He Led Boone to Kentucky

All Americans know the name of Daniel Boone and most of them, no doubt, think of him as one of the first, if not the first, pioneer into the "Dark and Bloody Ground" of Kentucky. But how many of them have ever heard of the man who was most responsible for Boone's going there and who guided him to that alluring promised land?

F. B. Sayre

John Finley, or Findlay, was that man's name and he was the son of Archibald Finley, who emigrated from County Armagh in Ireland to Bucks county, Pa., in 1734. When young John grew up he established himself as a trader and horse peddler at Carlisle, Pa., and in 1747 he was licensed as an Indian trader.

During the next eight years Finley carried on his trading expeditions into the West and in the autumn of 1752, with three or four companions, he descended the Ohio in a canoe as far as the falls at the present city of Louisville. From there they accompanied a party of Shawnees to their town near the present city of Winchester, Ky., and there from another party of traders Finley learned of the Great Warriors' Path.

After a series of adventures Finley returned to Pennsylvania and at the outbreak of the French and Indian war he enlisted as a wagoner in Braddock's army. Another wagoner in the same expedition was a young man named Daniel Boone and over the campfires of the campaign of 1755 young Boone was an eager listener to Finley's stirring tales of the hunter's paradise which he had visited beyond the mountains.

But, although Boone's imagination had been fired by Finley's narrative, nothing came of it until 1768. In that year the Pennsylvania trader, peddling his pins, needles, thread and Irish linens down in North Carolina, learned from some Pennsylvania settlers there that his old comrade-in-arms of the Braddock days was living on the Upper Yadkin, and immediately went to visit him.

Learning of Boone's failure to reach Kentucky by way of the difficult Big Sandy river route, Finley took him again of the Cumberland Gap route and again the Irishman's eloquent tongue poured into Boone's ears his tales of a country teeming with wild game. The result was that on May 1, 1769, with Finley as his guide, Boone, accompanied by four of his neighbors, began his historic journey and a few weeks later he stood in Cumberland Gap and looked down into the land of his dreams, the country with which his name was to be forever inseparably linked—"Kaintuckee."

Bill Tilghman, Frontier Marshal

Those who live by the sword perish by the sword—how many of the famous ones, of course, the must be substituted as true of peace officers. The return of fate it was that the most famous of all the old-time marshals should perish on a day when the old but a memory. For, in 1924, when Bill Tilghman was shot down by a federal officer in the wide-open oil town of Cromwell, Okla., the old-time marshal had been sent to curb liquor and gambling, it marked the end of a race of peace officers, the like of which probably will never be seen again in our history.

Born on the frontier of Iowa in 1854, Tilghman left home at the age of sixteen to seek adventure in southwest Kansas. He found it there as a buffalo hunter and as a scout in the Indian wars of 1874-75 and again in 1878. Next he became marshal of Dodge City, Kan., in the days when it was known far and wide as "wicked Dodge," and there he established a reputation for fearlessness and straight-shooting which remained with him to the end of his days. After three years as marshal he became chief deputy sheriff of Ford county, a job which he held for four years.

In 1889, when Oklahoma was opened to settlement, he joined the land rush and won a fine farm for himself. He was ready to settle down to a peaceful existence as a farmer but the new territory was becoming overrun with bad men of all kinds and again Tilghman was enlisted on the side of law and order, this time as a deputy United States marshal.

As deputy marshal he performed one of the greatest feats of his career—the single-handed capture of the notorious outlaw, Bill Doolin, whom he "brought back alive" when it would have been much easier to have killed him. And this was only one incident in his long career of law enforcement, from which he often retired but to which he was repeatedly called back—as marshal of Guthrie, as chief of police of Oklahoma City, and as a county sheriff.

He has been called "the greatest man hunter the Southwest ever knew," "the only frontiersman who was constantly on the job for a generation and still lived" and "the last of that bulldog breed of old-time field marshals who risked and gave their lives to push back the borders of a wilderness."

PREMIER ALBERT SARRAUT'S government was upset by the French chamber of deputies by a vote of 321 to 247 due to its insistence on retention of the gold standard and balancing the budget. Its defeat was really brought about by the determination of the unions of civil servants not to submit to any financial sacrifices in the interests of the state. There was a belief in Paris that Edouard Herriot might again be called on to form a new ministry.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL, who doesn't seem to cut much of a figure in the administration, is to have a new assistant secretary. President Roosevelt appointed to this post Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of the late President Wilson, and he will succeed Harry F. Payer who has been transferred to the position of special foreign trade adviser to the RFC. Mr. Sayre is a professor in the Harvard law school and will remove from Cambridge to Washington as soon as arrangements can be made with the university.

As adviser on foreign affairs to the government of Siam, Mr. Sayre has had wide experience in the negotiation of political and commercial treaties. Since 1925 he has negotiated treaties between the Siamese government and the governments of France, Great Britain, the Netherlands, Spain, Portugal, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and Italy. He holds decorations from all of the principal nations of Europe.

LEUTENANT COMMANDER SETTLE of the navy and Major Fordney of the marines finally found a day of favorable atmospheric conditions and made their long-delayed flight into the stratosphere. Their big balloon ascended from Akron, Ohio, and reached an altitude of 61,237 feet. This beat the existing record by about 8,000 feet, though Russia's stratosphere explorers claimed to have risen above 62,000 feet.

Settle's balloon and aluminum ball came down in a southern New Jersey swamp and the two daring explorers extricated themselves safely and were taken by airplane to Washington where they were received by the secretary of the navy and other officials.

NEWFOUNDLAND is about to lose its status as a British dominion and be demoted to that of a crown colony. This course has been recommended by a royal commission that has been investigating the dominion's tangled financial affairs. The report of this body charges that Newfoundland's debt, which has reached the point where the interest consumes 50 per cent of the state's income, is "largely due to reckless waste and extravagance and to the absence of constructive and efficient administration."

Newfoundland was the first of Great Britain's overseas colonies. Labrador is included in its government, and one of the suggested solutions for the island's difficulties has been to sell the island to Canada, paying the debt with the proceeds.

SEISMOLOGISTS are reporting that the earthquake which struck the island of Sumatra on Dec. 26, 1924, was a volcanic eruption. The earthquake was reported to have been caused by the eruption of a volcano on the island.

ERNEST W. GIBSON, who formerly was a congressman from Vermont, will go back to Washington to represent that state in the senate. He was appointed by Governor Wilson to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Porter H. Dale.

WISCONSIN'S farm strike fizzled out, so it was called off by the heads of the Farm Holiday association and the milk pool. The pickets were all withdrawn and shipments of milk and other farm produce to the markets were resumed. The milk pool leader said another "holiday" probably would be ordered in February.

CHINA seems to be headed for another civil war of major proportions. The famous Nineteenth route army, which defended Shanghai against the Japanese early last year, has revolted against the Nanking government and issued a declaration of independence of Fukien province. It is rumored the army has reached an understanding with the communists in Kiangsi province.

The fact that Fukien's chief political principle is continued opposition to Japan has caused apprehension that it is likely to provoke Japanese intervention. The province contains extensive Japanese interests and is regarded as a Japanese sphere due to its location opposite the Japanese island colony on Formosa.

TARY of the Interior Ickes, public works administrator, announced that he had turned $100,000,000 over to the new federal housing corporation that is undertaking slum clearance work in cities throughout the country. The undertaking, he said, would be started in Detroit with a model housing project.

RESUMPTION of diplomatic relations with Russia and the recognition of the Soviet government came, as was expected, on the eve of the President's departure for Warm Springs. He and Commissar Litvinov issued a joint announcement of the happy ending of their negotiations, and Mr. Roosevelt immediately designated William C. Bullitt as American ambassador to Moscow, which greatly pleased the Russians.

Within a day or so the Soviet government announced that its ambassador to Washington would be Alexander Antonovich Troianovsky, formerly diplomatic representative at Tokyo and now vice chairman of the Russian state planning commission. This gentleman was born in Russia in 1882, studied in the University of Kiev, was exiled to Siberia in 1909, escaped and lived in France until 1917, and served in the Russian revolutionary army.

With recognition by our government, Russia agrees not to allow its agents to propagandize against the government of the United States; guarantees religious freedom and legal protection for American nationals in Russia, and waives all claims against the United States growing out of the American expedition into Siberia in 1918-21. No promise whatever was made by Mr. Litvinov concerning the attitude of his government toward the payment of $768,583,000 in debts owed by Russia to the United States government and to private American citizens.

FOLLOWING his conference with Ambassador Welles in Warm Springs, President Roosevelt issued a formal statement concerning the Cuban situation which was assigned to let President Grau know that the United States is not ready to recognize his government and will not do so unless he can persuade the Cuban factions to cease their warring and agree among themselves.

The statement reiterated the administration's policy of recognizing any government, regardless of its partisan or factional color, which proved itself representative of its people and able to secure their support. But it was made clear that the present Cuban government, assailed as it has been one revolutionary attempt after another, did not at present meet these conditions.

Mr. Roosevelt supplemented his statement by the announcement that, though Ambassador Welles would return to his post in Havana after visiting Washington, he would soon be replaced by Jefferson Caffery and would assume his former position as assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs. This is in full accord with Welles' desires though he has been unwilling to retire from Havana under the heavy fire directed against him by the supporters of the Grau government. The latter had been organizing a great protest demonstration designed to keep the ambassador from landing at the Havana docks and serious trouble was feared. Mr. Roosevelt's announcement it was hoped would ease this tense situation.

ACTING Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau replied to criticisms by saying that "the credit of the United States is as good as the Rock of Gibraltar"; but at the same time he let it be known that, in order to bolster up the prices of government securities, which have been dropping, the Treasury department itself would buy federal bonds with some of its surplus.

capacity to find anyone who has suggested the answer, I cannot refrain from calling attention to one possibility: the new deal has set out upon a policy that cannot avoid revision of our entire economic structure and, it now appears, it may lead even to a re-settlement of the United States. That means, of course, that folks who devote their lives to live stock raising will have to move to the areas where they can do that, and the corn growers will have to get into that ballwick, or some such new alignment. I confess I do not know what drastic changes can be accomplished without dislocating the lives and the hopes of farmers, but to me it is a decidedly interesting question over which to ponder as the long winter nights wear on.

The Big Puzzle

without any warning note that it was a move amounting to lightning from a clear sky. And now the observers here are trying to figure out its meaning in the fullest sense.

I watched the country's leading newspapers closely for several days after the President announced that Secretary Woodin was going on a long leave of absence in search of health, that Dean Acheson was resigning as undersecretary, and that Henry Morgenthau, Jr., was being moved over as undersecretary of the treasury, from the post of governor of the farm credit administration. Being undersecretary, he immediately became acting secretary when Mr. Woodin left for Arizona in his search for health. The newspapers were at wide variance on their views. Some of them held, editorially and in their news columns, that inflationists had taken the treasury under their wing and that we were headed straight into the grievous mistake that Germany made on her currency. Others took the position that Mr. Woodin was not a "yes" man and that Mr. Acheson was not in sympathy with the various maneuvers to which Mr. Roosevelt was lending his support, and that the President simply cleaned house.

Whatever the reason was, it remains as much of a secret as ever. The one thing upon which Washington observers seem to agree and the feeling was reflected in many large newspapers, was that Mr. Acheson was the "goat." Mr. Roosevelt wanted Mr. Morgenthau in the treasury and wanted him to run the place while Mr. Woodin was away, and the only way to accomplish it was to get rid of Mr. Acheson. That certainly happened.

The President, in announcing the changes, said it was necessary to have a man of more experience in the treasury than Mr. Acheson since Mr. Woodin was going to be absent.

Make Millions of Jobs

logically expected to be the peak of unemployment this winter. His program to add $400,000,000 to the public works funds and take idle persons off the relief rolls for those jobs is well under way. It no doubt will make several million jobs available for a short time at least.

It is the President's thought that where persons have been on relief rolls, they will gladly take a job and work regularly if they are paid a little more than the relief doles they were receiving. He contends that people prefer work generally to being fed on a charity basis. And as far as I can learn, no one disputes the idea. Certainly, the person who is working and is being paid for it regains self-respect which so many times is lost when charitable organizations have to care for him and his family.

There is one aspect of the program for making work, however, that seems to have been generally overlooked. The proposition contemplates wide development of roads and highways in all parts of the nation. State road supervisors are going to make and, indeed, are now making, plans and listing projects in the numerous counties where work of a worthwhile nature can be done. This plan places the jobs close to the source of need, right in the locality where men are out of jobs.

While we are discussing the problems of the new deal, it seems pertinent to call attention to how advancement of science in commerce and industry add problems with which the professors must cope. For example, the bureau of fisheries of the Department of Commerce has just discovered a way to make oysters shuck themselves. There are thousands of men, and women, too, who annually add to their incomes by shucking oysters along the rivers and at the ports where the oyster boats come in. The discovery of a method for self-shucking of oysters will throw a good many of them out of jobs this winter, if the plan works as the bureau says it will work.

The Missionary Societies met at the church Monday afternoon, the lesson was on Japan, its condition, progress and needs toward evangelization, while she is advancing there is much yet to be done by Christendom.

In the business session it was decided to send a Christmas box next week. If any wish to put in 10c or 25c by Sunday night it will go to a good cause, and be appreciated.

The Zone Meeting of the Methodist Missionary Societies for this part of the district met with the Lakeview auxiliary, Dec. 7.

Mrs. Slover of Memphis, zone leader presided. The morning session was opened by singing "Count your Blessings," led by Bro. Landreth, Memphis pastor.

Mrs. Seago Dist. Sec. read the devotional, Bro. Addison of Quitaque, led in prayer. Bro. Jones, Lakeview pastor, gave the welcome address which was appreciated by the guests, a very fitting response was given by Mrs. R. F. Newman of Hedley. Then we went into the business of the day by electing Mrs. Newman secretary. There was a splendid attendance; a large representation on all auxiliaries in the zone except Clarendon and Mc. Knight, but the last named sent their report. Those attending from Hedley were Mrs. Webb, Nowlin, Newman, Maness and Duncan. During the morning session the ladies from Turkey

All that were on responded with well rendered. The reports were considering the conditions Noon came and of Lakeview, dismissed with prayer. A plate lunch was served of sandwiches, vegetable salad, pie and coffee.

The afternoon session opened by singing "Footprints of Jesus" Bro. Jones leader, Bro. Landreth read the devotional then gave a short talk which was very helpful and inspiring as usual and of ferred prayer. The afternoon was given to parts and finishing reports, each being full of interest.

How It Happened

By JUNE DALEY

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

THEY had been married six months to the very day. Peggy wasn't sentimental about anniversaries. She didn't expect candy or flowers. She wasn't even much disappointed when Don forgot the date entirely—but to have him choose that particular evening to talk to her so dreadfully, and in front of all their friends, was really too much!

"Jeepers!" Don had said. "Haven't you even brains enough to return a lead? If you can't learn to play bridge, why not admit it and quit?" Well, she had quit; she'd left not only the bridge party but Don himself several miles away. Peggy gave a vicious push to the accelerator of her blue roadster and swung on two wheels round the corner into Park drive.

Early the next morning, Miss Vera Stern, starting on her daily trip to the meat market for Toddlers' chop-bones, paused before the closed door of an apartment on the floor below her own. Usually at this hour a burst of singing and the clatter of dishes announced to passers-by that the "pretty little red-haired bride" was on the job. Today the apartment was disturbingly silent.

"Not that I'm curious," she was soon explaining to plump Mrs. Griggs at the corner grocery. "You know I never pry into other people's affairs—but it did seem very queer to me, very queer, indeed. I went around to the courtyard and looked up and every window was shut tight. And there was this peculiar odor. It somehow suggested a hospital to me, but it wasn't ether."

"Chloroform?" "That's it. Yes, I'm sure that was it. Don't burglars use chloroform?" "Yes, they do. Or sometimes people kill themselves with it. But you say they seemed quite happy?"

"Oh, very happy! Just bride and groom, you know. And she was such a pretty little thing, with lovely red hair. Oh, dear, what do you think I'd better do?"

"Do? Well, of course your janitor would have a pass-key, but I don't really believe... Oh, my goodness, there's the trolley coming!" Decidedly out of breath, Mrs. Griggs sank into the seat nearest the trolley door and discovered its other occupant to be a friend of her younger sister's. They fell into casual conversation, to which the older woman, after a time, contributed the story she had just heard.

"The Park Court Apartments!" Elise exclaimed. "Yes—I know where they are. I'll be looking for details in the paper. So long."

Don Riddle looked up from his desk, annoyed by the chatter of the billing clerks inside the next partition. He half rose from his chair to ask for quiet, overheard some one say "The Park Court Apartments" and sank back to listen.

On, Elise. It's like hearing her story before it comes to the end. Any couple had been living six months, and they seemed to get along all right, but each other, she said—didn't sound like suicide. But windows were shut tight and burglars wouldn't do that, was this terrible smell of chloroform, simply overpowering, and no answer to all their pounding on the door."

"My heavens, girls!—what ails Mr. Biddle?" "He's been acting queer all morning and now he's dashed off without his coat or hat!"

At almost the same moment, in a downtown tea room, a plump matron suddenly exclaimed to her bosom friend: "My dear, do look at that girl. Tearing out as though the place was on fire."

"She was listening to you," remarked the even plumper friend, placidly sipping a frosted chocolate, "and when you said 'Park Court Apartments' she just jumped out of her chair."

So it happened that Don Biddle and his new and very red-headed wife fell into each other's arms at the door of a certain very much-talked-of apartment.

"Oh darling, darling—I was a brute!" "Dearest—I was a perfect little fool, I drove out to mother's for the night, of course."

Suddenly they realized that the door of their apartment stood open and that from within there came forth a faint but decidedly anaesthetic odor and the sound of voices. In the kitchen they found Miss Stern and the janitor, intently examining a large wooden crate.

"What's in it?" demanded Miss Stern. "Tangerines!" shouted the Biddies in chorus.

"They're spoiling on the bottom, mum," announced the janitor, after another sniff. "And I'm not saying they don't smell mighty like this here chloroform Miss Vera was a huntin' for."

"I suppose I should apologize," began Miss Stern belligerently. "Oh, please don't," cried Peggy. "Indeed, we're most grateful to you," added Don. "Won't you please have some oranges?"

Again she felt floods of light rushing up from her inner being. She lay with closed eyes resting against Rocky. She hardly heard his words: "If the wire comes from Doris we can get married—if you will." It was possible. Anything was possible now that Rocky loved her. That was security, the only safety perhaps that she would ever know. But it was enough. They would be side by side like this forever. Someone's cheek was against hers. Who was holding her so closely? All around her was joy, sweet protection. And a familiar melody was sounding faintly in her ears. She sprang to her feet and looked over the hedge. She saw two girls walking through an aisle of delphiniums. The stately wedding march had begun. She swayed, clutched at the lacy leaf of a cedar tree. Rocky was beside her. He caught her arm, steadied her. She looked up at him with glassy eyes—then her gaze returned to the wedding party. "There were lilacs!" Doris' voice was low. "Lilacs and dogwood. Spring! I remember—I remember." She watched with a far-off exultation. Beatrice advancing on her father's arm, the happy setting of leaves and blossoms—it meant something. A strange look had come into her eyes. Violin, cello and harp had begun the familiar strains of the bride's march. She was listening. Rocky shook her by the arm. "What's wrong, Doris?" She turned peculiar eyes up at him. They looked glassy, unfamiliar. "The wedding march. That's the wedding...

FIND ONLY ONE BASIS OF LIFE

Marked Similarity of Human and Animal Worlds.

In a recent issue the magazine Nature called attention to the way animals recently made the front pages of the newspapers. For example, wide attention was given to a deer that was marooned on a cliff in Watkins Glen State park in New York. Day by day, with great interest, gentle readers of the press followed the doings of the deer on the ledge. His predicament was portrayed in detail. Apparently he did not realize his danger, for he continued to munch his fodder and to enjoy life. In due time he made good his escape into the woods, while an interested public drew sighs of relief.

Why should not human beings have a fellow feeling for animals that are in distress or are puzzled by problems which perplex them? Do we not share the same sentient life?

The study of comparative anatomy has revealed striking similarities between the structures of living creatures. The paddle of a turtle, the wing of a bird, the flipper of a whale, the foreleg of a horse and the arm of a man reveal the same basic structure of bones and muscles which have merely been differentiated and adjusted to different tasks and environments.

This similarity between the animal and human worlds reaches deeper than structures. It rests in the unitary basis of all life. The great Thomas Henry Huxley wrote an essay which has become a classic of science. It deals with the "physical basis of life," which he found to be identical in plants, animals and human beings. This common stuff of life is protoplasm. It is the clay of the Potter of Life. Whether protoplasm be a simple, jelly-like substance, or nucleated and highly specialized into organs and tissues, it is the common brick with which life is built. By virtue of this, all forms and powers are cognate. Just because men have gone farther on the pathway of life, they should have a fellow feeling toward all lower forms. It is especially gratifying when animals in distress, or trees and plants in thirst elicit special human attention.—Minneapolis Journal.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. The Graceful Contours of This Boston Windsor Rocker Are Left Revealed When Semi-Upholstered.

SLIP-COVER upholstery is the last word in furniture covers. It is a vogue which plays into the hands of the home decorators, for she can, with her own hands, make these covers, and at small cost. It is a revival of the old-time custom of pioneer days. Then women used to make chair seats and chair backs to put over their favorite Windsor rockers. Necessity was the ruling motive, since the winds which howled about the house would seep through the none-too-closely-made foundations and sides of dwellings, and bring cold air into the rooms. Chairs, comfortable enough in summer, were dressed in semi-upholstery for winter, and thus given the needed warmth to add a touch of luxury. Today, while comfort is accentuated in the modern semi-upholstery, it is decoration which is featured equally.

Slip-cover upholstery can be made by any woman who wishes to cover her chairs or sofas for the welcome warmth the wadded covers provide, or because the covers will protect handsome materials, or hide worn and frayed upholstery. Patterned or plain slip-cover textiles, or glazed chintz, etc., are used and not regular upholstery goods.

Slip-cover patterns can be used, or patterns cut from paper fitted over the chairs themselves. The outer covering pieces should be wadded and lined. Then they are tufted, quilted, or buttoned together at regular intervals over the surface. This can be done when the covers are in sections rather better than after the sections have been seamed together.

How to Make Covers

An easy way to make a semi-upholstered cover for a Windsor chair, or one of like character, is to copy the method of our forebears. Cut two pieces of the textile the width and length of the back. Put wadding between them, seam along all edges, tuft with strands of coarse yarn and attach strips of tape at corners. The tapes at top go over the wooden cross piece at top of back, and tie at back of chair or at top edge. The tapes at the other end are tied about the rungs. The back "upholstery" is held securely in place thus. There may or may not be a chair seat, but comfort suggests the making of one. The first thing is to make a cushion to fit the shape and size of the seat of the chair. Then put a cover of the same material as the back upholstery over it. Omit tufting. With back well wadded and cushion well filled with feathers or some substitute, the chair acquires a note of pleasing decoration.

Harvest Moon

The harvest moon is so called because farmers in northern latitudes are able to work in harvest fields until late at night. It shines more brightly in northern Europe and Canada than in the United States. While the harvest moon occurs in the northern hemisphere at mid-September, it occurs in March in the southern hemisphere.

Transportation of the Future?

Many far-seeing engineers envision the railplane as the chief mode of transportation in urban centers of the future. Here is a working model of the latest type of railplane to be perfected in England. Note that the upper wheels of the "plane" are vertical with the ground, while those below are horizontal with the ground. A propeller fore and aft will supply added momentum.

Not Coercion but Co-Operation

Whither Bound? A question which, though not frequently uttered, is secretly asked by every student of the national recovery act. Will the gigantic movement already set in motion lead to the return of prosperity? Or, will it result in inflation and national economic bankruptcy? The question "Whither Bound?" assumes the answer can only come from the government itself.

Popular opinion seems to hold the government responsible whichever way the wind blows. An attitude of this sort clearly indicates the superficial type of much of the present-day thinking.

It is so easy to pass on to some other person or to some organization the responsibility which rightly belongs to us. Let it be frankly admitted that the responsibility for the return of prosperity does not rest primarily with the government. No amount of legislation can bring about an economic recovery any more than it can create a permanent peace. All the government can do is to set in motion certain forces intended to create a recovered prosperity. A physician prescribes to the best of his ability the medicine intended to restore the patient's health, but he cannot compel his patient to take the medicine. The fundamental spirit of democracy forbids the slightest act of coercion on the part of the government.

No person by coercion can ever be made moral. The moral imperatives do not by force enter the sanctuary of the human will. True the choice of a wrong motive may result in a serious penalty, but the fact remains, we are left free to choose for ourselves between the moral alternatives in life.

It is not coercion but co-operation that will speed the return of prosperity. The responsibility for the success of the national recovery act rests upon every citizen in every state, city and hamlet in this country. There is no possible substitute for the spirit of mutual co-operation. If every citizen does his part the return of prosperity is reasonably assured. If that responsibility is shifted to some other seat of authority other than the individual conscience, the present efforts of the government are fraught with serious danger and in the minds of many expert economists are doomed to chaos and national disaster. Not coercion but co-operation is the soul of the national recovery act.

Reveal Decline of Studebaker W

Depression Wipes Out Once Big Fortune.

South Bend, Ind.—The decline of the fortunes of the house of Studebaker, once the city's first family, has just been revealed.

In a modest frame house Col. George M. Studebaker and his wife, head of the clan and one-time master and mistress of a great gray-stone castle, are weathering out the lean, depression years.

Gone is the enormous Studebaker fortune, which dated from the time the forbears of the present family started a little wagon factory here, nearly 100 years ago. The millions that piled up when the Studebaker factory turned to the manufacture of automobiles have vanished.

Today the woman who ruled as arbiter of South Bend society and moved in the first social circles of New York and Chicago is living with her husband upon the charity of close friends.

The Studebakers live in a small white-painted house on a quiet South Bend residential street. Mrs. Studebaker, whose hands are more accustomed to pouring tea into dainty cups of porcelain than handling brooms and mops, helps with the daily household routine.

A maid who cooks the meals does most of the housework, but many of the homely tasks fall upon Mrs. Studebaker.

Family Loss Near $6,000,000.

The story of the scars left by the depression upon the Studebaker fortune differs only in degree from that of thousands of typical American families trapped by the treacherous declines of the security markets.

Close friends of the family estimate the losses of Colonel Studebaker and his brother, the late Clement Studebaker, Jr., at about $6,000,000. Most of the loss came in the terrific collapse of the Insull utilities empire, in which the family had a heavy stake.

The Studebakers had been closely allied with Insull in his spectacular rise to fame and power.

A few weeks ago Colonel Studebaker filed a petition in bankruptcy. He showed liabilities of $2,000,000, assets of about $35 in cash. Notes to the tune of $1,000,000 were left behind to help satisfy claims of creditors.

At this home the Studebakers are constantly entertained for large groups of friends. In the city the couple was known as kindly and democratic. Comrades of the colonel's Spanish war days were invited to camp on the extensive grounds of the estate.

Now the couple live in strict retirement. They see only a few of their closest friends. But those who visited the couple in the past, report them smiling, despite hardships they are unaccustomed to.

"Folks have been mighty kind," Mrs. Studebaker says. "After all, that's what friends are for."

Farmer Furnishes Refuge for Snakes

Weatherford, Okla.—A veritable snake's paradise where the reptiles live unmolested and feed on insects and mice in thick underbrush and grass has been established by J. M. Kroeker, a farmer.

None is permitted to disturb the reptiles in their retreat. For more than three years Kroeker has been driving all the snakes he finds of his quarter section of land into the small cottonwood grove.

He kills only rattlesnakes and will allow none of this variety to enter the retreat. Kroeker says that the snakes are invaluable for destroying the mice and insects on his farm and that this fact is his reason for encouraging their presence.

Visitors report that some of the reptiles, particularly the bull snakes, have attained immense size. Some are said to have been on the farm since Kroeker moved there 30 years ago.
