Oscar Banister Passes Away

Oscar Banister, nineteen year old son of Mr and Mrs. Fletcher Banister, who are residents of the Bray community, passed away last Wednesday morning at the St Anthony hospital at Amarillo. His passing was deeply mourned by his father, mother several brothers and sisters, a number of relatives and a host of friends.

For some time he had been staying with an uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Martin Banister, and helping in gathering the crop. Oscar was apparently in a fair state of health, and on Saturday had driven with Mrs. Banister and other relatives to Amarillo to do some shopping. That night, after returning home, he sat down to amuse himself with the radio, which he continued long after the remainder of the household had retired. During the night his uncle and aunt were awakened by his groans, and his parents and the family physician, Dr. Webb, were summoned. It was readily seen that he was critically ill, and on Sunday he was rushed to the hospital and there he fought with the spectre of death until the end came Wednesday morning, when he placidly yielded and peacefully passed into the great beyond. But while the parting brings grief to his many friends, there is the consolation that he has gone to a home where there is no more sorrow or pain.

Oscar was a quiet, peaceable, young man, who was admired by all who knew him; he was an obedient son, who gladly bore his share of the burdens of the home and brought happiness to his loved ones. It is to be regretted that the world does not have more young men of his kind.

His parting brings sorrow and grief to his loved ones. There is an empty chair that will ever be a reminder of the one whose absence is so sorrowfully missed. There is a void feeling in the heart that is beyond human power to forget; but no doubt if he speak, he would say with the poet: "May there be no mourning at the bar
When I put out to sea"

SCHOOL NEWS

Editor Estlack, of The Donley County Leader, will speak at the school auditorium Friday morning at 9 o'clock. Mr. Steele would like for all patrons to hear Mr Estlack's address.

The presence and words of public spirited men of our own community or from other sections of the country are a great help to our school; but the fathers and mothers should show enough interest to come and hear these men who go to the trouble to come and speak for us at their own expense and for no other reason except to be of service.

On Wednesday night, Nov 29, the coronation ceremony was presented under the supervision of Mrs. Davenport Miss Gwen Dolyn Gunn, a member of the Junior class, was crowned queen of the carnival. This carnival, sponsored by the P. T. A. was a marked success.

The Owls went to Estelline Friday night to play ball. They went into the game with high spirit and a big smile and played some good ball. They won the game with a lead of about 18 points. To hear the boys talk they seem to have had a good time, anyway we hope they did, and we want them to keep up the good record they have started.

A Thanksgiving program was very ably rendered Wednesday morning by the sixth grade. Miss Donella Gunn also gave a reading. After the program the students gave their contributions to the Thanksgiving box.

The girls will play Wheeler Friday and Saturday nights on the home court. These promise to be good games and well worth your money. Come out and give your team all the backing possible. It helps. The boys will also have a game Friday night, but it has not yet been decided with whom they will play. Saturday night they will play Estelline here.

The High School is doing some things this week, in order to surprise the teachers and students.

Woodin Made Acting Treasury Head, Woodin on Leave—President on Relief and Employment—Soviet Recognition Negotiations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Advocates were rather... Woodin, still suffering from the throat infection that had bedeviled him all year... Roosevelt... Dean Acheson... Secretary of the treasury and Henry Morgenthau...

Mr. Woodin, long a close friend and... of Mr. Roosevelt, is one of the Cornell University group that includes Prof. ...

So far as known, Morgenthau has never... As governor of the... As governor of the... As governor of the...

Mr. Woodin announced that he would go to Arizona in search of renewed health and that he would accept no salary from the government during his leave of absence.

GOVERNORS, mayors and relief administrators in large numbers gathered in Washington to pledge assistance in the government's drive to put 4,000,000 persons back to work within a month.

"You national government is not trying to take advantage one way or the other of the needs for human relief... We expect the same spirit on the part of every governor of the 48 states... We expect the same spirit on the part of the mayors and relief administrators."

"We would like to have a rule that everyone associated with relief work never ask whether a person needing assistance be Democrat, Republican, Socialist or anything else."

Mr. Roosevelt described his gigantic employment venture, which will be engineered by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, as a "partnership between the United States, the states and local governments in which all are expected to do their share."

DETERMINED to give the monetary plan of Professors Warren and Rogers a full chance to work out, the President... It was stated authoritatively that he stands ready...

to turn to devaluation of the dollar and return to the gold standard. In its first three weeks the program of buying gold at premium prices at home and abroad raised the price of gold considerably.

The "committee for the nation," whose ideas are largely embodied in the present monetary program, now has a rival organization, known as the "committee on monetary policy."

"1. Recovery can be achieved only through an increased volume of business, which increases wages and the whole national income."

"2. The fundamental condition for an increased volume of business is confidence in the dollar and in the national credit, and a reasonable expectation of profit for individual enterprise, in industry, in trade, and in agriculture."

"3. Confidence in the dollar and in the national credit demands that currency experimentation be abandoned, and that depreciation of the currency be stopped before it gets out of hand."

"4. A higher price level is desirable for farmers, wage earners and business men, big and little—and this cannot be achieved by manipulation of the currency."

"5. Further depreciation of the dollar by government action is the road to printing press money, which means further disorganization of agriculture and industrial production, and the ultimate impoverishment of the nation—of its wage earners, its farmers and of every individual citizen, debtor and creditor alike."

With the earnest, not to say eager, assistance of William Bullitt, special assistant secretary of state for Russian affairs, the conversations leading up to recognition of the Soviet government proceeded in Washington.

But because the matter was so complicated, and because President Roosevelt insisted on discussing with M. Litvinov the issues previously covered in the State department by Undersecretary William Phillips, the negotiations went into another week.

Mr. Bullitt said that while this was possible, the business might take longer. It appeared Mr. Roosevelt was not disposed to let the matter of economic relations and the question of the Russian debt to Americans go over until after formal recognition.

Senator H. D. Hatfield of West Virginia, one of the few Republican senators who has been bold enough to attack the NRA, also has come out strongly against the recognition of Soviet Russia, but rather ridiculously he bases his objection mainly on the ground that the Russian Communists are atheists.

Further on in his argument the senator becomes more rational, saying: "Is our trade with Russia to be financed by the American government? If so, what are they going to pay us with? Are they to pay us in goods? Then, that means displacement of so many Americans from present and future jobs. Are they to pay us with money obtained from exports to other nations? If so, then they displace by so many our exports that formerly went into these markets."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT left the Capitol for his Thanksgiving holiday at Warm Springs, Ga., and Ambassador Sumner Welles came up from Havana to tell him personally about developments in Cuba. Though many of President Grant's supporters are bitterly opposed to Mr. Welles, and Senator William H. King of Utah has asked the State department to withdraw him from his post, it seems certain that the ambassador will remain there indefinitely.

EDWARD N. HURLEY, an eminent manufacturer and financier of Chicago who was chairman of the United States shipping board during the war, died suddenly of leukemia complicated by pneumonia.

William C. Vanderbilt III, one of the country's wealthiest young men, was killed in an automobile accident in South Carolina as he was on his way from Miami to visit his mother in New York.

GERMANY responded nobly to the demands of Chancellor Hitler for support of his foreign policies. Nearly forty-three and one-half million persons, or 96 per cent of the electorate, went to the polls, and of this vast number only a few more than two million voted "no" to the question submitted to the plebiscite.

"Do you approve the policy of your government and are you ready to recognize it as an expression of your own view and your own will and solemnly pledge yourself to it?"

The voters elected 661 members of the new reichstag, and all of them had been picked by Hitler. But this was not remarkable, since no name not so selected was permitted on the ballots.

Nazi agents throughout the country worked hard to get out every vote, and their success was extraordinary.

REPRESENTATIVE DICKSTEIN of New York and his house committee on immigration and naturalization arrived in Washington and began their investigation of alleged Nazi activities in the United States.

GERMANY having taken itself out of the disarmament conference, Italy now announces it will participate as an observer merely, and the Hungary effective committee says it will maintain a like attitude.

INTERESTING, whether true or not, is a copyright story in the New York Daily News to the effect that Al Smith's visit with President Roosevelt at the White House concerned these shifts and appointments designed to overcome the advantage gained by the fusionists in the New York election:

- 1. Resignation of William H. Woodin as secretary of the treasury and the appointment of John J. Raskob as his successor.
2. Resignation of Jesse Isidor Straus as United States ambassador to France and appointment of United States Senator Royal S. Copeland as his successor.
3. Appointment by Governor Lehman of Al Smith as senator to take Copeland's place.
4. Designation of Postmaster General James A. Farley as the next Democratic candidate for governor of New York.

GREAT BRITAIN is alarmed by the naval building programs of the United States and Japan, and the government announced in the house of commons that it intends to build larger warships within the limits of the naval treaty of 1930.

GEORGE W. NORRIS, the veteran senator from Nebraska, has had to stand for lots of abuse in the past because of his determined advocacy of policies that didn't suit others, but of late he is coming into his own.

Senator Norris has distinguished himself by contributions in the field of statesmanship, education, philanthropy or humanitarianism. Senator Norris was given the medal because of his contributions "in human welfare in the field of statesmanship for almost half a century."

State Representative David Shanahan read the citation, as on all previous occasions, and addresses in laudation of Mr. Norris and his deeds were made by United States Senators James Hamilton Lewis and W. H. Dieterich.

Previous recipients of the Cardinal Newman medal have been: Francis J. Lewis, Chicago; David Kinley, president emeritus of the University of Illinois; Patrick Henry Callahan, Louisville, Ky., and Frank B. Kellogg, St. Paul, former secretary of state.

CONTROLLER GENERAL JOHN R. McCarl, one of the most powerful and independent officials of the government, got into the headlines twice within a few days. First he put an end to the NRA boycott against Henry Ford by informing the secretaries of agriculture and commerce that bids on equipment by Ford dealers must be received. This decision was held to be broad enough to forestall further attempts to keep government business away from dissenters to the NRA, so long as the latter comply with the terms of the codes.

A day or two later Mr. McCarl ruled that William E. Humphrey, deposed federal trade commissioner, no longer is entitled to the salary of that office despite his claims that he is still commissioner. Salary in the amount of $94.44 covering the period October 27 to 31, 1932, was ordered paid to George C. Matthews, who was appointed by President Roosevelt to replace Humphrey.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson

POPE

A man may rise to power, but if he is not able to keep it from going to his own head, his fall will be greater than his rise.

The Pueblos had never taken kindly to Spanish rule. Misunderstandings, prejudice, and ignorance had widened the breach from both sides. The Indians were discontented; they grumbled and plotted.

It remained for a San Juan medicine man, living at Taos, to precipitate events. Pope had given the matter much study, and he gradually evolved a way to unite the Pueblos in rebellion. This was done slowly. Haste did not seem to bring results for the Indians.

Pope began to preach the independence of the Indians. Why should they bow to the white men? They were many more in number, and if they would act at a given time, they could quietly kill every foreigner in the land, and go back to their own ways; and no one would be the wiser.

The idea took root among the Pueblos. One bold stroke, and the trouble would be over, they thought. Even the far-off Hopis of Arizona were inflamed, and joined the plan with enthusiasm.

August 13, 1860, was to be the great day of Pueblo freedom. Runners were sent with knotted cords to show the date. The news spread to all the participating Pueblos (the Pinos, for some reason, were not included), and suppressed excitement beat in every Indian heart.

Since a woman in love has neither conscience nor judgment, and lest some Indian maid might love and talk to a white man, no women were admitted to the plot. Every possible precaution was taken. Pope even put his own brother-in-law to death, because he was not sure of him.

Yet somehow the plot became known, and the only thing to do was to strike at once, before the Spaniards could prepare counter-plans. Six days before the selected date, then, the concerted uprising took place.

There were 33 missionaries in the Pueblo country. Twenty-one of these were killed, and about 375 other colonists, nearly a sixth of the total number. The missions were torn down. Furnishing which had been brought many weary miles—some, even, from Spain—were destroyed. The records of the churches were burned.

Governor Otermin, at Santa Fe, gathered the remaining Spaniards into the government buildings. These were strongly built, and although 3,000 Indians besieged them for ten days, the walls held, and a desperate sortie finally forced the Pueblos back, with considerable loss.

Then, on August 21, about 1,000 Spaniards began the long retreat down the Rio Grande to El Paso, and left the country to the Pueblos, from whom they had taken it. It remained Indian territory for 12 years.

Pope was now at the height of his glory. Richly dressed in the finest ceremonial garments, he made a triumphal journey through the Pueblos, and was hailed as a savior of his people. The Indians returned to their old ways. Those who had been taken to a ceremonial cleansing by the Spaniards; every destroying thing left behind met its fate.

Spanish language and even names were forbidden. All was Pope's order, and the Indians, delighted at the success of their rebellion, hastened to obey their brilliant leader.

But Pope had been given too much power, and he was not strong enough to handle it. He became a despot; those who did not obey every whim were put to death. He demanded all the most beautiful women as his right. From being the deliverer of his people, he became their burden.

Then drought came on the Pueblos—that ancient enemy of the southwestern people. The crops shriveled in the sun, and famine waited, grinning, only a little way off. The Apaches and the Utes, who had been afraid of the Spaniards, now felt that there was nothing to fear, and resumed their raids. Civil war, also, broke out, and the Pueblos divided and fought each other. What a dreary, sorrowful freedom they had won!

And Pope was the cause of it all, they thought. "Those Above" were angry at him, and at them for obeying him, and had sent drought, and enemies without and within, as punishment. Pope had become a sort of king, unreasonable, petulant, altogether intolerable. He could not help them in this trouble. They deposed him.

A new ruler for the Tewa and Tanos was elected, and he tried as well as he could to bring order out of Pope's chaos. In 1688, however, Pope tried a come-back. He reminded his people of their deliverance, and of who had planned it. He wanted to try again, and they gave him the chance.

But Pope's power and glory were departed. He had sat upon the throne of all the Pueblos; he was now an elected ruler of two of them. The great authority had been taken from him, and he was little better than any tribal chief.

One thing alone was left him: he died before Diego de Vargas reconquered the Pueblo country in 1692, and he never knew but that his country was eternally free.

Washington Dig

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—With the farm strikers still threatening mischief and with some labor agitators continuing to make disturbing motions, officials of the government, wherever they can contact people, are counseling patience more than they ever have since the gloom of the depression settled over us.

Urge Patience

It is undoubtedly true that the great bulk of the American people want to see a proper and final solution accomplished for the economic troubles in which the nation, and the world, too, finds itself. But it does no good to hide one's head as an ostrich does and insist that there are no conflicting interests that are dangerous. They exist, and they are virile and they may cause serious trouble. Hence, the government policy of asking those who want to help to be patient.

As nearly as I have been able to arrive at the base of the present crop of conflicting interests, I believe much of the current trouble results from a lack of understanding of the basic problems. It seems to be undeniably true, also, that there are certain individuals or groups of individuals who do not want to understand the situation. They want to use the bad conditions to further selfish ends of their own and they are of the type who will deliberately and carefully plan to mislead whosoever they can enlist as followers. Unfortunately, my research discloses that there are many following such leadership who are doing so blindly.

There seems to be scarcely a single official of the government but who holds the view that such leadership will accomplish anything but self-destruction of a majority of the followers of those cure-all doctrines. That sort of thing never has accomplished anything in all history, and there seems to be no ground for believing there will be any other result this time.

Unfortunately as it may be, in our rush to get back to what we call prosperity, some groups have become jealous of other groups and interests. This jealousy has been translated into action in numerous instances. I do not say that jealousy is the cause of all of the troubles, but indeed selfishness of one kind or another together with personal motives of an ulterior character can surely be said to be the general foundation for all of them.

But the natural question is: why should the situation be one permitting existence of such difficulties as the farm strike and labor troubles? The answer seems to me to lie in a law with which none of us had anything to do, namely, the age-old law of supply and demand. Just as none of us had anything to do with framing that law, none of us is going to be able to amend it or change it. Farm strikes, labor strikes, capital shirking, hoarding of money, none of these things can accomplish the purpose. Indeed, the only way that we can get back to something like normal conditions is by pulling together. That is why the government is urging everyone to be patient within reason.

I am indebted to Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture, for an expression that seems to fit the picture better than any I have heard. He described the condition as one requiring a two-horse team to pull us forward. By that phrase, he meant that producer and laborer must pull together. If one of them balks or is unhitched, the load simply stops. That is all there is to it.

Let us analyze the necessity for pulling together which the government so strongly urges upon us. If all of the cobwebs are swept off of the picture, it seems to me to be fairly clear, and surely there is no point in becoming more confused as to what the need is or what may be done about it or why things move slowly.

After some research into the field of figures, I cannot escape the conclusion that there is an absolute and positive relationship existing between the money paid to labor and the money received by the farmers. There is, therefore, a necessity for the farmer and laboring man keeping in step. If one gets a step ahead, the team is not pulling and conditions grow worse. It really does not matter whether it is the labor-horse or the farmer-horse that moves too fast; the result all through the history of modern economies has been precisely the same, and thus, too much selfishness on either side causes trouble.

The government has collected statistics that provide a most interesting proof of the statement I made above that there must be absolute teamwork. For example, those figures show that gross income of agriculture and pay rolls of factories have been rising together or falling together as conditions are good or poor. And in the last ten years, it happens, they have been in just about the same amount. The records reveal that farmers' gross income in 1923 was just above eleven billion dollars. Labor's wage, as shown or measured by factory pay rolls, was slightly under that figure. Both of these totals shriveled a little bit during the succeeding years until each was between nine and ten billion. There was a further drop in each in 1931 and the total about seven billions. Last year, nearly as accurate records as I could obtain, gross farm income was five billions and labor's wage factory pay rolls was just the same.

From these statistics, compiled after year, the government has developed what the statisticians call an index. It is a yardstick, a basis for measurement. From this index I learn that gross farm income is just about half what can properly be called normal (an index figure of 100), while labor is receiving a total only about 65 per cent of that normal amount.

But to get back to those conflicting interests. Everybody who makes anything or grows anything, in short, every producer, wants to get as high a price as he can for anything he sells. It applies to those who work with their hands and sell their services. Those who sell want as high a price as they can get and those who buy want as low a price as they can force. Hence, labor is making much noise that its wage is not high enough and that its hours are too long, while in the same breath labor is saying retail prices are too high. Farmers get wrought up at this. They say that retail prices are high as compared with the returns they receive, but the attitude of the farmer also includes a sideswipe at labor for demanding so much.

So it seems to me that there is need for the patience which is now being urged. In the first instance, this thing called recovery admittedly cannot be made an accomplished fact overnight. It is a slow process, and it seems slower than it is. It appears to take such a long time for benefits to reach the man in the street after there has been improvement in basic conditions and among the so-called key industries. But it is to be remembered that when the depression took hold, there was a shrinkage in income of those who had put their money into the great factories or had invested in stocks and bonds or tangible property quite a while before the shock was felt by the man in the street.

Recovery a Slow Process

Washington observers are expecting to witness some fireworks to be set off in the next congress by the diminutive Senator Carter Glass (Dem.) of Virginia. The senator is small of stature, a mite of a man, but that does not apply to his mental capacity. He is, moreover, a man who does not get greatly concerned about ordinary pieces of legislation. Whenever there is a bill before the senate dealing with banking policies or money policies, one will see the tozzled red head from Virginia very much in evidence on the senate floor.

Sometime in the future when the next generation has grown to maturity, the users of lumber, and that is about all of us, will look about them and observe fine growing timber awaiting the axe of the woodsman. The picture before them will be the matured result of a program about which President Franklin D. Roosevelt dreamed before he was elevated to the highest office in the land. Whether one agrees with the expenditure of public funds in this manner or not, none can say that his reforestation program will not produce lumber for the future, and none can say that it will not be sadly needed by the time the saplings now being planted have developed to the point where they are ready for use.

Mr. Roosevelt started out in execution of his reforestation program as a means of alleviating unemployment. He proposed that congress create the civilian conservation corps so that upwards of three hundred thousand unemployed men might be given work that was of a character of which they would not be ashamed. He believed the money paid to them would reduce suffering among their families and, if not among their families, would take that number of men off of relief rolls or lift them from the almshouses. And such it has proved to be to the extent of some two hundred thousand families and about one hundred thousand individual men.

They are working; they are clothed well and they are fed well. Their morale is high, according to all persons who have visited the conservation camps. The men feel that they are not a burden on society, for the work they are doing is useful. Consequently, it is the view of those with whom I have discussed the corps that these men feel life to be worthwhile.

I was reminded of the scope of the conservation program, the tree planting plan, the other day when one of the numerous boards and commissions around Washington announced approval of purchase of land for use of the conservation corps. The commission approved recommendations for the purchase of 954,632 acres, scattered through twenty states. The lands being acquired will be added to the national holdings in the thirty-six national forests and units set aside for timber growth.

Let's Break a Tradition

Traditions, even when most ridiculous, die hard. And it is an unfortunate thing that a sort of tradition has grown up in this country to the effect that the only possible time for building and repairing is in the spring and summer, and that fall and winter are not to be considered.

As a matter of fact winter is an excellent time for building and repairing in most localities.
The construction industry is just getting on the road to recovery.
It is preparing for a revival that will materialize in the view of experts, in the near future. Materials and contract prices are still extremely low—but they are starting up.

This winter, in all probability, offers you your best chance to get in "at the bottom" so far as building costs are concerned.
Unprejudiced observers particularly those who gather statistics and follow trends, are of the opinion that it's impossible for real-estate and construction prices to sink further—and that rises are just over the horizon. This is the time when savings are to be made—whether they be a couple of thousand dollars on an entire new house, or a couple of hundred on repairing or reconditioning the old one. Investment and employment are better than charity.

The Informer has turned out quite a nice line of job work during the past two weeks. Let us do that job for you before prices advance.

A nice line of fresh candies
just received.

News from College Station

"A country home, be it ever so plain, with a father and mother of sense and gentle culture, is nature's university, and is more richly endowed for the training of youth than Yale or Harvard," declared Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, founder of the Extension Service, 26 years ago. It was home demonstration agents he had in mind when he said of farm girls:
"Teach them to mend and sew and cook; how to doctor; how to dress a wound or make a ligature;
how to adorn the simple home
and make it appear like a palace;
how by a simple arrangement
the environment can be transformed into a place of beauty.
In the United States the art of cooking is mainly a lost art.
There are communities where not to be dyspeptic is to be out of fashion. If we could have some lessons on how to live royally on a little; how to nourish the body without poisoning the stomach, and how to balance a ration for economic and healthful results, there would be a hopeful gain in lessening the number of bankrupts by the kitchen route."

Give "Useful Electrical Helpers" for Christmas This Year

There are many efficient electrical helpers that will make each day brighter and happier, for years to come. . . And isn't that what you want to give for Christmas?

Electric appliances are economical to buy and surprisingly inexpensive to operate. Here are a few suggestions . . .
sure to add to the Christmas joy of your loved ones:

The modern home-manager is tired of unnecessary and useless gew-gaws for Christmas . . . even though the donor is most sincere in an effort to please. What he wants . . . and needs . . . are the time, labor and money-saving electric appliances which so appropriately combine thoughtfulness, common sense and sentiment.

- Electric Waffle Irons
- Electric Percolators
- Beautiful Urn Sets
- Electric Toasters
- Electric Clocks
- Electric Heating Pads
- Electric Egg Boilers
- Attractive Lamps
- Vacuum Sweepers
- Electric Irons

Electric Curling Irons
Electric Grills

You can purchase these essential appliances on convenient terms, and pay for them with your regular monthly light bill. Give electric appliances this Christmas and know that your gifts are truly and sincerely appreciated.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule?
... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

Sends Thanks to President

(The following is taken from the Cleveland Plain Dealer is too good to pass up, read it, it will find a response in your heart)

"To the President of the United States:

"Sir: We have read your Thanksgiving proclamation and we realize, in spite of all our tribulations, that we still have much to be thankful for, and that one of the chief things to be thankful for is you. And, while giving thanks for you, it seems only fair that we should also give thanks to you.

"In these days when so many of us are without work and without comforts and without many of the pleasures of life, we are deeply grateful to you that you are not also without hope. We are thankful that you have done something, and are continuing to do something, and will continue to do something to relieve our distress. If all your plans should fail, it would still be comforting to know that one in your high place had cared and had tried.

"And in spite of all our distress we begin to realize that there is one thing that would have been worse than the present depression, and that is to have gone on in the way we were going. We would have gained the whole world—and lost our own souls. But now we feel somewhat chastened of our lust and greed, and we begin to catch your vision of the new deal.

"We are confident that out of our present misadventures will come an order of things that will work a better distribution of this world's wealth, that will give us assurance of an independent livelihood, that will place a higher value upon the worth while issues of life.

"In our country we are citizens, not subjects; and we like our forbears, will not acquiesce in any unjust arrangement of things, whether political or economic. Like them we cherish the determination to be the masters of our fate. The genius of our people has been to place a high value upon individual life, to emphasize the dignity of humanity, to recognize that man is made in a divine image, and it is our firm faith that the present travail will give birth to a new realization of that ideal.

"We wish you to know that we are not unmindful of the burdens which leadership in times like these imposes. The isolation of leadership is in itself a burden.

"You are in the extreme position, and the ultimate responsibility is yours. And, although all the pangs and throes of your countrymen come to focus in your heart, yet you dare not cry out, but rather you must drain from the cup of experience all bitterness in order that you may pour out to your countrymen the oil of healing and the wine of cheer.

"We know it is not those who openly oppose that try your patience most. It is those from whom you have a right to expect more. It is those who try to help but lack all vision of your plan; or, having vision, lack your zeal; or having zeal, lack skill to carry on. To these you must give gratitude even while their errors thwart your efforts.

"And then there are those with whom you must be patient even though they are more dangerous than open enemies—those who keep the letter but not the spirit of the law. Mass mistakes produce our social ills, and it takes co-operation to cure them. Those who will not co-operate are like blood clots in the body politic. Yet because they are a part of the vital system they cannot be cast out. They must be patiently absorbed.

"And no doubt the severest tax upon your patience is our impatience. Everyone feels the urgency of his own need and clamors for immediate relief. While devoted to the welfare of the whole country, you are nevertheless patient even with narrow sectionalism, because you are mindful of the needs of each section. While we demand accomplishments that require omniscience and omnipotence, we are reluctant to concede you freedom of action. And yet you are patient with our reluctance, because you, too, recognize the practical wisdom that is crystallized in our Constitution, and you would be the last to weaken any of its salutary restraints.

"We mention a few of your trials in order that you may know that we are not unappreciative as you would indicate. We stand—and under us grateful. And thank you for your true. Your County is not chaotic. It is disgraceful. But work is honorable and essential to the nation. We are grateful that you are devoting the resources of Government to the maintenance of life, but of that class which makes life glorious, pioneer character which, on our shores, endured patiently, surmounted courageously and then, for accomplishments, humbly thanks to God.

"And so at this Thanksgiving season we wish you to know that you are in our minds and hearts and that we shall ever remain,

Gratefully Yours,
U S CITIZEN

HE NEEDED WATER

Small Eric wanted to go to the swimming baths with the bigger boys, but his teacher thought it wouldn't be safe.

"But I'm a good swimmer, sir," he pleaded.

"Can you swim a length?" asked the teacher.

The boy did not seem to grasp his meaning, so to make it clear the teacher said, "Can you swim from your desk to the door?"

"Oh, no, sir," Eric replied, "there's no water there."—London Tit-Bits.

Identified

The teacher was explaining the difference between the stately rose and the modest violet.

"You see, children," she said, "a beautiful, well-dressed woman walks along the street, but she is proud and does not greet anybody—that is the rose. But behind her comes a small creature with bowed head."

"Yes, miss, I know," Tommy interrupted, "that's her husband."—Stray Stories.

Cards

"Mesa Bill has gone away up in society since he gathered up wealth," said Broncho Pete.

"I still aver," answered Cactus Joe, "that he and his tribe are a bunch of card sharps."

"That wouldn't have anything to do with society."

"Yes, it would. The way they played the society game was by doin' trick shuffles with the visitin' cards."

Really Cold

The explorer, recently returned from one of his many travels into the land of ice and snow, was recounting his adventures.

"Was it very cold?" asked a listener.

"Cold?" repeated the explorer. "Why, it was so cold that I couldn't blow the candle out. The flame had frozen stiff and I had to break it off."

POOR HUNTING

"Did you spend an enjoyable vacation?"

"Not very—only two engagement rings."

No Village Blacksmith

A chorus man out of a job was given a small part in a play. He merely walked on, seat himself and sang, "Here I am." At rehearsal he did not give satisfaction.

"I don't like the director," he complained the director. "Try and get some other man."

"By goodness," smirked the chorus man.

LATE START

"Say, Bill!"

"What?"

"This is fierce, let's go to Florida."

Beyond Recall

Angela shook her head with finality.

"No, Tom, I can never be yours. Sorry," she told her young swain.

He took the blow quite calmly.

"All right," he replied. "What about all my presents?"

"I'll return them, of course," she said coldly.

"Yes, I know you will," he exclaimed, with some warmth; "but who's going to return all those cigars I gave your father and the pennies I gave your beastly little brother?"—Answers Magazine.

NO CHANCE

"I really don't know what's the matter with me. I don't seem able to collect my thoughts."

"Take my advice, old man, and don't try."

No, Sir, Not for Her

Miles—Your wife drives her own car, doesn't she?

Stiles—Oh, yes.

Miles—Does she pay any attention to those "Stop Look and Listen" signs at the railroad crossings?

Stiles—Well, I believe she sometimes stops and looks—but to tell you the truth I don't think that anybody or anything could make her listen.

"Why do you object to Mr. Tea kettle?"

"He's always spouting hot air."

The Watchdog of the Home

Mr. Neighborly—I'm almost frozen this morning. My furnace fire went out last night.

Mr. Pewee—If you had a wife like mine at home your furnace fire wouldn't dare go out at night.

Now! A Quicker Way to Ease Pain

Don't Forget Real BAYER Aspirin Starts "Taking in Few Minutes"

Here is quicker relief from pain—fastest safe relief, it is said, ever known. This is due to a scientific discovery by which BAYER Aspirin starts "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass here tells the story. A Bayer tablet starts to disintegrate or dissolve—go to work—almost instantly. This means quick relief from pain—fewer lost hours from headache, neuritis, rheumatism. And safe relief. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

When you buy, see that you get the genuine Bayer Aspirin. The best way is never to ask for aspirin by the name "aspirin" alone. But if you want Bayer Aspirin's quick relief, always say "BAYER Aspirin."

 A pie supper and program was held at the McKnight school last Friday night. The school children furnished the program which was enjoyed very much. There was a large attendance and the sum of $34.48 was taken in. This money will be used to buy play ground equipment and material for the cleaning and painting the inside of the school house.
