HEDLEY P. T. A.

The Hedley Parent Teacher Association met in regular session Thursday, Sept. 21st. An enjoyable program was rendered, beginning with a song entitled "By the Waters of Minnetonka" sung by a group of Mother Singers, led by Mrs. Hooker, with Mrs. Thompson at the piano.

Mr. Steele gave a very interesting address on the subject, "Living Together in the Home," stressing the value of cooperation between parents and children in the home, thereby transmitting a cooperative spirit into the child mind that would not only be beneficial in the home, but would reach out into church, school and community life. All parents should have heard this splendid talk.

After a short business session adjournment was made, with announcement of the P T A Social to be given Thursday evening, Oct. 5th, at 8 o'clock. Everyone is cordially invited and urged to come.

MORE COTTON CHECKS ARRIVE FOR FARMERS

Another batch of cotton plow-up checks reached Donley County the past week end—about 100, we are told, amounting to $28,893.

This makes 207 checks, for $56,000, received in the county out of 874 checks, for $250,000, due Donley County.

They are just fine when they come—but awfully slow about coming.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any store.

 County of Donley.

On this 29th day of August, A. D. 1933 the Commissioners Court of said county being called and convened in special session for the purpose of canvassing the votes and certifying the results of an election heretofore held on the 26th day of August A. D. 1933 to determine whether or not the sale of beer containing not more than three and two-tenths per centum (3.2%) of alcohol by weight should be prohibited or permitted in Donley county, Texas; and a quorum being present, this court proceeded to canvass the votes and certify the results of said election; and it appearing to the court that said election was in all things held in conformity with law, and in accordance with an order, heretofore and on the 7th day of August A. Modern Electric Cookery "Seals-In" Vital Health Elements of Foods

In contrast to old-fashioned methods of cookery, the modern Electric Range makes it possible to serve meals of surpassing healthfulness... as well as incomparable flavor.

And the reason is simple. With electricity foods are cooked in a minimum amount of water, or entirely in their own juices. The heat is concentrated directly on the bottom of the utensil... so the steam rises, condenses on the cool lid, and drops back into the vessel... to be used over and over. Thus, all vital food values remain "sealed-in"!

Don't Pour Food-Values Down the Sink!

If you're using an old-fashioned method of cookery, the most valuable elements of your foods are going into the sink... with the water you pour off vegetables and meats!

For Health, for Convenience, and for Economy you should cook the modern electrical way. Prices and terms... right now... allow your purchase to fit into the family budget with ease. Ask for a demonstration of modern Electric Cookery today!

Call us for an individual investigation of your use of electric service, to determine the cost of cooking by electricity in your home. You may be surprised to know that there are many cases where electric cookery actually decreases the total of electric and gas bills.

Tony Lawton was forty-five; Mary was twenty. His deep brown eyes, a trifle grave as they watched the lovely girl before him, lighted with a smile as she laughed at him.

"Here, give me a hand." She pulled herself—with his help—up from her low chair with a light spring.

"Come on, Bob, let's have a swim." Bob Eldridge's blue eyes lighted to their normal color from the somber darkness that had veiled them as he listened to the banter between the other two.

"Good!" he said. "I'm your man for a swim. Those doubles just warmed me up for the day."

He grinned at Tony quite without "see. But Tony's eyes became grave

And as for tonight—I'll be ready dance till morning. But say, Lawton, why don't you get into your swimming suit and come along. Just sun yourself, old man, if you're too tired a swim. It's a swell day."

Tony considered. Then he jumped sky to his feet. All right," he said, and the three started across the sea toward the clubhouse that stood white against the blue sea behind.

Tony was forty-five; Bob was twenty.

Both men were in love with Mary and at the moment Mary was in love only with life—a gay and happy and safe life, as she found it at Bradley's beach.

Until Bob's coming, Tony had loved life at Bradley's as much as Mary had. He had been spending a three weeks' vacation there at the hotel—spending it there because he had met Mary, fallen head over heels in love with her, and followed her to her summer home.

He had found it hard to bridge the gap in their ages in the city where they both lived a rather prominent life, socially.

His work as an important lawyer was engrossing.

He was just old enough to find the use, modern young whirl a little baffling.

But here at Bradley's it hadn't been so hard.

Tony was good looking, always fit physically. Motoring, walking, swimming, tennis, dancing—all he realized in moderation—had given him a Mary a common meeting ground for both were at home. And she had used as unconscious of the twenty years that separated them as he had said nothing to Mary of his liking for her.

He had planned to ask her to marry him just before he went back to town, and then, whether she accepted or refused him, he would have the unspoiled memory of their happy holiday together.

But five days before time for Tony's vacation to end Bob had appeared at Bradley's.

He was, it seemed, a childhood friend of Mary's, and their cottages adjoined.

This alone gave Bob an advantage—Tony was staying at the hotel and he and Mary had a common background of only a few months; Bob lived next door to Mary and the two had known each other forever.

Now, after an hour on the tennis courts—there had been another girl, Bob's partner but she had faded from the picture to keep another date.

Tony suddenly realized that Bob was in love with Mary, too. And something in the way Mary looked at Bob—some exchange of youthful life and understanding—made Tony feel old and out of step.

Youth belonged to youth, he argued to himself—and Mary belonged to Bob. He was just another old fool to have dreamed she might care for him.

As the three walked across the silences getting into their the clubhouse, Tony

"What's got into you, Tony?" she asked.

"You act a hundred!"

"Well, my child," he said lightly, "so I am, nearly."

And he smiled as gaily as he could at the flushed, warm young face beside him.

"And now you youngsters run along. I'll sun myself here, and perhaps not wait for you. But I'll drop around for a good-by before I go."

"I was going to ask you to come over to our place for lunch—both of you. But perhaps you'd rather not—"

"Well," said Tony, still with an effort at lightness, "perhaps I'd better not. I've some things to get together before I go."

Bob looked searchingly at the older man. Then he put out his hand.

"If you get away before I see you again, I want to say good-by now."

The two men shook hands.

"It's been great knowing you. I'm—"

"That's all right," said Tony, looking smilingly into Bob's troubled young eyes. "You're a good fellow, Bob. All kinds of luck."

And he turned and walked slowly down the beach.

Mary took Bob's hand. "Come on," she said, running into the breakers.

"Whose funeral was it, anyway? What on earth were you and Tony talking about?"

Bob didn't answer.

Darned fine fellow Tony was. Bob's pulses raced, as he felt Mary's hand in his. He wasn't afraid of anybody else.

He'd win Mary surely, now. Fine man, Tony.

They dove into the oncoming breakers, swam hardly for a few minutes, and then floated and paddled along until they reached the float.

There they were alone—alone in a world of blue sky and sparkling water. Mary flung herself down in the sunshine.

Bob sat beside her.

Then it happened.

One of those quick, treacherous storms that sometimes seem to come out of a brooding summer sky.

It rose behind the two on the float, Mary looking shoreward, Bob looking at Mary.

And before they knew it the float was rocking and jumping with the chopping waves.

"Come on," said Mary, "let's swim in."

"We can't," said Bob quietly. "It's too rough—too late!"

Blackness and thunder and lightning, and a rocking, swaying world.

And then, out of the gloom, a voice—Tony's.

"Here, you two, jump off the float and climb aboard. I don't dare bring it any closer."

He maneuvered his commandeered motor boat as near them as he could. Bob jumped in the water first. Mary followed him. And that was all Mary knew.

That afternoon she and Bob were sitting on the terrace of her cottage that overlooked the sea—a sea again sparkling and calm under a blue sky.

"But I can't see why Tony didn't come to say good-by," she said.

"He told us he would."

She was still a little wan and weak from her morning's experience.

For a moment Bob was silent.

Then: "Mary," he said, "I told me not to tell you, but I've got to. You passed out, you know, when you struck the water—and I couldn't get you in, so I climbed in his boat and held it while he went in for you. And when he was getting back in the boat with you he gave his leg an awful whack against the side of the boat. He's laid up at the hotel—can't go back to town for a couple of days."

Mary jumped to her feet.

"I must go to him—this minute, Bob."

Bob took her roughly by the shoulders.

"Why, Mary? Why?"

Mary stood there pale and shaking—utterly lovely and desirable in Bob's eyes. Suddenly she smiled at him, a brave smile.

"Bob," she whispered, "I love him. But he'll never know—I just realized myself."

Bob turned miserable eyes away from Mary. He patted her shoulder gently.

"Mary, I'll take you over—if you're sure. But tell him, Mary. He's crazy about you, too. Guess he thought he was too old—but that doesn't matter, does it?"

Mary caught a glimpse of Bob's misery. "Oh, Bob," she said, "I'm sorry. Take me to Tony."

AGE OF SPEED COMES TO FARM

Rubber-Tired Machines to Step Up Production.

Rubber tires have come to the farm. For years farm machines have slogged slowly over rough fields, limited in speed by the steel wheels on which they were mounted, but a revolution in farm machinery design is forecast with introduction of the new implement tire.

The first farm machine designed for use with pneumatic tires is a combine harvester, which recently won loud praise in demonstrations before dirt farmers, government officials, university professors, and farm machinery engineers. (The combine cuts, cleans and threshes grain in one operation and is built for use on farm implement tires.)

The farm implement tires on which the combine is mounted minimize shocks to such an extent that the old speed for harvesting machines is stepped up considerably and the capacity of the machine is increased, according to Goodyear engineers. In addition to increasing the speed and efficiency of the combine, the tires played an important part in reducing its cost to a figure appreciably lower than that of larger combines.

"This is an age of speed," declared H. C. Merritt, a manufacturer of combines. "There is no reason why the farm machinery industry should sit back and allow developments of present-day engineering to pass it by. Air-tired tractors, which have been in use for some months, and now the air-tired combine, set a goal in the new era of farm machinery design, the ultimate purpose of which is the lowering of crop production costs and a reduction of the farmer's investment in equipment."

Application of farm implement tires to other farm machines, a development anticipated in the near future, will meet with an enthusiastic reception from farmers everywhere.

PAINTING REVIVAL GRIPS NATION!

"SHERWIN-WILLIAMS FOR ME" IS SLOGAN

NIGHT PAINTING PRECEDES "4 GENERATION" PARTY. Essexville, Mich. (R. R. No. 1)—With the aid of motor car headlights, painter works far into night to finish painting the "wee bit house" of Mrs. A. MacDonald, 87 years of age, in time for the gathering of the clan. The occasion is Grandma MacDonald's birthday party for her youngest grand daughter—6 months old. Four generations of MacDonalds were represented. Sherwin-Williams Paint, the preferred brand of the MacDonalds for many years, was used on this job.

NEWS PHOTO FLASHES FROM EVERY WALK OF LIFE BRISTLE WITH INTEREST. Unpainted—neglected for years—America has finally awakened to the need of paint. In every section of the country—in every walk of life—painting is the order of this new day. And Sherwin-Williams Paints, famous for quality and low cost, lead the way in the nation's biggest painting revival. Renovize—protect—save—with Sherwin-Williams quality paint this Fall. Don't let Winter rot and rust do further damage to unprotected wood and metal. See your local Sherwin-Williams "Paint Headquarters" at once. Write for a free copy of the new S-W "Home Decorator." The Sherwin-Williams Co., 605 Canal Road, Cleveland, Ohio.

COW CALLER SOUCIE CATCHES "FEVER."

Manteno, Ill.—Celebrities in all walks of life are catching the painting fever. Mr. Trefle Soucie, 75 years old, seven times a champion cow caller, still brings 'em in from half a mile away—without a megaphone. He's painting his barn with S-W Common-wealth Barn Red—a "quality" champion, too.

"SHERWIN-WILLIAMS FOR ME!" Indianapolis, Ind.—A typical scene in a leading department and Sherwin-Williams dealer stores everywhere as "back-to-the-paint-brush" movement gains speed.

NEW YORK ARCHITECT DOES MASTERPIECE IN PAINT. New York City, N. Y.—Mr. Perry M. Duncan, winner of the coveted Winchester Fellowship at Yale University, has produced exquisite room effects in his beautiful new Bronxville home with Sherwin-Williams quality paints. Mr. Duncan says "I found the Sherwin-Williams book 'The Home Decorator' a valuable source for suggestions in planning exteriors and interiors of homes."

HONEST MAN GETS HUGE OFFER! Chicago, Ill.—Mr. Elmer St. Aubin, world's smallest man, contemplates a career of $500 to paint huge Sherwin-Williams spectacular sign with S-W Kem Finishes. This mammoth sign faces "A Century of Progress" and the Illinois Central Railway right-of-way, at 24th St. and the Caper Drive, Chicago. The midget, Mr. St. Aubin, is 36 inches tall, weighs 22 pounds and is 22 years old.

Pewter Sacrificed to Make Patriot Bullets

Pewter vessels, the use of which is being extensively revived, have an interesting historical background. Pewter sets of importance, which were in the homes of the American Colonists, were melted during the War of the American Revolution to make patriot bullets.

The "lead" statue of George III, which formerly stood in Bowling Green, New York city, seems to have been made of coarse commercial pewter, writes John W. Harrington, in the American Druggist. It was torn from its pedestal by the Sons of Liberty and sent to Connecticut for conversion into ammunition. The rarity of Colonial pewter is largely due to its having served the cause of independence. Many silver services were melted down to help pay the expenses of the revolution in the form of currency.

In Colonial times sideboards or chairs were fitted out with "garrets" or sets of pewter consisting of plates placed on edge, pots, and kettles.

COCA-COLA ON BIG TIME! Atlanta, Ga.—This big, timely reminder to "pause and refresh yourself" is 15 feet across. It is the brightest spot in the "upper stratum" of Atlanta. Thousands daily seek its big, red face or call Walnut 8550 and hear a sweet "electrical" voice recommend Coca-Cola and give the correct time, night or day. This mammoth timepiece is finished with Kem Bulletin Colors—another Sherwin-Williams Quality paint.

HOLD IT! WIN $25 CASH. Cleveland, O.—Del Long and Clarence Schultz—S-W News Photographers—want interesting pictures. $25 for every one published. Sherwin-Williams employees excluded. Pictures must be unusual, newsworthy—include the use of some Sherwin-Williams product. Send pictures to Del and Clarence care The Sherwin-Williams Co. LOCAL RETAILERS GOOD MARKET

WHILE Howard Blair, vegetable grower of Macedon, N. Y., was shipping labels on 40 of the lettuce he was exporting to a commission firm in the train pulled out. He was over until the next day. It would be a hard thing to get back on the train.

Blair stumbled onto a market. The same outlet can be developed by a producer who is willing to offer quality and use the packages. Local retailers are glad to buy of produce. It increases the purchase of the farmer.

Strother was teaching agriculture in high school when a survey of the potatoes and much of the vegetables used in Charles and nearby towns were made because local vegetable production was very small. Sensing opportunity, Strother quit his job and bought a small farm.

Market grades and packages were of Greek to him, but he knew constituted quality. So, while his farm in shape to grow them, he made several trips to where he interviewed both buyers and retailers on the kind of produce they would buy from him. "It wasn't auspicious," he said, "I had to take what was offered while I was learning about packing, grading and producing stuff and out of season; but as my produce improved prices picked up and both dealers and storekeepers were anxious to have my stuff. It isn't long before I had the commission men and retailers calling me the phone each afternoon, placing orders for stuff to be delivered the next morning.

"Thus I was able to load up my truck with the assurance that all of it would sell. I saved a lot of time and money by knowing what steps to take, and my prices were good. Tomatoes, for instance, brought $1 a bushel when imported varieties were sold at 90 cents; and cucumbers always sold at a premium of 10 to 20 cents over those that were shipped in. I graded everything, but I didn't mean I sold only the best. I sold 1 and 2 grades sold, too, to grocers in the poorer sections. It didn't cost me anything to deliver since I had to go to anyway."

Les N. Tunnell of Texas finds it profitable to put up his fresh vegetables in glass jars and local grocers sell them on a common basis. Extra care in selecting the stuff to be canned has not only created a demand but good prices.

Evansville, Ind., 40 miles away, is Robert A. Bennett's nearest good market; but his two-ton truck and trailer enables him to get around to city retail shops with his fresh strawberries long before housewives start on their shopping tours. What berries the retailers don't take go to ice cream manufacturers.

Seventy-five retail stores from Tacoma, Ohio, to Wheeling, W. V., buy thousands of dollars' worth of farm crops which are produced and processed on the Bailey Farms. Fruits, vegetables, eggs, milk, butter, cottage cheese, bacon, sausage, ham and scrapple are some of their products, all packed in containers bearing their trade mark "Bailey's Best Farms Products."

"Father started this business," explained J. O. Bailey, who, with his brother, A. C., manages the farms and business. "Years ago father exhibited butter at the Madison Square garden in New York city. It won first prize. This winning was duplicated at several national dairy shows. Producing fine butter, father wasn't satisfied with wholesale prices, so he visited stores and took orders. The reputation the butter had won in competition helped get the first orders; but the quality and taste of the butter made the next sales. The confidence engendered by the butter made it easy to sell ham, sausage and bacon; in fact, retailers asked why father didn't make other things."

MADE MOCK OF LAW AND ORDER

Days of the Molly Maguires Recalled.

The Molly Maguires were members of a lawless band who for six years, from 1867 to 1873, terrorized the newly developed anthracite coal regions of Pottsville, Pa., and the immediate surrounding counties. The name Molly Maguires was derived from a society founded in Ireland about 1843 for the purpose of intimidating landlords or their agents and interfering with evictions of struggling tenants.

Several stories are related in regard to the origin of the name. One which has gained somewhat general currency is that an old woman named Maguire was murdered in Ireland many years ago at the hands of a land agent who, in company with his followers, seized on her property for rent. The sons of the woman and their friends formed a society to which the name of the deceased was given. Another story runs that the society was formed under the auspices of an old woman, Maguire by name, and that the first meetings were held at her house. Still another to the effect that there was a sort of Amazon of that name, who not only planned devilry, but also was foremost in assisting to execute it.

Whatever may have been the causes for the organization of the Molly Maguires in Ireland, no such reasons obtained for their existence in this country. In fact, at first the Molly Maguires were virtually a benevolent association, gaining great influence among the miners, who, after the close of the Civil war, began to feel the pinch of unemployment. The constitution, by-laws and ritual of the society carried idealistic sentiments—friendship, unity and charity. But when steady jobs in the collieries became fewer than there were men to fill them, coercing foremen and employers into keeping their own countrymen at work became a profitable practice of the clanish aggregation.

Refusal to pay certain members of the society for time spent away from their work was one cause for stabbing a mine superintendent twenty times and leaving him to die outside his home. Of a number of his loyal friends who swore they would avenge the murder, five were slain within a period of 48 hours. Other unfortunate victims who met foul deaths at the hands of the Molly Maguires were well known and highly respected citizens in the community in which they lived. Murder as a pastime, with much attendant destruction of property, brought the Molly Maguires to heights of power which shadowed six counties with dread.

By 1873 their grip upon the inhabitants of these counties appeared to be invincible. In that year a young detective named James McParland, attached to the Pinkerton Detective agency of Chicago, was detailed by Franklin B. Gowen, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company, to investigate the Molly Maguires, and expose, capture and punish them for their deeds of violence which had spread terror throughout peaceful communities and left a blood-red trail behind them.

McParland joined the order, revealed their secrets and the sanguinary work of its members, and many of its perpetrators were brought to justice, and the strength and terrorism of its lawless leaders and tools were broken.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Adrift With Humor

WORTH TRYING

The drama was a thrilling one, but a talkative young man had seen it before. In an audible voice he announced what was coming next and described how funny it would be when it did come. He had a pretty girl with him, and he was trying to amuse her.

At length he said: "Did you ever try listening to a play with your eyes shut? You've no idea how queer it seems."

A middle-aged man sat just in front. He twisted himself in his seat and glared.

"Young man," he said, "did you ever try listening to a play with your mouth shut?"

Right, Anyway
Some gulls were following a steamer, and an Irishman said to his neighbor: "Sure, an' they're a nice flock of pigeons."
"They're not pigeons," said his neighbor; "they're gulls."
"Well," said the Irishman, "gulls or boys, they're a nice flock of pigeons."—London Tit-Bits.

FATHER'S TEASER

Father was trying to read his evening paper to while away the time until mother returned from shopping. He was being pestered all the time by the persistent questionings of his young son, who asked for the most impossible information about the most improbable things. Father was becoming irritated.

Then, at the worst point of parental irritation, the boy said: "Daddy, tell me: what is a she-dragon?"

Father replied, in sheer exasperation: "Now, look here, Tommy; one more word about your mother, and off to bed you go!"

"Finish" Not for Finest of Woods

Oil or Varnish Treatment Needed Only to Bring Out Beauty.

The name "Unfinished Furniture" is given to articles requiring stain, paint, and varnish, or oil to complete their finish. White wood, or some other inexpensive variety, is used for the wood itself. Furniture of fine wood has its own style of finishing. It does not come under this cataloging of unfinished furniture. The reason for this is that the fine wood is sufficiently attractive as it is, for it to be used, if so desired, without any finish at all, although this is unwise. This is assuming that the articles are well made. They are good looking even in this state, without the addition of extraneous agents named.

The furniture called "Unfinished" is easily recognized as unfinished by the very appearance of the wood which, at a glance, can be seen to require something more done to it, to make it suitable to go with household furnishings in homes. Pieces can serve utility purposes, but not decorative ones until they are finished.

Furniture of handsome woods is treated with oil or varnish as finishing coats to bring out the beauty of the graining, and to preserve the wood itself. The oil and varnish penetrate the wood fibers and infinitesimal crevices, darkening the latter and thus accenting the beauty of the curves and lines characteristic of whatever wood is thus treated.

Woods of lesser beauty of graining, those which have flat surface tones, lack the handsome character of finely grained woods, and therefore, by this absence, call for decoration. Such woods are generally painted. The coating of two or three applications of paint helps to make them impervious to dents to which the softer woods are liable, and which mar the looks. The hard paint surface, therefore needed protection as well as treatment to which fall inherent of color ing.

To make fine furniture to those who show woods, something akin to irritation by the idea of painting hardwoods. There is displayed a range of material which is eating. This does not mean painted furniture is not good. It is a type distinct in itself, in which the paint lends beauty to a less framework.

It is a mistake, however, when home decorators think to add smartness to fine old wood by coating it with paint. The fine wood should be scraped of its old finish and restored to beauty by a new treatment of the wood to bring back the original graining and color. The wood is given its own type of preservation with oil treatment, and a dull or bright finish with varnish of the correct sort. Dull finish is preferred for handsome wood.
