OUR BANK Still Encourages Thrift

Possibly we're old fashioned in some ways but during these days of easy spending, we still believe it's the duty of a bank to encourage thrift.

Irrespective of what the Government does about social security, the responsibility of providing for old age still falls squarely upon the shoulders of every able bodied man and woman.

Easy to Make Pajamas

PATTERN 2362

You're sure to want several pairs of these adorable pajamas when you find how easy they are to make. Why not have your week-night ones of some pretty cotton or flannel which launders easily? Then you just must have one pair in a luscious shade of blue or tawny silk, for gay week-ends away from home, and your "nightly" wardrobe isn't complete without one pair of dress-up pajamas of some heavier material for lounging or lazing, particularly if you're a Campus Queen. The tailored shirtwaist top may tuck into the bell-bottom trousers which "get the hang of it" from a triangular yoke and snug elastic waistband.

Pattern 2362 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 4 yards 3/8 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.
Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.
Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 243 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

Expense No Consideration
"Rafferty," exclaimed Mr. Dolan, "your boy threw a lump of coal at my boy!"
"That's a Rafferty for you! When he feels there's a principle at stake, he doesn't think of expense."

Going Some
Father—Is he thrifty?
Daughter—Thrifty, daddie! Why, Jack's saved over $10,000 out of that $100,000 his grandfather left him year before last.—Detroit News.

Nasty Both Ways
"She's really a lot older than she looks." "Yes, and what's more—she looks it."

A BEAR

A Hunter's Story

Old Grisley Ike Marauder and Grisley's partner Jim.

Had struck their camp where the dew hangs damp, beneath the canons rim

They'd sworn to get the gris-ley, which roamed the mountain side.

With gun or snare, they'd catch that bear, and stretch his pesky hide

But silvertips are wary, that's how they keep their health

No trap nor snare, could fool that bear, no stratagim nor stealth

The partner's flour vanished, their oregon dwindled down,

And still that bear breathed freedom's air, from creek to mountain crown.

At last the pantry boasted just one lone jar of jam

Cried Grisley Ike, It's time to strike, I'm tired of this, I am

Let's take our trusty rifles and hit the critters track

We're sure at least of one more feast of jam when we get back

So they took their trusty rifles they struck the critters track

The trail they found led round and round, and up and down and back

At last, when dusk descended,
they knew they'd met defeat

With weary tramps they sought their camps; that jam would be some treat

Alas! a sad sight met them, their cabin was a waste

The Grisley bear had beat them there, and found things to his taste.

Old Grisley Ike peared through the ruins and softly swore, (By...)

The cussed beast has spoiled our feast, he's gone and et the jam.

Baffling Mystery Solved; Killer Wore Horseshoes

Not long ago France was baffled by an unusual murder mystery. Within a week three friends, two men and a woman, were stabbed to death on the border of a small town. All were armed and no struggle had taken place. The soggy earth around them showed only the hoof-prints of a horse.

Later the murderer, a woman, was discovered. She had disarmed the victims' suspicion by a friendly chat, hence the surprise attack. And she had concealed her sandals, fitted with horseshoes, by a long cloak.—Collier's Weekly.

Now Science Explains
Why So Many People
Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping
Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot... "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:
Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

DOAN'S PILLS

20,000 Americans Without a Country

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

THE time: A few months from now.
Giant Clipper No. 7 of the Pan-American Airways splits the salt air with her great wings 130 feet from tip to tip. Her four, 3,200-horse power engines drone smoothly as they bear their burden of 30 or 55 tons out over the broad Pacific, while you and I and 48 others aboard turn for a last look at the California shore fading into the distance behind us.

It will be 18 hours before we feel our feet on solid ground again, for the next possible landing place is 2,400 miles away—Honolulu, the "crossroads of the Pacific." We are bound on one of the regular scheduled trips over the new airway to China—to China in three days!

Although there is no land for hundreds of miles, a radio beam holds us to our course as surely as though we were making the trip in a subway tube. When we are ready to go to bed—and we will be before we reach Hawaii—our seats are converted into berths as comfortable as those in a transcontinental railroad train. This is literally "sleeping on clouds."

We're not going to miss much by sleeping, for there is nothing to see at this stage of the journey but water. Besides, there is so much ahead of us. Our trip, this time, has a double purpose: To experience the thrill of crossing the Pacific in less time than it took to cross the American continent a few years ago—and to visit what is one of the most unusual spots of the United States and its possessions. It is the island of Guam, one of America's farthest outposts, and a land whose population is "in a fix," as we shall see presently.

Our arrival at Hawaii is spectacular in its very uneventfulness. There is a short stopover so we can stretch our legs—possibly limber up in the surf at the glorious beach of Waikiki, and then we are off again, over the pineapple fields and the sugar cane, with Pearl Harbor disappearing beyond our stern horizon as California did yesterday.

Midway Island, ten hours away, is our next stop, but this time the world is not so lonely. We soon approach the island of Kauai, whose 500 inches of rainfall make it the wettest spot in the world; we skirt its 4,000-foot green mountain range, topped by the peak of Waialeale. There are more islands now—Niihau, with its cliffs rising from the sea 2,000 feet like great white walls; Nihoa, a plateau with volcanic craters at either end; Kaula, which looks like a loaf of bread a little overdone to a dark brown; Nihoa, with the grass-grown remains of what were once garden terraces and homesites for wandering Polynesian adventurers who came here to fish and hunt.

An Island Mystery.
There are more islands, some of them, like Necker, being merely the tips of volcanoes poking their mouths up out of the sea. On Necker are many peculiar rows of terraces, with upright stones bordering their edges in orderly mystery. Who left them here and why? Nobody knows. Mysteries like this are not unusual to the South seas; there are the grotesque and inexplicable statues of Easter Island, for instance.

More of these volcanic islands, with their bases 18,000 feet down under the sea, pass below us. There is Laysan island, flat and barren, white and empty where former forests and vegetation have given way to the onslaught of guano diggers, poachers and rabbits. We pass Pearl and Hermes reef and soon swoop down upon Midway Island.

It is only a short while until we hop off for Wake Island, 1,200 miles southwest of Midway, and reach it after a trip unbroken by anything out of the ordinary. At Wake our thirsty engines take on a new supply of fuel. And the next stop, after 1,564 miles of flying, is Guam.

As we glide down upon Apra harbor on the northwest coast of Guam we are coming to rest within the confines of the unbelievable—an absolute monarchy within the United States.

In the 37 years it has belonged to us Guam has become in many ways like other parts of our country and its possessions. There are movie theaters where the dried-in-the-wool fans rave over the darling dimples of Shirley Temple.

Islanders' Political Plight.
There are housewives who wrestle with electric refrigerator trays to liberate ice cubes which will cool the drinking water at their dinner tables. Streamlined automobiles speed ever smooth paved roads. Telephone and telegraph quicken the business and social world.

Yet these citizens of Guam—20,000 of them—have no vote, no voice at all in their government. They may be born in this distant corner of the United States and live there all their lives; they owe undying "allegiance to the American flag and to the republic for which it stands"; they are not aliens, but neither are they citizens of the United States, and, furthermore, never can they become citizens of the United States.

They are ruled by the iron hand of a United States naval officer appointed by the President; so far this type of rule has been just and wise and undeniably beneficial, nevertheless the governor is as much an absolute monarch as were any of the kings of old. His word is the only law. Queerly enough, Uncle Sam's gods under his control perform every governmental and administrative duty from judging criminal cases to blowing traffic whistles, yet none of them have any real naval duties at all.

Arriving at Guam we have covered 6,500 miles since leaving California. Let us see where we are now. Some 1,700 miles from Manila. The nautical position is given as 130 degrees 26 minutes north latitude and 144 degrees 40 minutes east longitude.

Our island is larger than Samoa or the Virgin Islands. It is an oasis of 150 square miles in the watery desert of the Pacific. It is 23 miles long and from three to ten miles wide. It is hilly in the south portion, with one peak, Mt. Jumullong Mangio rising 1,274 feet. The northern part is a coral plateau, 300 feet high in the interior, but facing the sea with bold, 600-foot cliffs. There are several other fairly good harbors besides Apra. It is heavily forested with valuable hardwoods and the soil is fertile.

Nature Mingles With Civilization.
Despite the presence of the many scientific improvements of our own civilization which have been fostered under the American rule, the charm of nature is everywhere to be found. Water buffaloes pulling native carts are frequently to be seen. There are native villages consisting of one long street of houses with sweeping verandas, perched upon posts. The native population is chiefly Chamorros; there are a few Tagalos and Malays.

Stretching out into the hills beyond the capital city, Azana, where two-thirds of the island's people live, are fields of sugar, rice, tobacco and pineapple. In the river valleys are cacao, coffee and indigo. Water buffalo and imported horses help with the farming, which is the principal industry of Guam.

It is somewhat appropriate that the navy should govern Guam, which is a forbidden naval preserve, although it boasts no fortresses, harbors no guns and withholds no secrets of a military nature. For it was the navy that first claimed the island for Uncle Sam.

That was on June 20, 1898. The Spanish governor did not know that the war was on. When Capt. Henry Glass sailed the cruiser Charleston into Apra harbor and began throwing dreadfully earnest shells through the tops of the coconut trees, the governor, probably already acquainted with American sailors, thought the boys were just out for a good time and apologized for not being able to return the salute, since he was all out of powder and had to wait until some of his subordinate seniors could dash down to the corner drug store and get some. He soon found out that the "American navy was playing this game "for keeps" and we have kept the Pacific prize ever since. President McKinley directed the navy to administer the island government two weeks after it was awarded to the United States in the treaty of Paris, December 10, 1898, and the navy has always retained the charge.

The island of Guam is actually a part of the United States, not simply a protectorate. Yet Islanders cannot earn citizenship by merely staying in their part of the United States, or even by coming to the mainland and residing there for the period of years which would ordinarily be sufficient for naturalization.

Denby Was Responsible.
The late Edwin Denby attended to that in a proclamation made nearly thirteen years ago, when he was secretary of the navy. His "court martial order," which has never been rescinded, was:

"While a native of Guam owes perpetual allegiance to the United States, he is not a citizen thereof, nor is he an alien, and there are no provisions under which he may become a citizen of the United States by naturalization." Ironically enough, the only country to which the inhabitant of Guam owes allegiance is the one country of which he cannot become a citizen.

The entire island of Guam, we are told upon landing there in Clipper No. 7, is a "closed port." The navy governor's permission must be given before any foreign vessel can tie up at the docks. We had to have special permission to land here, for nobody, foreigner or American, lands here without the governor's O. K. No one can get off the island, either, without the approval of that same august gentleman. Even natives have to have his permission to go.

Guam is the largest island of the Mariana archipelago; the rest of the Marianas are owned by Japan. We once considered Guam an important naval base in the Pacific front stretching from the Philippines to Alaska, but after the Versailles treaty the defenses of Guam proved irritating to the Japanese and we removed them.

The navy had a little more than 900 men at Guam before the treaty, but now there are only about 600. There is a handful of marines on the island, under the command of a colonel; about two dozen of them are used for police, but the others have nothing at all to do.

No Crime Problem Here.
There is little enough need for police on Guam, we find. There are only two lawyers there, and only one of the two gets enough business to make it profitable for him to take out a license to practice.

Islanders are given a good American education; in fact, it is compulsory. There are business opportunities there, in the industries of burning lime and charcoal, and fishing and building, although most inhabitants are farmers—small farmers; each family has its own little plot of land.

With little to do, the navy men stationed there have devoted most of their time to making all of the industry of Guam resemble that of the United States in miniature. How well they have succeeded is doubtful, but every governor has tried it.

If we visit Guam next year, after the treaties expire, it is possible that we may see the island better fortified. This is not likely, however, since granting Philippine independence has left us with little in the Far West to protect.

After a short stay in so interesting a place we climb back into our Clipper for the long hop of 1,700 miles to the beautiful airport of Manila, arriving there at the start of the third day out from California. One more quick move and we are in China.

The world does change!

Talks About

How to Increase Weight
"UNDERWEIGHT men and women are frequently the slaves of disordered 'nerves.' They are restless, active and over-conscientious people who usually work beyond their strength because their strength is not up to the average. They worry and expect the worst possible outcome of everything. They are possessed with the fear for their health, fear for failure in business, fear for safety of family and friends. Most of them have digestive disturbances and are afraid to eat certain common foods because they do not agree with them—at least at some time in the past they have felt some discomfort after eating one of these foods. It is not uncommon for patients to overcome much of their fear and difficulty by convincing them that they are mistaken, and as soon as this is done they find that the foods which they feared cause no distress whatever."

I am quoting the words of Prof. E. V. McCollum, Johns Hopkins university, on "How to Increase Weight."

These "nervous" cases of underweight need three things: (1) a better state of nutrition which means more fat on their bodies, good digestion and increased strength; (2) the ability to rest sufficiently so that they can recover from the effects of accumulated fatigue—these people have been over-tired a long time. Rest gives the circulation a chance to rid the blood of the waste products;

(3) they must learn healthy and wholesome habits of thought—get away from their worries and fears. This will improve their outlook on life.

From the food standpoint these individuals must follow the opposite course to those who are trying to reduce weight. Overweights eat plenty of meat and eggs but cut down on fats and starch foods. Underweights while cutting down slightly on meats, must greatly increase their fat and starch foods. The fat foods are butter, cream, fat meat. The starch foods are bread, potatoes, sugars, pastry.

Doctor McCollum points out that the all-round diet is necessary—as more than fat on the body is needed for health.

Another point emphasized is rest. Rest is equal to food in maintaining and increasing weight. Sometimes rest alone is sufficient to bring on a satisfactory increase in weight. These thin nervous individuals are usually so active that unless they are actually lying down, they seem to be always moving about.

Thus the thin individual who would store more fat must include in his program a resolution to keep himself calm, and cut down his physical activity to the lowest possible point. If he can get to the place where he is willing to let others do some of his work, and take on some of his responsibility—that is if he can become carefree—he is well on his way toward an increase in weight.

However, all underweight is not due to nervousness, or to a family tendency to thinness, but may be due to what is called focal infection; that is where an infection in one part of the body may affect some other organ or may affect the body as a whole. Thus infected tonsils, infected teeth, infected sinuses, infected gall bladder may be so undermining the system that loss of weight naturally follows. This means then that an examination by the doctor and dentist should be the first thought when there is tiredness and underweight.

"When one wants to increase weight it is wise to plan the menus so that both salads and leafy vegetables find a prominent place in them. About one-quarter to one-fifth mere food than usual should be eaten so that if rest is also taken this extra amount of food may be stored in the body in the form of fat."

The appetite is also a great factor in increasing weight. The meals should be spread well apart so that there is real hunger which induces appetite.

"One should strive to have a well organized life and to have the appetite and the emotions under control. The daily life should be so planned that eating is done at regular times and with suitable rest of the digestive organs between meals."

Steps in Curing Underweight

1. The removal of any infection which may mean examination by physician and dentist.
2. The building up of the body by the use of rich nourishing foods such as butter, cream, bacon, milk, eggs, meat, sugar, cocoa.
3. The use of an abdominal support at the beginning of the building up process as this not only holds the organs up in position, but gives the thin individual some general support, thus enabling him to be up and about more.
4. Rest. Sometimes this means a complete rest for a few weeks, but for the majority where possible a half hour's rest morning and afternoon may be sufficient.

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Costume of Suede Is Top o' the Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

STOP, look and listen for it's most important news we are telling you—all about the latest sensation in fashion—namely the costume done entirely of handsome, colorful suede. In the perfectly stunning dresses, jackets, swagger coats and many-piece ensembles of all-leather which are stepping out into the limelight this season, an epoch-making chapter is being written into the annals of fashion history.

A significant thing about this intriguing all-leather movement is that designers have discovered that suede adapts itself with equal facility to formal as well as casual sportsy styling. Which is a line of thought to which our minds must adjust would we fully appreciate the broad scope covered in the new leather fashions, since hitherto the mention of leather in a style sense meant its use for sturdy sports-wear only. In the new order of affairs suede qualifies as aptly and happily as a medium for the loveliest and daintiest of formal evening apparel as it does for the sturdiest of outdoor garments.

To prove to your satisfaction the truth of the above assertion, we invite you to glimpse the "love of a gown" as pictured to the left in the illustration. The lady of the evening as here portrayed is Bette Davis of cinema fame. She is wearing an exquisite gown of white chevrita suede. Which goes to show that Hollywood agrees with Paris in this all-leather vogue now sweeping throughout the style centers of the world. An adorable gown, you will admit, is this beguiling suede formal. It has the slink, suave lines to which so many of fashion followers aspire. A high neckline in front with low backline outlined with braided suede adds further distinction to this charming gown.

Suede evening wraps are also in high fashion, either of the short jacket styling or in loose swagger lines. Capes, too, if you please, some of which are elegantly collared with white fox.

To the right in the picture, Kathleen Burke, another favorite, is wearing a five-piece ensemble done entirely of handsome suede. In a fascinating tone of rich hunter's green. It is one of the hand-laced types (the skirt is sewn together with leather thongs) such as is foremost in fashion this year. In fact, laced leather is the password to high style in the thrilling suede outfits that are being turned out for fall and winter. For the seams to be laced together as here shown dates your costume as being unmistakably a "last word" creation.

In the instance of the five-piece "set" here shown, lacing is carried out along the edge of the side-front fastening of the form-fitting skirt, also on the collar and revers of the swagger coat and two-buttoned vest. A saucy youthful suede beret together with a miser's drawstring bag completes this perfectly stunning street outfit.

As to the cunning outfit below in the group, it tells at a glance that it has gone decidedly "football." It is Maureen O'Sullivan, of film prestige, who in styling colors is scoring her touchdowns in this hand-lace suede suit of devastating chic. Even the buttons are laced as is also the pig-grain leather football hat. Her bag is of the same leather ingeniously shaped like a football. The suit's standup collar is new.

CREPE AND VELVET
By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Velvet enters into every phase of the mode this season. The afternoon dress which combines velvet with wool or silk is a highlighted number on the present style program. In the model pictured the designer has introduced velvet very effectively. The flowers at the shoulder are also of velvet. A high military-type neckline accents the chic of this costume.

COLOR PERVADES WHOLE ENSEMBLE

Color is not content this season to be a splash or a dab—it pervades the entire ensemble from tip to toe and has finally invaded the field of woman's most conservative color accessory—silk stockings.

The traditional beige and gray tones have made way for red and green stockings. Wine red stockings are smart with all of the wine tones. Suede green silk stockings are worn with greens and browns, with green suede or antelope gloves, shoes, and bags to match. Very sheer, two and three thread hose, in green or red make their debut for dressier wear.

Navy blue hose are high style with a blue town suit collared with raspberry red velvet and worn with a matching hat. With a Venetian green dress accented in brown green silk stockings and brown shoes are new.

Some New Shades Added to Hosiery for Autumn Wear

Hosiery, this fall is here in a variety of new shades. In keeping with a growing feeling of luxury in the evening mode, smart complements will be provided for the gold, silver, and bronze slippers worn with gowns of Eastern influence. For daytime a series of browns will be best liked—golden brown, wine brown, brownish taupe with a rose cast, natural beige and coppery brown—to go with autumn colors.

Smoother Hair Styles

Smoother hair styles are being seen for early fall. Advance styles would indicate that the elaborate rows of curls, popular for many months, are to be laid aside—until we all change our minds again.

Handbag Made of Wood

A smart handbag is large and flat, designed to look like an enormous compact, and it is made of wood in a dark brown natural finish.

PURE FOOD LAWS FIRST ENACTED 500 YEARS AGO

Proof that pure food laws are not the product of modern civilization, nor the result of an age in which the can-opener reigned supreme in the kitchen, was submitted recently by H. A. Schuette, professor of chemistry at the University of Wisconsin.

Professor Schuette described pure food laws which were enacted in Medieval Germany some 500 years ago—during the same century that saw the rise of Joan of Arc to immortal fame and the discovery of America by Columbus—which regulated the sale and production of honey, milk, and other foods in the southern German city of Nuremberg.

The old laws were especially aimed at the sale and production of honey, which then was the chief satisfier of the human "sweet tooth." The law was aimed at not only the seller, but also the buyer and user of "any honey except that which has been examined and measured by duly appointed honey inspectors." Violation was punishable by a fine.

Even though these old laws were necessary to protect the unwary consumer of honey, Professor Schuette pointed out that the adulteration of this sweetening food could not have been the problem in the Middle Ages that it was to become in later years.

Before 1906 authorities revealed that there were probably few foods in the United States more subject to adulteration than extracted honey, he explained.

Now, however, adulterated honey seldom comes to official notice, because the pure product, honestly labeled, has taken its place. Under the federal pure food act of 1906, exactly 20,725 notices of judgment reporting the action taken on foods and drugs seized in interstate commerce have been published up to the present time, and less than one out of every thousand prosecutions for some form of violation of this act concerns honey.

Death Penalty

Forty states as well as the District of Columbia and the United States federal government have a death penalty for murder. In North Dakota, Rhode Island and some other states where life imprisonment is the penalty for murder, death by hanging is inflicted if a person kills somebody else while serving a life term. In some of the capital punishment states the jury has the right to fix the penalty at life imprisonment, by recommending mercy.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Who Pays
The Federal Payroll?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Maybe he doesn't realize it, but the average American citizen and taxpayer today is footing the bill for one of the largest payrolls in history.

Moreover he is increasing it at a rate seldom, if ever, equalled in days of peace.

For evidence of this, consider the growing list of Federal job-holders—whose pay checks come out of taxes charged ultimately to the American citizen and worker and earner. Here are some official statistics from Washington:

In June 1933, there were approximately 565,000 job-holders on the Federal payroll—exclusive, of course, of the Army and Navy.

By June 1934, the total had been boosted to more than 661,000.

By June 30, 1935, it had soared to a total of 717,000.

The climb continued. By September of this year it had reached a peak of 794,000—all paid out of taxes.

That's a lot of job-holders. There are at least ten states in the Union that can't count as many heads in their entire population. And they are costing the taxpayers more than $100,000,000 a month.

But these figures tell only half the story. Add to the list of Federal job-holders the various public employes of states, cities and smaller political divisions, and your total will run into millions—also paid out of taxes, direct and indirect, clipped from the average citizen's earnings or savings. And remember, these totals include only the regular job-holders. They don't include the numerous relief beneficiaries. That's an entirely separate list.

Expensive? Of course it's expensive! No farmer, no merchant, no industrial concern, could succeed with such padded payrolls. But in government it's different. The politicians who pad the payroll don't have to foot the bill. They leave that detail to the people—and arrange for it through taxes.

That's one reason why, as economists have computed, more than 20 per cent of our national income goes into taxes—national, state and local. That's what statisticians have in mind when they tell us that the citizen who hasn't got a political job labors one day out of five to help support those who have. When we realize these things and insist that the politicians devote themselves to efficiency in government, to cut their patronage, another great stride will have been achieved toward economy—and recovery.

2. Watch For Specials.
3. Save Unused Portions.
4. Have Year-'round Refrigeration.

Tests recently made over the country show the necessity for year 'round refrigeration. The Government Weather Bureau reports show that there are only nineteen days in the average winter, when temperatures remain throughout the day at "safety zone temperatures"—below 50 degrees and above 32 degrees.

Natural refrigeration is not dependable. It is always summer in the kitchen. Tests in various cities during the winter season, show an average temperature of 76 degrees (26 degrees above the danger-line).

Electric refrigeration is dependable. It makes possible your planned program of saving.

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Taft, twenty-three, attractive and ambitious but unable to hold a job, lives in a drab San Francisco flat with her sister Brenda and brother Cliff, who are older, her seventeen-year-old brother Bruce, and their Aunt Meg. In her job hunting rounds she interviews Lawrence Bellamy, editor of the Journal of Commerce, but finds he has no place for a woman writer. She likes him very much, as she tells Brenda later. "He's a stunning young thing, as tall as Cliff, not much more than thirty, I think, and very much the gentleman." As the sisters talk, diffident Barney Kerr drops in, asking where Cliff is.

Tony, Brenda and Barney sat on lazily, idly, at the wide-open window in the dim light. Bruce was snoring audibly on the couch. "We can have a light if there's any purpose in it," Tony observed. "No, I have to go," Barney said, not stirring. "I wonder why we're all so tired tonight?" he asked, after a space. "Oh, we sold the Isaak Walton," Brenda remembered to announce suddenly. "Dr. Talbot bought it." "I wouldn't thank you for all the first editions that ever were!" Tony remarked. This observation was permitted to die away into silence. Then Barney asked:

"What took Cliff to Sac?" "They'd punched the switchboard wrong for the Weststock thing," Tony stated indifferently. "Who said so?" Barney's words were like bullets. "Cliff did." "What'd he say?" "Well, if you must know, Barney, Cliff was shaving this morning, and Mr. Ridley telephoned. Cliff's first speech was 'The hell!' Then he rushed out like a fire wagon, and the next thing I knew he had telephoned that he was off for Sacramento." "But he got it was all right when he got there," Barney said, after thought. "Was that bad, Barney?" Brenda asked anxiously. Darling old Benny, Tony thought; she had had so much anxiety in her twenty-eight years! "Oh, kinder." "Was it—was it Cliff's fault?" "It was all our faults, I guess. We did the drawings."

"It seems," Tony volunteered, "that they wanted this marble slab to stand up vertically, as it were, and it was cut to lie down sidewise, and they said they'd have to take out a piece of wall in the basement." "Who said so?" Barney asked, in the explosive, incredulous manner he had used before. "Well, that was it. That was the trouble." Except for repeating under his breath Clifford's own explanation, Barney made no comment on this. There was silence again. "See Bellamy on the Journal, Tony?" he asked. "Yes, I did. This morning. Nothing came of it." "Ha!" Barney ejaculated, and at his tone she felt her cheeks flush in the shadows. It was as if Barney felt himself personally charged with the business of getting Tony Taft, who had lost so many jobs in the past few years, still another. "What was it that your Aunt Sally had in mind?" "She wasn't at home when I telephoned, so I don't know," Tony said untruthfully. It was none of his business whether she was working or idle!

"Miss Grace, in our office, is going to marry Jay Kilmer," Barney said after a moment. "She's not such a smart girl, but we all feel badly to have her go. For one thing, she's always on time." The voice that she had been trying to keep very casual over his pipe took on a slightly resentful note. "I think that's darned important," he went on. "Being on time, dependable. And then she's a smartly dressed girl, neat. Men like women in offices to be neat—look nice. Then another thing, you never hear her. Quiet. All the girls like her, but there's none of this giggling and whispering—" to have to do everything I hate—book-keeping, jobs in stores, companion to crazy old ladies in love with their chauffeurs, teaching in private schools that go bust owing me a hundred and twenty dollars! It would seem that I can't do what I want to do, and I hate to do what I—"

"You'll never drudge along in an office for twenty years or five!" Brenda predicted in a troubled voice. "You have!" Tony thought. Aloud she said nothing. "You'll marry," Brenda said. Tony could feel her cheeks flush resentfully. "Maybe Barney—" Brenda went on boldly.

"I don't think it'll be Barney," Tony answered moderately. "I wish," she went on, her tone warming, "I wish you could have heard the nice little sermon he was just preaching to me! Barney's so outrageously stuck-on himself!" Tony interpolated, resentfully: "about punching on time at the office, and dressing smartly—"

"He didn't!" "He did." "There was a silence." "It only means that he's in love with you." "He's in love with Barney Kerr—that's who he's in love with!"

"No, honestly, Tony, Barney isn't so conceited! But he likes you so much that he worries about you—honestly, that's it." "Any man can ask any girl," Tony observed, after thought. "He's never said anything."

"Not on a hundred and fifty a month, with a mother like his." "He's really in love with the whole family, and I don't blame him, when you look at the family he's got!" Tony said. "He's lonely, and he likes our food, and he can talk about oil circuit-breakers and pole-top whatnots with Cliff, and that's all there is to it."

"Tony," Brenda began, as Tony fell silent, "would you like him to ask you to marry him?" "Yes," Tony answered without hesitation, "so that I could refuse him!" Brenda laughed.

"He's too smart to risk that," she said. "In some ways he's much wiser than Cliff. But anyone seeing the way he watches you, Tony, and worries about your affairs, and—well, even in this giving advice this evening—anyone can see that he's thinking of you all the time. And I know this," Brenda went on seriously, "I know enough of human nature to know that the minute a man like that marries a woman, she — she becomes sacred. You'd be completely spoiled—everything you did would be wonderful—would be perfect to Barney! And if you ever had a child," said Brenda, "well, I can imagine the St. Joseph aunts that Barney would put on! Nobody could stand him!" Tony laughed, not displeased with the turn the conversation had taken. She knew that it was true. Barney did take himself and his profession seriously, but he took his relationship to Tony seriously, too. "I could marry Barney," she said thoughtfully, reluctantly. "But it would just be a marriage, Brenda," she burst out, after a pause. "It would just be—oh, a little apartment somewhere, and being nice to Mrs. Kerr, and agreeing with her that there never was a son like Barney; they can't be seven minutes together without quarrelling, but that's neither here nor there! Aunt Sally'd be pleased—and I suppose you would be."

"But why should you want me to get married, Benny?" "I want you to be happy." "I wouldn't be. And once you're married, you can't get out."

"I drowsy it's quite different, though, once you're in." "Tony was silent." "But, why not Barney?" The older sister persisted lightly. "Cliff loves him; we all do. We've known him all our lives."

"In the first place, he isn't in love with me," Tony said. "In the second, I'm not in the least in love with him, and I never could be. And at that," she added honestly, "I think he wants me, has it in his mind, anyway, that we will marry some day, and I believe I could marry him and make him a darned good wife! But there's no—no flame to that, Brenda!" Tony finished, in a low tone.

"There's no glory, if I were successful at something—as a head nurse, or a reporter, or a photographer, or a lecturer, it'd be different. I'd marry with—with style, then, I'd feel that I'd been a success at one thing and would be at another. But if I married Barney now it'd be a harbor—and he'd know it! It'd be just—just taking care of poor wild Tony, who tried for the stage and the newspapers and was fired and snubbed all round, and who finally realized that a woman's truest role is that of a wife and mother—" She stopped, her voice thickening.

"It is the happiest life," Brenda offered, in a slow voice with notes of pain in it. "If you love a man, that is," she added.

"Ah, but you see I don't," Tony said. "I know the real thing when I meet it. In that newspaper office to-day—down at the Journal rooms, I mean, I met a man—" She stopped. Presently she resumed again, a little shamefacedly: "You'd think I'm an absolute fool if I say that something—something flashed between us—between this Mr. Bellamy upon whom I'd never set eyes in my life before, and me—that was nearer—nearer—love, than anything Barney's ever made me feel! He had only to look at me to make me feel silly and cold and shuddery, you know that wonderful feeling that you're going all to pieces and don't care!"

"I don't know," said Brenda, laughing in sudden relief, "and I do think you're silly, idiotic, if you ask me. What do you know of this man?" "Nothing!" admitted Tony, laughing too. "Except that he's somewhere around thirty, and married—" "Married?" "Yes, of course—he would be." "But that isn't love, Tony."

"Well, maybe it isn't. But it's something—something a girl wants to have before she gives, in Brenda. Just the shape of his mouth—it's quite hard and large, and the look in his eye—he looks up and smiles at you quite a while after he's finished speaking—" "Antoinette Taft!" "I know. I know how it sounds. I admit that it's supremely silly! I only used it as an illustration—What on earth—" She said the last words on an odd note of fright. For the telephone was shrilly ringing.

"What is it?" Aunt Meggy here interpolated dazedly, from her doorway. "Cliff, blown and pale and tired, was in the hall doorway. 'What's all the shooting about?' he said.

"Oh, Cliff, just as I was despairing—I'd been to the Journal today, and there didn't seem a chance—just as I was despairing, this Mr. Greenwood telephoned from the Call, and he wants me to gather up all the news I can and begin tomorrow—and twenty-five a week, Cliff!" "That's something like," Cliff said, with his slow smile.

"And, Cliff, you know I can do it," chattered Tony. "You know I can, Benny! Aunt Sally'll help me, and Mrs. Terry!" "Want to go down now and clinch it?" Clifford asked. "Oh, Cliff, could we? He really did want to see me, because tomorrow's the day he usually has off, and he said I'd have to scout around and dig up a lot of mush for the Sunday page! He sounded so cute!" Tony said, in a rush. "Get your hat on," said Cliff. "I know a man named Burke who works on the sports section. We'll go down." "You angel!" Tony called back, flying into her room to change. Brenda smiled at her oldest brother. "She's down and out five minutes ago, no hope anywhere—she's been telling me what a failure she is—"

"Failure, shush! She's only twenty-three," Cliff was lighting a cigarette. "How'd it go in Sacramento, darling?" "Oh, I think I butchered the switchboard, all right. However, we think we can work out of it."

"Cliff put on his damp overcoat again, as Tony came out radiant and fresh in her dark blue coat and small hat, and they went away together.

CHAPTER III "It's so much easier to go in there with you alone, Cliff," Tony said, when they had left the street car and made a wet run for the lighted doorway of the big newspaper building.

"Sure," he said. "I hope Burke's there. He may not be, though." The elevator flashed up past floors that were dark and deserted at eleven o'clock at night. They stepped out at the fourteenth floor; everything was brightly animated and exciting here, and Tony looked about her with avid interest at the glass-top doors that were opening and shutting continually upon seething inner apartments. A quiet girl at a telephone switchboard looked up.

"Mr. Greenwood?" The girl repeated the name cautiously into a black rubber mouthpiece. "There's a Miss Taft to see you here."

Sitting back, she said, "You can go right in. It's room 18."

Tony followed her brother dazedly. Here was room 18, with "City Room" lettered in black on the door, and "Charles Greenwood" set modestly in a corner below it.

Cliff opened the door, and Tony had her first look at the city room. It angled the entire width of the building on two sides. The third side, she was presently to learn, was the Sunday paper department, and the fourth was variously divided by the library, the files, the photographers' lairs. Down below were the business offices, imposing in heavy chairs and eucalyptus paneling; up here everything was confusion, disorder, haste.

The instant her nostrils caught the first scent of it she knew that she belonged here; that this was her world, her battlefield, her first love. Men were everywhere; shouting, smoking. Typewriters were clacking; there was a ripping sound as paper was torn from them; there was a constant eccentric chatter of a telegraph machine from the wide littered desk marked "Associated Press." Tony saw men wearing green eye-shades, eyeglassed men; saw one very handsome big dark fellow scolding away about something to an older man at a corner desk.

Mr. Charles Greenwood was a dark little weasel of a man who occupied a corner desk shut away from the general office only by a nicked and battered fence of dark wood with a gate. He was in his shirt-sleeves and smoking a cigar when Clifford and Tony were ushered into his immediate neighborhood.

The desk before the city editor was heaped high with the society pages of recent Sunday papers. He had evidently been clipping and pasting desperately; he indicated a drawer full of uninviting-looking letters.

"We got to have a page of this stuff, good," he said, "for Madame La Duchesse. That's the swell stuff, see—the Burlingame crowd, the la-di-dahs, see? You know that crowd, don't you?" he broke off to ask suspiciously, looking up at Tony. "Well," Tony answered firmly, without the flicker of an eyelid.
