Young Democrats Meet

The Donley County Young Democrats Club held its regular monthly meeting Monday night at the courthouse in Clarendon. A number of interesting talks were made, one of the best being a talk by "Cap" Morris in which he referred to the home owner as the salvation of the nation.

The club still has plenty of room for new members, and urges all young Democrats to join the organization.

Mrs H H Hall was brought home Tuesday from an Amarillo hospital, and is reported convalescing nicely.

M O Raney and wife and Wallace Raney and family motored to Amarillo Sunday and enjoyed a birthday dinner in Mr. Raney's honor at the J. N. Weaver home.

Mrs Elmer Bird of Ardmore, Okla., visited in the Masterson home several days this week. Jack Battle returned home with her for a visit.

CHURCH PICNIC

The First Baptist Church will hold its all church picnic next Tuesday, June 30. Details will be announced at the morning service Sunday. All members are urged to be there.

Judge Willis To Speak

Judge Newton T. Willis of Pampa, former district judge of the 84th district, will speak on the streets of Hedley at 6:30 p. m. Saturday June 27 in behalf of the candidacy of Curtis Douglass for State Senator.

HEDLEY SINGERS

There will be no singing next Sunday to allow all singers who wish to attend the singing convention at Dodsonville. It is to be held next Saturday and Sunday. V O Stamps Quartet from Dallas and lots of others are to be there. All should go who can.

ROY ELLIS

Roy Ellis passed away Thursday June 18th at St. Anthony hospital in Amarillo. He had been quite ill for several weeks, having taken suddenly sick while at work in the field at his father in law's farm, and a physician was called, and he was later taken to the hospital where all the skill of a number of physicians was used but to no avail it seemed, all that his loved ones could do was done for him, but the Master called and he must needs go. His suffering was intense and he expressed himself as saying he had rather go than to live in his condition.

Roy was born May 15, 1910, at Silt, Garfield county, Colo. He was 26 years 1 month and 3 days of age at his going. He was the son of C J and Millie Ellis. Was married Feb. 21, 1936 to Miss Ruby McPherson. He is survived by his parents, wife and 7 brothers, all of whom were present at his funeral except Charlie, of Tyler, Texas. The brothers present were: Vernon Ellis of Oton, Zab and Arnold of Texline and Orville, Virgil and Lester all of Hedley.

His funeral was held at the First Baptist Church in Hedley at 4:00 o'clock Saturday, conducted by Rev. Wells and Rev. Hansard. A large crowd gathered to pay their last respects and showed the esteem in which Roy was held. The floral offerings were beautiful, and he was laid to rest in the Rowe Cemetery.

The flower girls were Alma Hess, Juanita Hagler, Eva Duckworth, Thelma Pierce, Laura Blackwell and Jewell Quisenberry. The pallbearers were Cecil Hunnicutt, Allan Edwards, Rob Simmons, Brownie Quisenberry, Winfield Mosley and Lowell Blackwell.

He was in the prime of life, and it remains a mystery to us all, why he was taken from us. He with his parents and brothers have lived in Hedley and community since moving here from Childress a number of years ago. When he was taken sick he was employed at the M System Grocery on part time, and had been working there for quite a while.

His going cast a gloom over our community as it had been reported just a few days before his death that he was recovering. As far as the writer knows he was a quiet young man and a good citizen of our town.

Grief and sadness hang over his young companion, his aged parents, his brothers and other relatives and friends. The news came that he had made peace with God while on his bed of affliction and remarked that the angels were all around his bed. This good news was a source of joy to the writer and of course to all who heard it.

May the Master, whose compassion on us is so great and who understands our grief, be with the sorrowing wife, the aged parents, and brothers and other relatives. The days will be lonely we knew and your sorrow seem too great to bear, but Jesus can heal the broken hearts, and soothe when all seems dark. Lean on Him dear ones.

A friend, Mrs. O R Outwell

The Tree Crocodile

The customer proved most exacting and the clerk was growing impatient. "Now are you sure this is genuine crocodile skin?" the customer inquired, critically examining a handbag. "Quite sure, madam," was the reply. "You see, I know the man who shot that crocodile." "It looks rather dirty," remarked the customer. "Well, yes," replied the assistant. "That's where the animal struck the ground when it fell out of the tree."—The Automobileist.

Lost for Good

"Mummy," said little Joan pleadingly, "can I please have another piece of toffee?" "I've only just given you a piece," said mother. "What happened to it?" "I've lost it," the child replied. "Where did you lose it?" mother inquired. "I just put it in my mouth and it went right down," Joan informed her. —Pearson's Weekly.

Pure Exhilaration

THE amount of pure exhilaration that is inherent in an obstacle and a difficulty has never been adequately estimated. There is really no such stimulus known elsewhere. It is like a ladder set up that one may climb. It is a tacit invitation to command the outlook. It is the open door of opportunity. It is the intimation to look within and discover one's latent powers and use them. It is one of the most forcible intimations of immortality.—Lillian Whiting.

Seek Not Revenge
The best sort of revenge is not to be like him who did the injury.—Antonius.

Cardui During Middle Life

Women who are entering middle life will be interested in the experience of Mrs. L. C. McDonald, of Paragould, Ark., who writes: "I took Cardui during change of life. I was so weak, so nervous, I could hardly go. I just dragged around. I had fainting spells and would just give down. My back and head hurt. I read of Cardui. I took about seven bottles. It gave me relief and strength. I am now 60 years past, and can do a pretty good day's work in the house and garden." Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia. Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts. Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them. Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today. Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letterhead. Select Products, Inc., 4402 23rd St., Long Island City, N. Y.

FABLES IN SLANG

By GEORGE ADE

"The Blue Danube." Was Hot Diggity-Dog.

1875 AND 1935

ONCE upon a time an esteemed Old Lady who had been a reigning Belle during Grant's Second Administration, sat back watching the Antics of a reformed and purified World, wondering what it was all about. She was like every other living Person beyond Sixty. It seemed to her that all the honored Traditions had been hit on the Head, that Civilization was being vamped by frivolous Innovations and that the whole Works had gone bloomy.

One of her important Discoveries was that Young People are not what they used to be.

This honored Hold-Over had a Grand-Daughter and Namesake who was a mere Slip of a Thing 19 years old, who was endeavoring to establish a World's Record for Speed and Endurance. Very often Grandmother would ask, "Haven't her Parents any Control over her?" The correct Answer to the above question was: "No!"

It happened that One Day the Old Lady couldn't stand it any longer. Little Genevieve, the Child Wonder, had been to an all-night Party. Along about 4 G. M. she had brought a Pack of Commanches into the House and had shown the Ice-box how to take a Joke. She came up for Air at Noon and was propped up in her theatrical Pajamas, having the whole House wait on her, while she found Fault with the eggs, the Toast, the Coffee, the Weather and all of her Relatives.

QUEEN OF THE FLAPPERS

The Old Lady sat in fixed Amaze-ment for a while, surveying the Eighth Wonder of the World, and then she said: "When I was a Girl and went to a Party, I always came down to Breakfast next morning and, what's more, I came down early and helped Mother."

The Queen of the Flappers gave her respected Grandmother the cold Once-Over and then said, "You were a Sloop."

"Possibly so, from the Standpoint of a modern Snipe who has become so superficial and self-centered and selfish that she regards her Parents as House-Servants. In my Day it was an Imperative Rule that Young People should respect their Elders."

"Maybe you had a better Bunch to work on," said little Genevieve. "When they were giving out Relatives I almost drew a Blank. I've tried to put up with Mom and Pop, but you'll have to admit that they're a couple of Giffes. Both of them can sleep standing up. They don't seem to be hep to what's Transpiring. I told them a Month ago I wanted a Roadster just like Bernice is driving. It is one Duck and the price is only $4,000. Do you think I can get those two Swoozies to buy one for me? The old Tight-Wads keep talking about the money. Don't they know that a Cudde can't hold the Boys any more unless she has her own Bust? And you know how these flat-hatted Papas are. They don't like to ride in a Lizzie. You can't blame them, can you? No, I want something that will cut across Lots and climb a Tree and if those two Kloddies think they can work off a Fliv on me, they've got another Guess coming."

All during this Rave the kind-faced Relic of by-gone Days stared at her dainty little Grand-Daughter and sighed Deeply.

THE COY DEBUTANTE AND THE BUSTLE

"I am wondering," she said at last, "if there is left, anywhere in the World, such a Thing as a Chaperon. I saw one last Season and she was, if you will pardon the Modernism, a Pip. She was a Grass Widow, twenty-eight, painted a Creamy White, with a shingled Nob and she wore about eight ounces of clothing. As a Guardian for Young Girls I would say that she was hand-picked. In 1875, when I had my Coming-Out Party, the Girls were brought by their Parents and no Young Gentleman even asked for Permission to Call until he talked with the Mother and had flashed his Credentials."

"I get you," said Genevieve. "You are now going to pull a line of Chatter about the Good Old Days of 1875, but you will never get away with it. I have studied Ancient History and I am wise to that Golden Age of Chivalry, when every popular Bachelor had the map covered with Trailing Arbutus and the coy Debutante wore a Bustle which made it practically impossible for her to sit down."

"I will admit that we tried to hide our Ankles," said the Old Lady. "At least we tried to hide something. It seems to me that People could find out in the Newspapers about you girls wearing Bloomers without you proving it to them. And just because you have shed your Corset, is that any Reason why you should be a Contortionist every time you dance?"

"There is no use trying to explain it to a Has-Been," said little Genevieve, "I suppose we should all wear something with Lace at the Bottom and sit by Ourselves, over in a Corner waiting for the Gentlemen to bring us some Chicken Salad, but them Days are gone forever. You can probably remember when the principal instrument in an Orchestra was the Flute and 'The Blue Danube' was Hot Diggity-Dog."

"Everything which happened before this year is evidently Antiquated and N. G.," said Grandmother. "I will admit that the Orchestra which used to play for our Dances did not have any Steamboat Whistle or Derby Hat. But they made lovely Music. And when I say Music, I mean Music. I don't mean in imitation of a dying Pig or a busy Day at the Insane Asylum. Furthermore, any Gentleman who came to a Party all lit up like a Cathedral would have been given the Gate. Nowadays all of our Best Young People gather around him and give Three Hearty Cheers and then follow him to the Cloak Room. It's a terrible situation."

GRANDMA TAKES THE COUNT

"It sure is," agreed Genevieve. "Most of the stuff is synthetic. By the way, Granny, now that you are all wound up, why don't you bawl me out for being a Bob? Go on and tell about the Good Old Days when every Gal had a Horse's Tail hanging down her Back, and when she did it up she put in a couple of Sofa Pillows and then wore a Rhine-Stone Comb, just to make the whole Thing more blah. Then, after she got on an 18-inch Hat, with a Kitchen Garden around the Terrace and a Velvet Bow on Top, and clasped on her Cameo Brooch and pulled out her Puff Sleeves. If she wasn't a Gawky you're crazy. A woman had so much Junk above her Shoulders in those days, it gave her the Neck-Ache to carry it around. Yes, indeed, the Snappy Days of Yore! Give the Sweet Young Thing a Buggy Ride and a Ball of Pop-Corn and she'd be contented for several Days. I figure that to please the superannuated Fogies, all of us blue-eyed Bessies should go back to playing Charades and working Card-Board Mottos. Also ride in Victrolas, have a Taffy Pull once in a while and take Lessons on the Harp. We must be rather Rough House, as I learn that we are being criticized severely by all those who are cheating the Old People's Home by running around on the Outside. They have talked incessantly for a number of Years but they have not, so far as I can learn, headed off a single Petting Party. I must now leave you to play the 18 holes, attend a couple of Teas, take in a shake-up Party at a Man's Apartment, dine at a Road-House and dance all night at the Cross-Eyed Goose. If the Police don't get me, I'll see you Tomorrow at this hour."

Curiosa Americana

By Elmo Scott Watson

Compact With the Dead
WHEN Francis Spies of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., a collector of names and epitaphs on gravestones, pushed aside the tall grass in front of a monument in an old cemetery near New Haven, Vt., he suddenly drew back with a startled exclamation. For he was looking straight into the face of a dead man! He looked again. No, it wasn't an optical illusion. There was the face clearly apparent through a thick slab of plate glass. Here's why:

The man, a resident of New Haven long before the Civil war, had a horror of being buried alive. So he made arrangements to be buried in a hermetically sealed coffin with a plate glass window in the top. In his will he gave the town a small fund, the interest on which was to be used to employ a man to go to the graveyard twice a day and look through the plate glass to see if he was still dead and to rescue him if he came back to life.

For nearly half a century the town faithfully spent the income from this fund for hiring men to go to the grave. Eventually they decided that the man was safely dead and these men were just wasting their time making the twice-daily visits. But it was necessary to go to the state legislature and have a special act passed in order to permit the town to break its agreement with the dead man and spend the money from his fund on some much-needed public improvements.

Glory, Glory, Hallelujah!

WHENEVER you sing Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic" or "John Brown's Body Lies a-Mouldering in Its Grave" with its thundering chorus of "Glory, glory, hallelujah!" you unconsciously pay tribute to the memory of a forgotten American composer who deserves, but lacks, the recognition that has been given Stephen A. Foster. Also you perpetuate "a joke on a sanctimonious brother-in-law." Here's why:

The composer was Thomas Brigham Bishop, a Maine farm boy whose fondness for strutting around strumming a banjo or guitar and "making up tunes" was a source of great annoyance to his serious-minded brother-in-law. One day the brother-in-law had an attack of religious fervor, slapped himself on the chest and shouted "I am bound to be a soldier in the army of the Lord! Glory, glory, hallelujah!"

The swing of those lines kept running through Bishop's head and after a while he put a tune to them—the tune now so familiar to all Americans. Back in those days, just before the Civil war, this song, just two lines, verse and chorus, became the favorite at revival meetings "down East." Later, Bishop, taking the same air, adapted it to new words suggested by the Harpers Ferry raid and the famous "John Brown's Body" was the result.

It was a favorite marching tune for the soldiers of 1861-65 who sang it with variations—both sacred and very, very profane! Then Julia Ward Howe took the same music and used it and the "Glory, glory, hallelujah" chorus in her magnificent "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Thus a song composed as a joke on a brother-in-law has become a part of a national hymn!

Racket Store

REMEMBER when many American towns had "Racket Stores"? The first one was in Leesville, La. Its proprietor, Simon West, started with a capital of $300 and became one of the wealthiest men in the state. He called it the "Rouss Racket Store" because he bought his goods from Charles Broadway Rouss of New York, who was the originator of the term.

As a jobber of general merchandise, his trade was mainly with small-town storekeepers in the Middle West and Southwest. Twice a year these merchants went to New York to lay in their stocks. Rouss bought most of his merchandise at auction and his warehouses and store were filled with bales, barrels and bundles of an odd assortment of goods.

As he conducted his customers through his store, he would point to some exceptionally good buy, and say "Now, here's something you can make a racket with in your town!" Soon the storekeepers adopted his phrase and when their business was dull they would write to him, saying: "What specials have you in prints or calico that I can make a racket with?"

A modern survival of the "racket" idea in merchandising is found in the catalogues of some of the big wholesalers who designate their "specials" as "Noise makers."

"BY JIMINY" EXPRESSION

The constellation Gemini is an interesting group of stars, and one which, strangely enough, was not known to the Chaldeans and other early eastern peoples as the twin brothers we know today, but rather as the two kids. The two bright stars in Gemini, Castor and Pollux, were believed by the ancients to be harbingers of fair weather when they appeared in the sky. The two gods, the twins Castor and Pollux, heroes of the Argonautic expedition, immortalized in the twin stars in the sky, were greatly revered by the Roman legions, whose soldiers swore a favorite oath, "by Gemini!" That ancient oath has come down to us as the expression "By Jiminy."—Hayden Planetarium Bulletin.

Lovely Lace Makes Lovely Brides

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

COMES now fashion's big moment to play up romance and the picturesque for the June bride-to-be is calling, calling for lovely gowns for herself and her attendants that shall group into a "perfect picture" on her wedding day.

What bride is not a "vision of loveliness"? Her gown is so carefully selected and fitted, her veil is made just so—to tune perfectly to her individuality, to drape correctly, at the same time beguilingly over the head and down while the train must hang in just the right proportion and line with the dress.

Many a spring bride this 1936 found the expression of her dream of a vision of loveliness in a lace gown, and veil. With its importance in the current fashion picture generally it but follows in the natural sequence of events that lace should become first choice with brides. Now that the early brides have demonstrated how really the lovely lace is for the wedding gown, June and midsummer brides-to-be have taken their cue and are enthusiastically planning their trousseaus in terms of beautiful lace.

Not only does the lace gown in itself enhance feminine charm to the utmost but lace for the bride brings up the splendor and richness of former periods, when lace played so important a part in the costumes of historical and royal brides. The fact of the lure of lace for brides was dramatically brought out in a "Bride-of-Two-Centuries" showing recently held in New York, in which fifteen period bridal costumes copied from those worn by prominent ladies in the last two hundred years was the feature. This bridal show was topped by the modern bridal party, done entirely in lace, in shades of azalea pink.

Which brings us to a very important subject—that of the fashion approval of color for the bride instead of the traditional all-white. A modern bride may wear lovely blush pink or ice blue or any tone or tint of her fancy.

One of the attractions of a "lace wedding" is that lace offers every opportunity to work out fascinating color schemes, for this existing flair for lace is not exclusive with the bride but the theme is carried out for bridesmaids as well. One of the newest gestures is that of lace dresses, with cunning lace capes for each bridesmaid.

Brides, too, are looking into the future in the selection of the wedding gown, having in mind a dress that may be worn later to social events. This feature is admirably interpreted in the very chic and lovely gown in the illustration. Since the full long train is detachable at the waist, the dress alone becomes perfect for the cocktail or dinner hour. The sweep of the train, and the smooth silhouette of the gown cut on true princess lines are the more lovely because of the lace of fine aleonon of which this bridal gown is designed. The dress with its narrow waist and tailored neckline, tulle all the way down the front. Tulle is used for the veil which falls in a beguiling drape over the face and hangs quite long at the back.

The bride in the foreground chooses exquisite chantilly lace for her gown. It bespeaks an elegance of simplicity in every detail. The effective arrangement of the tulle veil adds greatly to the glory of the "picture."

HER SMART COAT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Mannish tailoring in suits and coats for grown-up ladies of fashion has its echo in boyish tailoring for the younger miss from toddlers to teen-agers. The cunning little girl here pictured in the double-breasted flannel coat is ready for an outing in the park, in a coat her little brother would envy. Broad lapels and wide notched collar are becoming. Fitted slightly at the waist for chic the coat is roomy and comfortable. Six smart bone buttons, masculine and substantial, trim the high double-breasted closing. This little model is the very sort that little girls are teasing their mothers to buy for them.

PASTEL TONES IN SUMMER TAILLEURS

Summer tailleurs are more fanciful than ever and synthetic fibers either are mixed with wool or replace wool entirely. Thiebaut-Brion has made a specialty of novel fabrics for this type of tailleur. His collection includes several rayon crepes with a woolen appearance and some rayon serges, either plain or chined. Some of his woolen fabrics show the same chine effect produced with twisted rayon yarns that fleck the surface.

There are new mossy crepes with a woolly texture, also a number of pastel-colored fine woollens, spotted with brown or black rayon nubs or tufts. Some of these fabrics have a tweed-like appearance and are seen in very delicate pastel tones, including sweet pea colors.

Lace Dresses Continue to Be Tops at Paris Show

Lace dresses continue to be tops in Paris. They're shown in amazing variety and startling numbers by all the leading designers. To emphasize the importance of this material in the feminine costume, a ball was held recently at the Hotel George V at which only lace dresses were worn. Dull albino laces were much in evidence, particularly in dark shades such as midnight blue, purplish blue, grenat, eggplant and a dark tone of tortoise shell brown.

Evening Sandals

Cutout sandals of gold or silver mostly with high heels are first in evening shoe fashions. It is considered very chic to wear these with very sheer pastel colored hose to either match or contrast with the dress instead of the perennial flesh colored ones.

Beaded Necklaces

Beaded necklaces as wide as collars and taking the place of collars are increasing in importance and desirability.

Bob Davis Reveals

Evils Done the Dead by Half-Cocked Writers of History.

WHEN Napoleon remarked, "All history is a lie," he launched a mouthful. The Little Corporal must have sensed what he was to suffer at the hands of his biographers, those ink-stained harpies who marked time against the hour his star fell at St. Helena where, on a frail army cot surrounded by a handful of the faithful, he writhed into the everlasting shadows addressing the mirage of his army. This man of destiny ended his earthly career in a welter of fat, his ankles bulging over patent leather shoes like something spilling into space. . . . The jewels of him fell into a soiled collar, open at the throat, disclosing the ivory pulp of a flabby breast housing a heart that for twenty years had set the tempo for victorious cannonading under the banners of France.

Twenty thousand volumes written in every living tongue flowed for more than a hundred years from the impetuous pens of biographers, self-consecrated to lay bare the life of the Corsican-born adventurer who lived to shake the world. From the confusion wrought of countless pens, the fearless Bonaparte now stalks—half monster, half god, an execrated and a deified personality, mythologized with the accumulating years, and all that is germane to his influence upon the Nineteenth century, is swept into historical disorder.

Biography Written by Ear.

Unfortunately, indeed, that history is not clarified by time. Once an error creeps into the record it remains there forever, modified at intervals but never wholly corrected for the enlightenment of posterity. It is quite the vogue with modern biographers, to take one characteristic of the deceased and upon that rebuild the personality to suit themselves.

Memoirs are equally noxious, not for what they present, but for what they withhold. Most biography is written in the measure of one grand sweep song whistled by an idiot who has no ear for music. Recently in Washington a conscientious attempt was made by a congressman and an artist to contrive a mural decoration that would show just how our colonial statesmen looked when properly garbed in the style of that period; nothing, understand, built along quantity production lines or shot with shoddy, but the crackerjack hand-made breeches, buskin and waistcoat of the James Madison, Ben Franklin and Aaron Burr school, showing George Washington in profile and Alexander Hamilton from the front elevation.

Fair enough, and a knock-out, so I understood. But has anything been done to clear up some of the exaggerations, inaccuracies and dirty cracks taken at George and Alex by the gentry who adulterate biography with fiction?

Not long ago I picked up a book that dealt in part with that dramatic chapter in the life of Bonnie Prince Charlie, who was rescued from British pursuers in the Isle of Skye by the heroine Flora Macdonald after the battle of Culloden, which rang down the curtain of Charlie's kingly ambitions. To quote:

Story of Royal Romance.

"It seems to have been his (Charlie's) thought that if she (Flora) cared for him that the two might well love; and he gave her every chance to show him favor. The youth of twenty-five and the girl of twenty-four roamed together in the long, tufted grass, or lay in the sunshine and looked out over the sea. But to the last he was either too high or too low for her, according to her own modest thought. . . ."

Well, there it is, offered as history. Last year I spent a month in the Isle of Skye, snooping into that affair, variously distorted by writers totally ignorant of the truth. The facts are these: Following Culloden, Bonnie Charlie took it on the run with a £30,000 reward on his curly head. Loyal Highlanders, a mere handful, escorted him through the rain-swept barren hills, keeping him concealed under cover of night. Flora, true blue, unimpeachable and courageous, was selected by Charlie's escort to get the prince out of his difficulties. She agreed to take the risk and set about her arrangements to get him to a point of safety disguised as her maid.

Myth Is Debunked.

After ten days of breath-taking adventure, Flora, bossing the entire job, succeeded in her mission, and on the night of July 1, 1746, in the presence of Highland gentlemen, one of them a relative of Flora, the Bonnie Prince bade her a respectable unemotional good-by in Room 5 of Royal Hotel at Portree, climbed out of the window and escaped in the boat that her efforts had provided. The actual time consumed in the plot for his flight was ten days, during five of which Flora never set eyes upon the prince. During the five remaining days she saw him three times, always in the company of his Highland henchmen. Rain and cold weather prevailed. Not once was the rescuer of the hapless nobleman alone in his society. To be perfectly frank, Charlie on the occasion of his last ten days in Skye was ragged, cold, hungry—and lousy.

THE QUEEN MARY MAKES ITS BOW

British Ship, With French Normandie, Proves That Days of Trans-Atlantic Super-Liner Have Come to Stay.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

WITH the installation into service of the new British liner Queen Mary, following the arrival of the French Normandie last year, the age of the super-liner on the North Atlantic is definitely here.

No longer is the old-time description of "floating palace" adequate for these aquatic giants. They are far more than that, for they are indeed floating cities, and a passenger can board either for days without missing a single one of the conveniences or amusements which fill his daily life ashore.

Crossing the Atlantic in four and one-half days, these streamlined giants, each of more than 80,000 tons, will probably hold their own for some time to come against the transatlantic air liner, due to arrive in the near future. Not only has the crossing time been shortened to hardly more than the time required to cross the United States by rail a year ago, but so many are the interesting activities which await the voyager, the few days are made to slip by so quickly the traveler is often sorry they are over.

In describing a ship the size of the Queen Mary it is hard to decide just where to begin. Might begin just as you would if you were aboard her, waking in the morning after a night at sea. Probably you would want to start with a brisk "constitutional" to absorb some of that exhilarating salt air. Taking the promenade deck for a walk around ship, you would find yourself out for quite a hike—about a half mile, as a matter of fact, for the Queen Mary is 1,018 feet long, with a beam of 118 feet.

Makes 32 Knots.

The great liner, with her 12 decks, towers 234 feet from keel to masthead, 135 feet from keel to top of superstructure. Waving farewell from the deck at her bow to friends below, you would find yourself five or six stories above the dock.

Once out at sea the great ship is capable of traveling 32 knots an hour. A knot is 1.151 miles, which means that you would actually be going nearly 37 miles an hour. There are many commercial concerns whose automobiles are governed not to exceed a speed of less than that.

There are more than four and one-half days of continual wonders to be seen in a tour of the ship from stem to stern. Directly behind the first stack are the sports decks, with even tennis courts for the guests' enjoyment. Forward of the stack are the officers' quarters, the bridge, wheel room and chart room and other spots where you mustn't come uninvited.

Next deck below is the "sun deck," with more officers' rooms, a grill, squash-racquets courts, a moving picture theater, the wireless rooms, and a few de luxe suites and staterooms. Below that is the promenade deck, where the stroller may browse in a real metropolitan shopping center. Also to be found on this deck are the writing lounge, the great ballroom and a children's playground.

What Many Decks Contain.

Most of the tourist accommodations are found on the "main" deck, one deck below, reached by stairs or one of the 21 elevators aboard ship. There are more writing rooms, a tourist lounge and a library here. "A" deck has an other tourist lounge and more staterooms and suites. Forward and directly below the bridge are hairdressers' establishments, another lounge and the rope stores and forecastle. The purser's office is on this deck, too.

Next deck below, or "B" deck, contains more hairdressers, another children's playground, more staterooms and bedrooms. "C" deck houses the tourists' dining salon, the baker's shop, kitchens, a grill and the china pantry. Forward are the main restaurant and private dining rooms. "D" deck has room for more of the crew, the fruit ripening room, ice cream pantry, vegetable and salad room, butcher shop, grocery store and ship's hospital. Between the forward and second stack on this deck is the mammoth swimming pool; there is a tourist swimming pool on "E" deck, below. "F" deck has quarters for more of the crew and many third-class cabins.

Besides a swimming pool, "F" deck, pretty well down in the ship, contains the tourist baggage room, garages, mail room, linen stores and all the elevator wells. General baggage and mail are stored deep, deep down in "G" deck, but you can go still farther down. If the crew will let you, to the deck that holds all the machinery, the boiler rooms, turbo-generator rooms, fan rooms, propeller shafts, aft and forward engine rooms and general cargo.

And there is even some of the Queen Mary below that—the double bottom, which is always between any cargo and Davy Jones' locker.

The 2,075 passengers who can ride aboard the ship at one time are cared for with a luxury that certainly would have sounded fantastic in the days when the first predecessor of the Queen Mary, the Britannic, went into passenger service with her 1,154 tons and 207 feet of length, propelled by wooden paddle wheels.

Widely Air Conditioned.

Three rooms where the greatest crowds will gather are air-conditioned; these are the main restaurant ("the largest room afloat"); the main lounge, which is frequently converted into a theater, and the tourist restaurant. The Billowing smoke from her funnels, the Queen Mary leaves the dock at Southampton for her maiden voyage to New York, re-establishing Britannia's prestige on the waves.

Queen Mary is said to have made greater use of air conditioning than any other vessel on the seas. Fresh air is mechanically forced into every stateroom and cabin, and passengers are able to regulate the supply to their individual quarters as they will.

Electricity cooks all the meals aboard the ship except for the steaks which are broiled on the charcoal grill. It also furnishes the power for cleaning up after meals, for a gigantic machine, referred to by the crew as "Mechanical Molly," washes, rinses, polishes and sterilizes thousands of dishes in an hour and is gentle as a kitten with even the most fragile china. Electrical machines also slice bacon, make bread, make coffee, burnish silver, measure tea, mix dough, break ice, cut butter, polish ranges and ovens, press ducks, mold dough, grind coffee, clarify fat and cut foods.

Even dogs live lives of ease on the Queen Mary. They have a "hotel" on the sports deck. The pups are treated to individual sanitary kennels, raised from the floor. Each kennel has hot and cold running water, steam heat and air conditioning. The dogs even have their own promenade deck.

There are altogether 25 public rooms throughout the ship. Greatest of all, of course, is the main restaurant, which extends the entire 118-foot width of the Queen Mary. It is 160 feet long and covers 18,720 square feet. At one time 815 persons can be comfortably seated.

Floating Broadcasting Station.

Another large room is the main hall, which is 111 feet by 70 feet. Its shopping center, which advertises its wares in show windows along the promenade deck, includes a haberdashery and clothing shop, book shop and telephone booths for ship-to-shore conversations. The passengers need never be out of touch with friends or relatives ashore, as anyone who listened to the broadcasts from the Queen Mary on her maiden trip will realize.

Every facility for broadcasting to shore has been installed in the ship. Concerts or speeches can be broadcast from nearly every public room. The ship makes use of 32 wave-lengths, which permits American and British shore stations to pick up the broadcasts and relay them.

Probably no ship, with the possible exception of the French Line's Normandie, has offered so much entertainment to passengers. The main lounge may be turned into a legitimate or cinema theater capable of seating 400.

In the ballroom, use of color has been made which is so new that it is virtually unknown on land. Tones of the color lighting system are controlled automatically by a microphone in front of the orchestra stand. The tone-color is directly and automatically affected by the pitch of the musical notes; a high note produces a flash of brilliant lighting, while soft music automatically produces soft light. The effect of the scheme on the rare wood paneling is beautiful indeed. Included in the rare woods in this paneling are petula, zebrawood, bubinga, makore, tiger oak, patapoko, pomla and blackbean.

Four Giant Propellers.

Center for entertainment of those traveling tourist class is the tourist lounge, which is 80 by 70 feet. The dance floor in parquet is 33 by 28 feet, and the stage 20 by 8 with a proscenium 27 feet wide by 16 feet high. Changing color lighting, a flood-lighted silver curtain and decorative cartoons by Margot Gilbert are the principal features of this room's elaborate decorations.

Four gargantuan bronze propellers, each 20 feet from tip to tip, drive the Queen Mary through the heaviest seas. Weighing 35 tons each, they are the largest ever cast for any ship, yet so delicately are they balanced, they may be turned with a touch of the hand.

Some powerful machinery is required to propel a ship that weighs 80,773 tons. The Queen Mary's four sets of engines are more than 200 feet long and develop some 200,000 horsepower; this compares favorably with the capacity of the greatest electric steam generating power plant unit in the world. Like the engines of modern automobiles, those of the Queen Mary are "cushioned"; in order to eliminate vibration further, the foundations of the engine room are "sprung" rather

Tomorrow a New Day

FINISH every day, and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely, and with too high a spirit to be numbed with your old nonsense. Today is all that is good and fair. It is too dear, with its hopes and invitations, to waste a moment on the yesterdays.

First Coins Dated 700 B. C.; Gold, Silver Mixture Used

The world's first coins came into existence in Lydia, Asia Minor, about 700 B. C., when a metal called electrum, a natural mixture of gold and silver, was used.

Two of the most interesting coins in the history of American money are the "Pine Tree" shilling, a silver piece minted in Boston in 1652, and the Spanish-American silver coins known as "pieces of eight."

than being riveted directly to the plating.

Facts and Figures.

Statistics about the Queen Mary could be quoted for hours and never cease to be amazing. Here are a few:

The great funnels are 100 feet in circumference.

In the various kitchens there are 200,000 pieces of crockery, and 100,000 pieces of tableware.

The ship is insured for about $20,000,000.

Among the linen requirements are 210,000 towels, 31,000 pillow slips, 30,000 sheets, 92,000 serviettes, 12,500 pantry cloths and hosts of other items, making 500,000 articles in all.

But one of the essentials to a truly great ocean liner is safety. The Queen Mary has 24 lifeboats, of which 20 are made to carry 145 passengers each. All lifeboats are of steel, operated by Diesel engines. Each carries complete wireless equipment. In addition, for the safety of passengers in emergency, each boat carries:

Two pounds of biscuits per passenger, a quart of water per passenger, one-pound tin of condensed milk per passenger, one tin red distress flares, one oil lamp to burn eight hours, one tin of oil for the lamp, one box of matches in soldered tin, one gallon tin of fish oil, one canvas bag and line for distributing oil on troubled waters, one canvas sea anchor, drag line and tripping line, two axes, one compass with lamp, one set of oars and two spars, one and-a-half sets of rowlocks, one bucket, one baller, one mooring rope or painter, and two bilge pumps.

STAR DUST Movie Radio By VIRGINIA VALE

IT LOOKS more and more likely that Paramount and RKO will merge in the not-so-distant future, which will mean another of those upheavals that take place every so often in the motion picture business.

And, curiously enough, some of those men are not too competent. One of the big shots who gets important jobs, over and over, has consistently been a company wrecker.

Olivia de Havilland, who has climbed to the top so rapidly since she appeared in "Midsummer Night's Dream," remarked the other day she had tied up her income in a trust fund, allowing herself only $250 a week, (wise girl) and that, furthermore, she'd spend her spare time between pictures in her home town, Saratoga, Calif., because there's nothing like a small town where you know everybody to deflate your ego.

Olivia de Havilland

A girl who's grown up with her in that same small town declares that Olivia has always been one of the grandest girls alive, an opinion shared by every one who knows that very lovely young actress. And what a break for her that she's to play opposite Robert Montgomery in "The Marriage Clause." Working together they should make a team that movie fans will talk about for a long time to come.

"Show Boat" may be pretty hard on your pocket book, because you're going to want to see it over and over again. Compared with the stage play and the screen version made years ago, it comes out on top. A hardened movie goer who had never liked Helen Morgan, a man who had seen her at night clubs and on the stage, capitulated when he heard her sing "My Bill." Another one said he felt as if he'd never heard "Old Man River" till Paul Robeson sang it this time. And Irene Dunne's dance to "Can't Help Lovin' That Man" is worth the price of admission all by itself.

A new series of historical shorts is under way, and it's about time! Most of us remember what we see on the screen, so this ought to be the best possible method of teaching children history. The first one, "Song of the Nonesuch," dramatizes the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner," and it's finished. Some of the other subjects are Lincoln's boyhood, the fall of the Alamo, the drawing up of the Declaration of Independence, the Louisiana Purchase and the duel between Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton.

Anna Sten, whose movie career went up like a skyrocket and came down like the rocket's stick, has returned from Europe, where she made a picture. No announcements yet about her making any more over here.

A lot of the movie stars of earlier days will be seen in the picture, "Hollywood Boulevard"; some of them have been slowly coming back to pictures, others have merely wanted to. Leatrice Joy had a test the other day. And one company has been dickering with Theda Bara, but she wants lots and lots of money.

Speaking of old-timers, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., has just about decided not to make pictures any more; all the talk about "Marco Polo" has come to nothing. He admits that he's been away too long, that picture-making has progressed too rapidly for him.

Fred Astaire has finally got things fixed to suit him. From now on he'll make just two pictures a year. And Ginger Rogers (who's had some very smart new sandals named for her, incidentally) will have a chance to go dramatic in some of the ones she makes without him. She insists that she doesn't want to be nothing but a dancer, and she's right. She should have a chance to show her other talents in acting and to develop them further in pictures.

ODDS AND ENDS... Harriet Hilliard will travel to California soon to play one of the leads in "Count Peste"... Ginger Rogers has written a song—"I Can't Understand Why You Can't Understand Me"; did both words and music... Sylvia Sydney's making a picture in England, and being urged to stay and make some more... Errol Flynn almost got deported because he forgot to renew his visa... Since James Cagney just won't make new pictures, his old ones are bobbing up again, and they're still good... Edna May Oliver is having a grand vacation, her first in a long time.

SYNTHETIC GENTLEMAN

"Pat—" he began, still standing. "I've stumbled on something." "So I gathered," she observed. "And I assume that it has to do with your pet murder."

"It has to do with your father," she smiled. "I suppose you've discovered that he killed Kelly."

"I've discovered that he called on Kelly that night." "Wonderful!" Pat mocked. "Who told you that?" "The taxi-man who drove him down town."

Barry related his adventure with the errand boy. "Pat listened almost indifferently. "It was sheer chance," Barry concluded. "I hadn't any idea of implicating your father. But now he is implicated. You must see that."

"I don't—unless you insist on dragging him into it." "I insist on nothing, Pat—except clearing an innocent man."

"At the expense of one equally innocent?" "What does your father stand to lose by telling the truth? We know now that Kelly was alive when Rogers left the house. I'm just as sure that he was alive when the Judge left. But he must have been killed soon afterward. We've got to find out who killed him."

"Why?" "Because now we've two men to clear." "If my father saw Kelly after the boy left—"

"That clears Rogers." "And puts it up to my father." "Your father didn't kill Kelly," Barry said. "I know that, and I know why he went to that house."

"Really?" "He went to protest against filing that Jefferson street decision."

"And then died it." "He had to. The pressure was too strong for him. He'd been struggling against it for weeks. In politics, even honest men have to listen to reason sometimes. Your father had to."

me last Friday. And Willetts said, "That isn't done. A gentleman's got certain responsibilities." He has. That's a tradition stronger than we are."

Pat turned, at last. "This is funny," she said. "You—" "It is funny," he cut her short. "I'd like to behave like a loafer, and I can't. I'm willing to go to jail to save this boy—and I'm the scum of the earth. You're a lady. How about you?"

"If it were only me—" she broke. "Your father's a gentleman. How about him?" Before she could reply, the double doors opened.

Judge Hambridge was standing there—erect and soldier-like. "Mr. Gilbert's right, Pat," he said. "I release you from your promise to me. I can't go through with it. I'm too tired, and full of self-loathing."

He turned squarely to Barry. "You're right about everything. About my going to Kelly that night, and the reason I went. He let me in himself. We quarreled violently. So violently that he took a revolver out of his desk drawer and kept it in his hand. Then I walked out of the house. But you were wrong about just one thing, Mr. Gilbert. I left the house at two o'clock, but when I left it, Kelly wasn't alive."

CHAPTER VII They were a curiously inert little group for a minute or two after the revelation.

It was like a play, Barry thought; curtain down on a climax, and the actors relaxing until it should rise again for the next scene.

After a time, Barry crossed the room to the pair. Pat turned on him. "Well, now you know," she said. "You know about us, but remember we know about you, too."

Well, I know how to take care of them, by God! Beat it! And, if that decision ain't filed by noon today, I'll—"

Again, Pat said, "Father!" "I know," Hambridge interrupted himself. "Pat's admonition had come just in time, Barry thought. The Judge had risen, tense, and so excited that he seemed on the verge of collapse."

"And that was that," Barry calmed him. "Not quite," Judge Hambridge continued, but in a lower tone. "When I got to the bottom of the steps—the stone steps, I mean—I stood thinking. If I left that way, there was no telling what Kelly might do. I've got to go through it. I thought. 'It's ruin either way, but, if I obey orders, ruin only for me. I'd better give in. I couldn't make up my mind, though. I kept looking back, half decided. And, suddenly, a queer thing happened. The front door swung open."

The Judge mopped his hands again. "I'd shut it carefully," he resumed, "but there it was, wide, almost like an invitation. I walked into the hall. The glass doors to the drawing room were closed, but I could see the light through them. When I put my hand on the knob, the lights went out. I turned the knob, and pushed, but the door wouldn't open. Not latched—it was as if someone was holding it. 'Kelly,' I thought. 'He won't let me in. I've got to act quick now.' Almost in a daze, I wandered up to the avenue. At nine o'clock, I gave the decision to my clerk, and told him to file it immediately. A few hours later, I learned that Kelly was dead. The papers said his body was found stretched across that door to the hall. I knew then it was there when I left the house, and that was why I couldn't open the door."

Pat said, "Are you satisfied?" "Are you?" Barry asked. "Or would you rather that I tried to find who killed Kelly?" "What does it matter—" Pat began, hotly. "I think Mr. Gilbert's answered that question," the Judge interrupted. "We've got to clear young Ridder. At any cost, Pat, we've got to clear him."

"Mr. Gilbert's our friend," her father went on. "He says so, and I believe him."

"What do you want to know, Mr. Gilbert?" "How long did you stand at the foot of the steps before that door swung open?" "Five minutes. Maybe, a little more."

"Do you think someone opened it? Someone who, then, went in to Kelly?" "You mean, the murderer?" Barry nodded. "No. That's the last thing he would have done. The door probably didn't latch when I closed it."

HOW ARE YOU TODAY DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Reassuring Heart Sufferers THERE was one lesson learned during the war that has been of help to patients, their families, and to all physicians. That lesson is that because a heart has a leaking valve, is perhaps a little rapid or even irregular, there is no reason why the individual should not go about his work or life in the usual way and live as long as those whose hearts show none of these symptoms.

Men with hearts of these various types get along just as well as those whose hearts showed none of these conditions. Sir Maurice Cassidy, in the British Medical Journal, in speaking of those who worry about their heart, sums up the treatment in the single word "reassurance."

Formerly if a patient had a murmur, a little irregularity or the heart was beating rapidly the physician would mention the fact to him with the words, "Don't overdo yourself" or "You'll have to be a little careful." Now the average individual does not worry much about his liver, kidneys or stomach but one word about the heart and he becomes greatly alarmed.

Doctor Cassidy says that there is no use telling the patient that the heart is a little flabby or that there is a slight murmur of no great importance, for to the average patient anything amiss with the heart brings to his mind the most serious possibilities.

Tell Patient Condition He must tell the patient that he has or he has not a serious heart condition. If it is not serious he should be told so in order that he can go about his work or play with a free mind. And even when there is actual heart disease but the patient is able to carry on with the ordinary routine of his life without much breathlessness, if he sleeps well, and if there is no evidence of heart failure—swelling of the feet—he can be assured that his heart disease is not a serious malady and that he should live a goodly number of years with it.

And even when the heart condition is serious, if the patient is willing to "live within the limits of his strength" he may live many years. The whole thought is to take away from the patient any worry or unsettlement of mind, so that he knows exactly where he stands.

Epilepsy Often Misanomer "The word epilepsy has been carrying a message of desolation and despair into the ears and minds of countless numbers of patients over many centuries. The average individual believes that epilepsy is an incurable disease, that there will be an ever increasing number of attacks, each one more dreadful and devastating than the previous one, that it cannot be controlled by medicine or treatment, condemning the sufferer to mental decay (insanity), and sure to descend upon the individual at the wrong time—in the street car, office, shop, theater, movie, or in any sort of social gathering."

I am quoting Dr. Henry Alsop Riley of the Neurological Institute in an address before the Medical Social Service section of the Welfare Council of New York city. Doctor Riley stated that the word epilepsy should not be used because the patient with ordinary "convulsive" attacks or symptoms immediately felt that he had the severest type of epilepsy and became paralyzed in will, ambition and work with deplorable results to himself, his family, and his future, often withdrawing himself completely from all artistic, cultural and social life.

"It's Not a Criminal's Crime, Either," Barry Answered.

made that speech at the Astor. The instant it was finished, I telephoned Kelly. 'You'd better come down and talk it over,' he said.

"Of course, it would have been fatal for anyone to learn of that meeting. That's why I got out of the taxi at Twenty-third street. As I told you, Kelly admitted he himself. He was drunk, and in a bad temper. 'What's the matter with you?' he asked, when we'd gone into the drawing room. 'White-livered? Here; take a drink, and forget it.'

"There was a bottle on the table, and two glasses. Both of 'em had been used, but he half-filled them, and gave me one. I needed it, but I can't drink Scotch—never could. I told Kelly so, and he blazed out at me. 'You're too good to drink with me—' is that it?" "No," I answered; 'that's not it. But I can't hand down that decision. I simply can't, Mr. Kelly. It's rotten, and everyone knows it. I've got the cursed thing in my pocket, and—' "And I've got something in my pocket," he shouted—" "Father!" Pat intervened. "For over an hour, I plead and argued. And Kelly kept drinking, and getting uglier. He was a big man, with a bull neck, and huge hands. At last, he said, 'Shut your damned mouth, and get out of here!' "I said, 'I'm not going.' "No?" he sneered, and got up from his chair. He stumbled across the room to a great, old-fashioned desk, and got a revolver. 'Now, beat it,' he yelled, 'and damned quick!'"
