ROME BURNS AGAIN

DeMille Sets Fire to Great Film
Set in Latest Spectacle—
"Sign of the Cross"

History's most famous conflagration was repeated recently when a man turned on a gas valve Before the fascinated eyes of hundreds of workmen, flames burst out among a group of buildings, great billows of smoke rolled skyward and a multitude of men, women and children ran screaming through streets.

Rome was burning again, 2000 years after the famous blaze during which Nero fiddled.

This time the fire was created for the exclusive use of Cecil B.
DeMille's cameras, filming the spectacle, "The Sign of the Cross," which is coming to the Pastime Theatre at Clarendon next Monday and Tuesday, with a cast headed by Fredric March, Elissa Landi, Claudette Colbert, and Charles Laughton, in the first film made since the advent of talking pictures which compares in any way with "The King of Kings" and "The Ten Commandments" of the silent days.
It is a story of the persecution of the Christians in the days of Nero and paints a vivid and authentic picture of early Rome,—both Christian and pagan.

HEDLEY HATCHERY

CALLED TO OKLAHOMA BY DEATH OF NIECE

Hedley Texas, April 17 1933
Last week as I returned from Windy Valley I found a telegram from my brother Bob Campbell, asking me to come at once, as his youngest daughter had been called from this life to a far better. Accompanied by two of my brothers, who live in Pampa,
I left here at 11 o'clock that night and arrived at Ringling, Okla., at 8 next morning. Found brother and his wife and family broken hearted because the Lord had visited their home with His death angel and taken little Mary Lou home to Glory.

Funeral services were held at Zanize, where she had been attending school. Two special and appropriate songs were sung by her little schoolmates, also other songs, the Scripture was read by Rev. Hamlin, pastor of Healdton
Baptist Church, after which Rev.
R. C. Baker preached a gracious and precious sermon. From the large number present, the father selected as pallbearers four of his brothers, W. G., A. J., Dee and Jesse Campbell.

After the sermon the body was carried to Leon, where the pal-bearers took the body from the hearse and bore it with broken hearts and tender care to the open grave. Here a prayer was offered by the Ruebottom pastor, there was an appropriate selection of songs by S. F. Sasebee, and a few words of consolation by Rev. Hamlin. Then we laid her to rest, knowing that when Jesus comes we shall see her again.

Rev. A. J. Campbell.

How I Broke into The Movies

Copyright by Hal C. Hermon

By NORMA SHEARER

NOW that I look back upon it, I guess it was just a dog's determination that got me my first chance in motion pictures.

I often think how strange it seems to me now, in the light of everything I know about the industry, for my sister and me to have set out from our home in Canada to invade the picture business. We did not know a soul in New York, we had no pull and no friends in the industry. In fact, we knew nothing of the inner-workings of a booking office until after we had been in New York for several weeks and had made the rounds of the studios again and again.

On one of our pilgrimages we discovered a kindly soul who told us that we should get an agent and give us the address of a good booker.

Athole, my sister, and I were filled with new hope and we gleefully bounded into that drab office to be met by a sad-eyed young man seated at a littered desk. He asked us what we wanted, with the air of one who already knew our answer and cared the worst.

We told him emphatically that we wanted to go into the movies. He looked at us pitifully. "Oh, must you go into the movies?" he asked. Our ardor dampened not one whit, we explained that we really must. He gave us a long talk, begging us to turn back, but we were not to be turned and more to get rid of us than anything else he sent us to a studio where twelve girls were needed for a few days' work in a college comedy.

Thinking that the jobs were set for us we reported at the studio the next day to find out that there were only girls waiting. Out of these twelve were to be chosen.

The assistant director came out of his office and began looking us over. He chose eleven girls and I was not among them. I coughed very loudly and shuffled my feet. The sound attracted his ear and his eye followed. I had brought myself to his notice and he said, "You'll do. The rest are let needed. The twelve of you report for work tomorrow morning."

My sister was not chosen, but I went back later in the afternoon and we persuaded him that thirteen girls would be better than twelve, that thirteen was really a lucky number and he consented to let Athole work, too.

And that is how I happened to be in my first day's work. But breaking into the movies is not like walking into a room, for it's easier to get in than stay in. Weeks passed and no work came, but that one day's work gave us at least the right to say that we had picture experience and we at last had other days' extra work.

Athole dropped out of the game to get married and I went the rest of the way alone.

Extra work led to bits, bits to small parts and small parts to larger ones. By the time I was playing parts I was noticed on the coast and got a contract with the old Mayer studios. When the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer merger was effected my contract was carried over, and I have been with the company ever since.

Among my recent pictures are "Smiling Through," with Frederic March and Leslie Howard and "Strange Interlude" with Clark Gable, Ralph Morgan and Maureen O'Sullivan.

Actor's Favorite Dream

Recreating some of history's most dramatically interesting characters is one of George Arliss' favorite dreams. One of the men the English actor would like to bring to life on the stage or screen is Samuel Pepys, author of the celebrated diary. Another is Cagliostro, famous Eighteenth-century charlatan. A third is the marquis of Queensberry, known about London to ward the end of the Eighteenth century as "Old Q." He was not the sponsor of the boxing rules which bear his name—they were drawn up under the auspices of a later marquis—but he was a famous sportsman of his time and a notorious spendthrift.

Arliss a "Smacker"

As a kisser George Arliss is known among studio sound experts, as a "smacker." His screen kisses make up in sound what they may lack in fervor. Mr. Arliss is apt to be a little perfunctory about kissing before the camera. He worries about it. He cuts out all the kisses he can while editing a script. Those that he leaves in are the kisses that it seems impossible to avoid in telling the story.

JOHNNY CHUCK GOES BACK TO THE FAR CORNER

JOHNNY CHUCK sat licking his wounds, for the teeth of Reddy Fox were sharp and despite the toughness of Johnny's coat they had torn it in several places. So he sat on the doorstep of his new house and licked his wounds, this being the way of the little people in fur whenever they are hurt. And as he licked Johnny did a little thinking.

For the first time he realized how poorly chosen was this place, where he had dug his house. He understood perfectly how it was that Reddy and Mrs. Fox had been able to surprise him, and he knew that they would be able to do it again. That wall was too high for him to look over to see if enemies were about, so every time he left his doorstep to go to that distant clover patch he would risk having happen again the very thing that had happened. And he knew, too, that if it should happen again he couldn't hope to have Bowser the Hound come along just in time to save him.

"I Asked You Why You Don't Go Home and Be Sensible," Repeated Sammy.

An automobile rushed past on the other side of the wall and Johnny ducked inside his house. He just couldn't get used to those noisy things. He waited for the dust which it had raised to settle before he came out again. The grass all about and the leaves of the bushes were gray with dust. Johnny thought of the cool, clean, green grass in the quiet far corner of the Old Orchard where he and Polly Chuck had lived so long, and suddenly a great longing to be there swept over him. It was wholly useless to try to fool himself. This place didn't compare with his old home.

As he sat there licking his wounds and wishing that he never had thought of wanting a new house, along came Sammy Jay. Sammy looked down at him with a twinkle in his shrewd little eyes.

"That was a great fight, Johnny Chuck," he said. "It certainly was a great fight while it lasted. Are you much hurt?"

"No," mumbled Johnny Chuck. "Didn't think you ever would owe Bowser the Hound a favor, did you?" chuckled Sammy. "This is a funny old world any way you take it. Sometimes our best friends do us the most harm and our worst enemies do us the greatest good. Yes, sir, it is a funny old world. Now that you have found it out, why don't you go home and be sensible?"

"Wh-wh-what's that?" stammered Johnny, for it seemed to him that Sammy must have read his thoughts. "I asked you why you don't go home and be sensible," repeated Sammy. "Polly Chuck isn't safe there alone." "Huh," grunted Johnny. "I guess she can take care of herself. If she can't she can come up here and live." Sammy laughed right out. "I know now on which side of the house the sense in the Chuck family is," said he. "Think it over, Johnny. Think it over."

With this away flew Sammy to tell Polly just how much Johnny was hurt. Also he told her that he hadn't a doubt in the world that Johnny would return as soon as his obstinacy was cured, and he suspected that the cure was already working.

GRAPHIC GOLF

A LONG DRIVER

CLARENCE GAMBER, Michigan's long driving pro, has consistently gained tremendous distances off the tee. Drives of well over three hundred yards are a rather common occurrence with him. At Oakmont one year on the twelfth hole, which measures 600 yards he was on the green with a drive and iron. At Muskegon, Mich., on a hole which measured 611 yards, par 6, he followed up a tremendous tee shot with a slashing second to the green. His prodigious driving has already become legendary. Strange to say, Gamber's drives are nearly all carry. Although Gamber is right handed, he attributes much of his distance to his left shoulder muscles which are more developed. He keeps the left arm straight and at the top of the backswing his shoulders are at right angles to the line of flight. Like Chick Evans, he feels a hard tug at his left shoulder when he has reached the top of the swing. This makes the downswing much like the uncoupling of a spring. Gamber's stance is slightly pigeon toed, the left toe turned inward allows him to pivot more freely. Cyril Tolley, another long driver, also does this. Gamber addresses the ball slightly off the heel of his clubhead. He starts the upstroke by pushing the clubhead backwards a bit outside the direction line and allows a wide sweeping arc, although his elbows are kept close to the body.

Our Government—How It Operates

By William Bruckart

POSTAL SAVINGS SYSTEM

THE old maxim concerning savings—that if you watch the pennies, the dollars will care for themselves, must have had some reference to the postal service, for a vast amount of its annual income which exceeds $600,000,000 annually is in the form of the lowly one-cent piece.

But I like to think of the postal service as a gigantic corporation having branches in every city, town and hamlet in the United States. I like to imagine it as an enterprise, operating not for profit but for service in my interest and in yours.

It might be mentioned in this connection that no better evidence of the faith of a people in an institution has been recorded than has been shown in the last two years by the growth of deposits in the postal savings system. That is just as much a part of our postal system now as is the right to send money through the mail in the form of a postal money order.

Respecting this evidence of faith, the figures reveal that more than $900,000,000 of funds, mainly from individuals, is held by the postal savings banks.

The postal service, whether considered in its correct light as a government agency or visualized as a great private corporation, has to have management, supervision, guidance. Without detracting one whit from the splendid type of service rendered by those workers which constitute the vast machine, it must have policies formulated and purposes planned if its future equals its past. Hence, the postmaster general sits as a member of the President's cabinet to take counsel as he serves as the titular head of the service, and the Post Office department exists for the purpose of supervision of the machinery that handles our mails.

The chief deterrent to a clear conception of the postal service is its size. It is so vast that comprehension of its various activities at once is difficult, yet an idea may be gained of its various ramifications by examining the structure at the top for the purpose of seeing how supervision of the work is divided.

The postmaster general has four assistants, each with allotted work to administer. He has his legal aides, the solicitor and another attorney who is a special assistant to the attorney general of the United States, and he has a chief inspector and a corps of inspectors to see that the laws are observed, to look after those pennies.

To the first assistant postmaster general is assigned supervision of the service rendered; that is, he is responsible for maintenance of a service to meet the needs of the public, and that includes management of postmasters. In the last analysis, it is he who determines whether a rural route will be extended or whether a uniformed carrier shall be assigned to deliver mail in the new development of homes at the edge of town. This official is the one also who theoretically disposes of letters and papers and parcels improperly addressed or never called for at the local post office and which eventually are classed as "dead letters."

Railway mail, international mail and air mail are supervised by the second assistant postmaster general. With the aid of the Interstate Commerce commission, he decides how much money the railways will be paid for hauling the mails, and the schedule of payments has to be revised frequently because of changing conditions and expanding operations. The international mail involves treaties and conventions with foreign nations and its complexities are myriad.

All of the finances of the postal service are assigned to the jurisdiction and control of the third assistant postmaster general.

The third assistant is responsible for determination of the income of the postal service. In other words, he seeks to work out policies and programs to keep income and outgo somewhere near even, though it has happened in very few years in history. To do that, the third assistant must seek to find the cost of handling the various kinds of mail and the performance of the many services now imbedded in the postal service. For example, the parcel post rate on a pound package from Washington to Kansas City should be approximately the same as it costs to collect, transport and deliver that package to the addressee. It is a nice problem, but without the answer or an approximate figure, the postal deficit can get out of hand.

In the hands of the fourth assistant postmaster general are concentrated all of the mechanical and engineering phases of the service. He runs a gigantic shop for manufacturing mail bags and other equipment, and buys the equipment which the government does not make. It is under his supervision that the new post office building in your town was designed and constructed (if owned by the government) and he makes the rental contracts if the building is leased. And as though he had nothing else to do, the fourth assistant is the "boss chauffeur" and garage manager and mechanic for the thousands of motor vehicles which the postal service owns and uses.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION AT PRICE SIMMONS HOME

A very enjoyable day was spent in the home of Mr and Mrs Price Simmons Sunday in honor of their son, R. B., it being his twenty-first birthday.

There was lots of fine music and singing in the morning, after which an enormous dinner was spread which of course was much enjoyed by everyone. Even the "depression" was forgotten when we looked at the table.

In the afternoon there were two games of baseball, and more than 100 Easter eggs were hidden for the little folks. Then the ice cream freezes were opened—we ate cream, sang and played until time to do the chores, after which part of the bunch went to W. B. Morgan's for a musical entertainment. Mr Morgan says he is thankful his life was spared in his recent auto accident, otherwise he could not have enjoyed this big day. He is also authority for the statement that the John Edwards and Simmons families are the "fiddlingest folks in North America."

Those present to enjoy the affair were: Mr and Mrs J. J. Curtis, Uncle Bill Curtis, Mrs Ernest Curtis and daughter, of Wichita Falls, W. B. Morgan and family, Tom Morgan and family of Morton, J. S. Edwards and family, Mr and Mrs Cecil Cooper, Mr and Mrs Angus Huckaby and daughter of Memphis, John A. Simmons and family, Mr and Mrs Tommie Bain, Mr and Mrs Ralph Simmons, Vernon Simmons and family, Mr and Mrs John Mann, Grandma Bailey, Otto Gilliland and Clarence Rambo of Hunt county, Miss Maudlow Gilliland, and Billie Bob and J. C. Boone.

President Scraps Farm Board and Combines Several Bureaus Into One Agency; Wins First Round With British on Debts.

WHAT the President terms the "farm credit administration" was created by executive order which will be operative May 27.

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., will be headed by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., with the title of governor, and an assistant, for present at least, Paul Bestor, with the title of commissioner.

Governor Morgenthau said, after issuance of the order, that the activities of the government in granting loans to farmers and farm organizations will be fully co-ordinated. In the past, with the government making loans through the Department of Agriculture, the R. F. C., the farm board and other agencies, varying rates of interest were charged and different purposes and conditions were set up, under the new regime, Governor Morgenthau said, unity of purpose and treatment will be observed strictly.

He also declared that all employees of the new credit administration will be placed under civil service, instead of under a patronage system as exists in many of the bureaus at present. The executive order issued by the President directed the abolishment of the farm stabilization activities of the farm board which have resulted in losses of three hundred million dollars, except that he provided they should be continued only to liquidate the left over holdings of the board. This consists of thirty million bushels of wheat and twenty-eight thousand bales of cotton.

In a message to congress accompanying the order President Roosevelt said his purpose was to "maintain and strengthen a sound and permanent system of co-operative agricultural credit subject to federal supervision and operated on the basis of providing the maximum of security to present and prospective investors in bonds and debentures resting on farm mortgages or other agricultural securities—all for the purpose of meeting the credit needs of agriculture at minimum cost."

The consolidation of these various activities under one head is expected to result in an administrative saving of approximately two million dollars a year.

THE efforts of European nations to cancel or greatly reduce the war debts owed to the United States are on, and it is said President Roosevelt has won the first skirmish to the extent of considering world economic conditions before any discussion of war debts.

As a result of Mr. Roosevelt's insistence it is reported the British government has backed down from the position announced by Austen Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, when he said that Britain would not swap economic concessions for revision of the debt.

The British are now willing to discuss economic concessions before the debt question is taken up. By virtue of this sudden change of front on the part of the MacDonald ministry, the world economic conference is likely to be held in April or May instead of next summer or autumn, as the European powers were planning.

The British ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, has discussed with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, the questions to come before the economic conference before the debt question is considered.

The French are also willing to discuss economic questions before considering war debts. Following a "White House conference between President Roosevelt and M. Jacques Stern, vice chairman of the finance committee of the French chamber of deputies, M. Stern said that he had not discussed war debts with the President; that their conversation had been confined to the economic conference which the deputy thought "it would be very important to hold as soon as circumstances possible."

Asked about the debt, he said "it would be very important for France to pay the Dorember installment as a mark of respect to President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull have taken the position from the start that the war debts are secondary in importance to the removal of tariff, embargo, quota, exchange and other restrictions on international trade."

A preparatory commission named for the purpose of preparing a agenda for the economic conference has listed the following subjects for consideration:

"The original and present weight of debt and interest obligations.
"Price of primary commodities and price of manufactured goods, both wholesale and retail.
"The existing volume of production in different staple commodities entering in world trade.

"The willingness of creditors to make international loans and their unwillingness to receive payment in goods and services.

"The distribution in different countries of the available gold supplies of the world.

"The disharmony between the stable and fluctuating rates of exchange."
Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, of England, will preside at the economic conference and will name the date for its convening.

PROGRESS of the farm relief bill in the senate has been slow. Senatorial dignity would not permit of the speeding up of the ponderous machinery of the upper house regardless of the plea of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for speed and for the passage of the bill as originally written by the President and his advisors. There just had to be hearings on the bill and everybody, for and against, must have a chance to talk, and they have talked.

At this writing it seems that "a" bill will eventually pass but whether it will be the bill that passed the house, and is acceptable to the administration, or whether it will be so radically changed as to be unrecognized by its proponents, or unacceptable at the White House, is for the future to reveal.

FARM relief in other directions moved along more rapidly. The proposal for refinancing farm mortgages has taken form and the proposition is for the selling of farm mortgage bonds to the extent of from nine to ten billion dollars on which the government will guarantee the interest, but not the principal. It is expected the government's guarantee of interest will make the bonds marketable at a comparatively low interest rate.

Farm leaders have urged a government guarantee of the principal on such a bond issue, but such a guarantee would make them a direct obligation of the government, and mean simply an increase in the national debt of nine or ten billion dollars. Guaranteeing the interest only means that should there be a complete default on the part of the farmers, which is never probable, the treasury would have from three hundred to four hundred million dollars to pay annually until the bonds had matured.

THERE is a growing belief in Washington that the budget will not be balanced during the next fiscal year beginning July 1, regardless of the economies made by cutting the pay of government employees, reorganization of bureaus and departments, and reductions in payments to veterans, amounting to an expected total of some seven hundred millions, and regardless of an added revenue from the tax on beer, estimated at about one hundred and fifty million.

The relief grant of five hundred millions provided for in a bill now before congress, and the two hundred millions for the reforestation plans, will alone offset the economies. It is probable that the more ambitious plans of the President will be financed through new bond issues, but there will be increased interest charges and a sinking fund to provide for which will run into hundreds of millions annually.

Along with these things tax yields are falling short of estimates because of the continued prostration of business.

FIVE hundred million dollars to be provided by the federal government and distributed as unemployment relief by the states is called for in a bill introduced in the senate by Senators Wagner of New York, Costigan of Colorado, and La Follette of Wisconsin.

The bill provides that the huge sum shall be given outright to such states as shall apply for aid, and places the responsibility for seeing that the money is given wisely in the hands of a "federal relief administrator."

This official would be appointed by the President, with the consent of the senate, and carry on his duties independent of any other department.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation is given authority, under the bill, to borrow the five hundred million dollars, but will have no powers beyond turning the money over to the relief administrator. Ten days after the appointment of the relief executive, the Reconstruction Finance corporation would cease to have any control over the granting of loans to states or municipalities for relief purposes, and thus all of the government's relief financing would be under the one jurisdiction.

A NATION-WIDE boycott on all Jewish business and professional men in Germany has been clamped down by Chancellor Hitler's National Socialist party. The announcement states that it will last "until Jewish life in Germany is paralyzed." Hitler's government, while not officially countenancing the boycott, is not expected to intervene.

At Nazi headquarters it was said that the boycott "is a purely defensive measure solely directed against German Jewry as retaliation for the anti-German campaign in foreign countries."
All over Germany Jewish owned shops and department stores closed their doors and were picketed by storm troopers.

THE President's bill providing for the employment of 250,000 men for the purpose of reforestation and other work in government forest reserves and along the rivers, passed congress with some amendments made by the senate. One of these amendments renounces the state quota restrictions on the sixty-eight million dollars remaining of the relief funds in the hands of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. This makes it possible for states that have borrowed up to the quota previously provided to continue to borrow until the sixty-eight million is exhausted.

In the house the bill was adopted without a roll call, but with the Republican members in opposition. This opposition was not directed at the bill but at the methods of ruling the house by the Democratic majority. It was the first of the administration bills that had not received non-partisan support. The bill was strongly opposed by President Green of the American Federation of Labor.

DIRECTOR of the Budget Lewis W. Douglas has completed the task of revising the payment to veterans under the terms of the economy bill giving the President dictatorial powers for such revision. This revision eliminates from the pension rolls all veterans with non-service disabilities, and reduces the payments to those with service disabilities by approximately 15 per cent, the same percentage of reduction as that made in the wages of government employees.

The economies that either have been, or are expected to be, effected cover the reduction of 15 per cent in the wages of all government employees made by the President; reduction in veterans' benefits and administration now made; reorganization of the departments and bureaus in the administrative branch of the government, for which the President has authority, and on which he is now working; postal service economies, now being considered. When all have been completed the following savings will have been effected:

Veterans' benefits and administration	$480,000,000
Reorganization of administrative branch of the government, including abolition of functions	250,000,000
Reduction in the pay of government employees	125,000,000
Postal service economies	75,000,000
Total	$930,000,000

Among the new expenditures that will offset these savings is the appropriation of five hundred million dollars as a gift to the states to be used for non-employment relief, and the reforestation plan of the President which congress has authorized, and which involves an expenditure of not less than two hundred million dollars.

MEXICAN Communists object to Josephus Daniels as American ambassador at Mexico City. Posters captioned "Out with Daniels" have appeared on walls in the capital. They call him "the murderer of Azueta and Uribe." These men were Mexicans who were killed in the fighting when United States forces landed at Vera Cruz in 1914. At that time Mr. Daniels was secretary of the navy.

UNDER the authority granted him by congress the President has ordered a 15 per cent cut in the pay of all federal employees, effective April 1. The order affects the employees in all departments including officers and enlisted men in the army and navy, Post Office department, and all others on the government pay rolls, a total of approximately 800,000.

The authority given by congress provided for such cut as reduced living expenses might warrant up to a total of 15 per cent. An investigation of living costs made by the Department of Labor showed a decrease from June 30 of last year to the present time of 23.7 per cent. On the strength of that report the President ordered the cut in pay to the limit of that allowed by the terms of the economy law. It is estimated the saving to the government will be approximately $125,000,000 annually.

FEDERAL regulation of new stock and bond issues is proposed by the President. He asks the passage of legislation that will require the organizers, promoters, and sellers of the issues to submit for public information a complete financial statement concerning the stocks and bonds offered.

The proposed law would provide that full information be given on every prospectus offering securities for public sale, and similar information be made available at other sources. Bonuses and commissions paid to sellers would also be revealed to the public.

No serious objection to the terms of the bill is expected in either the house or the senate.

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

There can be no doubt any longer that President Roosevelt is going about the job of cutting down government expenses with utmost sincerity and seriousness. How far he will, or can, go remains to be seen, of course. But he has his subordinates at work in a way that surely is destined to produce results of considerable importance.

men to feel something of the same fear known to the small boy who is compelled to walk by a cemetery late at night. They appear to be "jumpy." Besides, the Rhineland is traditionally a potential battleground. France always has been Germany's "potential enemy." That which France won in the treaty of Versailles through the fighting at the Marne and the other great battles still is considered by Germans to belong to Germany. Then, there is the so-called Polish corridor which was set up. That is neither liked by the Germans nor the Poles, and Hitler has promised to correct that situation. France shakes in her boots at that thought.

That is one part of the picture. Where is the danger point? None of my sources of information have been able to put their fingers on it, but they feel there is some specific danger point.

On the other side of the picture, there is German fascism. It is dominated by Hitler as completely as Mussolini ever dominated Italian fascism. Consequently, it may be assumed that Hitler must consolidate his own political fronts just as Mussolini found it necessary to do when he launched his fascist ship of state for Italy. Further, except for minor moves, Mussolini has refrained from venturing too far afield in foreign matters. This may have been due to a desire to avoid meeting the French in the dark, or it may have been due solely to Mussolini's policy. At any rate, it has not happened. So, if Hitler models his program after that of the Italian duce, reasonable assumptions would be that fear of an arising German nationalism is premature and unwarranted.

Howe About:

Making a Fortune Problem for Stenographers Reading

By ED HOWE

HOW is a fortune made? In seven out of ten this is the process: A young man finds himself with a wife on his hands, and a family of children coming on. (How universally children keep coming on!) He works and saves with a view of providing for them. From an expert workman he becomes foreman, superintendent, proprietor in a small way, and works long hours. He discovers that the more reliable he is, the more he helps in community affairs, the more his business prospers. In course of time his little business becomes a big business, if he continues to manage it well. Finally, along toward old age, he becomes well-to-do; occasionally rich. And at forty, fifty or sixty he is more reliable than he was at twenty or at thirty, when a small business man, foreman or superintendent. There is nothing in the general belief that as soon as a good workman is advanced, he becomes more careless in his morals.

A man in Florida, separated from his wife, employed a woman as his secretary. One day when the secretary came out of her office she was shot and killed by the wife; five balls were fired, and although women are supposed to be poor pistol shots, every one was deadly. Was the trouble between the husband and wife due to the bad acts of the secretary? If the secretary was actually an honest woman, seven newspaper readers out of ten, and the twelve jurymen to be called later to decide the case, will believe she was not. It is an exhibition of human unfairness that the millions of good girls who study stenography at business colleges must consider.

Books, newspapers, magazines and pamphlets have become so numerous many say they are a pest.

Still, in the stream of print is all the wisdom the race has accumulated, and all the good writing; the problem is to find it in the pile of rubbish.

I have a friend of reasonable taste who is an enormous reader. He gets his start in selecting books of possible value by belonging to book clubs in New York, and has accumulated a great number of such selections. I lately visited him, and came away with ten he specially recommended. Only three of them actually interested me, although I looked over the others, and found some curious things in the process.

Books are like men; so many of them do not amount to anything. I know an old fellow who walks occasionally, for the benefit of the exercise and fresh air, and during these walks he looks straight ahead, that he may see as few men as possible.

"The English," says a Canadian writer, "seem to have a world perspective, a world outlook and world philosophy, unequalled by any other people on earth." I neither deny nor accept the statement, but it causes me to wonder just how much truth there is in it. I should say France and Germany are close rivals of England as possessing, on an average, the wisest and most efficient inhabitants. Up to the time of the war Germany was crowding England for first place; since the war France has shown itself smarter than either of its rivals. The United States is entirely out of the competition, not because of lack of efficiency, but because lack of common sense has become our national misfortune. Some say the island of Java is the Garden of Eden so far as ease of making a living is concerned, and that the rule of the Hollanders comes near being the wisest and best. Denmark, Sweden, Norway, should be considered in picking out the country best managed. Switzerland, although it has far better scenery than soil, has long attracted attention as specially well managed so far as public affairs are concerned.

In reading sea stories I have observed that when there is a strong wind, a good captain drives his ship, and takes risks. Occasionally he meets disaster from driving too hard in a roaring gale; at best the decks, the cook house and life boats are afloat, and the sailors get little rest. The best captains take chances in everything, to get along. Still, a man who drives his ship in a hurricane, to make up for the days he is becalmed, must have sound judgment; sound knowledge as to the strength of ropes, masts and sails.

In my home in the country I have heard no show commended as much as "Of Thee I Sing." The show has not come within two or three hundred miles of me, but travelers to the big towns have seen it, and told me of its unusual cleverness.

The writers of the play have made a great fortune. Soon we will be hearing of their yachts, their strings of race horses, of their being sued for alimony.
Can anyone doubt they have won their distinction and money honestly? Any poor man who abuses them because they do not divide with him, or charges they need a new form of government because these men have succeeded, is unfair and mean.

These men spent many a day and dollar in drilling dry holes; now that they have struck oil, they are fairly entitled to all a gusher may bring in.

Good Bread High in Food Values

Contains Large Percentage of Calories Needed for One's Health.

Bread in some form or another has been from the beginning of civilization an important contribution to the nutrition of mankind. After man discovered that he could grind wild grain into meal, mix this with water and bake bread between hot stones, he began the cultivation of grain for food and the establishment of a settled home.

It was centuries later that the use of "leaven" was discovered. Bread in anything like its modern form is said to have been first made by the Egyptians. The first bread was merely cakes of coarsely ground meal held together by water. A great variety of grain was used for bread. In this country we find wheat bread is used almost to the exclusion of other grains. Most of this bread is made from refined wheat flour, known as "white" flour. In France and England this is the favorite bread. In the other countries of Europe we find rye bread, known in some places as black bread, used largely.

"A fine white loaf" was a symbol of luxury food, and used only by the great until the last centuries, when large scale milling operations began to produce fine white flour in large quantities. Within a much shorter space of time commercial bakeries turning out thousands of loaves of bread each day have taken over the task of baking bread for large communities. The majority of this bread is made from white flour and the quality produced is often excellent, sometimes much better than the average loaf of home-made bread. Large scale operations has put the loaf on the market at a cost which little more than covers the cost of the material and fuel for a home-baked loaf. Prices per pound differ, depending largely upon the other ingredients besides flour used in its preparation. "Milk" bread is preferable from the food value standpoint.

We depend upon bread for a goodly percentage of the calories needed daily in our diet. We get from it an appreciable amount of protein. Bread, made as it is from a good quality wheat, with the addition of shortening, milk and yeast, is a valuable food for the sake of its "fuel" and protein. It is also so easy for digestion that it is completely utilized. At the same time it is an inexpensive source of food.

Bread must, of course, be supplemented by other foods which provide more protein, minerals and vitamins. In a well-varied diet we will get the supplements easily from extra milk, meat, eggs and vegetables and fruits. Whole wheat bread is of higher value in minerals, especially iron, and in vitamin B, than white bread. It is not so generally popular as white bread, but it is a good plan to use it to some extent in the weekly meal plan. Where the money to be spent for food is too limited in amount to allow of the purchase of liberal amounts of the more expensive foods, whole wheat bread should be counted upon to provide iron and vitamin B.

From the nutritive points of menus we should not discount the contribution of bread to the diet. We hear so much about the value of fruits, vegetables and milk that we somehow forget the importance of this inexpensive food.
