FEED DAMAGED

E. M. McQueen had the misfortune to lose a large part of his feed stack Saturday afternoon when it caught fire from a pile of burning trash. A number of citizens formed a "bucket brigade" and assisted in controlling the blaze.

Last Saturday we observed P. O. Johnson walking about the streets wearing a smile a foot wide and with his chest expansion threatening to pull the buttons off his shirt. He finally confessed that he was "grandpa," a fine 74 pound boy having been born to Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Johnson of Pixley, Calif., on March 20.

Mrs. Johnson says she didn't get a chance to tell anyone about the new grandson, because Uncle Penn told everybody first.

THE STORY OF JASON

1-Jason was no bargain. 2-He didn't know much about anything. 3-He was five years old before he could talk. And then his voice was found to be so obnoxious that his parents were almost sorry he had become vocal. 4-But when Jason heard his own voice he was impressed from the first. 5-To him it seemed like rare music. 6-By the time he was ten years old he had become the noisiest boy in the neighborhood. He was a model for the original loud speaker. 7-In school he was the boy orator. Talking was the fulfillment of all his desires and the realization of all his hopes. 8-He was a living argument for bigger and better Quiet Zones. 9-Jason would argue with anybody any time about anything, with or without a given subject and he would take three hours to pass a given point. 10-And he always insisted on the last word. 11-He had become a major disturbance by the time he attained manhood, and his folks worried for fear he would have no future. Others worried for fear he would. 12-But he became a national figure. 13-No matter how loudly he shouted he never said anything that made sense. He thought logic was the name of a Polish village. 14-So he was quickly grabbed up by a great political party and made one of its foremost campaign orators and stump speakers at $1,000 a speech. 15-When he became certain nobody understood what he was promising, he raised it to $2,000 and got it. MORAL-There's a career somewhere for the worst of us.

like a combination of all the great lovers of history suffering from a touch of asthma, heartburn and love-nest jitters. What's the general idea? The general idea is that a man who sings like that reduces the middle-aged women of America to a state of complete hysteria, drives the young ones gaga, and makes even the grandmothers chase grandpa around the house shouting, "Kiss me, my fool!" Is the idea well founded? Probably, not; but once these radio station executives get sold on something you can't cure them without a major operation. How many women do you think find a radio crooner the answer to their prayers? I dunno, but every time one of those birds begins to do his stuff through the loud speaker something like 18,956,345 men leap at the radio set with an ax. Does it do any good? No. Then why do it? It just relieves the strain. WHAT'S WRONG WITH THESE SENTENCES? 1-"Anything you do is all right," said the golfer whose opponent had just teed up his ball in a trap. "It's all good clean sport." 2-The bathing girl refused to go on the beach when she heard photographers were around. 3-The two heavyweight contenders fought fifteen vicious rounds, throwing all caution to the winds. CURIOUS FACTS FOR CURIOUS PEOPLE 1-An alligator has no love motif. 2-Green peas may be mashed by placing them on a rock and biting them with a nightstick. 3-The Japanese do not play marbles. 4-The first name of Alfred E. Smith is Alfred. 5-There is a lion in South Africa that has never seen a moving picture camera. 6-Cherries may be put away for the winter in open barrels but they will not keep. 7-Mice may be kept in domesticity but it is impossible to teach them to fetch your slippers. 8-In New York city today's morning papers come out yesterday afternoon. PROBLEMS IN MATHEMATICS 1-John can mow a lawn 50 feet by 75 feet in 2 hours; Fred can mow a lawn 100 by 100 in 2 hours and 5 minutes; William can mow a lawn 100 by 80 feet in 1 hour and 35 minutes. Why do they all do it in the morning when neighbors are trying to sleep? 2-The eastern states produce 2,567,000 bushels of strawberries; the western states produce 5,987,345 bushels of strawberries; the other sections produce 11,508,967 3/4 bushels of strawberries. Why do you get so few strawberries in shortcake? 3-If it takes a popular song writer 48 hours to write a song stolen from the classics of the great musical masters, how many years would it take six song writers to produce an original number, even if one of them understood music? 4-Jennie can swim 500 yards in 2 minutes; Alice can swim the same distance in 1 minute 55 seconds; Andrea can swim 1,000 yards in 4 minutes and 11 seconds. If they are at a fashionable bathing place with plenty of eligible boys to talk to, why bother? 5-If it takes 4 hitch-hikers 3 days traveling in 35 different cars to cover 1,152 miles, how long will it take them to make the return trip if one of them is carrying a portable radio set, a bowl of live fish and a case of hay fever? SCRAMBLED LETTERS CONTEST Rearrange these letters to spell the names of famous members of the All American Football team: 1-Kzxcwrxwylorwetyzxc. 2-Okozozklosklyvitch. 3-Gzolkosoflomanlechoff. 4-Rosklesoorpowkleck. 5-Efghiklemoprstw. 6-Grwliomaxzstgrwyerlop. 7-Hjlorwzxxopikorofsky.

LITTLE POEMS OF SUNSHINE

When everything goes wrong, Just smile! When you can't quite get along, Just smile! When the clouds won't roll away, Just smile! When you're sick as you can be And you're full of misery, Just smile! When you have no place to sleep, Just smile! When your debts are very deep, Just smile! When you lose your last thin dime And you're hungry all the time, Just smile! When the larder's bleak and bare, Just smile! When your life is full of care, Just smile! When you're feeling sad and blue And the boss says you are through, Just smile! When you cannot pay the rent, Just smile! When you haven't got a cent, Just smile! If you do, well then, alas! You're a goofy, silly ass, So smile!

THIS IS WALDO

Who is this? This is Waldo. What is Waldo doing? Waldo is crooning. What is crooning? Crooning is a national nuisance. Can't Waldo stop crooning? Yes, Waldo can stop crooning. Then why doesn't he do so? Because there is big money in it and very little work. Why is Waldo paid big money for crooning? Because big radio advertisers believe that a soft male voice with a little tremor in it helps greatly in the sale of soap, soups, smokes and what have you. Has Waldo a tremor in his voice? Yes. When Waldo gets close to that mike with a nice soft lyric he sounds

NEW SERIAL YARN BY CHANNING POLLOCK

"Synthetic Gentleman" Reveals Author's Deep Insight.

Channing Pollock has written such dramatic masterpieces as "The Fool,"
"The Enemy" and "The House Beautiful." He wrote the lyric for "My Man," immortalized by Panny Brice. But—"My only real talent," he has declared, "is for friendship. I know more bishops and burglars, chorus girls and capitalists, bootblacks and barons, than any other one man in the universe."

And right there you have the explanation of the remarkable insight in-

CHANNING POLLOCK

to both the upper and lower crusts of life that makes his new adventure novel, "Synthetic Gentleman," some of the grandest reading of this or any other year. It is the story of a secondstory worker who broke into another man's house, stepped into another man's shoes (while his own were drying by the fireplace) and found that in order to keep the girl he loved he had to go right on wearing the disguise of a gentleman.

Playwright, novelist, short story writer, essayist, poet, lecturer and lyricist of distinction, Channing Pollock, born in 1880 in Washington, D. C., has become one of the outstanding literary figures of the present day. It is with pride that this newspaper announces that his "Synthetic Gentleman" will appear in these columns in serial form. This bright, exciting story is guaranteed to keep anyone who begins it hanging on breathlessly to the very last chapter.

the very silence of Electrolux testifies to its simpler, more efficient re-operation, it's the only refrigerator that can offer you all these long-life

- No moving parts to wear
- Lasting efficiency
- Continued low operating cost
- Fullest food protection
- Savings that pay for it

ELECTROLUX's silence is more

The Automatic Electric Range Is the Answer!

Every member of the family appreciates wholesome, well-cooked food.
It's necessary to health! However, few people realize, except the housewife, the toil and drudgery necessary to prepare three meals a day. Just think of preparing over a thousand meals a year besides the many other laborious duties of a housewife.

Many West Texas homemakers have found a happy solution in the elimination of unnecessary toil in the kitchen. Today, the modern mother can place an entire meal in the oven of her range, set the oven control and time control and return home hours later to find a "piping hot" meal ready to serve. This is the marvel of automatic electric cookery!

Who Are You?

The Romance of Your Name

By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

A Bryan?

The meaning of this name is "dignity or honor," taken from the Gaelic word "bri" and people in every generation and country who have borne the name have lived up to the responsibility imposed upon them.

There were many Bryans to come to this country during the early days of colonization and also at later periods. Most of these settlers were Irish but there is record of one Alexander Bryan who came from England and settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1668. He first located in Milford, Conn., where he served as governor's assistant.

George Bryan (1730-91), son of Samuel Bryan, of Dublin, Ireland, settled in Philadelphia. He was a prominent figure in the Revolutionary period, being an active member of the Stamp Act congress, chief lawmaker of Pennsylvania and father of the Pennsylvania constitution of 1776. He was an ardent agitator of the emancipation of the negro slaves; served as president of the executive council and justice of the Supreme court.

There were also Irish Bryans who were descendants of the nobility, living in Virginia earlier than 1700. Also Joseph Bryan, of England, who married Jeannette Cochrane and came to America in 1700 and settled in South Carolina. There are many descendants of these Bryans in the Southern states today.

No attempt is made to connect the lineage of the families given in so short a sketch but it is probable that they were remotely related.

There have been many Bryans in public life in recent times, who have and are still maintaining the "dignity and honor" of the family name, both in their private lives and in public achievement.

The late William Jennings Bryan, one of the best known public figures of modern times, was a worthy bearer of this splendid name; a living exponent of the Bryan motto "fortis et fidelis."

A Peyton?

The first known person who used the name of Peyton was Reginald de Peyton, who lived in Bosford, England, in the Twelfth century. Following him, there was several generations of Peytons in this section of England, who distinguished themselves for their deeds of valor and positions of honor. One of them was the crusader, Sir John de Peyton, who lived in the latter part of the Twelfth century. A later descendant, in 1498, was Sir Robert de Peyton, high sheriff of Cambridge, England. He married Frances Calthorpe and through them the Peytons claim royal lineage.

Sir Christopher Peyton was Auditor of Ireland during the reign of James I. Major Robert Peyton, a son of Thomas Peyton, of Roughton county, Norfolk, England, was one of the first Peytons to land on American shores. He came to Virginia in 1676, where he settled, and called his estate "Iselham" from the family home in Cambridge, England. Major Robert was a loyal supporter of the colonies and was the founder of the Gloucester county (Virginia) Peytons. Colonel Valentine Peyton, also a distinguished Virginia Peyton, was the founder of the Westmoreland and Stafford county branches.

Aga Khan Leads 100,000,000 Moslems

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

HE IS the political leader of 100,000,000 persons in India alone, and the spiritual leader of 70,000,000 persons in central Asia, Africa, Arabia and the Orient—yet he has not a kingdom of a single acre.

To his followers he is as holy as the Pope is to his—yet he is one of the most notorious sportsmen of the world. His income is more than $3,000,000 a year, his houses are veritable palaces, he is able to shower gifts of fine silks, fabulous jewels and exquisite furs upon whomever he pleases—and he is happily married to the daughter of a small-town hotel manager in France.

He is the direct descendant of a major prophet—he won't bet on a race horse, even one from his own $5,000,000 stable.

Such enigmatic sidelights on this phenomenal personality might be recorded for column after column. He is the Aga Khan, Sultan, Sir Mohammed Shah, the religious potentate over the followers of the Ismaili branch of the Mohammedan faith, and as the descend-

Sunni, chiefly in the recognition of certain apostles of Mohammed.

His direct descent from the "last of the prophets" was responsible for the most colorful part of the present semi-centennial celebration of the Aga Khan's reign. This was the recent bath ceremony. A gold coach, drawn by the Aga's magnificent horses, and clad with a great parade several miles long, set out from his place to the pearl mosque, the believers prostrating themselves by the thousands along the line of march. The coach contained that holy of holies, the Aga Khan, in his ceremonial bath. The water was scented with priceless attar found in the bath of Mumtaz, the Mogul queen whose memory is perpetuated in the wonderful monument that is the Taj Mahal. It had been acquired by the Khojas, the fabulously wealthy cotton princes of Bombay.

Millions for Bath Water.

As the coach bearing the Aga Khan passed solemnly down the processional avenue, he sprinkled water from his Inoculated and the plague was beaten.

What was probably the crisis in the establishment of his true power came a few years later in another racial conflict. Certain of his followers deserted the Ismaili sect to join the Sunnis, and three of them were murdered in religious indignation of their fellows. At a throw all India could have been thrown into mortal internal combat. The Aga Khan excommunicated the killers from the church, cursed them with denial of the burial rite and announced that if any more fighting broke out he would resign as leader of Ismaili on the spot. Peace reigned from that moment.

Test of Power Comes.

When he was not keeping the peace among his people, the Aga was establishing schools, educational and medical centers, hospitals, libraries and other institutions of learning and culture, often with money out of his own pocket. He personally collected $1,000,000 to raise the college at Aligarh to university status. He has tried in every way to abolish the depressed classes, to raise the Indian to a higher standard of living, and to secure for his country equal freedom with other British dominions.

Repeatedly this leader has appealed to the League of Nations for recognition of his people, Ismailis and others.

The Aga Khan was in East Africa when the World war broke out. He directed his followers to support the British, and was successful even when Turkey entered the war on the side of the Central powers. The Ismailis were aroused and showed tendencies toward sympathizing with their fellow Moslems, but lent their support once more to the British when the Aga, in a general order, assured them that the Allah had no quarrel with Islam (the Mohammedan religion) itself.

Aga Khan's Three Wives.

The Moslem religion permits a man to have three wives, but he must produce an heir. The Aga Khan is now living with his third Begum, or wife. His first was his cousin, the Shahzada Begum, who never bore him a child, and with whom he was unhappy. They separated early, and two years ago she died.

Theresa, an Italian princess whose fine sculpture had been exhibited many places in Europe, was his second wife. She had one son which died at birth, but later bore another, who is the Aly Khan and the rightful heir to his father. Theresa died in 1926 and was buried in the family vault at Monaco.

The Aga Khan's present wife he married in romantic fashion for a man of such nearly limitless means. Their wedding was like a small town elopement—which indeed it really was, for it happened quietly and secretly in the little town hall of Aix-les-Bains, in the French Alps. The Cinderella story of this simple country girl called Andre Carron marrying an oriental potentate gave rise to many fanciful tales about their relationships, but it is a fact that the new Begum was an old friend of the family. She proved to be beautiful, cultured, a charming conversationalist and everything that could be desired in the way of a consort for the leader of 100,000,000 people. Not long ago she bore him a child.

Since his services in the World war, the Aga Khan has become something son of the prophet himself, forty-eight times removed, is to them the representative of God on earth.

Fiftieth Year of Leadership.

The year 1936, the fiftieth of such divine ambassadorship by the Aga Khan, is being made the occasion for elaborate and ceremonious celebration wherever there are believers in the Ismaili faith. From the far-flung corners of the world are pouring in voluntary tributes of even greater value and more magnificent splendor than the regular annual tributes which the Khan says must amount to 2 1/2 per cent of the income of every Ismaili. They are being stored in the Aga Hall in Bombay, there to await redistribution to charity, educational and social institutions or the Aga's racing stables and palatial villas.

Most of his enormous power the Aga Khan owes to his paternal grandfather, Hassan Ali Shah, Aga Khan I, who was born in Persia in 1800 and died in India in 1881. Aga Khan I traced his ancestry back into prehistoric Persia and back to the Beni-Fatimite caliphs who founded Cairo in Egypt and were the sons of Fatima, the daughter of Mohammed.

Hassan Ali ruled over a province of Persia perhaps too wisely and well, for when he defended his people against cruel and oppressive taxes imposed by Feroz All Shah, he incurred the mortal wrath of that ruler of all Persia. Because he had been the Shah's friend, however, he was allowed to escape during the civil war which followed.

Hassan Ali, by this time an old man, fled through Afghanistan to Bombay, where he settled. He offered himself in service to the British army in Afghanistan and among the frontier tribes. His offers were accepted, but he was of little importance, until it became known that this first of the Aga Khans was receiving voluntary tributes after year from all points over India. And when it was discovered that regular contributions were also pouring in from many other oriental countries and from Africa, John Bull's colonial representatives began to realize that the holy leader of Ismaili was a rippling good man to have on their side. He did them a lot of good before his death, too.

Second Aga Dies Early.

The first Aga Khan's good work was carried on by his son, Aga Khan II, who lived only four years after his father's death. Aga Khan III was only eight years old when he succeeded to power.

Ever since he was a very young man, the present Aga has ruled his followers in their religious and political affairs wisely and kindly. To them he is a descendant of the Prophet.

The Mohammedan religion recognizes many prophets, beginning with Adam. There are three, however, which are of outstanding importance, for the three "books" which they are credited with having handed down. Moses introduced the laws, Jesus the scriptures, and Mohammed the Koran, or the scroll. As revealed to him by Allah (God), the Ismailis differ from the other branch of Mohammedanism, the bath upon the prostrate subjects. In their gratitude they gave him several million dollars in tribute that night.

This important fellow who has the portly men and general appearance of a Wall Street broker and yet joins the most humble of his followers in beating his chest until the blood comes in extremely emotional religious rites, is a walking rejection of the theory that never the twain shall meet. His is a tempered combination of oriental and occidental culture and education.

He was reared by a strict mother who had been a member of the Persian royal family. His stern tutoring, his natural aptitude and his real understanding of and interest in his people stamped him as a true leader when he was only sixteen. Riots broke out between the Hindus and Mohammedans in Bombay. So fired with emotional hatred were the masses, a first-class race war was in prospect. The young Aga Khan issued a command to his people that they were not to engage in such racial fighting. They "went over backwards" to obey his wish, even to the extent that Moslems were inviting Hindus home to dine with them.

In this instance the Aga's command was something the Ismaili could understand, but four years later, when he was still not a grown man, he issued another that was far more a test of his power. A plague ravaged India in 1907. Thousands upon thousands were dying because they refused to be inoculated with protective serum. They revolted at the thought. The young Aga went about among them, explaining the absolute necessity for inoculation. To their amazement he bared his own body time after time and accepted the prick of the needle to show them he would not ask them to do anything he wouldn't do himself. Their superstitions were broken down, they were of a lion in British society, and the presentation of the present Begum at the Court of St. James was one of the most picturesque social affairs of recent years.

Aga Himself Plays Now.

Unusual ceremonies are occurring every day during the celebration for the Aga Khan. One day 12,000 women, clad in silk pajamas, honored him at tea. Every day in his palace grounds he serves food and drink to tens of thousands of visitors.

Annually his cabinet presents the Aga Khan with his weight in gold, determined at a public weighing. He usually tips the beam at about 225 pounds, so the "take" is a considerable one. This year, perhaps because of the significance of the occasion, he broke all records, weighed in at 237 1/2, and collected more than $100,000. Most of it will go to charity to relieve distress among indigent Moslems.

Bob Davis Reveals

Ghostly Dice Game Recalls How Cavalier Lost Estate.

IN OCTOBER, 1633, out of the Thames River, England, 128 people pining for religious liberty put to sea in two wooden ships—one of 450 tons and the other of 50 tons. At the Isle of Wight others joined the expedition, and on the date of November 22 the Ark and the Dove, receiving salutes as Old England went astern, shook out fresh white canvas, and with plunging prows headed for the New world.

Once outside the channel, at the mercy of the broad Atlantic, a hurricane divided the two ships. The Dove, racked in her timbers, put back to the Selly Isles, to rejoin the Ark six weeks later at Barbados in the Antilles, touching at other islands on the way north, reaching Point Comfort, February, 1634, thence onward to St. Clements island in the Potomac the following month, there to establish St. Mary's City on the St. Mary's river, an arm of the Potomac.

Here Leonard Calvert, heading the expedition, made treaties with Indians, encouraged religious liberty and succeeded in bringing about the dreams of his father, George Calvert, Lord Baltimore and projector of the Palatinate of Maryland.

Once within its borders one feels the influence of invisible charm; the suggestion of a new and old world that united has created a third estate out of the past and the present. More keenly than any other section of Maryland, this subtle force is felt along the Patuxent river, lined with old manor houses that record two hundred years of the architecture, plantation and river life which had its roots among the Cavaliers.

King Confiscated Land.

Of these estates, which number about 20 more or less and occupy both sides of the river, I have elected to write about Sotterley. Sotterley takes its name from an old country seat in Suffolk, England, dating back more than 900 years. In those days no one owned anything that the king really coveted. Very well; now comes Edward IV who ascended the throne in 1461. Right off the bat he confiscated the Sotterley estates at Suffolk, and passed them over to a gentleman named Pleyter, who had wed a daughter of the House of Sotterley.

The strain prospered, multiplied, and in 1655, 50 years after the arrival of the Ark and the Dove, Benedict, of the Sotterley branch, turned up in Connecticut, altering the spelling of his name to Satterlee, as it was pronounced. A few years after, George Pleyter, dropping the "y" from his cognomen, drifted in to the Patuxent river section. His son, George Second, married the Widow Bowles, and built the mansion on the 2,000-acre estate now known as "Sotterley" named after the old place in Suffolk. The stone flagging, bricks and hardwood came from England. Six years, 1730-36, were consumed in the construction of the mansion.

Drama of Human Folly.

The original residence, which the present owner, Herbert L. Satterlee, a descendant of the Benedict Satterlee who arrived in Connecticut 1630, has restored with fidelity, stands after 200 years a testimony to the genius of Pleyter as a home builder. It is not, however, of the architectural, beauty or simplicities, though they be many, of which I would write, but of the human dramas of those who lived within its walls. Four generations of Pleyters walked through Sotterley, the second being the sixth governor of Maryland, who married Anne Rousby, famed as "The White Rose of Maryland." Their son married a Cecilia Bond, through whose veins ran the royal blood of Gustavus Vasa, king of Sweden. The product of this union, George Pleyter, last of the Pleyters to occupy Sotterley, believing himself to be invincible with a dice box, taking over of his estates by rolling the bones with Colonel Somervell, his relative by marriage.

Lady Luck Rebels.

This game, which was played in the governor's room of the old mansion, began with small stakes, swelled to a few hundred pounds, thoroughbred horses and personal effects, progressing to acreage, houses, river frontage, etc., finally to slaves, and at last to the grand manor house with all its priceless contents. With the final throw George Pleyter, beggared by fate, deserted by Lady Luck, casting the dice box from him, repaired to his bedroom, signed over all that was his when the game opened and vanished forthwith from the haunts of his equals to become a wanderer and an outcast, finally to die from illness and exposure, according to tradition, while on his way back to the scene of his losing tilt with fortune. While more than a hundred years have elapsed since that ill-fated game of chance, there are people still living along the Patuxent river who will tell you that while visiting Sotterley they have heard in the stillness of the night the rattle of dice in the old governor's room where the game was staged and according to his bedroom, there to sign away his all before wandering away to oblivion.

FRANKLIN'S FATHER AND MOTHER DIED OF FIRST ILLNESS

Benjamin Franklin used to say of his parents "I never knew either my father or mother to have any sickness but that of which they died, he at eighty-nine and she at eighty-five years of age." He had inherited an excellent physical foundation for the making of a great man.

In a printing shop in London, whether he went at the age of eighteen, he abstained from beer and yet being able to carry a large form of type in each hand where the others carried but one in both hands. Franklin kept a score card of virtues to be practiced. The first of the rules of conduct reads: "Temperance.—Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation."

Franklin's philosophic mind came to the conclusion that the quantity of each kind of exercise is to be judged not by the time spent or distance covered, "but by the degree of warmth it produces in the body."

Considering the customs of his day, he was a remarkable specimen of health, strength and endurance, concedes Dr. James F. Rogers in Hygeia.

THE FERRY-MORSE SEED BREEDING INSTITUTE knows its business from the ground up

You can depend on Ferry's seeds to produce true to type and quality wherever you live—in any climate. How can we say this? Because we conduct over 50,000 tests annually, to make sure they will grow. Over 9,000 tests to make sure of their quality. And that's just part of the continuous activity at our Rochester, Mich., and Salinas, Cal., stations. For 80 years this work has progressed—improving and maintaining the established quality of vegetable and flower seeds.

We develop our foundation stock at the stations. It is then used for seed production on our farms or under our supervision. The resulting seed is sold only after tests have shown that it is of proper quality and germination. You can buy Ferry seeds today in your own neighborhood, many for as little as 5c a packet.

Write for a free copy of our Home Garden Catalog to help you plan your purchases from the Ferry display in your local stores. Check the radio programs for our helpful garden talks over Station WFLA, Ferry-Morse Seed Co., Detroit and San Francisco.

BEAUTIFUL NICARAGUA

Railroad Building in Nicaragua.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

NICARAGUA has an area of some 50,000 square miles, about equal to that of New York state, and a population of approximately 650,000, close to that of the city of Buffalo.

The cities of Chinandega, Leon, Managua, Masaya and Granada are located near the west coast and along the one line of railroad, extending from the port of Corinto, on the Pacific, to Granada, the main port on Lake Nicaragua.

Managua, the capital, is the largest, and although badly set back by the earthquake and fire that almost destroyed the city in the spring of 1931, will in time again become the most important business center of the country.

Leon and Chinandega, cities of artisans and small proprietors, are located among very fertile farming lands and are the centers of the sugar trade.

Matagalpa, the largest town off the railroad, is the center of an important coffee-growing district. Because of its altitude, it has a more agreeable climate than the cities located in the plains; but the absence of a railroad, or even a good highway connection with the outside world, has thwarted its growth.

East and West Are Divided. Eastern and western Nicaragua are divided by mountains and jungle covered country, which have effectively prevented intercommunication except to a very minor degree.

In addition, the lack of a practicable route to its east coast has forced virtually all of Nicaragua's foreign commerce to seek a longer and more roundabout route via the west coast and the Panama canal.

The population of the country is overwhelmingly of mixed Spanish and Indian blood, with Spanish the universal language, although one finds in Granada and the other large towns many families of pure Spanish blood.

Still farther to the east, along the rivers that drain into the Caribbean north of Greytown, the Sumo Indians have their homes. They are a wild and timid race and have resisted all Spanish influence.

The Mosquito Coast. Part of Nicaragua's Caribbean coast has the world's worst real estate title "The Mosquito Coast."

Part of Nicaragua's Caribbean coast has the world's worst real estate title "The Mosquito Coast." It gets its name not from the prevalence of mosquitoes, but from the Misskito Indians.

The Mosquito coast was also a refuge for buccanniers and pirates and was visited by many trading ships seeking turtle shells.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

If somebody has done you what in common parlance is called "a dirty trick," you will, if you are human, resent it, and you may make up your mind to get even at the earliest opportunity.

You do not get "mad" at a stone on the road which turns your ankle, or at a gust of wind which blows your hat off.

As soon as you get angry, you lose your power to think. If your grievance is caused by somebody else it will not be lightened by punching him on the nose the first time you see him.

But if you sit up nights to dislike them, and plan how you are going to revenge yourself on them, you are going to have a pretty disagreeable time until you learn better.

I remember when I was a young man seeing two belligerent men pummeling each other with their fists—both of them getting hurt in the process.

When the battle was over I asked a bystander what it was about, and was told that the row started over an argument regarding the price of flour.

Probably neither of them cared very much about the price of flour, but the dispute they had engaged in embittered them both, and after they had begun calling each other igorramuses and fatheads, they sought to settle the dispute with blows, and as a result became permanent enemies.

Crime waves are due to lack of imagination on the part of the people. There is no crook, no matter how clever—and very few crooks are clever—who could last for a week if the public once made up its mind to put him out of business.

The men who have terrorized the country for the past eight or ten years are usually "hopped up" when they go out to rob and kill or plunder.

They are just keen enough to keep in a hideout until they see a good chance for a hold up, or for the robbery of valuable goods.

Sometime or other the inhabitants of this country will become sufficiently terrified to do something, as did the Vigilantes in the gold days in the West.

I was a reporter in Portland, Ore., when two men of the highwayman type fought and shot their way out of a pententary. They succeeded in getting as far as Paget Sound, killing many people as they went.

But one of them, Tracy, became suspicious of his pal Merrill, and shot him. Tracy went on alone, traveled in a boat from near Olympia to Seattle, where he shot three more people, and then made his way to eastern Washington.

There he was run down and shot. He was an ignorant man and might easily have been captured had he been really hunted. But few people understood what a menace he was.

When the public really wakes up, crooks of the highwayman stripe will find the country too hot to hold them.

Preparing Souffles Is Not as Difficult a Task as It Seems Trick Is to Make a Base Like One Used for Cream-Puffs.

"Will you please at some convenient time, tell us would-be cooks something about souffles? Mine are either too dry or they fall." So writes a reader. Fortunately I can answer this question satisfactorily, says a well-known food expert.

Souffles used to puzzle me, I tried to duplicate that perfect souffle to be found in an old French hotel in lower New York. I was never able to get one crusty on the outside and soft in the center, until I asked the chef to make one for me.

The trick is to make a base like the one that is used for cream-puffs. The base is the same for all with the exception that for cheese, meat or vegetable souffles you make it thinner.

What Is The Constitution?
 By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
*National Chairman
 Sentinels of the Republic*

It has become the fashion in recent weeks for certain public officials to say that the Constitution is fading from the current political picture.

They are wrong. No attempt to minimize its importance can alter the fact that the Constitution will remain a dominant issue so long as the American people are determined to resist all efforts to curtail their individual rights and privileges.

But the Constitution is far more than a political issue. It is more than a written code of fundamental law. It is the permanent expression of the American spirit—the American Way of Life.

There are today—and there will continue to be—men, in public office and out, who don't approve of the American Way of Life. Charmed by modern European experiments, they would like to change our basic system of government by the people, to a form which places all political power in the hands of one or more officials.

The tragic evidences of lost liberties, trampled war and religious intolerance which spring from such dictatorships do not deter them. But the Constitution does. Therefore they would like us to forget about it—and its safeguards—for a while.

But we shouldn't forget. So long as the Constitution lives, our liberties are secure. If it falls, those liberties—and the American Way of Life—fall with it. Eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty.

Like All Women, You Want Your Clothes to Be Right

AND the only way that you can be sure they will be right is to know what the designers and creators of new styles have decreed shall be right.

Cherie Nicholas, nationally known authority, who writes on women's fashions for this paper, tells you just what you want to know and pictures for you the garments and hats that the well-dressed woman will be wearing in the weeks to come. The styles that Miss Nicholas describes are authentic and the garments that she depicts are up-to-the-minute, but they do not represent style extremes. The garments are those that will be worn by the average woman and that you will find for sale in your home stores.

Keep up with the changing styles through Miss Nicholas' illustrated fashion articles, appearing in these columns, and tell your friends about them.

CHAPTER XXV—Continued

"Married!" Joe said, Tony drawn down on his knee now, and his kiss against her chin. "We were married two weeks after you were. We've been bursting to tell you, but we've not told anyone except Cliff and Brenda and the family, and Tony didn't want to spill it without asking me, and I didn't dare without asking her! This is my beautiful, my adorable, my glorious wife!" he said. "And she's going to Rio with me next month, aren't you, sweetheart?"

"This is my husband," Tony said, under her breath, looking only at Joe, her arm about his neck, her words only for him. And so said, they sounded like a song.

"And we cook here, and garden here, and fool around here," Joe stated, beginning to serve the ham enthusiastically, as Tony, flushed and laughing, went around to her own place. "And perhaps angels in heaven have something on us for happiness, but we doubt it. I talked Tony into it just after we had word from you, but for various reasons we kept it quiet. They wanted her to finish up her work on the paper, and break some one else in."

"I can't still quite see the reason for the secrecy with us," Caroline observed nippingly, after a somewhat forced flurry of explanations and congratulations, and the evening was over, and the Bellamys were going.

"And something tells me that I'll never be intimate with my sister-in-law," Tony observed, in reference to this parting shot, when they were gone.

"Something tells me that neither one enjoyed the evening," Joe said, happy with his pipe, his friends, his wife, his peaceful Sunday evening. "Tony, did you and he have it out?"

"While I was getting dinner, yes. In a way, we did. And in a way I felt terribly sorry for him, Joe. You're so wise and you're so good, and you know everything, and every one adores you, and you're wonderful," Tony said simply. "But poor old Larry's still the big wooden lujan, handsome and clever and adored by the girls. He just can't believe that life is being mean to him."

"Sit here on this thing."

She took the familiar red leather hassock at his knee; her eyes were fixed on his, her dark hair rumpled a little into a babyish aureole about her face. Joe put down his pipe, and they locked hands.

"Do you really love me, Tony?"

"Joe, so much that I can't pull out a weed or pick up a shell without needing you to praise me and see me and talk to me about it."

"There wasn't the least twinge to-night?"

"Nothing but pity for the poor fool girl who fell in love with a painted totem pole."

"Larry isn't a totem pole, you know."

"To me he is. I looked at him and I looked at you, Joe. You are so wise and quiet and good—" She stopped.

"Go on, wench. Your discourse displeases me no whit."

"Yes, but you know what I mean. You're so big that you can afford to be little, and fool around here making fires and playing with me. But Larry—did you notice that he spoke of a valet? "However," Tony added in satisfaction, "I think he saw how happy we are; I think he did. Anyway, she did."

Joe's laugh—she loved it, and it was rather rare—broke out.

"They did, unless they've suddenly gone stone blind. You were rubbing it in all over the place! I never saw you look so pretty or heard you laugh so much. You let 'em have it right in the eye."

"Oh, Joe, I didn't!" Tony protested.

"Oh, Tony, you did!"

"I didn't mean to," Tony apologized, looking up penitently into his eyes. But her face was radiant. "The truth is, darling," she said, "that I had rather been dreading meeting Larry. I wasn't exactly conscious why, but in the background of my mind—my soul, all these months, there's been the feeling that I'd be glad to meet him—glad to—well, have it over!"

"And was it so awful?"

"Awful!" Her joyous laugh rang out.

"Why, it was—it was flat!" she said.

"For the last two years I haven't seen him, you know, and I have seen—I have had the friendship of a real man. And it was almost dizzying, it was almost bewildering to feel my old emotions slipping about and changing places, and to feel under it all 'Joe, Joe, Joe, Joe's mine and I'm Joe's forever and ever, and this handsome, important, serious man doesn't mean one thing to me!"

She sat silent, staring into the fire for a long moment, her shoulder pressing in comradesly fashion against his.

"And was it so awful?"

"Awful!" Her joyous laugh rang out.

"Why, it was—it was flat!" she said.

"For the last two years I haven't seen him, you know, and I have seen—I have had the friendship of a real man. knee. "Joe," she said suddenly, "do you know I feel sorry for Larry?"

"I've always felt a little that way about him, I think."

"They were so stupefied," Tony mused, "that I didn't dare spring our real news on them."

"They'd think you were crazy, with this long trip ahead of you, and married only six months."

"Why crazy? There are hospitals and nurses in Rio, I should hope!" Tony said. "Caroline wanted a chin-chilla coat. I want something else. That's all there is to it."

Outside the house a soft autumn wind sprang up, whined about the chimney. The dog stirred comfortably on the hearth; two logs fell together and sent up a fresh rush of flame; the lamp burned softly. Tony, her face bright with her own thoughts, stretched a hand up to her shoulder and felt Joe's fingers there.

"What of the way to the end? The end crowns all," she said.

Silk Prints Go Formal or Informal

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS TO "class distinction" the new silk prints declare it at a glance. If a print is informal, you know it without being told. The same applies to prints that are formal, there is no mistaking them. The character of their patternings and their colorings is that clearly defined in the spring crop of silk prints there is scarcely a doubt as to their identity as either formal or informal.

Wherefore, choice of a new silk print, and there is no sidestepping of prints if you would be in fashion, depends entirely as to whether you are looking for a print to wear when you go shopping or for sports or during your round of daytime social activities or whether you are seeking a print to tune in with glamorous nights and festive occasions. You can see by the picture that there is no chance of confusing the two.

As to prints for informal daytime wear, they are going as far as they dare in the way of amusing as well as unique design. For instance, note the novel "around the clock" patterning of the print that fashions the dress to the left in the picture. It's great fun to decipher the Roman numerals printed in white. If you look closer you will discover more numbers, one's and two's and three's and so on scattered over the background. A handsome black sheer pebbled silk crepe is this with its clock motif printed in red and in white. A red lacquered bar clasps at the throat, giving a soft fullness to the bodice. A matching clasp holds the black patent leather belt. The felt hat with its wide rolled brim points the way to stylish trends in the millinery realm.

Entertaining and smile-producing as are the new time-of-the-day clock prints, they are no more so than are the silks that are patterned with bars of music. You can actually read the notes and recognize some of the "airs." Then there are the new vegetable prints, yes "vegetable" prints. No need rubbing your eyes, they did not deceive you. Carrots and peas and so on, and they are as designful and pretty as floral. Fruits, too, you will be seeing in print.

A comely suit to start the spring season is shown to the right in the picture. This three-piece suit is tailored of black silk crepon printed in white comet design. It features a short jacket and a slender skirt that has a back pleated panel, thus giving emphasis to back fullness such as leading designers are advocating in their newer creations. It is worn with a white sheer silk blouse having a lace trim.

That formal evening prints should so strikingly contrast informal daytime prints adds greatly to the zest of the printed mode. Gorgeous, exotic, beguiling, lovely beyond words are the prints that go about to dance parties and dinner affairs and other "after six" social events. The tendency is toward life-size florals for the most part widely spaced, although some of the most beautiful prints pattern the entire surface with a labyrinth of flowers that reflect a very ecstasy of colorings, sometimes in pastels but just as often in radiant natural flower colorings. The print used for the exquisite formal gown pictured, patterns shaded formal tulips in vivid colorings against the chalky surface of satin-backed white silk crepe.

HAND QUILTED

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The latest thing in needlecraft going the rounds in the realm of costume designing is hand quilting. The stunning hip-length jacket pictured is of heavy black celanese satin. The smart hand-quilted design on the sleeves and bordering the front is raised by being stuffed with black wool, after the manner of Trapunto quilting. It was in the Renaissance period that Trapunto quilting came into existence. It is accomplished by drawing the design in double lines, and after quilting it, the space between these lines is stuffed with small shreds of wool. In the jacket pictured both the cut and the design of the hand-quilting carry out the militaristic motif. The fashion-wise miss will wear this jacket open with the tiny military collar turned up.

Crocheted Gloves

The newest version of hand-crocheted gloves—so smart, this winter—is in an interesting stitch that looks like weaving. The backs of the gloves are yellow and the palm brown, fore-runners of the combination gloves featuring two colors forecast for spring. They were designed especially for southern wear, but there's no law against wearing them right now!

WELCOME REVIVAL OF HAND-QUILTING

Welcome news to women who delight in fine needlecraft is the revival of the hand-quilting. The flair for this rare handicraft has become so pronounced and so general, exhibits of finest examples of this lovely needlework are being held in many of the larger cities.

The work shown surpasses anything ever before attempted in this country. Not only are quilted things for home decorative purposes displayed but the showings include exquisite examples of hand-quilted negligees, bed-jackets, evening cloaks and capes; also modish jackets that are stunning worn with cloth or crepe afternoon frocks or with blouse and skirt to complete the three-piece costume.

These are made of lustrous celanese satins, crepes and soft glowing taffetas. The color combinations are notable. They range from the soft pastels to the deep browns and navies and other smart suit colors. An evening cape of soft creamy velvet with an unusual design of snowflakes and icicles is outstanding.

Colors Return in Milady's Shoes With Varied Choice

Shoes as brilliant as the peacock's tail will deck the nation's feminine toes this Easter.

Early spring styles displayed by manufacturers feature pastel tints rivaling the rainbow.

"Bright colors—lavenders, yellows, greens, blues, pinks—will strike the dominant note this season," said one leading stylist, "and previously untried combinations will have a new vogue."

The choice will range from a red, white and blue trimmed model for the patriotic to one rivaling Biblical Joseph's coat of many colors in variety.

Blouses Feminize Suits

Soft blouses, frilly scarfs and other extremely feminine-looking accessories are important with the new strictly tailored suits. If you have chosen a severe suit of men's wear flannel or worsted, do dress it up with a ruffled blouse, chiffon scarf and gay houston niere of loose, feathery flowers

The Marriage Problem

By FRANK SWINNERTON

Author of "Cognette," "Nectine," "Young Felis," "The Elder Sister," etc.

Marriage Will Become Once Again Dignified

MARRIAGE of the future—what an attractive subject for speculation! Will marriage continue even to survive as an institution? Will it be mangled, as the modern habit is to mangle it? These are two of the first problems to be settled.

First of all, can marriage be looked upon as a probable feature of life fifty or a hundred years hence? My answer is "Yes."

I think that marriage will continue, simply because without marriage in some form society must become chaotic. Indeed, we may see in a generation or so a definite reaction against the present fashionable impatience of family ties. Those who contract and dissolve marriages as they would contract and dissolve liaisons will be despised as antisocial. They will be ridiculed as old-fashioned. And while shocked protest pleases such libertarians, who like to think of themselves as rebels, ridicule will kill them.

As the world grows older its inhabitants will think more and more of society and of their duty to society. This will be a natural development from that fear of "what people will think" which is nowadays being ostentatiously flouted; but it will not be dictated by fear.

It will be controlled by idealism, and in the last resort, by self-interest. Men and women will begin to realize that selfishness and the disregard of others do not pay.

The selfish person may at all times tyrannize and indulge every impulse at the expense of others, but in the end the selfish person is without friends. Only by making concessions to those among whom we live can we be happy and give happiness to others, and the human institution which most strikingly combines selfishness with sacrifice is marriage.

As one who is happily married, I know that married life is the best thing the world can offer. The sense of being linked with another human, being in common happiness and understanding, common work and play, is unsurpassed. It exalts the individual. So far from marriage being a stultification, as its feminist opponents say, or a reduction of two beings to one as the sentimentalists claim, it gives each partner the strength and endurance of two. It fortifies the individual as nothing else can do.

But marriage is only possible if there is wisdom and simplicity upon both sides. There is no room in happy marriage for that bluebird of modern youth—sophistication. Sophistication, the racking of nerves and bodies in the pursuit of pleasure, must go. The young of this age are still infatuated with it; but the young of the next age will be impatient of it. More serious and more humorous than their predecessors, they will see sophistication as waste. They will not be seeking escape from life and responsibility, as is the present generation; but will demand the right to shoulder both.

Hence I look for a revival in real marriage, as I look for a simplification of life. I look also for the reawakening in educated men and women of the spirit of uncolored and sober sacrifice.

In uneducated men and women that spirit has never been lost in the craze for distraction. All the restless egotism which leads modern educated women, for instance, to assert rights and to refuse any diminution of their own self-importance, will be modified as those rights are freely admitted.

It will come to be realized that marriage involves obligations as well as claims, and that all who marry accept permanently certain essential duties. They will not regard marriage as slavery; the doctrine of service will be to them—as it is to me—the noblest of all personal and social doctrines.

Service is incompatible with selfishness. It is only service at all if it is wholly disinterested. Therefore it is in place here to remark that the husbands of the future will not get this service for nothing. It will be given freely; but it will be repaid by service not less loyal and generous. The husbands will have to recognize the absolute equality and independence of women.

And as a first step to this recognition the husband (in my view) will have to realize that the wife is the most important person in the home. (Just as the wife will have to realize that the husband is the most important person in the home; for sacrifice cuts both ways.) Moreover, husbands and wives will in this future time marry for character, and not for physical charm (though character does not exclude physical charm), for a home, for fun, or for the want of something better to do. Marriage will thus become once again dignified.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained. Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes, feel nervous, miserable—all upset.
