tipped His Head Back and Looked Up.

this when he started out that morning, but it didn't take him a great while to find it out. Not so much as a glimpse of a fin or tail had Buster had, and he had followed the Laughing Brook almost to the place where it leaves the Green Forest on its way to the Smiling Pool in the Green Meadows.

And just because he couldn't have fish, Buster wanted fish more than anything else in the world. People are that way sometimes. So Buster persisted in wandering along the Laughing Brook, hoping that luck would turn. Fishermen, you know, are great believers in luck, and Buster is like the rest. That is why he said that foolish little verse at the beginning of this story. Of course, he knew it was all foolishness to turn around three times and to cross his toes, and when he did these things

Botanist at Four

Although he is only four years old little Clare Roeder, Jr., of Arvada, Colo., knows the botanical names of more than 500 uncommon plants and can make difficult distinctions at a glance. He is already experimenting with grafting and is particularly interested in hybrid rose and geranium species. The little boy, who has a collection of plants which rivals that of many of the nation's foremost plant specialists, is hailed as the Luther Burbank of the future.

COOKING FOR INVALIDS

NEARLY every home maker at some time in her life finds it necessary to cook for and prepare food for a convalescent who cannot eat the food prepared for the family.

The returning strength and good health of the invalid depends in a large measure on the food which he eats and assimilates. His appetite should be tempted.

Custard should be velvety as cream if it is to be served; one that is overcooked and separated into whey should be eaten by some other member of the family and a fresh one prepared for the one who is ill.

For the person who is ill in bed, the meal time should be the joyous time of the day, an oasis in the monotony of the long day.

It is worth while to bring to bear upon this matter all the artistic ingenuity one possesses, as variety and element of surprise and making the tray and all food appealing to the eye, are most important.

Never serve an invalid pie or pudding which is rich and not easy of digestion. Pastry is for those who are well and able to digest it. One may purchase small cartons of junket tablets, of various flavors or the plain ones. Add, after dissolving in a tablespoonful of water to milk that has been warmed, flavor and sweeten and pour into a pretty cup or sherbet glass to stiffen. If cream is allowed, a spoonful will top the junket when served. Have all such foods nicely chilled and garnished.

Gray and Red Join in New Spring Ensemble

A new spring ensemble features a gray and garnet red printed silk dress with a gray fox collar and a long, straight coat of garnet Lyons velvet. The fur collar on the frock is worn outside the coat, which is collarless.

Lace Hosiery Starred

Hosiery shades are remaining neutral despite the war in the Orient, where the silk worms live. Silk meshes are generally accepted for sports and country wear, and the new cobwebby, gossamer meshes for evening. Lace is starred at the moment, however.

A LITTLE WHILE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A LONG, long time is soon a little while. And every footstep makes a shorter mile. If we would think in days instead of years, Yes, even minutes as each day appears. No time would then be long, or journey far. Whatever are our days, how few they are!

So step by step I try to walk my way. Accept my sorrow, and with joy be gay. Each day is shorter as the sun ascends. And never yet a journey but it ends. I try to live each minute more and more. Climb hills when I come to them, not before.

And so each mile has roses here and there; Then, if the journey's long, I do not care. And so each minute has some beauty in. Some treasure that I need not win. Wait not for tardy time some gift to give— How much there is in life if life we live!

Science and Crime Playing at War What is Education? It's the Public's Fault

Makers of big guns and armor plate, have long competed, armor plate men trying to develop steel that no bullet can penetrate; gunmakers perfecting guns able to penetrate anything.

A similar conflict for supremacy exists now between crime and science with crime, as yet, far ahead. Science's latest hope is a device of tubes and cells that will photograph a burglar, sounding an alarm at the police station and gassing the burglar as well, besides turning on bright lights the moment he crosses an "invisible ray." Burglars will cut off the invisible ray, as they now cut telephone wires and poison watchdogs. The only way to discourage crime is to make it more dangerous and less profitable. Our present conditions make it highly profitable and not dangerous.

In New York, for instance, a criminal in a holdup, in the absence of police, knows that he is the only armed man present. Think of that advantage.

One hundred and four surface ships, including ten battleships, have completed maneuvers off the Pacific coast, the roar of the big guns rattling dishes in Pasadena, back of Los Angeles.

Two hundred aircraft were included in the mock warfare, thank heaven. Had the number been two thousand it would have been about half enough.

The public, the President, the war and navy secretaries do not get all the facts concerning war practice.

In recent mock warfare off Hawaii, twenty-five transports loaded with troops were supposed to be conveyed by ten fighting ships and attacked by "innumerable aircraft." Officially it was reported that had the war been real the loss of men killed by bombardment on the transports would have been seven thousand, not a high percentage. Officers on their return told friends that had it been real war every transport would have been sunk, all on board lost and many, if not all the conveying warships would have been sunk as well.

What is education? The baseball season begins, and fifty million Americans can tell you about "the Browns, White Sox, Indians, Cardinals, Yankees, Giants," and "Lefty" Grove, Wesley Farrell, "Lefty" Gomez, "Long George" Kelly, Hafey, Grimes and all the others.

Of the same fifty millions, few could tell you anything about Giordano

Bruno, Arkwright, Archimedes, Ser-vetus, Tamerlane, Harvey, to say nothing of Thales, Pythagoras or the big three, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle.

Yet, incredible as it may sound to "rooters for the Cubs," any one of the last-named twelve will outlive in men's memories all the baseball players and clubs.

The public learns from Mr. Whitney, head of New York's Stock exchange, that the poor, innocent bears have nothing to do with our troubles.

The public itself is responsible. It should not have gambled so wildly. That recalls the saloonkeeper's remark pointing to the fallen drunkard: "He drank it, I didn't. Why blame me?"

A spokesman for the federal reserve says the bank will fight "deflation," which means falling prices, by heavy buying of government securities.

Already the federal reserve has bought two hundred and fifty millions of the nation's securities, and the buying may continue until it reaches a billion.

This will give member banks a chance to change government securities for cash. If they put it in circulation, that will help. If they sit on it, to increase their "liquidity," that will be not so very good.

Joseph Leiter of Chicago is dead. His father, a great merchant, helped, with money inherited by his beautiful daughter, Mary, to make life pleasant for the late Lord Curzon and his British descendants.

Leiter, a picturesque figure, spent his life, like many other rich men's sons, fighting, gambling, developing fantastic schemes.

He planned a one million egg incubator in a Chicago office building.

In his last days, Leiter from a wheel chair watched his horses racing at New Orleans. If he came back, he would probably live the same life again.

He possessed great power, made useless by inherited money.

Colonel Lindbergh, swindled out of fifty thousand dollars by kidnapers, or perhaps by sharpers that successfully posed as the kidnapers, waited near a graveyard while, in the cemetery, an old man paid the money. The child was to be delivered on board a certain yacht. Colonel Lindbergh, who flew to the appointed place, and found no yacht and no child, has said, "I will not pay another penny in ransom until the child has been placed in my arms."

When the present search is ended, it is predicted by his friends, that Colonel Lindbergh will become leader of a movement to abate the present highly organized crime menace. (© 1932, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.) (WNU Service)

JUNIORS HONOR SENIOR CLASS WITH BANQUET

One of the loveliest affairs of the year marked the social climax of the two leading classes Friday evening, April 29, when the Juniors honored the Seniors with a banquet. The features of the banquet were of an extraordinary nature. The affair was planned by Mrs. W. C. Payne, the Junior Sponsor. The tables were decorated with moons and stars, hung overhead, concealing the fortunes of the Seniors.

A very interesting program consisted of:
Welcome Address, Earl Tollett, Reading, Miss Reeves.
Class History, Maurine Goin.
Duet, Misses Maxwell and Moreman
"Hitch Your Wagon to a Star" by Supt Maxwell
Tast to Seniors, Gene Youree.
Response, Speck Armstrong.
Class Will, Hazel Stewart

The menu consisted of: Morning Star (orange cup), Big Bear (chicken and dressing), Milky Way (creamed potatoes), Mars (peas), Orion's Belt (lover leaf roll), Saturn (sard), North Star (ice cream), Venus (star shaped cake), Big Dipper (ice tea), and Mints

The programs and menu were printed on star shaped folders, while the place cards were suggestive of graduation. These were hand made by Junior girls and were very attractive.

Those enjoying the affair were: Speck Armstrong, Lucile Carter, Sybil Meek, Ruth Wells, Blaine Doherty, Thelma Burdine, Opal Heath, Margaret Doyle, Zelma Johnson, Wanda Hill, Landon Duggins, Fred Tidwell, Roberta Mann, Mavis White, Hazel Stewart, Doris Tinsley, Helen M. ## Senate to Rewrite Revenue Bill—Lindberghs Still Hope Despite Double-Crossing—April Market Crash Cost Six Billion Dollars.

THE senate will rewrite the billion-dollar tax bill passed by the house, Chairman Reed Smoot of the senate finance committee announced. After a long delay in getting down to business on the budget balancing measure, action at last appears in sight.

Many of the soak-the-rich provisions of the tax bill may be eliminated in the upper house's revision.

Smoot's announcement followed a bitter partisan debate in the finance committee.

For nearly two hours, Secretary of the Treasury Mills and Senator Harrison, Mississippi Democrat, sparred for political advantage over the revenue measure.

Harrison sought to have Mills submit a tax program which could be labeled an administration bill. Mills declared that the treasury sticks to its original recommendations presented to the house ways and means committee, and rejected.

Mills promised to submit to the committee two new proposals, minor modifications in the treasury's first program. These, he indicated, would be for lower taxes on home consumption of gas and electricity, and for a tax on wort and malt.

He also told Harrison he would point out specific flaws in the house tax bill and suggest corrections. This action, he warned, could not be considered as offering a treasury program, because the treasury is bitterly opposed to the house bill.

The general manufacturers' sales tax as carried in the bill reported by the ways and means committee is acceptable to the treasury, Mills reiterated. He suggested that the treasury would like to have the committee accept a 1 1/2 per cent manufacturers' sale tax, estimated to yield $350,000,000.

Mills was optimistic over the federal economy drive, saying a minimum appropriations slash of $200,000,000 is "definitely in sight" after conferences between the President and the house economy committee.

THE senate banking committee was advised by Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, that stock and bond values had depreciated at least six billion dollars during the April collapse in security values.

Testifying as the principal witness in the committee's investigation of short selling on the stock exchange, Mr. Whitney said that the drop in securities values had been as drastic during the past week as during any other period of the depression. He concurred in an estimate by a committee member that stock market and bond losses from the peak of high prices in 1929 had dropped $43,000,000,000.

Mr. Whitney's estimates were made at the conclusion of the second day of the committee's attempt to pin responsibility for recent stock market losses upon the activities of Wall street bears engaged in short selling operations. At the conclusion of the day's hearing the investigation was adjourned until Monday, when Mr. Whitney is expected to place before the committee a complete record of the short sales during the last week together with a list of the prominent bears who have been on the short side of the market.

Mr. Whitney vigorously denied that short sales had anything to do with the recent drop in securities values, asserting that widespread liquidation and unsettling business developments rather than bear raids were responsible for the drop. He asserted, and produced figures to prove his point, that during the first week of the April decline, the reduction in stock prices was accompanied by a decline in the short interest or short sales.

In response to questions, Mr. Whitney said he thought between fifteen and twenty million persons were trading on the stock market when the crash came in 1929.

DESPITE the failure of the kidnapers to restore the Lindbergh baby after the $50,000 ransom was paid by Colonel Lindbergh, the belief persists in official circles that the child will be restored to its parents.

The optimism seemed to spring chiefly from faith in the ability of Dr. John F. Condon of the "Jafsie" contact to re-establish communication with the gang which is believed to be holding the baby, stolen from his parents' home near Hopewell, N. J., on March 1.

Doctor Condon is reported to have told the members of some of his classes at New Rochelle college that he had recognized the penmanship in all the notes from the kidnapers as the handwriting of a former pupil.

It was supported, too, by the growing conviction that the kidnapers as well as the baby's father were double-crossed by the mysterious individual who received the $50,000 in currency from the hands of Doctor Condon on the night of April 2 in a lonely corner of St. Raymond's cemetery in the Bronx.

No word has come from the criminals, however, since the money was paid.

In order that Doctor Condon can pursue his efforts to recover the baby free of official interference, representatives of Colonel Lindbergh have requested Bronx officials not to question him. They agreed to heed the request.

A new and puzzling angle was injected into the mystery when dispatches from London quoted an article in the Daily Mail that some of the ransom bills had been found in the British capital.

Colonel Schwarzkopp revealed that efforts to trace the ransom bills had not provided a clue. A woman was questioned for several hours in Manhattan in the belief that it was she who tendered one of the bills in payment for purchases in a Greenwich (Conn.) bakeshop Monday night. But she finally was released with apologies.

PLANS for retaining the full fighting strength of the United States fleet in the Pacific, while conditions remain unsettled in the Far East, are being considered by administration officials. At present the scouting, as well as the battle force, is operating in Pacific waters. Orders, however, call for the return of the scouting fleet with its big eight inch gun cruisers in May. It is expected these orders will be canceled.

The State department, it is reported, notified Navy department officials that if practicable it would like to have the scouting force retained in the Pacific following the Hawaiian and west coast maneuvers which were concluded several weeks ago. The understanding is that the State department officials took the position that maintenance of the fleet at its full strength in Pacific waters would have a beneficial effect on the far eastern situation.

PRESIDENT PAUL VON HINDENBERG who was re-elected president of Germany in the run-off election by an overwhelming majority, issued a proclamation accepting the election and thanked the German people for their renewed expressions of confidence. He pledged himself "to continue to serve my fatherland and folk with all my power."

"True to my oath, I will continue to fulfill my duty of remaining above all parties with justice dominant, and with a fixed desire to help our fatherland to freedom and equality externally, and to unity and progress at home," he said.

The eighty-four-year-old president again urgently appealed to the German people to unite.

"I implore all German men and women, whether they voted for or against me, to cease their wranglings and close their ranks," he said. "Again, as seven years ago, I appeal to the entire German people to cooperate. It is necessary to unite all powers in order to surmount the present confusion and distress. Only by standing together are we strong enough to master our fate. Therefore, in unity, let us go forward with God."

ADOLF HITLER has been ordered by the German government to disband his army of 400,000 national socialist shock troops and to end terrorizing activities for which it holds them responsible. This sudden blow at the strong Fascist organization came in the form of an emergency decree signed by President Von Hindenburg. This decree dissolved immediately all "quasi military organizations" of the national socialist workers party.

A minimum punishment of a month's imprisonment is provided by the decree to which may be added a fine, for any participation in the dissolved organizations or support accorded it.

THE panic which swept over portions of Argentina and Chile as a result of the eruption of nearly a score of volcanoes in the Andes mountains quickly subsided as the fire and ashes which had belched from the craters diminished. Scientists immediately began an investigation in an effort to discover what had caused the phenomenon. Several parties of seismologists made air surveys of the volcanic regions.

Meanwhile, the great area over which the ashes fell—extending the entire width of the continent from the Pacific coast of Chile to the Atlantic coast of Argentina and Uruguay and about 400 miles wide—looked as if it had been visited by a heavy snow storm. At some points the ashes were reported to be lying 14 inches deep.

THE battle over immediate cash payment of the soldiers' bonus flared in both houses of congress Tuesday as the house ways and means committee began hearings to determine whether the public should be asked to assume an additional two billion four hundred million dollar cash burden to enable the World war veterans to cash their adjusted compensation certificates.

The advocates of legislation permitting veterans to cash in their bonus certificates at once disclosed that they hope to float the bonus law through congress as a "prosperity measure" rather than as simply a bill to advance veterans upwards of two billions in cash. Spokesmen for the bonus law asserted its passage would start the United States back toward prosperity by increasing money in circulation, boosting prices and reducing the value of the dollar.

Shortly after the bonus advocates had had their say the movement for full payment of the bonus was assailed in three quarters. Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Dem., Ark.), senate Democratic leader, issued a statement in which he asserted that payment of the adjusted compensation certificates would produce harmful results. Majority Leader Henry T. Rainey (Dem., Ill.), and Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep., N. Y.), also attacked the bonus laws.

JUSTICE PIERCE BUTLER of the United States Supreme court handed down a decision that throws a further safeguard around the American home against unlawful searches and seizures. The decision affirmed the circuit court's decision that the prohibition agents who raided, on a mere arrest warrant, the New York premises of Daniel M. Lefkowitz and Pauline Paris, used by them as headquarters for receiving bootleg liquor orders, and then took possession of all the papers and documents in the room, were not legally justified in so doing. The Supreme court holds the arrest of Lefkowitz was properly made, but says:

"There is nothing in the record to support the claim that at the time of the arrest the offense for which the warrant was issued or any other crime was being committed in the presence of the officers. The mere soliciting of orders from the room in connection with the other uses alleged in the complaint is not sufficient to constitute the maintenance of a nuisance thereon."

PRESIDENT HOOVER and Governor Roosevelt won favor of the electorate in primary elections and conventions in five states.

In Illinois, although the delegates to the state convention are uninstructed it is believed that a majority of those chosen favor the President. For governor, Judge Henry Horner of Chicago won the Democratic nomination, while the Republicans chose former Gov. Len Small.

In Nebraska's preferential primary, Governor Roosevelt was the winner for the Democratic nomination by a substantial margin. The state of Republican delegates favors President Hoover, whose name did not appear on the preferential ballot.

The prospects of both President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt were strengthened by the action of three state conventions.

In Missouri the Republican convention instructed the entire state delegation of 45 to vote for Hoover.

The Florida Republican convention pledged nine delegates at large to Hoover. District meetings gave him four more and two other district delegates remain to be chosen.

Kentucky's entire Democratic delegation of 20 was instructed by the state convention for Governor Roosevelt to vote for him as long as his name is before the national convention.

FRANCE does not take a fancy to the American proposals for disarmament as presented by Hugh S. Gibson, the American representative. Premier Andre Tardieu of France, representing his government, bitterly assailed the plans at the Geneva conference.

Mr. Gibson proposed that tanks, big guns and gases be abolished in the interests of security, but he made no mention of battleships. "The most obvious aggressive weapon," said M. Tardieu. Abolition of certain types of aggressive arms will not necessarily provide security, he said, but might, on the contrary, be disadvantageous to an invaded country. The only means to security, he declared, is common action against an aggressor.

This was generally accepted as a restatement of the French proposal for placing offensive forces at the disposal of the League of Nations. In any case, the premier reminded the conference, this disarmament meeting is under the auspices of the League of Nations, and he suggested that nonmembers of the League keep this in mind.

Mr. Gibson's proposals were in line with plans worked out by Norman H. Davis in conference with President Hoover and Secretary Stimson.

CALAMITY JANE

SHE started in life as Martha Jane Canary. That was in Missouri in 1852. Over her grave stands a monument which bears the name "Mrs. Jane Burke." That monument is in Deadwood, S. D., where her life ended in 1903. In between those dates is the history of one of the most famous—or notorious—women in frontier history—Calamity Jane, a woman of many husbands and many names, a woman who frequently dressed in men's clothes and held her own with men in men's work in gold camps, in railroad construction camps, in wagon trains and freighters' outfits, in the rough life and dangerous work of taming the wilderness.

Why the "Calamity Jane"? One legend says she saved the life of an army officer during a fight with Indians, and as she carried him safely out of danger he remarked "Jane, you're a wonderful little woman to have around in times of calamity. From now on your name's 'Calamity Jane.'" But that has been proved to be pure myth. For the real reason take your pick of these (anyone or several will do as well as any other): "because she carried guns and was given to lighting calamity"; "because she suffered several buggy-smashing accidents in Cheyenne, Wyo., and was considered unlucky"; "because she basted the heads of men who displeased her and always brought calamity with her into a camp"; "because of her bedraggled and notoriously down-at-the-heels appearance when returning from her trail expeditions or in liquor" or "because her lovers, sometimes nicknamed husbands, developed habits of dying violently."

LIGHTNIN' BILL JONES

TO MOST of us "Lightnin' Bill Jones" lives as Frank Bacon who carried that role in the play "Lightnin'" through a spectacular run of three full years in New York, or as Will Rogers who recently brought it fur, her glory in the talkies, or as any of the hundreds of stock company actors who have shambled and philosophized through the popular part on neighborhood stages since.

But "Lightnin'" had a real self quite outside of the play he inspired. His name, it has recently been revealed by the Nebraska state department of publicity, was William Wallace Kennedy. "Wall" for short, who lived some sixty years ago in Brownsville, Neb. In the early thirties Kennedy left Nebraska and located at Napa, Calif., where he became jaller and guard of a chain gang assigned to general duties about town. "Wall" was a great teller of good yarns, many of which the county clerk wrote up for publication in the local newspaper, among them the story of driving bees across the plains.

The editor of the newspaper was Frank Bacon, who recognized the merit of the stories, conceived out of them the character of their teller and built up about him the framework of his play. "Lightnin'" was published in 1918 under the co-authorship of Winchell Smith and Frank Bacon.

CAPPY RICKS

EVEN as Cappy Ricks, hero of the book by that name and of its sequel "Cappy Ricks Refires," both by Peter B. Kyne, Capt. Robert Dollar enjoyed little more excitement and fame than he has found in real life. His is one of the most romantic stories in the annals of modern commerce, an up-to-date conquest of the Pacific, won with steamships and business sagacity rather than the galleons and broadswords of the past.

Captain Dollar is one of a fast-disappearing tribe, sturdy, hard-working capitalists with first-hand training in mining or lumber camps, on the western plains or on shipboard, who in the 80s and 90s, to take commanding positions in the commercial world. Dollar rose from a lumber camp, where he started in as camp cook, became a pioneer in transpacific trade and in a period of some thirty years has built up a transportation system which is one of the most famous, if not the largest, in the world. "Don't wait for your ship to come in," he used to say. "Just keep sendin' 'em out. They'll come in all right as long as you keep sendin' 'em out." In 1901 Captain Dollar sent his first ship out to the Orient, laden with lumber and brought back in it a cargo of silk and spices, rice and tea. He thus practically opened the slumbering Orient to American trade, which has increased some 300 per cent since that time.

Today a multimillionaire and the best-known American east of the Suez, Captain Dollar resides in San Rafael, Calif., where he lives frugally and personally conducts family religious services daily in his own home.

Famous Painting

"The first Thatsgiving in America" was painted by Jean Leon Gerome Ferris of Philadelphia. It is one of his series of more than 70 subjects from American history, housed in Congress hall, Philadelphia, in a gallery built for that purpose in 1917 by the city of Philadelphia.

Lee Sims Broadcast

in a Bathing Suit

"Things are different now," remarked Lee Sims, NBC's master showman of the keys.

"Ten years ago my first radio job was with Charley Erbstein's station WTAS or Willy, Tommy, Annie and Sammy, as it was known in those days. The station was a remodeled stable, with the transmitter on the first floor and the luxurious studio in the hayloft.

"The equipment consisted of a cheap player piano, an old glow tube and 50 chairs which were used on Sundays when visitors were allowed. "Charlie and I were the entire artist staff.

"In the summertime the studio, like the velvet ceiling, would get so hot that we could not work in clothes, so I always wore a bathing suit. When it got too hot, Charlie and I would put a Lee Sims piano roll on the piano and take a dip in the swimming pool in the yard.

"But now," continued Lee, "I come down to work in my automobile or speedboat, enter the world's largest building, sit down at the most expensive concert grand piano that money can buy, and get more money for 15 minutes of playing than I did for a full month of 8 to 14 hour shifts in the old days."

Concrete That Floats

A block of concrete floated on water, bobbing up and down like a cork, at the school of practical science, University of Toronto, recently, when Prof. G. R. Anderson, carried out an unusual experiment. Known as cellular concrete, this floating stone was made on a system, analogous to raising a bread with yeast. The cement, gravel, water and sand, were put into a mixer and a carbon dioxide forming chemical was added. The cement then set into a hard porous substance lighter than wood. Professor Anderson says it has remarkable resistance to sound.

Profitable Shoe Shining

A Boston shoe shine stand has given the four sons of Tony Sallamando their opportunity in life. One has completed his medical course in Naples, another is studying engineering; two other sons in this country have been enabled to start in the clothing and contracting businesses by the nickels and dimes their father's shoe shining parlor earns.

Economic Leaders Will

Speak on Newspaper Hour

Outstanding economic problems of the day will be discussed in the National Farm and Home Hour Saturday, April 30, by L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad, Benjamin M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National bank of the city of New York, and United States Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois.

The broadcast will be under the direction of the corn belt farm dailies, a group of daily agricultural newspapers which circulate principally among the larger producers of live stock. In the group are the Chicago Drivers Journal, Kansas City Drivers Telegram, Omaha Journal-Stockman, and St. Louis Daily Livestock Reporter.

Charles E. Snyder, editor of the Chicago Drivers Journal, will be in charge of the broadcast and will introduce the speakers who are to devote their attention to presenting for the farm radio audience discussions of existing economic conditions of the day.

The program promises to attract the attention of vast audiences particularly because it will bring before the NBC microphones three distinguished leaders in the economic world.

The program will be brought to listeners as part of the plan to fea-

Takes Seventeen Years for Locust to Mature

The 17-year locusts, as the insect known to science as the cicada is called, appears in the North more often than every 17 years, but this is due to the fact that there are several cycles of them in existence. The cicadas actually require 17 years to mature from the egg stage to the final stage of the full-grown insect. In the South the period is about four years shorter.

When they were passed to Kathleen, she was asked whether she would like to have some scalloped oysters. She replied: "Well, I don't care for the oysters, but I will have some of the scallops."

To every mother who can't nurse her baby... NEWS!

When a mother's milk fails, nothing is more important than this—to be sure that the food that goes into her baby's bottle gives him just what he needs to make him rosy and healthy now, and build him a firm foundation for future health.

Test made with fifty babies
Recently, two physicians—specialists in baby diet—conducted a test with fifty average babies, to throw new light on this subject.

The food tested is one unique in infant feeding history. Next to mother's milk, it has raised more babies than any other food in the world. Over a period of 75 years, it has given millions their start in life. Throughout America, there are healthy babies, children, grown-ups, to prove the value of this amazingly digestible food.

Yet never before had scientists put this famous food—Eagle Brand Milk—

to such a thorough, controlled, scientific test. What would such a test reveal?

Simple diet proves builder of 100% babies

For months, the two physicians fed those fifty babies on Eagle Brand—checking with closest care every detail of their health and growth. Bone structure was studied with the X-ray. Tooth development was watched. Weight and height were periodically recorded. Blood tests were made...

And those fifty Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves splendidly nourished. This simple diet—Eagle Brand, with merely the usual supplementary foods—had proved equal to the building of a 100% baby.

Now, science joins the millions of mothers who say, "We have our proof that Eagle Brand Milk is a truly valuable and effective food for a baby."

If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. Easy to prepare—merely add boiled water. Always pure, safe, free from dangerous germs. Keeps indefinitely in any climate. Simple feeding directions are on the label.

The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic Vitamin D.

"My husband switched to Target from ready-mades. He thought he wasn't going to like rolling his own. But now he says he'd never smoke any other kind. He tells me that Target is real cigarette tobacco, a blend of Virginia, Burley and Turkish tobaccos just like the ready-mades use. And he says that with those gummed papers you get free with Target, it's easy to roll a firm, round cigarette.

"I'll take my husband's word for all that, but I do know that we save real money every week. My husband rolls thirty or more cigarettes from each package of Target. And that means a big saving. Figure it out. Target is only 10 cents a package."

Senate to Rewrite Revenue Bill—Lindberghs Still Hope Despite Double-Crossing—April Market Crash Cost Six Billion Dollars.

THE senate will rewrite the billion-dollar tax bill passed by the house, Chairman Reed Smoot of the senate finance committee announced. After a long delay in getting down to business on the budget balancing measure, action at last appears in sight.

Many of the soak-the-rich provisions of the tax bill may be eliminated in the upper house's revision.

Smoot's announcement followed a bitter partisan debate in the finance committee.

For nearly two hours, Secretary of the Treasury Mills and Senator Harrison, Mississippi Democrat, sparred for political advantage over the revenue measure.

Harrison sought to have Mills submit a tax program which could be labeled an administration bill. Mills declared that the treasury sticks to its original recommendations presented to the house ways and means committee, and rejected.

Mills promised to submit to the committee two new proposals, minor modifications in the treasury's first program. These, he indicated, would be for lower taxes on home consumption of gas and electricity, and for a tax on wort and malt.

He also told Harrison he would point out specific flaws in the house tax bill and suggest corrections. This, he warned, could not be considered as offering a treasury program, because the treasury is bitterly opposed to the house bill.

The general manufacturers' sales tax as carried in the bill reported by the ways and means committee is acceptable to the treasury, Mills reiterated. He suggested that the treasury would like to have the committee accept a 1 1/2 per cent manufacturers' sale tax, estimated to yield $350,000,000.

Mills was optimistic over the federal economy drive, saying a minimum appropriations slash of $200,000,000 is "definitely in sight" after conferences between the President and the house economy committee.

THE senate banking committee was advised by Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, that stock and bond values had depreciated at least six billion dollars during the April collapse in security values.

Testifying as the principal witness in the committee's investigation of the stock selling on the stock exchange, Mr. Whitney said that the drop in securities values had been as drastic during the past week as during any other period of the depression.

He concurred in an estimate by a committee member that stock market and bond losses from the peak of high prices in 1929 had dropped $43,000,000,000.

Mr. Whitney's estimates were made at the conclusion of the second day of the committee's attempt to pin responsibility for recent stock market losses upon the activities of Wall street bears engaged in short selling operations. At the conclusion of the day's hearing the investigation was adjourned until Monday, when Mr. Whitney is expected to place before the committee a complete record of the short sales during the last week together with a list of the prominent bears who have been on the short side of the market.

Mr. Whitney vigorously denied that short sales had anything to do with the recent drop in security values, asserting that widespread liquidation and unsettling business developments rather than bear raids were responsible for the drop. He asserted, and produced figures to prove his point, that during the first week of the April decline, the reduction in stock prices was accompanied by a decline in the short interest or short sales.

In response to questions, Mr. Whitney said he thought between fifteen and twenty million persons were trading on the stock market when the crash came in 1929.

DESPITE the failure of the kidnapers to restore the Lindbergh baby after the $50,000 ransom was paid by Colonel Lindbergh, the belief persists in official circles that the child will be restored to its parents.

The optimism seemed to spring chiefly from faith in the ability of Dr. John F. Condon of the "Jafsie" contact to re-establish communication with the gang which is believed to be holding the baby, stolen from his parents' home near Hopewell, N. J., on March 1.

Doctor Condon is reported to have told the members of some of his classes at New Rochelle college that he had recognized the penmanship in all the notes from the kidnapers as the handwriting of a former pupil.

It was supported, too, by the growing conviction that the kidnapers as well as the baby's father were double-crossed by the mysterious individual who received the $50,000 in currency from the hands of Doctor Condon on the night of April 2 in a lonely corner of St. Raymond's cemetery in the Bronx.

No word has come from the criminals, however, since the money was paid.

In order that Doctor Condon can pursue his efforts to recover the baby free of official interference, representatives of Colonel Lindbergh have requested Bronx officials not to question him. They agreed to heed the request.

A new and puzzling angle was injected into the mystery when dispatches from London quoted an article in the Daily Mail that some of the ransom bills had been found in the British capital.

Colonel Schwarzkopp revealed that efforts to trace the ransom bills had not provided a clue. A woman was questioned for several hours in Manhattan in the belief that it was she who tendered one of the bills in payment for purchases in a Greenwich (Conn.) bakeshop Monday night. But she finally was released with apologies.

PLANS for retaining the full fighting strength of the United States fleet in the Pacific, while conditions remain unsettled in the Far East, are being considered by administration officials. At present the scouting, as well as the battle force, is operating in Pacific waters. Orders, however, call for the return of the scouting fleet with its big eight inch gun cruisers in May. It is expected these orders will be canceled.

The State department, it is reported, notified Navy department officials that if practicable it would like to have the scouting force retained in the Pacific following the Hawaiian and west coast maneuvers which were concluded several weeks ago. The understanding is that the State department officials took the position that maintenance of the fleet at its full strength in Pacific waters would have a beneficial effect on the far eastern situation.

BERG who was re-elected president of Germany in the run-off election by an overwhelming majority, issued a proclamation accepting the election and thanked the German people for their renewed expressions of confidence. He pledged himself "to continue to serve my fatherland and folk with all my power."

"True to my oath, I will continue to fulfill my duty of remaining above all parties with justice dominant, and with a fixed desire to help our fatherland to freedom and equality externally, and to unity and progress at home," he said.

The eighty-four-year-old president again urgently appealed to the German people to unite.

"I implore all German men and women, whether they voted for or against me, to cease their wranglings and close their ranks," he said. "Again, as seven years ago, I appeal to the entire German people to cooperate. It is necessary to unite all powers in order to surmount the present confusion and distress. Only by standing together are we strong enough to master our fate. Therefore, in unity, let us go forward with God."

A DOLF HITLER has been ordered by the German government to disband his army of 400,000 national socialist shock troops and to end terrorizing activities for which it holds them responsible. This sudden blow at the strong Fascist organization came in the form of an emergency decree signed by President Von Hindenburg. This decree dissolved immediately all "quasi military organizations" of the national socialist workers party.

A minimum punishment of a month's imprisonment is provided by the decree to which may be added a fine, for any participation in the dissolved organizations or support accorded it.

THE panic which swept over portions of Argentina and Chile as a result of the eruption of nearly a score of volcanoes in the Andes mountains quickly subsided as the fire and ashes which had belched from the craters diminished. Scientists immediately began an investigation in an effort to discover what had caused the phenomenon. Several parties of seismologists made air surveys of the volcanic regions.

Meanwhile, the great area over which the ashes fell—extending the entire width of the continent from the Pacific coast of Chile to the Atlantic coast of Argentina and Uruguay and about 400 miles wide—looked as if it had been visited by a heavy snow storm. At some points the ashes were reported to be lying 14 inches deep.

THE battle over immediate cash payment of the soldiers' bonus flared in both houses of congress Tuesday as the house ways and means committee began hearings to determine whether the public should be asked to assume an additional two billion four hundred million dollar cash burden to enable the World War veterans to cash their adjusted compensation certificates.

The advocates of legislation permitting veterans to cash in their bonus certificates at once disclosed that they hope to float the bonus law through congress as "a prosperity measure" rather than as simply a bill to advance veterans upwards of two billions in cash. Spokesmen for the bonus law asserted its passage would start the United States back toward prosperity by increasing money in circulation, boosting prices and reducing the value of the dollar.

Shortly after the bonus advocates had had their say the movement for full payment of the bonus was assailed in three quarters. Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Dem., Ark.), senate Democratic leader, issued a statement in which he asserted that payment of the adjusted compensation certificates would produce harmful results. Majority Leader Henry T. Rainey (Dem., Ill.), and Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep., N. Y.), also attacked the bonus laws.

JUSTICE PIERCE BUTLER of the United States Supreme court handed down a decision that throws a further safeguard around the American home against unlawful searches and seizures. The decision affirmed the circuit court's decision that the prohibition agents who raided, on a mere arrest warrant, the New York premises of Daniel M. Lefkowitz and Pauline Paris, used by them as headquarters for receiving bootleg liquor orders, and then took possession of all the papers and documents in the room, were not legally justified in so doing. The Supreme court holds the arrest of Lefkowitz was properly made, but says:

"There is nothing in the record to support the claim that at the time of the arrest the offense for which the warrant was issued or any other crime was being committed in the presence of the officers. The mere soliciting of orders from the room in connection with the other uses alleged in the complaint is not sufficient to constitute the maintenance of a nuisance thereon."

PRESIDENT HOOVER and Governor Roosevelt won favor of the electorate in primary elections and conventions in five states.

In Illinois, although the delegates to the state convention are instructed it is believed that a majority of those chosen favor the President. For governor, Judge Henry Horner of Chicago won the Democratic nomination, while the Republicans chose former Gov. Len Small.

In Nebraska's preferential primary, Governor Roosevelt was the winner for the Democratic nomination by a substantial margin. The slate of Republican delegates favors President Hoover, whose name did not appear on the preferential ballot.

The prospects of both President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt were strengthened by the action of three state conventions.

In Missouri the Republican convention instructed the entire state delegation of 45 to vote for Hoover. The Florida Republican convention pledged nine delegates at large to Hoover. District meetings gave him four more and two other district delegates remain to be chosen.

Kentucky's entire Democratic delegation of 29 was instructed by the state convention for Governor Roosevelt to vote for him as long as his name is before the national convention.

FRANCE does not take a fancy to the American proposals for disarmament as presented by Hugh S. Gibson, the American representative. Premier Andre Tardieu of France, representing his government, bitterly assailed the plans at the Geneva conference.

Mr. Gibson proposed that tanks, big guns and gases be abolished in the interests of security, but he made no mention of battleships. "The most obvious aggressive weapon," said M. Tardieu. Abolition of certain types of aggressive arms will not necessarily provide security, he said, but might, on the contrary, be disadvantageous to an invaded country. The only means to security, he declared, is common action against an aggressor.

This was generally accepted as a restatement of the French proposal for placing offensive forces at the disposal of the League of Nations. In any case, the premier reminded the conference, this disarmament meeting is under the auspices of the League of Nations, and he suggested that nonmembers of the League keep this in mind.

Mr. Gibson's proposals were in line with plans worked out by Norman H. Davis in conference with President Hoover and Secretary Stimson.

CALAMITY JANE

SHE started in life as Martha Jane Canary. That was in Missouri in 1852. Over her grave stands a monument which bears the name "Mrs. Jane Burke." That monument is in Deadwood, S. D., where her life ended in 1903. In between those dates is the history of one of the most famous—or notorious—women in frontier history—Calamity Jane, a woman of many husbands and many names, a woman who frequently dressed in men's clothes and held her own with men in men's work in gold camps, in railroad construction camps, in wagon trains and freighters' outfits, in the rough life and dangerous work of taming the wilderness.

Why the "Calamity Jane"? One legend says she saved the life of an army officer during a fight with Indians, and as she carried him safely out of danger he remarked "Jane, you're a wonderful little woman to have around in times of calamity. From now on your name's 'Calamity Jane.'" But that has been proved to be pure myth. For the real reason take your pick of these (anyone or several will do as well as any other): "because she carried guns and was given to lusting calamity"; "because she suffered several buggy-smashing accidents in Cheyenne, Wyo., and was considered unlucky"; "because she bashed the heads of men who displeased her and always brought calamity with her into a camp"; "because of her bedraggled and notoriously down-at-the-heels appearance when returning from her trail expeditions or in liquor" or "because her lovers, sometimes mis-called husbands, developed habits of dying violently."

LIGHTNIN' BILL JONES

TO MOST of us "Lightnin' Bill Jones" lives as Frank Bacon who carried that role in the play "Lightnin'" through a spectacular run of three full years in New York, or as Will Rogers who recently brought it further glory in the talkies, or as any of the hundreds of stock company actors who have shambled and philosophized through the popular part on neighborhood stages since.

But "Lightnin'" had a real self quite outside of the play he inspired. His name, it has recently been revealed by the Nebraska state department of publicity, was William Wallace Kennedy. "Wall" for short, who lived some sixty years ago in Brownsville, Neb. In the early thirties Kennedy left Nebraska and located at Napa, Calif., where he became jailer and guard of a chain gang assigned to general duties about town. "Wall" was a great teller of good yarns, many of which the county clerk wrote up for publication in the local newspaper, among them the story of driving bees across the plains.

The editor of the newspaper was Frank Bacon, who recognized the merit of the stories, conceived out of them the character of their teller and built up about him the framework of his play. "Lightnin'" was published in 1918 under the co-authorship of Winchell Smith and Frank Bacon.

CAPPY RICKS

EVEN as Cappy Ricks, hero of the book by that name and of its sequel "Cappy Ricks Retires," both by Peter B. Kyne, Capt. Robert Dollar enjoyed little more excitement and fame than he has found in real life. His is one of the most romantic careers in the annals of modern commerce, an up-to-date conquest of the Pacific, won with steamships and business sagacity rather than the galleons and broadswords of the past.

Captain Dollar is one of a fast disappearing tribe sturdy, hard-working capitalists, with first-hand training in mining or lumber camps, on the western plains or on shipboard, who in the sixties and seventies, to take commanding positions in the commercial world Dollar rose from a lumber camp, where he started in as camp cook became a pioneer in trans-Pacific trade and in a period of some thirty years has built up a transportation system which is one of the most famous, if not the largest, in the world. "Don't wait for your ship to come in," he used to say. "Just keep sendin' 'em out. They'll come in all right as long as you keep sendin' 'em out." In 1901 Captain Dollar sent his first ship out to the Orient, laden with lumber and brought back in it a cargo of silk and spices, rice and tea. He thus practically opened the slumbering Orient to American trade, which has increased some 300 per cent since that time.

Today a multimillionaire and the best-known American east of the Suez, Captain Dollar resides in San Rafael, Calif., where he lives frugally and personally conducts family religious services daily in his own home.

Lee Sims Broadcast

in a Bathing Suit

"Things are different now," remarked Lee Sims, NBC's master showman of the keys.

Ten years ago my first radio job was with Charley Erbstein's station WTAS or Willy, Tommy, Annie and Sammy, as it was known in those days. The station was a remodeled stable, with the transmitter on the first floor and the luxurious studio in the hayloft.

"The equipment consisted of a cheap player piano, an old glow tube and 50 chairs which were used on Sundays when visitors were allowed. "Charlie and I were the entire artist staff.

"In the summertime the studio, like the velour ceiling, would get so hot that we could not work in clothes, so I always wore a bathing suit. When it got too hot, Charlie and I would put a Lee Sims piano roll on the piano and take a dip in the swimming pool in the yard.

"But now," continued Lee, "I come down to work in my automobile or speedboat, enter the world's largest building, sit down at the most expensive concert grand piano that money can buy, and get more money for 15 minutes of playing than I did for a full month of 8 to 14 hour shifts in the old days."

Concrete That Floats

A block of concrete floated on water, bobbing up and down like a cork, at the school of practical science, University of Toronto, recently, when Prof. G. R. Anderson, carried out an unusual experiment. Known as cellular concrete, this floating stone was made on a system, analogous to raising a bread with yeast. The cement, gravel, water and sand, were put into a mixer and a carbon dioxide forming chemical was added. The cement then set into a hard porous substance lighter than wood. Professor Anderson says it has remarkable resistance to sound.

Economic Leaders Will

Speak on Newspaper Hour

Outstanding economic problems of the day will be discussed in the National Farm and Home Hour Saturday, April 30, by L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad, Benjamin M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National bank of the city of New York, and United States Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois.

The broadcast will be under the direction of the corn belt farm dailies, a group of daily agricultural newspapers which circulate principally among the larger producers of live stock. In the group are the Chicago Drivers Journal, Kansas City Drivers Telegram, Omaha Journal-Stockman, and St. Louis Daily Livestock Reporter.

Charles E. Snyder, editor of the Chicago Drivers Journal, will be in charge of the broadcast and will introduce the speakers who are to devote their attention to presenting the farm radio audience discussions of existing economic conditions of the day.

The program promises to attract the attention of vast audiences particularly because it will bring before the NBC microphones three distinguished leaders in the economic world.

To every mother who can't nurse her baby... NEWS!

When a mother's milk fails, nothing is more important than this—to be sure that the food that goes into her baby's bottle gives him just what he needs to make him rosy and healthy now, and build him a firm foundation for future health.

Test made with fifty babies

Recently, two physicians—specialists in baby diet—conducted a test with fifty average babies, to throw new light on this subject.

The food tested is one unique in infant feeding history. Next to mother's milk, it has raised more babies than any other food in the world. Over a period of 7 years, it has given millions their start in life. Throughout America, there are healthy babies, children, grown-ups, to prove the value of this amazingly digestible food.

Yet never before had scientists put this famous food—Eagle Brand Milk—

to such a thorough, controlled, scientific test. What would such a test reveal?

Simple diet proves builder of 100% babies

For months, the two physicians fed those fifty babies on Eagle Brand—checking with closest care every detail of their health and growth. Bone structure was studied with the X-ray. Tooth development was watched. Weight and height were periodically recorded. Blood tests were made...

And those fifty Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves splendidly nourished. This simple diet—Eagle Brand, with merely the usual supplementary foods—had proved equal to the building of a 100% baby.

Now, science joins the millions of mothers who say, "We have our proof that Eagle Brand Milk is a truly valuable and effective food for a baby."

If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. Easy to prepare—merely add boiled water. Always pure, safe, free from dangerous germs. Keeps indefinitely in any climate. Simple feeding directions are on the label.

The usual supplementary foods of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic Vitamin D.

DISTRICT COURT EXPENSES ALMOST CUT IN HALF

The attention of the Informer has been called to the low cost of the Spring term of the District Court which adjourned only a few days ago.

Comparison is made with the last term preceding this—that of October, 1931. At that term only 9 criminal and 12 civil cases were disposed of, while in the term just closed, 11 criminal and 15 civil cases were disposed of. A summary of expenses of the two terms follows:

1931 Term
Jury Fees	$1 333 00
Witnesses, Grand Jury	7 20
Out county witnesses	328 82
Stenographer	72 00
Total	$1,741 02
1932 Term
Jury Fees	$629 00
Out county witnesses	152 82
Stenographer	72 00
Total	$853 82

A part of this saving was made possible by the law passed allowing the accused to plead guilty and be tried before the District Judge without a jury. Most of the balance was done by team work on the part of our Court officials—Judge A J Fires, District Attorney Jas C Mahan, Sheriff Guy Pierce, District Clerk A H Baker, County Attorney R. Y. King.

In a hazy way he was conscious that the dreaded Savage was not shooting at him.

A moment after Alan turned to look, the breed crouched, steadied his rifle and drew aim. Alan ducked down, the bullet screamed over his neck.

Staggering under his heavy burden, with his feet sinking into the quivering muck underfoot, he splashed frantically through the water, throwing all his exhausted strength of body, all his undying strength of heart and will, to those two-score yards.

Nearly blinded, breathing in hoarse gasps, with his great strength ebbing away, he groped and stumbled through those last few yards to the tiny islet, and collapsed there behind the big swan nest.

For a little time, a minute or two, he lay quiet, breathing heavily, fighting low, just over the water, it veered in toward the steamer landing, touched lightly, skimmed the wavelets, and taxied close in.

As an excited group began gathering at the wharf, the scarlet-and-gold police launch hove in sight around the headland and bore on toward the post.

The freightage that the launch carried—a machine gun and clutter of rifles, a half dozen bales of peltry worth a small fortune each bale, shovels and corded packs, and five stout leather pouches sewn with rawhide in the prospector fashion—the mere sight of that cargo drew a gasp

He cautiously raised his head, and saw the peril that his two friends had tried to rouse him to meet. The huge red-bearded leader had seen him collapse helplessly, and was coming across to put a bullet through his brain and seize the machine gun.

Crouching down again behind that pile of willow sticks and reeds, Alan turned to the Browning. Methodically he spread the tripod and planted it firmly and clicked it into its mount. Very carefully he fed in a web of cartridges till it was caught. Rising to one knee then, clasping the spade grip, he cautiously raised his eyes above his shelter.

The breed with the deadly Savage, who had sent three bullets into his body and had drilled Jimmy Montgomery through the heart, was trying to make it back to the flags. Shouting hoarsely, he kept jerking his head around to see what his enemy was doing. Alan swerved the Browning a few degrees, looked down the sights, and his trigger finger tightened.

Releasing for a moment, Alan trained the Browning on that clump of flags where two rifles were still screaming at him; and when he had determined his concentration, the Browning went into play again. Methodically, the gun drumming out its message of death, he swept the clump from end to end, spraying it with bullets, mowing down the flags, splintering the bandits' hiding with a raking, slow-weaving fire.

There in the flags a figure leaped up and blindly tried to escape. Alan swung upon it, the figure vanished, there was a thrashing for a moment among the reeds. To the right a single rifle still held out, shooting at him. He located the spot and poured a storm of bullets into it.

Alan stood up then. He thought to swim across and get one of those canoes and go after Joyce. But he had not the strength. The nausea was overpowering him again; his wounds had bled him weak, and the pain of them sickened him. Staggering from the fearful reaction setting in, he sat down on the swan nest, with his world swimming in front of him and all his senses reeling.

It was four days later that those who waited at Fort Endurance learned what had happened northeast in the Land of Many Waters.

One evening at sunset an airplane came swinging around the timbered headland down the Mackenzie. Flying low, just over the water, it veered in toward the steamer landing, touched lightly, skimmed the wavelets, and taxied close in.

As an excited group began gathering at the wharf, the scarlet-and-gold police launch hove in sight around the headland and bore on toward the post.

Three Indian canoes darted out to tow the plane in to the landing. Father Claverly had come down the terrace and stood a little apart, quietly watching with observant eyes. Haskell and Williamson had come down; and Elizabeth Spaulding, slipping through the crowd, was trying to edge up near the pier-heads, to be the first to greet Alan Baker.

As the launch drew close, the crowd saw it carried four men. When it nosed alongside, they recognized Pedneault and Bill Hardsock, muddled, unshaven; and Alan Baker, a bandage around his head, his left arm in a sling. The fourth man was some outlandish individual of yellowish complexion and almond eyes, with his right arm carefully splinted and bandaged.

The freightage that the launch carried—a machine gun and clutter of rifles, a half dozen bales of peltry worth a small fortune each bale, shovels and corded packs, and five stout leather pouches sewn with rawhide in the prospector fashion—the mere sight of that cargo drew a gasp

Good Reason Found for Giving Youth a Chance

It is hard for a parent to realize that youth can solve some of its problems and make some of its decisions without adult interference. The inability of adults to give a youth a chance to assume responsibility is of old standing. Most of us are unable to note the growing maturity of a boy. We keep on coddling and fathering him far beyond the point when he can make some of his decisions.

Thackeray found the same condition in his day, and out of the accumulation of wisdom gained in his study of mankind, wrote: "We should pay as much reverence to youth as we should to age, there are points in which you young folks are altogether our superiors; and I from the crowd and brought them edging up close.

Joyce had come with Buzzard in the plane. As she unsnapped her safety belt and stood up, she was remembering her last time here at Endurance, when her father was still alive. It seemed a heartless irony of fate that he had died just when his innocence had been proved. Small comfort to know that his name and memory were cleared of guilt. As she thought of him lying dead at Resolution and of the tragic duty calling her there, she was glad that tonight a steamer was coming past and she would leave this North.

By the time she and Buzzard had skirled ashore, Alan had stepped out upon the planking. In another moment she saw Elizabeth elbow her way through the group pressing around Alan. A gust of emotion—jealousy, scorn, anger—swept across Joyce's pretty face as she watched Elizabeth's greeting. It was stately, it was all artificial. Elizabeth's gladness at his return and her sympathy over his wounds were effusive and contemptible. Joyce could not help thinking of herself swimming across to Alan at the swan nest, and of the compassion that tore at her when she found him there, wounded, bleeding, half unconscious. She felt she had known more real sympathy in those moments than Elizabeth would feel in her whole life. A fierce jealousy, a jealous proprietorship, surged through her. Alan had got those wounds fighting for her; she had dressed them and taken him to her home, and she had nursed him through those long hours of feverish pain.

Haskell came shoving his way out to the wharf edge. "Hardsock, you and Pedneault are under arrest!"

Bill scarcely glanced up at him. Muddled and haggard from two days of shovel work cutting a channel to refloat the big launch, he and Pedneault continued tossing the pouches and furs bales out upon the planking. "Did you understand, Hardsock?" Haskell repeated. "You're under arrest."

Bill looked up. "I heard you," he said in weary scorn. "But haven't time to be arrested just now. Put it off a few minutes, can't you? Here's a hundred and fifty thousand in furs and gold that'd better get under lock and key before part of it walks off. And a prisoner to take up."

Williamson came down to the wharf edge. Joyce saw him hesitate a moment, then hold out his hand to Alan. It was only a momentary pause, but she saw it distinctly, and understood the reason; and it roused a hot anger in her.

She was proud of Alan for the way he reacted. He, too, had noticed the hesitation, and he remarked curtly, refusing his hand:

"Don't bother, superintendent. You might lose caste. I've heard I'm a criminal."

The division commander was visibly hurt by Alan's words. His eyes were taking in the recovered loot, the tired men, Alan's wounds.

"I see you won out against those men. The prisoner, I suppose, is one of them. Where are the others?"

"Over in the Thal-Azzah. We did take the trouble to give them a decent burial."

"Dead?"

"Yes, dead. It was a fair fight, if you care to take my word for it."

Williamson was silent a few moments. Into his eyes came a far-away expression, as though he was thinking of renowned patrols in the history of the Force and realizing that Baker's victory over these six criminals was one of them and one of the best of them. Finally he requested: "Won't you come up to the cabin, Baker? I'd like to hear your report on this."

"I'll come up," Alan sent an ominous glance at Haskell. "I've got several things to say to you, superintendent."

Joyce felt some one touching her arm. Turning, she saw it was Father Claverly.

As he shook hands he asked her, "Joyce, if you have time tonight, step over to my study and visit me, won't you?"

"Why yes, Father Claverly, if you wish. I'd better come before ten; the steamer may be here any time after that."

"You're leaving tonight?"

"Yes. There'll be no other for two weeks. Bill told you I'm going back to Ottawa?"

Father Claverly nodded, and a little afterwards he left her.

Joyce was deadly serious in her last words to Alan.

"You'll not forget what we talked over—the Inconnu trap?"

"I'll not forget. But he may not walk into it, Joyce. He's shrewd, he's careful."

Authority Says Belief Has No Foundation.

The ingenious who pin their faith upon the Gulf stream as the real explanation of all the current vagaries of our weather are assured by an article in the Merchant Marine Bulletin that they are wrong. The Gulf stream has not changed its course; it is, moreover, somewhat improbable that it ever will within our time. That familiar river of the ocean (which, according to a recent computation, has a discharge through the straits of Florida equal to twenty-two times the total discharge of all the rivers in the world) is directed by the action of the trade winds and the configuration of the coast and the ocean bottom; as long as the trades persist it would take a vast submarine upheaval to effect any permanent alteration in the Gulf stream's course, and nothing of the sort has been observed recently.

The same article reprints a facsimile of the first chart upon which the Gulf stream ever appeared. Although its existence had been known to mariners since the days of Ponce de Leon's expeditions to Florida, and it had had an important effect on the routes of the early transatlantic trade, this first chart of it did not appear until about 1770, when no less a scientific investigator than Benjamin Franklin got a Nantucket shipmaster to mark down the course of the current for him. The Nantucket man had learned it by experience and as a part of the professional lore of his trade; the resultant map was not very accurate, but for the earlier part of the course at any rate was good enough, both in direction and velocity. Though it had never before appeared on charts, it had been used by seamen in their business for 250 years; and it would be interesting to know how far the Gulf stream, as a part of the system of wind and current which made the West Indies the natural gateway to America rather than our own north Atlantic coast, has affected the history of this continent. We are familiar with the way in which the land rivers channel economic and political development; the similar effect of this sea river is less often spoken of.

Lifelong Warfare

on Insect Pests Award of the Capper gold medal "for distinguished service to agriculture," carrying an honorarium of $5,000, has been made to Dr. L. O. Howard, a government bug expert who, on a small official salary, has waged a lifelong battle against insect pests.

"He has made a great contribution to the present and future happiness of the American people," says the Woman's Home Companion in its announcement of the award. "He has for years been fighting the greatest of all wars—the war against insects. Insects, as he has shown, steal two billion dollars a year from us. They nullify the labor of a million men.

"They reached their development millions of years ago. We are the newcomers on earth and our foothold is not yet sure. Doctor Howard believes that it is still possible that in some distant future the last living thing on the expiring earth may be a bug feeding on the last bit

Where Does She Get Her "Pep?"

SHE doesn't look seventy. Nor feel that old. The woman who stimulates her organs can have energy that women half her age will envy!

At middle-age your vital organs begin to slow down. You may not be sick, simply sluggish. But why endure a condition of half-health when there's a stimulant that will stir a stagnant system to new life and energy in a week's time?

This remarkable stimulant is perfectly harmless. It is, in fact, a family doctor's prescription. So, if you're tired of trying every patent medicine that comes along, tell the druggist you want a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a bit of this delicious syrup every day or so, until you know by the way you feel that your lazy liver is again active, and your bowels are poison-free.

Men, women, and children who are run-down, who tire easily, get bilious spells or have frequent headaches, are soon straightened out when they get this prescriptional preparation of pure pepsin, active senna, and fresh laxative herbs. (Syrup pepsin is all the help the bowels need, and you do not form the very bad habit of always taking cathartics.)

Keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin in the house, and take a stimulating spoonful every now and then. It is all that a great many people ever take to keep strong and vigorous, and absolutely free from constipation.

Enterprising Thief

Charles S. Hall, of Rockland, Maine, reported to police that some one had been stealing a cottage of his piecemeal. The cottage is a two-room log cabin, built three years ago on Spauldings Island. The thief had taken away the furnishings, as well as the doors and windows and partitions, and part of the roof had been removed.

The Post's Fault

"What went wrong with your car, girlie?" "A lamp post ran into it."

For 100% Health

THERE is something vibrant and magnetic about the truly healthy man or woman, who is satisfied and contented with life. That "something" attracts people. Wins confidence. Arouses and holds affection. This vitality and enthusiasm of youth are priceless. Guard them with Fellows' Syrup, the fine old tonic which doctors recommend. It restores and strengthens. Improves appetite. You sleep better and feel better. Your vigor and endurance return. For just one week, try Fellows' Syrup, which you can get at your druggist's. The results will amaze and delight you.

J. R. Cowan was born April 24, 1892, at McKinney, Texas, his parents moving the same year to Hall county, near Estelline. He completed his education at Tyler College. He was the first man called from Hall county in the World War, served until the Armistice was signed, returned to the family home at Estelline, and was married Dec 24th of that year to Miss Myrtle Wallace of Goodnight. He served two years as Public Weigher at Estelline, was in the grocery business with his father for four years, then moved to Hedley as cotton buyer for E. B. Smith of Quanah. The last year of his life was spent on the farm.

His health failed, and he grew steadily worse until he entered Veterans Hospital at Fort Lyon, Colo., Jan. 12th, 1932. He died April 9th, and was buried in the Hedley cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mary Myrtle Cowan; six small children, Bessie, J. R., Marzelle, Billie Levada, H. R., and Nelda Lois; his parents, Mr and Mrs G. W. Z. and Leona Cowan of Estelline; and four brothers, Roy of Cross Plains, Seth of Gladewater, Bill of Colorado Springs, and Vernon of Newlin.

J. R. Cowan was a man of sterling qualities, loyal to his friends, his home and country, upright and honest in all dealings with his fellowman, and a loyal worker in his Lodge.
