LIBRARY PROGRAM IS GREAT SUCCESS

The stunt program for the School Library last Friday night was a decided success. All the numbers were excellent.

The first number was a reading by Miss Theresa Webb. Then the "Round Up" by the Choral Club. Next was a musical number by the "Quail Crawdads." Mr. Pickett of Hereford gave a piano selection of his own composition then Virginia Sue Anderson sang two songs, Brownie Nan Lamb gave a reading, and several P. T. A. members gave musical selections.

The last number was a womanless wedding with Charles Rains as bride, Edgar Culwell as bridegroom, R. F. Newman "ma," Barton Armstrong "pa," Jack Beaty little brother, A. V. Hendricks ring bearer, Pete Armstrong flower girl, Edward Bolivar, Arlon Chilcoat and Robert Pickett bridesmaids Joe Everett and Vernon Webb ushers, Truman Caldwell best man, and J. D. Shaw parson.

Prizes were given to Mary Rains Bridges, Jerry Hant and Ruby Dell Aldridge in the ticket sales contest.

Total sales amounted to about $27, which will be spent for books needed in our library. Plans are already afoot for the next library drive.

EX-SENIORS PLAY ON OCTOBER 21

"The Mystery in the Third Gable," a drama in three acts, is to be produced by ex-Seniors for banquet funds, October 21. It is an all around good cast.

Judge Sherwood, the terror of bootleggers, rents a lonely, picturesque old house near the sea coast and goes there with his family for a much needed rest.

The Judge is played by J. D. Shaw, class of '31. He will be remembered by the role of John in His Best Investment. Peggy Caldwell, class of '26, plays the part of Mrs. Sherwood. Their children, Sally and Tom, are Ann Ruth Mitchell, and James Webb, class of '31. The housekeeper and her son, Roy, who furnish the mystery, are interpreted by Verda Gilliam and R. F. Newman. The other characters are just as well cast.

Plan to attend. You will enjoy the performance.

Prices, 10 and 30 cents. High School auditorium.

SYNOPSIS

Doris retires from the starter. "Where do you suppose that woman is at this hour? Not home from last night's party, I expect."
"You—your—unspokeable." She drew herself to the farther side of the car. She was seething. Rocky seemed engaged in a bitter brooding. They said nothing more until he opened the door of the car for her to alight.
Doris retreated from his extended hand. "I can get out of this car quite well without assistance."
He seized her arm and pulled her out roughly. "Stop acting like a fool."
They stood eye to eye, Doris on the step above him, outraged, panting with fury. At that moment nothing but physical violence could have satisfied Doris. This man had her so completely at his mercy. She was so helpless. She had no place to go—no one to turn to. And he insulted her, humiliated her. She could not think of words to express her fury. Everything else had gone from her mind.
He too was filled with hate. His mouth was drawn into ugly lines. His eyes looked at her mercilessly.
"You—" he began.
The cheery voice of Oscar Du Val boomed at them. "Ah, my children, home again! Good. I thought you might be late for lunch."
Rocky reached out his hand toward her, smiling hypocritically. It was the last straw. She raised her fists in the air and struck out desperately. In her madness she hit the umbrella stand. It knocked over, hitting Rocky violently.
Taken by surprise, he uttered a loud "Ouch."
"I hope it hurts!"
Rocky whispered, venomously, "This is the limit. This ends everything." He rubbed his wounds tenderly.
"And not too soon for me, either!" said Doris.
They went in to lunch. Mr. and Mrs. Du Val noticed nothing amiss.
The meal seemed long and unendurable. Rocky was silent and brooding. Doris felt depressed. Where did she belong? Where should she go?
She considered taking Mrs. Du Val into her confidence. Rocky's mother had been so kind—had seemed such a

CHAPTER V—Continued

Rocky pulled a chair up to the table and sat down. "Draw up, dream girl," he said gleefully. "Rather, darling, let me arrange your pillows for you."
There seemed nothing else she could do about it, so Doris scrambled into bed. Rocky poked pillows behind her. "Jolly, isn't it?"
"What?"
"Oh—having our own little love nest and being so fond of one another."
Doris spoon poked tremblingly into the pillow. She felt a little rock about where the Alice spatterdock may seem jolly to you." She looked unsmilingly.
She opened her eyes in pretended surprise. "You mean to say it isn't with your love of adventure?"
The woman, and on our wedding you were so crazy about me!"
Doris was scarlet. For a moment she thought that Rocky meant they had a wedding day. It was too absurd. If only he would stop teasing. It was baffling enough not to know what had happened to her.
Her breakfast we'll drive into the city," said Rocky. "I want to call on Mother without Mother finding it strange."
"Do alone."
"You don't crave my company."
"Frankly I don't."
He looked at her. She saw that his sardonic mood was gone. He was hurt, she thought, and angry.
"Well, I'm not so d—d keen about either. It's not good for young people to be always with us old ones."
"We love it," Doris spoke impulsively.
Rocky glared at her.
"As a matter of fact, Doris and I are leaving for New York this afternoon, if you don't mind," he said.
Doris' heart leaped with fear. So she was to leave this place—leave Mrs. Du Val, her only friend in the world. And where should she go in New York?
She rose. "I'll go and pack," she said. "What time does the train leave?"
"I'll drive you in my car," said Rocky.
Doris walked swiftly out of the room so that they would not see her. Rocky's bitter taunt recurred to her—he seemed to think she was some kind of an evil woman. His eyes were so unfriendly and cruel. If he knew the truth he would turn her over to the police. Perhaps he would anyway. The least he would do would be to get her away in an asylum.
She packed quickly. What the future held in store for her she could not guess. This adventure had turned out to be farcical. "To anyone else it would be farcical although it doesn't seem so funny to me," she thought.
Doris accused herself unmercifully. She ought to have known that Mrs. Du Val was not acquainted with her. One does not run into friends so easily when one is lost in New York.

"I Don't Think I Care at All About Having You Kiss Me," She Said Confusedly.

How, now, would she find her friend (her parents, her—her mind shied away)—her husband? Then she thought again with terror of the man in the cab. If she did find her friends, it meant finding that man again.
Of course he was her husband.
She looked at herself earnestly in the mirror. She was dressed in the tweed that she had worn on the day of her meeting with Mrs. Du Val. The face, young and anxious, looked back at her. She was absolutely alone in the world. And now she was going out in it—without friends, without money.
Rocky knocked peremptorily on the door.
"Are you ready?" he asked curtly.
"Certainly," she said promptly.
She gathered up her gloves. She took one look around the pretty faultless room. Her heaven. "Good-by," she thought silently. "Good-by."
Bending her head so that Rocky might not see her face she left the room.
She took her leave in a daze. Mrs. Du Val full of admonitions, smiles and tears—Oscar Du Val neglecting his precious work to bid her farewell—the kisses, the smiling servants—Rocky at the wheel grim, saying little—then the grinding gears—and the last look over the shoulder—
Then she was riding over the road beside Rocky.
He spoke once on the long journey: "I'll take you as far as New York," he said unpleasantly. "But then I'm afraid we'll have to part company."
Frightened, horrified, forlorn, Doris still felt that she would rather die than let him know how completely helpless she was.
"You can drop me at the Biltmore," she said.
"O. K."
Doris' throat was dry, her cheeks hot from the sun. She hoped that she would not cry. It would be awful if she broke down in front of Rocky.
The drive was never going to end. Doris decided that she could sleep in the park that night. She could pawn her baggage and look for a job.
Rocky smoked cigarette after cigarette, his eyes squinting, his mouth sardonic and unhappy. The hills gave way to the Bronx River parkway.
Then Rocky turned off Fifth avenue into a side street and brought the car to a standstill. He got out, walked around the car and opened the door. She looked at him blankly.
"Well?"
"Get out!"
"But why—here?"
"I've decided you're coming with me to have a showdown with Doris."
"Is this—is this where you live?"
"As if you didn't know it."
Doris sighed. It was so hot. She opened her bag and drew out her powder case. "Come on," Rocky commanded impatiently.
"Oh—all right." She had small hope that Rocky's wife would be able to unravel the mystery, but the cool iron grill before Rocky's door looked so inviting.
He smiled at her. "I'm sorry for all my rudeness," he said.
"Oh it's all right. I'm about ready to be handed over to the police anyway." She felt weary and reckless.
"There's something about you that drives me wild. I've seldom met a girl who could get my goat as successfully as you can."
"I must be wonderful that way," Doris agreed.
They entered the elevator, and Rocky pushed the button. The tiny elevator was painted dull blue and decorated with three large mirrors.
Looking at herself Doris saw that she was flushed and bright-eyed from the heat. She thought that she had never looked better in her life, nor felt worse.
The elevator stopped. Rocky opened the door.
"Doris, Doris!"
Rocky's voice boomed emptily through the apartment.
Rocky's wife was not there. As they went in they saw that the place had not been occupied for a long time. Dust lay on everything, and there was evidence that an untidy job of packing had been done there, but not recently.
"H—!" said Rocky. "My devoted wife seems to have left me, bag and baggage. She didn't even leave me a note as far as I can discover." He bent over Doris and seized her suddenly by the shoulders. "And now, my dear young lady, it's up to you to explain. Just exactly what is the game?"
Doris stared back at him. "Take your hands off my shoulders."
"When you answer my question."
But the glare in her eyes had had its effect. She saw that he was pretending to be more angry than he actually was. They seemed to have reached a deadlock. "This is silly," said Doris. "You know perfectly well I know no more about your stupid old wife than you do."
A slight grin announced that Rocky knew himself beaten. His grip on her shoulders became more friendly. "So you think Doris is stupid."
The girl flushed. She did think so, rather she had conceived a dislike for Rocky's wife for some reason not clear to herself. Yet she did not want Rocky to think so. "I think it's stupid to hear so much about her," she said faintly. "I don't know whether she's actually stupid or not."
"You sweet," said Rocky unexpectedly and kissed her.
It seemed forever that his lips stayed on hers, but it was actually only a moment before she was pushing him away. "I don't think I care at all about having you kiss me," she said confusedly. "I don't believe—"

New, for Pudding

Accompaniments That Give Flavor to All Sorts of Desserts.

To those fond of pudding as a dessert, these directions and suggestions by an authority, cannot fail to be of interest:
When the English talk about pudding they usually mean a steamed pudding, often filled with fruits and well spiced and served with a sauce. These puddings are of the type which we call Christmas puddings or suet puddings. Custards and arrowroot puddings are usually designated as milk puddings.
In our country we have a much greater variety of puddings to which we give the pudding title. They are rice, tapioca, blanc manges and some of the gelatin mixtures. Perhaps our standard pudding, however, is that known, for some uncertain reason, as "cottage." I think that there is nothing better than a good cottage pudding, although, I am sure you have suffered as I have at various times and places in trying to eat a very plain poor cake covered with a lumpy sauce of neutral flavor which has been given this name.
Cake for cottage pudding may be plain, that is to say, it may be made with a comparatively small amount of shortening and few eggs, because it is supposed to be served hot from the oven. The cake, however, should be made just as carefully, with the same regard for the proper amount of flour, as is the most delicate cake which is to be served cold. A quick method may be used if the recipe contains the proper amount of ingredients. Let me suggest that a variation of the cottage pudding may be made by baking the mixture in muffin tins. This gives a crustiness which adds to the flavor.
While a butter cake is used for the proverbial cottage pudding, a quick sponge cake is very good indeed when served with a good sauce. These puddings naturally depend largely upon the sauce for their individuality. The simplest sauce of all is made by crushing fresh fruits with plenty of sugar and allowing them to stand some time before they are used. Hard sauce supplies the richness lacking in the cake and is another appropriate sauce to use. A combination of hard sauce with crushed fruit is particularly good. You may like to beat the crushed fruit into whipped cream. Perhaps the sauce most commonly used is flavored with lemon. A hot chocolate sauce, with or without nuts, a butterscotch or maple or any one of the very good sauces which are used with the heavier puddings mentioned above, will be found delicious with any of these cake puddings.
Speed Cake.
2 cups pastry flour, or
1 1/2 cups bread flour and
2 teaspoons corn-starch
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1/2 cup melted fat
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup milk or water
Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Break eggs into mixing bowl, beat slightly with egg beater and add cooled, melted fat, gradually, stirring constantly with beater. Stir in sugar and flavoring. Add one-half cupful liquid and beat minutes. Add half the dry ingredients, rest of liquid, then rest of dry ingredients. Pour into 8 or 9-inch oiled and floured cake pans, and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven, 400 degrees Fahrenheit. Turn out fire and let stand in oven five minutes. Remove from oven. Let stand two or three minutes before removing from pans.

Cottage Pudding.
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup milk
2 1/2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt

Cream the butter, add sugar gradually, and egg well beaten; mix and sift flour, baking powder, and salt; add alternately with milk to first mixture. Bake in a shallow pan in a moderate oven 425 degrees Fahrenheit, 30 minutes, and serve hot with a sauce.

Chocolate Sauce.
2 squares chocolate, or 1/2 cup cocoa
1 cup cold water
2 cups sugar
Pinch salt
2 teaspoons vanilla, or 1 teaspoon essence of mint
2 tablespoons butter

Cut chocolate into five or six pieces or use cocoa and stir over direct heat with the water until smooth and thick. Add sugar and salt and stir until dissolved. Boil three minutes, add vanilla, or mint, and butter and serve hot. This sauce may well be stored in an air-tight jar in the refrigerator and reheated when needed.

Quick Meal.
Broiled ham

I am suggesting a broiled meal tonight. For this the sweet potatoes may be cooked beforehand—perhaps the night before when you are getting supper or in the morning.

...and tomatoes, may be broiled at the same time—the two should be brushed with butter or salad oil before they are put under the broiler, and should be cooked just long enough to brown on both sides. With this type of meal you may like to serve a fresh fruit salad which will be sweet enough to take the place of dessert.

The public is fast returning to liquid laxatives. It is learned that the proper liquid laxative will bring about movement without any at the time, or after.
The dose of a liquid laxative should be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given a light dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.
Doctors are generally agreed that senna is the best laxative for every body. Senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It has the average person's bowels as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.
You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drugstore, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

Observation to Study Observers on Peak in Texas

Observatory provides for astronomy.

Science soon will witness the birth of a new project and construction will start soon the $400,000 McDonald astronomical laboratory to be located on the University of Texas campus and to be located 60 miles from Austin in the heart of the West Texas wilderness.

Not more than twenty persons reside in a ten-mile radius of Mount Locke, but deer, black bear and mountain lions abound. The region is timbered, but in many spots the green terrain is broken by canyons as much as 1,500 feet deep.

Until recently no highway worthy of the name ventured closer than 200 miles to the site, but in recent months the state of Texas has built a road to the base of Mount Locke. Now engineers are mapping out a winding road to make the last 700 feet ascent to the peak.

Ten Buildings Planned.

Some ten buildings will be erected atop Mount Locke to house telescopes and instruments and to serve as dormitories for scientists and their families. In all, ten scientists will be stationed there eventually. The telescope's lens will require three years to prepare and will be the second largest in the world, with an 80-inch reflector.

Neighboring ranchmen, accustomed to the wilderness, are viewing this invasion of the primeval with a great deal of wonderment. Heretofore there have been no aspects of the world of culture. Heretofore the lone cowboy has been that of the region. Now the echoes of a fast-fading "wild West" will be thrown in sharp contrast with the world of today and tomorrow.

Already tourists in large numbers are inspecting the site of the observatory and once it has been completed it will be an attraction of the first magnitude for the thousands who take the road each summer. A land of great natural beauty, once seen almost exclusively by the cowboy and the occasional huntsman will now be opened to the view of all—and a "queer" old man in Paris, Texas, who liked to watch the stars at night gets the credit.

Closed Bank Is Making Good Margin of Profit

Albuquerque, N. M.—The First National bank of Albuquerque has been making money, although it has been closed since April 15, W. A. Kelcher, conservator, revealed here.

Expenses have been cut to a minimum by elimination of rent, lights, and other items of overhead expense, as well as reduction to the minimum of pay rolls by releasing bookkeepers, teller, clerks, and others.

Interest continues to accrue on good notes, and income, therefore, exceeds expenses, leaving a margin of profit.

Plaids for Sports

Sports suits go in heavily for plaids. The garnet-red suede jacket is lined with the same red-and-beige plaid of the frock. Matching plaid hat and carved wood bracelet complete the costume.

Universities Join Hands.

The University of Chicago is to join the University of Texas in the project and the Chicago institution is to pay the bulk of maintenance costs for the plant. Construction cost is to be borne entirely by the University of Texas.

Restoring the Past

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The tendency of much of the present-day thinking is to disregard the past. Many persons would like to eliminate it altogether. Frequently we hear the assertion, emphatically made, "the present takes all our strength, we have no time for impractical pasts!" Even some of our most successful business men speak of history as all "bunk!" In some of our colleges the so-called dead languages, like Latin and Greek, are no longer required courses, but are made elective for the benefit of those who care to choose that line of study.

The past fails to interest some persons because of their lack of a cultural background. All efforts to restore the past is to them wasted effort. The argument runs something like this—the wherewithal essential to food, shelter and pleasure is procured from the present and not the past. What occurred a thousand or only a few hundred years ago bears no vital relationship to present conditions. How my grandfather lived or what he did is of no importance to me unless he left me an inheritance of money. If you would be economically and socially successful, look forward, not backward. The past is like water over the dam, we cannot change it, therefore forget it.

Let it be confessed that it is absolutely impossible to eliminate the past. Whether we like it or not, the past is continually exercising an influence over us. But suppose it were possible to completely do away with the past, what are some of the things we would lose? First, and perhaps most valuable, we would lose the benefit of our experience. The very person who wishes to cut loose from the past is one who is continually making the same mistakes over and over again. He never learns from experience. One may be pardoned for his first mistake, but to repeat it, is folly. Experience has always been the great teacher, and no person is so wise as to be able to dispense with it. We would also have to part with much of the inspiration which art and music has to offer if we denied ourselves any contact with the past. Colleges would have to close many of their lecture halls and libraries bar their doors. The present effort to restore prosperity is nothing new. The N. R. A. has been successfully applied to economic conditions in previous periods of depression. All efforts to restore the past should be acclaimed with appreciation.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

Some stains are sure to get on napery during ripe fruit seasons. Fortunately most of them can be removed although certain fruit stains are stubborn. The essential thing to remember is that the stains should be treated immediately. If boiling water, or even very warm water is poured through them while they are still damp, the coloring matter becomes so weakened by the stream of water that it eventually goes entirely. It is the coloring agent in fruits which makes the stains, and, as we all know, the composition of some colors is more indelible than others. Hence the difficulty of taking out some fruit stains while others are easily removed.

The homemaker can scarcely leave the table to remove stains from napery before they get dry, unless all those at the table are of the home circle. Even then she is not likely to interrupt the meal to do this for any but very bad stains, or those which come on costly linens. So the stains are generally dry before they are treated, but they are so fresh, if she tends to them immediately, that the spots come out almost as readily as if treated when damp.

Force of Water.

The force with which the water runs through stains aids in their removal. So pour the boiling or hot water from a height through the spot. Do not have any other part of the cloth under the spot through which the water is poured. This would mean that the coloring matter would pass through a spotless part of the textile as it percolated through the stain, and thus make a secondary spot of lighter hue beneath. Then both have to be removed. Should it so happen that the real stain proved stubborn, the color in the cloth beneath would take on a like character, although to lesser degree and cause more work.

In fastening the stained portion over

Unhappy Marriages

One of the great causes for unhappy marriages is the idea that it is in a continual state of courtship. Any thinking person must realize that this would be impossible, and actually undesirable. A mawkish sentimentality would result which would prove unsatisfying to the couple, and which would be both amusing and annoying to their friends. Not even engaged couples are constantly courting, in the sense of saying only endearing things to one another and being demonstrative. These things are enhanced in value by their intermittence. Since an engagement is the period of greatest information, it is well to recall it. This does not signify it is the period when love is greatest, for love is of finer and higher caliber. It outlasts infatuation by supplanting it with truer and more precious devotion. It is this love which both husband and wife should treasure in marriage.

Here is a remarkable photograph of a broken iceberg, part white and part deep bottle green, the latter of a kind thought to be caused by minute deposits of rock blown by the wind or the result of volcanic action in recent years in the Weddell sea. But when the e price of eggs got down to Kleck's flock wasn't paying, e began to "think out loud" to wife about new markets, the gaters chorused "let us sell them e people in town."

eggs were different from perfume magazines. People needed good s such as Kleck produced, so he let kids try their hand. And what a ccess they made of the job! Now leck sells all of his eggs to con- sumers, and, instead of delivering him, the people drive out to his farm outside of Emporia, Kan. He gets a margin over wholesale, too. He paid the youngsters 10 per cent for selling.

Robert James had to lease a larger farm because he needed more vege- tables to keep up with the demand created by two boys who sold his pro- duce from house to house. Now he has a crew of ten youngsters ranging from twelve to sixteen years of age, who have pushcart routes of their own making. The routes average 12 blocks, both sides of the street.

When J. R. Robbins' house-to-house milk route got too big for him to handle and supervise his farm work, and yet too small to hire another truck and driver, he turned to boys to deliver his product. The youngsters not only supplied his customers, but operating in localities where they lived, soon had 150 people in several Porter county, Indiana, towns buying not only milk but fruit, sausage, vegetables and

"My boys are a bright lot and I think they appreciate not only the opportunity of making money but learning something which will help them when they are old enough to shift for themselves. ## A Little Bit Humorous

WAS HIS FACE RED!

The reporter had just submitted his manuscript to the editor. Leaving the editorial room, he began to reflect upon what he had written and decided to go back and change something in it.

"I have a few changes to make to that copy I submitted," he said. The editor reached into the waste-paper basket and fished out the great work.

"All right, but make it snappy; the waste-paper baskets will be emptied in five minutes."—Kansas City Star.

No Inducement

"This watch, though so tiny, keeps perfect time," the clerk remarked. "That doesn't make any difference," replied the man, "I'm buying it for my wife and correct time means nothing in her life. A watch is just a bracelet to her."

Fortunate

"Did you hear about that fellow who fell asleep in the bathtub the other day, with the water running?" "No! Did the tub overflow?" "No, it didn't. Luckily he awoke with his mouth open."

Accommodating

STUDY A!

A New York lawyer's observation that occurred once between a bank president and a son who was about to leave the West to engage in business on his own account. Banker Father—Son, on this threshold of your business life, I would like to impress one thought upon your mind. Honesty, ever and always, is the policy that is best. Son—Yes, father. Banker Father—And, I would advise you to read up on the corporation law. It will allow you to discover how many things can do in a business way and be honest.—Border Cities Star.

Some high school girls were singing the anthem for the Sunday morning service. They lacked breath when they came to the line, "A-a-a-men."

The leader, a highly trained musician, said: "Now, girls, if you don't hold that 'A' so long you will have more time for the 'men.'"—Congregationalist.

P. T. A. SOCIAL
 One of the most enjoyable affairs of the season was the P T
 A. Social Thursday evening, Oct
 6th, in High School auditorium under the direction of Mrs. R F.
 Newman, who proved herself a real artist as an entertainer.
 Each feature had been well planned, and it was altogether interesting, from the opening musical number given by Don Pickett and Maxie Shaw and the reading by Miss Grant, to the numerous games played which everyone took part in and thoroughly enjoyed.
 All teachers and patrons should attend these socials if possible, as all are brought together in a friendly, neighborly spirit that will cause them to know and appreciate each other more. Plan now to come to the next social,
 Nov. 2nd, at 7:30 p. m.
