Beauty In the elevator of a big store she noticed a very attractive poster advertising beauty treatment. Out of curiosity she asked the elevator attendant (a funny little Cockney) where the beauty parlor was.

He turned and gave her a good look, noticed presumably that she did not use make-up at all, and then said, "You don't want ter go there mucking your face about. Why not stay as y'are—plain but 'olesome?"

It was recently brought out that film players standing for long periods in the glare of powerful and hot lights suffer a peculiar though not serious malady, ac-co.ding to Pathfinder. It is claimed that the heat of the lights reduces the water content of the body below normal and produces body below normal and produces the ill-effects. The cure of this dreaded disease is quite simple, consisting of drinking a glass of water. It has been termed as "body dehydration." If a human body were completely dehydrated there would not be much left. A 140-pound film player has enough water in his body to fill ten one-gallon cans. The weight of that amount of water would be in the neighborhood of 85 pounds. The other 55 pounds would be made up by small amounts of iron, carbon, lime, sulphur, phosphorus, magnesium, and a few volatile elements.

IF YOU'RE interested in watching a career grow, keep your eye on young Larry Blake, who has been giving character interpretations of Charles Laughton, John Barrymore, Edward Robinson and Clark Gable at the Rainbow Room of Rockefeller Center. First thing you know he'll be on the air and in the movies; though he is in his early twenties now, he has made a good start.

He went to Brooklyn college, and has appeared in vaudeville and at smart hotels and night clubs here and there about the country; the Congress and the Stevens hotels in Chicago featured him not long ago. Landing in the Rainbow Room crowns him with success; talent scouts make it one of their first stops in New York, and no visitor wants to leave town till he's been

THE BIG HIDE AND PELT MAN

By NANCY RHODES © McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

NNIE LAURIE with feline grace stretched her silken legs towards the crackling fire. So unconscious was she of the grave danger that threatened her that the Great Detective watched her, fascinated by her utter indifference to a menacing fate. Her green eyes stared reflectively at a flickering fire, then she picked up her catnip mouse and began to massage her face with it.

A heavy step startled her in the middle of her toilet. She sprang lightly to her feet and advanced to rub herself against the newcomer's leg. The new young man in town, who was calling on Sis, picked her up and scratched her behind the ears while she purred delightedly.

Strange this, in more ways than one, thought the Great Detective. To begin, Annie Laurie was a confirmed saeb and snubbed all comers except the immediate members of the family.' But this Eliot Dobbs seemed to have swept her clean off her feet, even as he had swept Sis. Furny that women always fell for that kind of guy.

He was so shiny. His hair was shiny like black oilcloth. His teeth were shiny, and he showed them all His nails were shiny and pink. And at times even the seat of his trousers was shiny. Papa said that this was to be expected in a young man who did nothing, apparently, but sit on the seat of his trou-

He was in the hide and pelt business, Sis said defensively. A big hide and pelt man. Well, you hide and pelt man. couldn't tell the Great Detective about hide and pelt guys. There were a couple of them in school. They hid in their barns and garages and pelted you with things. Hadn't he been socked in the ear with an over-ripe tomato? The hide and pelt business was good for the guys that were in it but awful hard on the fellows who were not.

But Sis and Annie Laurie had fallen for the new young man. Sis was always strong for new young men. When one called on her she acted about like Annie Laurie with a new catnip mouse. Not for nothing had Great Detective gumshoed around the dark corners of the piazza nights! Eliot Dobbs slid Annie Laurie out of his lap as Sis entered the room. He and Sis stared at each other like a couple of dead fish. Kinda sick and pop-eyed. That was love. The Great Detective had seen love before and he didn't think much of it. Then they went out on the piazza and sat in the couch swing and made kissing noises. After a moment he and Annie Laurie followed them out and sat down behind the

"Id oo my booful sweetheart?" , darling

"Doffery mighty, what tunning little hansies. "My dreat big booful sheik!"

Annie Laurie arose with the air of a maiden lady who has just heard | guns. an indelicate joke. She stalked disdainfully into the house and Reggie gumshoed after her. He didn't blame her any for acting as though she'd sat on a pin. Listening to Sis and her fellow was enough to dis-gust any cat. He followed Annie Laurie as she padded up to his room and he helped her establish herself in the second bureau drawer, a favorite spot.

His job was to watch Annie Laurie these days, to see that she didn't disappear as cats all over town were disappearing. A Pied Piper seemed to be loose in Centreville. His first appearance was about two weeks ago when all the Elm street cats disappeared over night. A few nights after the Elm street exodus the Maple street cats left their bed and board, or what have you. Then Powhowtan road was swept clean of its pets. So far, Reggie McWhortle's section of the town had not been mo-

There was apparently no bloodshed in this anti-cat crusade. No dead animals were found under bathtubs or hidden in dark holes where cats cache themselves when they are sick. They simply disappeared as though wiped off the face of the earth by an invisible hand. The Great Detective put on his colored glasses and his red whiskers and sat on the edge of the bed to think. His mind always worked better when he was wearing his red whiskers, but tonight he seemed to be up against one of those insoluble mysteries over which even Sherlock Holmes might be forgiven for thumping his breast and plucking

Mamma stuck her head in on her way to bed and inquired for Annie Laurie, who was sound asleep on a pile of underwear in the second drawer.

'Take off your whiskers and go to bed," said mama, kind of mad as she always was when Sis and Eliot Dobbs were on the porch.

"The big hide and pelt man's still holding forth on the front porch," she grumbled to papa. "I'd hate to have that greasy looking egg in the family," said papa, making little clucking noises as he morning in school because their cats had disappeared. Reggie could hardly wait to get home and reassure himself that Annie Laurie was still safe. That night he kept a sharp watch on her, which was not so easy, as she spent the first part of the evening chasing moths and the latter part in the hammock on the big hide and pelt man's lap. Crouching behind the hammock

Reggie could hear her purr above the passionate tones of Eliot Dobbs. He was urging Sis to run away with him! The greasy egg! Tomorrow night. His business would be cleared up then. His business! What was his business? The Great Detective listened closely; he said no more about his business, however, but went on calling Sis foolish names and teasing her to go. Every once in a while he threw Annie Laurie on the floor, but she arose undaunted and crawled into his lap, upon his shoulder and around his neck. One o'cleck struck in the hall, and papa stuck his head out of the window, and asked if the hide and pelt man hadn't better pelt for home fore Eliot Dobbs finally left. The Great Detective could hear Sis going upstairs kind of quick and mad. Papa would catch it in the morning!

Annie Laurie followed the young man to the gate. In the clear moon-light Reggie could see him take a bag from his pocket. The cat made a leap for it, but he laughed a little and started down the street, with Annie Laurie at his heels. As he went he sprinkled stuff from the bag. The Gregory pussy was sitting on her front steps as he passed. sniffed the air and came on, She running. Soon several other cats joined the procession. Before they reached the outskirts of the town a small army of cats of all sizes and descriptions ran at the heels of the young man, and Reggie McWhortle ran at the heels of the cats. Cautiously, of course, as befitted a detective. He smelled the stuff on the sidewalk and found it was catnip.

A mile from town they turned up the long lane that led to the old deserted Allen homestead. Eliot Dobbs opened the rusty door and the cats rushed inside. A light flared in a dusty window. Reggie peeked in and stood rooted with amazement. He saw a large room, its floor covered with catnip, in which the cats were wallowing drunkenly. Crates of cats were piled along the side of the room and more empty crates stood waiting.

"He's bootlegging cats!" thought Reggie, his mind whirling. As he peered through the dusty glass, the man picked up Annie Laurie and gave her a slap in the ear. Something seemed to click in Reggie. He sped towards home in a cloud of

The rescue party parked their cars about a quarter of a mile away from the old Allen place and came on quietly on foot. Reggie led, wearing his red whiskers that has such a clarifying effect on his mind. Behind him came mama, mad as a wet hen. Then four policemen, with short black guns in their hands. Then papa and Sis. Sis' face looked like a white plate in the moonlight.

The headlights of a truck glowed in the Allen yard. Two men were loading crates when the chief of police shot twice in the air and they all surged forward. The police poked the cat thieves in the ribs with their

"What's the good of a cat, anyway?" asked Mr. Dobbs in a loud voice, trying to pretend he wasn't scared, as he caught sight of Sis. 'We wanted their pelts for the fur trade. There's a big demand. What's the good of a fool cat, anyway?" he repeated.

"If you hadn't hung around this town so long," snapped the other, "we'd got away with it as we did everywhere else we've tried it.'

"A big hide and pelt man," said Sis in a high, thin kind of voice. Then she laughed until she cried and the McWhortle family started

'You can't fool me on hide and pelt men," said Reggie, as trudged along in the rear, with Annie Laurie playing with his red whiskers. "They've hid and socked me too often.'

Adult Rats "Use Heads"

Better Than Children Adult rats exceed in reasoning ability children up to five or six years of age, it is shown by comparable tests made at the University of Michigan by Dr. N. R. F. Maier, of the psychology department, reports the New York Herald-Tribune.

The primary object of the experiments was to find when children first begin to show ability to reason, that is, to work out a problem by bringing together mentally separate items out of the experience. This combining of isolated experiences is the main difference between reasoning and simple learning, Doctor Maier points out.

In children, mental activity which may fairly be described as reasoning seldom appears before the age of five and one-half or six years. child has learned much before then, but he is seldom able to use his learned knowledge in new ways to solve a problem. Reasoning in rats is tested by their ability to put together parts of a pathway which have been learned separately. Adult rats will make a score of 80 per cent better than chance and young rats a score of 61.4 per cent, Maier found.

In his experiments with 39 children, ranging in age from three and shut the bedroom door.

The very next day three little girls from Hillside road cried all ilar to that used for the rats.

In the Picture It Seemed That Alys Was Peeved.

MR. WHIPPLE'S DRESS SUIT

NCE there was a Kid who lived in a tall-grass Settlement just two miles this side of the Jumping-off Place. There was a Railway through the Town but no Fast Train ever stopped at Wimpusville unless it had a Hot Box. Sherman Whipple spent his early Youth in this be nighted Burg.

When only three years old Sherman sized up his Environment and knew that he was in Dutch. After that he wasn't interested in anything except Time-Tables. It may be true that the Sharks on Sociology, who cannot understand why Lads leave the Villages and flock to the Bright Lights, never served a Term in one of these out-of-the-way Hamlets where the only regular Visitors, in the old Days, were English Sparrows and Drummers. Now a Picture Palace smiles where once the Feed Store was. The sky is full of Antennae and the Honk of the Henry is heard at 2 a. m.

Not so, however, when the Earthly Career of Sherman Whipple was still in its Springtime. The Town of Wimpusville had a complicated Case of Mopes and Chidders.

It happened that when Our Hero 8 years of a a Story Paper, which his Ma read with great Regularity, a beautiful Wood-Cut depicting a Scene in High

There was a Lady who was very Siender Waist and much less slender just Below, and she was in complete Low-Neck and wore Diamond Ear-Bobs and had two Cubic Feet of Hair and was, according to the Standards of Pre-Golf Days, a raving Beauty of the Statuesque Type. Her name was Alys. It was Alys

In the Picture it seemed that Alvs was peeved over some Proposition that had been put up to her by the Gentleman in the Long Tail, who was none other than Geoffrey Du-

Although it showed in the Picture that Alys was shrinking away from Geoffrey until only a clever illus-trator could prevent her from doing a Flop and although the Reading indicated that Geoffrey hissed "Have a care!" when Alys hinted that she had learned of his Secret Marriage to Gladys Marston even though the Circumstantial Evidence indicated that Geoffrey was a terrible Pup, his Wardrobe saved him. Evidently he was a Villain, but still a Gentleman.

Sherman Whipple was fascinated by the First Part Costume. It was his first Meeting with the John Drew Habiliments. Never, in Real Life, had he seen any one all duked out in Thirteen and the Odd.

A TALL TREK FROM THE HOME-TOWN

The Wood-Cut practically deter-mined his whole Career. He made a secret Vow that some day he would wear the whole Smear, cluding Silk Underwear and a Monogram on his Shirt-Sleeve. You might say that a Dress Suit was the Lode Star of his Existence. steered his whole subsequent Course in life toward a Conservatory, in which he might have a bantering Flirtation with some Heiress who carried a Fan and used some good

When he packed his Wicker Suit Case and did a tall Trek from the Corn Fields, it was not suspected by the Oafs and Numpkins of his native Township that he nursed his ambition to write his Name in Letters of Fire on the Society Page of Royal Robes are born with them alcome Daily Paper.

We need not follow him through his early Struggles to tell of the weary Years during which, if he had lost one of his Collar Buttons, he would have been practically Des-

The dream of a Life-Time was to become a joyous Reality. felt that the Time had arrived for him to break out of the Shell and Crow three times and let the World know that he had arrived.

So he went to a Real Tailor and said he wanted a Dress Suit with more Satin Lining than ever had been seen on any Vaudeville Stage. He wanted at least one Velvet Col lar and he wanted a little Dewflicker to connect the Buttons in front and he wanted much Braid down the Trousers. The Tailor tried to tell Sherman that Evening Dress, or Full Dress, or Formal Dress, or whatever one may choose to designate the fantastic Garb, should be characterized by an unobtrusive Elegance and not Complicated by innovations. NO QUIET RAIMENT FOR HIM

All that stuff about cutting out the Decorative Effects went for only 30 years for arrival of The Day and now that he was about to back into a real Set of Nifties and carry his own Scenery, he didn't want any Vestments that were quiet and se-

He could hardly wait to flash the proud apparel. His first Chance came when he was invited to attend a Smoker given by the Members of the Twelfth Ward Bowling Club. When he showed up at the Function he had on everything except Lip Rouge. There were 400 Stags present and 399 of them had committed Social Errors by appearing in Sack Suits

BAD NEWS FOR THE DRESS-SUIT

One Day, after the beautiful Raiment had been in the Camphor for a month. Mr. Whipple found something in a Magazine which almost froze his Blood. The Piece went on to say that the Man of Fashion who The Piece went on wished to be En Rapport with the late Wrinkles, could not be de Rigeur, a la Mode and absolutely Razmagash even if he wore a Dinner Coat at Gatherings attended by La-

It was just like sticking a Knife into the heart of Sherman Whipple. He couldn't scoop up all of the French, but he surmised that the Money which he had tied up in the Swell Harness was going to be a Total Loss. Safety in Reducing Weight

YOUNG woman weighing A 150 pounds consulted a physician as to the best method of getting rid of twenty pounds. At first glance she appeared to be well, as do most stout individuals, but there was a lack of color in the face and the eyes had a "tired" appearance.

Further, the physician noted that the excess weight on her body was about the hips, abdomen and shoul-ders, and that her hands, wrists, feet and ankles were small and slender. This showed that her overweight was mostly due to a lack of juice from the small pituitary gland lying at the base of the brain. As was his custom, and the haemoglobin was only 60 per cent instead of 85 to 95 as in normal healthy women. He stopped the examination and advised the patient to see her family physician and "built up" physically before he began any weight reduction treatment. She admitted that she had eaten meat only once and eggs only once during the previous two months. The point, of course, is that while reducing overweight is wise from a health standpoint, the patient should be thoroughly overhauled by his or her family physician before weight reduction begins.

Planning the Campaign

Dr. W. A. L. Styles in an article, "The Campaign Against Corpu-lence," Hygeia Magazine, says:

"In the ambition to shed weight, men and women have never paused to consider the advisability of misdirected endeavor. As a consequence death has been the end result of numerous treatments for obesity (overweight.) Before launching an anti-fat offensive, every prospective patient should undergo a thorough physical examination at the hands of a reputable physician. 'Merely because discretion (or common sense) has not been combined with determination (and many of our fat friends are determined in their wish to lose weight) failure crowns many efforts to regain normal weight. The reducing of weight should come second to improvement in physical condition as a goal in the campaign against corpulence. The two outstanding suggestions in Doctor Styles' article are (a) to eat nothing between meals and (b) to leave the table while still hungry. These two suggestions are not only simple but quite safe, and safety whilst reducing should never be forgotten. Physicians now have so many overweight patients seeking a safe method of reducing weight that they outline diets which will maintain strength and yet reduce weight if faithfully followed. "Proper diet to which is added exercise suited to individual needs brings dividends in the form of health; whereas wrong diet and faulty exercise, particularly when aggravated by faulty treatment by medicine-epsom salts, thyroid or pituitary extract in the wrong type of cases—may wreck health and bring on premature death.

So widespread is the desire to reduce weight that all sorts of short cuts are being tried often with disastrous results. The 18-day diet, the use of pituitary and thyroic ex-tracts in non-suitable cases, the use of the new drug dinitrophenol, using large doses of epsom salts or proprietary medicines containing epsom salts are all responsible for many cases of chronic illness and also many deaths.

Fighting Noise
When London, New York and
Paris decide that measures must be taken to make these large cities less noisy, there must be some reason

Everyone recognizes that there must be some street noises as foods and other supplies must be moved from place to place, automobiles must transport people for business or pleasure, street cars and busses likewise needed, factories must manufacture necessities, and various other noises are really "neces sary" noises.

However, everyone must recog-nize also that while all the above are necessary noises, the amount or degree of noise now created is not necessary; that a large percentage of it is really unnecessary.

Noise, whether we realize it or not, causes us to tighten or tense the whole body; it is one of nature's old, old ways of preparing our mus-cles to attack or resist an enemy. tenseness tires us just as if we were attacking or resisting an en-emy. And much of the noise is un-investigating the noise situation, not to learn its effects upon the population because that is unfortunately only too well understood, but with the definite purpose of getting rid of unrecessary noise.

CHANNING POLLOCK

CHAPTER XI

"Who murdered Mike Kelly? . . . Pat -darling-was it you?"

The Globe had answered the ques tien, but, in Southampton, Barry Gilbert held this girl-of-all-girls in his arms, and asked it again.

For a moment, she stared at him, dazed and inert, and then she pushed him away. "Let me sit down, please," she said, coldly. She remained standing, however, when Barry released her, though she still clung to the chair at which she had stopped when she came into the room. "Do you really think I could kill anyone?" she asked, with just a trace of amusement tempering the won der and resentment in her tone, "But, of course, I know why you think it. My father said he couldn't tell the truth because of a woman. The woman was my dead mother." "I'm sorry—" Barry began. "It doesn't matter," the girl interrupted. "Nothing much matters now. Peter says this evening's Globe com pletely clears young Ridder, and that they'll probably release him tomorrow. That's all you want, isn't it. And, if you don't mind, I'll go upstairs to my father. He's really ill."

She had closed the door to the hal after her and Barry opened it.
"Can I do anything?" he asked

"No, I den't think anybody can," Pat answered. "Nothing father or I could say now would help Morano, or any body. Is Evans outside?"

"Then, of course, you'll see Peggy. Her worries are over. Please tell her how glad I am, and that I'll phone later about Jacky." They were in the hall by this time and the butler appeared on the "Will you come to your father, Miss?"

he said, quietly.
"I'm coming," Pat replied, just as quietly and, without looking at Barry egain, turned and ran up the stairs.

Well, that was over-along with everything else. "I made a clean sweep while I was at it," Barry told himself, ruefully, on his way to the hospital. "What did I have to shoot off my mouth for, just at the last minute? 'My dead mother.' Three words, and my whole train of suspicion went off

It had taken Harwood barely more certainly worked fast," Barry paid mental tribute; "once he'd identified that voice on the phone." Some time before the evening papers would reach Southampton. What was the difference? "Nothing much matters now," Pat had said, and it didn't. They'd probably release young Ridder tomor row, and, two days later, old Ridder'd be in New York. "I've got plenty to do," Barry said to himself, and to Evans, "I've had a cable from Mr. Ridder. He's on the Bremen, arriving Saturday. You'd better get your wife back

They were at the hospital now, and Evans made no reply.

Peggy came into the reception room "I can't stay," she began. "Jacky's in a good deal of pain. The doctor's there. He says everything's all right, but somehow. I'm worried."

"Can you stand a bit of good news?" "I don't know. I haven't had any clue? Or— Go on, please!"

"They've arrested Morano. Peter oned Judge Hambidge, He says Jack'll be out tomorrow."

Peg didn't move

At least her body didn't but she ran her tongue over her lips, and her hands opened and closed spasmodically.

After a moment: "No foolin'?" she

It was an absurd thing to say, but, is a long experience with suffering, Barry had learned that just such things are sald under stress.

"No foolin'." Tears came into the girl's eyes, and flowed down her cheeks,

"It's in tonight's Globe," Barry told her. "The papers aren't here yet, but I'll ask Evans to bring you one. There "The papers aren't here yet, but doesn't seem to be any possibility of mistake. I'll go in to town by the first train in the morning. I'll take care of everything, and keep in close touch

One syllable, but Barry thought he had never heard so much praise and gratitude before. His own eyes were threatened with moisture, so he dedared, "You'd better get back to the tooy. Pat's going to phone later, and 'il ring up tonight. That's all now."

"Home?" Evans asked.

Barry nodded. That word was the

"Anything else, sir?" Evans inquired, in front of the Ridder house. "Yes, please. The instant the eve-"Yes, please. The instant the evening papers get to Southampton, will you bring me a copy of the Globe, and take one to Mrs. Rogers?" He gave the chauffeur a quarter. "Kelly's murderer's under arrest," he continued, "and we're through 'sleuthing.' You'll and the life the Globe."

and it all in the Globe." "Yes, sir." Evans was thinking of something else.

"You understand — about Mrs. Evans?" Barry asked.

"Yes, sir." A pause. "You ain't staying here yourself, I take it."

"I'm leaving tomorrow." "I was wondering." Evans said, would you like us to come with you?" "Very much," Barry answered, "but "You ain't always going to live in hotel-begging your pardon, sir. Mrs.

Evans is a mighty good cook."

"Thanks," Barry returned, "but my cooking's going to be provided by the state of New York. You may as well know the truth, Evans. I'm not Mr. Ridder. Never was. I jimmied my way into this house for a night's shelter, and then you and Willetts came and thought I was Ridder, and I let you go on thinking so. The game's up The boss gets back Saturday, and what happens then is anyone's Evans said, "Yes, sir." That's all, except I'd be glad if you'd tell Willetts, and the rest. It'll save me introducing the subject."

"Yes. sir." "And better stand by tonight. I may have to drive back to the hospital." "Yes, sir . . . I was wondering—" Barry grinned.

"You do a good deal of that, don't

I was wondering how you'd like to go to my sister's. You know--where I live in town. You could lay low there a while, and then slip away some-

"That's swell of you." Barry responded, "Much obliged. But I think I've done all the slipping that's good for a man. Tell Willetts, when you get a chance, and remember to bring me the Globe."

It was close on to five o'clock then, and "plenty to do" before dinner. Willetts wasn't about-luckily. Barry let himself in with his key, and ran up to his room. Should he pack first, or get the rest of it out of the way? He decided to begin with "the rest

From a long envelope, in his inside pocket, he took all his vouchers. Then, on a sheet of note paper, he wrote, "Received . . . Cash $200." Beneath that, he listed the check from Mrs. Ridder, and "board, lodging, etc." Under "Disbursed," he credited himself with the same check, which had been banked for Peggy, and with whatever sums he had given her, and a few minor expenditures. "That leaves my account straight," Barry thought. "Except for unlawful entry, tampering with the mails, and pretending to be somebody I wasn't."

It left his bank account far from straight. When he'd subtracted "Disbursed" from "Received," and made out his check for the balance, the result was a rather startling overdraft.
"All right." Barry said. "I'll sell out my wardrobe. Studs, and cuff-links. and things. I guess I won't need 'em

He wanted-terribly-to write letter to Mrs. Ridder. It would have begun, "Dear Mother: (Not mine, of course.)" That was too maudin. "Me: I'm just a sob-sister," Barry berated himself, tucking his accounts, accom panied only by his check, into an envelope, and inscribing it, "Mrs. John Clarke Ridder, Addressed." He propped the envelope against a calendar, and for a moment, sat looking at it. wish I could find my mother," he had thought, his first morning at South ampton. He wished it even more fervently now, after all these weeks of

"I've got to write Pat." he decided,

"I've got to write Pat." he decided, at last. "I certainly owe her an apology, and a 'good-by.' This letter certainly mustn't be "maudlin."
"Dear Pat." he started. "Dear Pat: (I suppose I should write 'Miss Hambidge' now, but I can't.) You wouldn't let me say I was sorry for what happened today, but I am. I won't try to excuse myself. You'll forget it, I hope, a mickly as you'll forget everything. as quickly as you'll forget everything boy. Pat's going to phone later, and else in this grotesque association. I f'il ring up tonight. That's all now."

"Home?" Evans asked.

"Home?" Evans asked.

ries, like Peg's, are over- I remain always respectfully, Barry Glibert."

Packing proved complicated. Most of his clothing-paid for long agowas out here, and had to be taken in. But there was no suit-case. Nest, to the end, Barry folded his belongings into two tailor's boxes. He hadn't quite finished folding when Willetts

"Evening paper, sir." "Thank you.

"And your key, sir. You left it in the front door.' "You'd better keep it. And there's a letter for Mrs. Ridder on the desk there. I'd like her to get it when she arrives."

"Very good, sir. Dinner at seven?" "If you please."

That was all. No reference to Barry's packing, or the confession that -Barry felt sure-had been relayed by Evans half an hour ago. "I'm taking the 7:21 back to town tomorrow morning," Barry said, as Willetts was closing the door, but Willetts only answered, "Yes, sir," and went on closing it.

Morano hadn't been arrested. So much was clear from the screaming headlines Barry scanned. However, "that ends it," Barry felt sure. "Harwood did a swell job. Why didn't I follow up the number of that cab? It didn't seem of the least importance when the taxi-driving medico gave it to me. I might have known it was, though, when Ernie wrote it down in his notebook."

Dinner was uneventful-with Willetts remembering his "position." and behaving as any well-trained butlet might have been expected to behave. Afterward, Barry phoned Peg. She had seen the Globe, but was still dubious. "Do you really think they'll let Jack out now?"

"Certainly. They're not going to get that sheet started again on Tammany

"And It'll be tomorrow, you think?" "Probably. I'll keep in touch with you." Barry promised, and finished his packing. Then he re-read the Globe story, and marked parts of it-to ponder in town.

Throughout breakfast next morning, Barry wondered whether this remarkable butler could know he was "going for good." "I've left a few parting gifts on my desk," he ventured, at last. cook, and everybody. Will you take care of 'em?"

"Yes. sir. "I shan't be back. I suppose Evans told you."

"Yes, sir." That was too much.

Barry said, "Well, what do you think "That's not for me to say, sir. My place is to obey orders. I've tried to do that, sir. If I've made a mistake, it hasn't been for want of trying."

"Your mistake was quite natural," Barry reassured him. "You'd been told you'd find young Mr. Ridder here, and you found me. I said I was young Mr. Ridder. That seems to let you out."

"Yes, sir." Willetts hesitated.

"Anyway, that wasn't the mistake I had in mind sir. That was a natural mistake. I thought you were a gentleman. I still think so. It's five after seven, sir."

Barry just made the train. At Speonk, he bought a morning paper, and read of Morano's death. Even the con-Times regarded that as the end of the case against Rogers. "Night Club Owner, Accused of Kelly Murder, Killed Resisting Arrest," its headlines began, and ended with "Move to Free Rogers Expected Today." Barry pored over both stories—that in the Times and that in last night's Globe-all the way to New York, "Well," he reflected. "one of my suspects was guilty, anyway. Peter Winslow can't laugh that

And, suddenly, he let the newspaper fall, and leaned forward, with his wrists on his knees.

"It's queer though," he said, almost aloud, to the click of the wheels. "Very queer. Very damned queer." At the station, he stopped for a timetable. "Is there one," he asked, "that gives all the trains out of here? The man grinned at him, thrusting forward three thick folders

Ten o'clock found him at Winslow's "Mr. Winslow won't be in today."

Peter's secretary announced. Winslow had a had heart attack hast night. So bad that Mr. Winslow telephoned to the Hambidges. They're with Mrs. Winslow now."

"Was that your last news?" "No. Mr. Winslow called up half an hour ago to say that Mrs. Winslow's a little better."

"Had he seen this?" Barry indicated the headline in the

"Yes. He talked to Mr. Colton about it. Mr. Colton's one of the young men in the office, you know. He's gone to the district attorney to ask for Roger's release. Mr. Winslow said, if you called I was to tell you that would be only a matter of hours. Should you like us to phone you when there's anything certain?"

"Please. I suppose there's no use of my going to the Tombs now?" "Not much. Mr. Colton's going there from the district attorney's.

Barry phoned Peggy, and thes strolled across Forty-second street. It was a delightful morning, and his rathto his hotel from the station.

"No sense in my following 'em yet," Barry told himself. "I don't want to sit around that cursed room all day. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Beach Togs Tell New Fabric Trends Rough Work, Gentle Work

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

T IS not enough that beach outfits and active sports clothes be stylish and pleasing to the eye. It is not enough that they be merely practical and utilitarian. To qualify 100 per cent to the good your sun, sand and surf and your general outdoor play-around togs must be every whit as practical as they and shirt.

are chic and eye-appealing.

The cunning bathing and beach suit of gay print shown to the right in the picture is just that-thoroughly as practical as it is charming to look upon. Its claim to practicality is due to the fact that the sanforizedshrunk cotton of which it is made carries the promise of non-shrinking no matter how often it may happen to be water soaked. This very modern way of processing cottons and linens so that they cannot shrink insures your bathing wardrobe all season long, which, of course, means no-end satisfaction in the final analysis of clothes logic.

Practical from another point of view, too, is this charming beach and swim ensemble, in that it is one of the very new and goodlooking halter bathing suits with wraparound skirt to tie on when you go meandering down the beach as fair maidens are wont to do.

Another story of achievement in the way of combining the practical with the highly chic and attractive in sports clothes is told in the new weight-controlling ensemble that allows one to lounge about the house. play ping-pong and go about home duties while accomplishing the magic of shelving the extra poundage one longs to discard preparatory to getting one's self into shape for that svelte lithe appearance in one's bathing and beach suit. This miracle-working avoirdupois reducer is pictured in the foreground. smart gym gob suit it is, made of an exceedingly good-looking crepe-texture rubber that keeps the pores of the body open and encourages a healthy perspiration. When that happens you can start making your swimming dates for to your glee and satisfaction the pounds will begin to roll off until normal weight is reached. These crepe-textured rubber gym gobs are styled in three comfortable pieces—slacks, shorts

Big news and no doubt about it, is the beach and swimming suit in the new and startling front page newspaper print cotton. See it pictured to the left in the group. Prints this season are noted for novelty and certainly this newspaper-print cotton captures first honors in that respect. The fitted halter top which is lined with white wool jersey for extra comfort and proper contour, buttons at the front to the waistband of the one-piece wool-lined skirt and maillot. The separate cape has an attached hood and is lined with terry cloth throughout.

Very smart beach outfits of white pique are among the season's latest models. A stylish ensemble includes shorts, worn under a one-piece tunic that fastens all the way down the front (may be left open at will) with pique-covered buttons. A big floppy white fabric hat is worn. Another interesting item is the hat made of pique that is nothing more than a brim which ties at the back. It is without crown and can be untied and flattened out to be washed and ironed.

CHIC FOR SUMMER By CHERIE NICHOLAS

According to the modern way of thinking a costume is only as smart and correct and goodlooking as the accessories worn with it. In other words it is the accessories that make the costume and this is the challenge that fashionables must meet these times. In the matter of observing the little niceties of accessory details the lady in the picture is costumed to perfection. Her exquisitely ladylike straw hat is an exponent of smartest mil-linery fashion. The fur that borders the sleeves of her jewel-clasped crepe frock carries a convincing message in regard to the impor-tance of "summer furs" in the mode. Her long simple slip-on suede gloves are eminently correct. As to the handsome bag she carries it is the accent supreme of chic.

Polka Dots in Style. Mannish little polka dotted silk cravats and belts are worn with soft cks and polka dot scarfs walk

FEATHERS IN STYLE FOR HAT TRIMMING

Feathers are becoming more and more important as trimming for hats, according to Erik Braagaard, the young Danish milliter whose recently established Paris house has had unusual success.

Braagaard even makes entire hats and headdresses of feathers. He takes a single yellow bird of paradise and curves it cleverly about the head holding it in position with double bands of black velvet that cross the back of the head. This hat designer is building crowns higher and higher for morning and sports wear. The conical or thimble crowns, likewise are featured on some of the afternoon hats while others are trimmed with bunches of fruit or flowers.

Late Offerings of Prints Copy Design of Wall Paper

Some of the new prints look like wallpaper designs. Vertical stripes of flowers, massed together, are printed on pastel colored backgrounds. Other materials are printed with enormous sprays of flowers or vines in conventional wallpaper patterns. One house has applied a leaf and vine design in black organdy on a dinner dress of white organdy. The veins in the black organdy leaves are etched in shiny black beads.

Bracelets Combine Both Real Beauty and Utility

Since costume jewelry has come rushing back into style, there are all sorts of new bracelets on the market. For evening wear there are wide bands of gold or silver set with large, square precious stones. The largest center stone opens up to reveal a miniature powder compact and puff, while the stones on either side open to show paste rouge and eye shadow. The clasps of the new Considering how fine this railroad transportation is nowadays, you can't travel my cheaper. Fares lowest ings on round trip tickets. So why not take the train? It's safer. It's more dependable.

You can't beat the improved travel comfort in coaches and sleeping cars. lt's a good thing movies don't have such restful seats — most folks would sure fall asleep.

Ever hear about the new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight? It's a great convenience to shippers and re-ceivers alike. Western railroads pick up at the door, ship by fast freight, and deliver to door at no extra charge.

Railroad trains are running on faster schedules these days. eems like the iron horse wants to show these new streamlined diesels that he can step out, too Both passenger and freight schedules have been speeded up.

What's more, the railroads believe in "safety first." Last year not one passenger was killed in a train accident on western railroads.

Talk to your local railroad agent. He's full of information about traveling and shipping.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patron-
