The man looked up, smiled and said: 'Lor' bless yer dear heart, lidy, there's a far more primitive way than this, believe me."
"Really, and what's that?" she inquired.
"Biting it, lidy, biting it." Useless Clock

Pat always was late for work, and the foreman advised him to buy an alarm clock. The Irishman did an alarm clock. The Irishman did so, but still he continued to put in a belated appearance at his job. "Why can't you turn up at the right time, Pat, now you've got an alarm clock?" asked the foreman. "Bedad," replied Pat, "it's no good; it goes off when I'm asleep."—Exchange.

HENRY FONDA'S marriage to Frances Seymour Brokaw will increase the little circle of smart society women who, married to motion picture actors, reside in Hollywood. Richard Barthelmess, Gary Cooper and Fred Astaire all married into the Social Register.

Incidentally, Mrs. Brokaw's life story is rather like that of a movie. Born in a small town in Massachusetts, she was the poor cousin of the wealthy Rogers family. Very pretty, very charming, she had everything but money.

She met George T. Brokaw, who had both wealth and social position, fell in love with him, married him, in 1931. Mr. Brokaw died nearly two years ago, leaving his widow and their small daughter well provided for. She never forgot what it meant not to have plenty of money. She has done notable things in charity work. Henry Fonda, whom she met this summer in Europe, is a fortunate young man.

Bette Davis may seem to be a temperamental star when it comes to battling over stories and salary, but away from the studio she is most decidedly just another human being. Not long ago she and her husband were traveling through the Canadian Rockies, on the first part of that vacation trip she's taking. She did rather startle the other

Bette Davis guests at the hotel in Lake Louise by wearing a very low-cut evening gown-but she startled them still more by taking the bus to Banff the next day, instead of being exclusive and going in a private car.

"Her face and her figure are both cute," she announced. "And her mind's cute too." Take that as a compliment or the reverse just as you please. Anyway, Simone will be seen next in "White Hunter," with Warner Baxter.

A short story which has attracted much attention, "Beyond the Sound of a Machine Gun," has been purchased by a leading studio, and in it will appear George Raft, Cary Grant, Randolph Scott and Fred MacMurray.

We're to have still more Dickens on the screen. "Pickwick Papers" will be the next Dickens picture. Paramount intended to make it with W. C. Fields, but that plan has been abandoned, and Metro has taken it on.

FABLES IN SLANG

By GEORGE ADE

His Attention Was Directed to Two Pearls of Young Womanhood Planted Directly Across the Aisle.

THE FLAPPER FEUD

ONCE there was a Lone Man who was compelled to take a ride on the new kind of Bus which is helping the Zinc Elizabeth to make a Joke out of the average Passenger Train. This Conveyance looked like a Battle Ship with Wheels. It breathed Blue Smoke and made a Noise like Niagara Falls, and when it came surging along a rural highway the Chickens stain. would beat it far behind the Barn and remain there for Days.

The Traveler, who had planted himself in one of the spring Seats, had a couple of fresh magazines in his Lap and counted on finding out how all of the Butter-and-Egg Men started as Weed-Pullers and got their Kale by hiring Employees who were too dumb to steal. Like many other Readers, he was keen for these Confessions of the Successful, little suspecting that most of the Strong-Arms who have taken it away from the Common People hide their Black Jacks and Masks after they become Bank Directors and, after that, want to talk about Paintings and the Opera.

He had just started to eat up a thilling Piece entitled, "How It but she couldn't give him the Air Attention was directed to two Pearls of Young Womanhood planted directly across the Aisle.

CLAUDINE'S POROUS EATS

They were Regulars and had overlooked Nothing. They were clipped high and had been dipped in Flour and had large rolling Eyes and wore One-Piece Gowns which did not seem to be securely fastened. The Exposure included a long vertical Stretch of what is called the Shin-Bone.

This traveler had no desire to pry into the Secrets of these Cuties, who probably came of Refined People, no matter what they looked like. He was no Eavesdropper, Interloper or Buttinsky. If he could have kept out of their Confidences he would have done so. But his only chance would have been to get off the Bus.

Because he could not help himself, he heard the whole Story, involving an undramatic Prologue, a treacherous Betrayal, Scandal and Dirt, Plot and Counterplot, the dissolution of friendships and the bustup of Love's Young Dream.

Everything had been O. K. between Edna and Claudine up to the time of the Picnic. It must have been because the two of them packed in the same Basket, and it was understood, from the Beginning, that they would eat with Raymond and Ollie, but nothing was said before the Picnic about Claudine's Boob Cousin from Springfield. who was nothing but a Ringer and had an Appetite like a Horse.

It wouldn't have been so bad if Claudine had come through Fifty-Fifty, but she was always looking for a Chance to make a Splurge with somebody else's Chow.

ELMER THE GOOF

All of that Rough Stuff at the Picnic might have been forgotten if she hadn't traipsed all over Town the next Week telling Everybody that Edna had told Alma that Raymond was going to be Captain of the Basketball Team instead of Elmer. Always trying to start something. Her Middle Name was certainly War.

It was a Funny Thing that Claudine would knock Raymond the way she had and then go out to vamp him. And get away with it! Right from the Start Claudine had misrepresented, in every Way, Shape, Matter and Form, every-thing that Edna had said about the Basketball Team, even going so far as saying to Raymond, after he didn't get to be Captain, that he would have all right if Edna hadn't queered him by going to the Super-intendent and some of the Boys and shooting off her Mouth and getting everybody sore at her. All of which was a Pack of Lies, becuz Edna never opened her Face about Basketball unless she was asked and then said, in a Nice Way, that she hoped Raymond would be Cap-

Probably Raymond was a Goner unless somebody could get to him and give him the Low-Down and Inside on the Trouble-Maker, becuz, say what you will, Raymond wasn't such a Bad Scout. Just weak, that's all. Claudine had sewed Buttons on him becuz the Simp believed everything she passed out to him right or wrong.

Sooner or later he would find out what she had told Mr. Finch, who ran the Picture Show. It seems that she had been waiting out in Front for the Poor Egg to show up and take her in to see "Unprotect-ec Women" and Mr. Finch, in a joshing Way, started to kid her about Raymond and she said that he was nothing in her Young Life Feels to Be Red-Headed" when his becuz he was Nuts about her and tagging at her Heels every Minute. | than if they are always folded in Those were the very identical Words she had used, becuz Mr. Finch had told Mrs. Finch, who had imparted the Big Sensation to Alberta Wilcox.

SWIPING THE OLD GREEK BADGE

The very Idea of her saying that Raymond had been chasing her when everybody in Town knew that she had been making Googy-Eyes at him for a Year and doing a lot of other things that no Girl who had been well brought up would think of doing. For one Thing, he couldn't back the Car out of the Garage without her being on the Corner, all diked up like a Horse and Buggy to flag him.

It's funny where they went riding at Night. Her mother didn't seem to have the slightest Control over her. She could get away with all that Murder for a While but sooner or later she would get such a Hard Name that she wouldn't be able to break into a Public Dance with a letter of Introduction from

Herbert Hoover. If Raymond wasn't such a Goose he'd remember what she pulled on George Spelvin while he was home from the Academy. She told around that he gave her the Frat Pin, but it was purty well known that she just the same as swiped it and then gave him the Old One about losing it, which is awful Coarse Work, if anyone should ask. Kit Lawrence had told Effie Dusenberry that she knew Claudine still had the Badge. If that didn't make a Thief out of her, what would you call it? I ask

As for having a Chance to go to Hollywood and be in a Picture, all that Chatter just proved that she was Crazy in the Head. Somebody had told her she looked like Nancy Carroll and since then there had been no living with her.

It seemed that the Future of the Universe was now hinging on the Junior Prom. She (Claudine) had been buying Things and Telling around that Raymond was going to take her, but Edna and Blanche said, wouldn't it be a Good Joke if he gave her the Toss?

While further Plans for saving the much-to-be-desired Raymond were on the Fire, the Traveler had to alight and he may never know what happened to the Eternal Triangle.

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the South-Sleepy Cat, desert town of the South-west, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tambel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tambel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Dr. Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman, McCrossen and the young stranger tie in the various avents. the young stranger tie in the various events. McCrossen picks up a hand-kerchief from the ground riding full speed, facing backward, Denison easily follows suit. Denison then drops a cigarette carelessly. Racing down the track full tilt, he picks up the cigarette. The verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane Van Tambel is asked for her bracelet and throws it on the track. Just as Denison rides to pick it up a yell from Barney Rebstock, a McCrossen henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Dr. Carpy. The young stranger returns the bracelet to Jane. Back on Gunlock ranch after two years stranger returns the bracelet to Jane. Back on Gunlock ranch after two years in Chicago, because of her father's litness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tambel. She tells McCrossen who brought her home and he denounces Denison as a cattle thief.

It nettled her foreman. "He's-the worst enemy your father ever had in this whole country. He's probably stole more Gunlock cattle than all the rustlers in the hills."

"I don't believe it." "All right, don't," exclaimed Mc-Crossen, nettled. "Just ask any of the boys around the ranch."

Jane rode into Sleepy Cat next morning with Bull Page, and when she had dispatched her business at the bank, she walked up street to Carpy's hotel. She asked for Doctor Carpy, whom she remembered from her visit two years before. The doctor had a private office, entered both from the hotel lobby and the street.

The doctor was somewhat surprised at the sight of this trim, erect girl, eighteen or nineteen years of age, and viously she was a newcomer to Sleepy Cat; the doctor did not at once place her. But his glance swept everything about her like a flash-her cowboy hat her red, open-neck blouse with its dark flowing tie; her sloping feminine shoulders; delicate, pleasing bosom and slender, rounded hips; her short brown riding skirt and her soft, tight-fitting tan boots. The rig seemed right for her brown hair and blue eyes. "Doctor Carpy?" her voice was clear and her manner possessed.

Carpy nodded. Despite his years, the sight of trim, girlish womanhood always stirred the blunt old surgeon to graciousness. The doctor doffed his hat and set his bag down on the desk with an air of satisfaction. "I'm Doctor Carpy. But I'm glad to see you don't need me or any other doctor."

"Why, Doctor!" exclaimed Jane demurely. There was a sophistication in the delicate droop of her eyelids, as she protested, that did not escape the doctor. It deceived him only as to her age. "That's hardly complimentary. Doctor Carpy," she ran on. "Have you forgotten Frontier day two years ago when we sat here on the porch to gether and in the rickety grandstand to see the riding?" Her eyes were laughing. Doctor Carpy was flustered. "What is your name?"

"Not a very popular one in this country. I'm Jane Van Tambel." He knit his brows. "Why, that's maybe two years ago, and it was a little girl that I talked to here on the porch and took to the races. I'll be hanged! Two years! And you've sprung into full bloom. Full bloom!" repeated Carpy in undisguised admiration. Where've you been ever since?"

"In Chicago. You look exactly the same, Doctor."

"Can't say I feel exactly the same, Jane," he said. His eyes still rested on her. "How long were you out last "Only two months or so. But I'm out now to stay, perhaps.

"I heard something lately about some women folks over to Gunlock, but I didn't hear of you being over there. If I had, I'd have been over there myself. So you're Gus' daughter," he mused. "I'm his only child. Doctor."

"Never knew he had a child till you came out the first time. You threw your bracelet out on the track, ber him, do you?" "Of course I do. Who the hell said he was a rustler?"

"Why, that's what they told me at the ranch after we got home." "Well, you've got some able-bodied liars at Gunlock-one in particular."

"Who's that?" "No need to specify."

"Well, what's the name of the wonderful rider who picked up the bracelet? And the cigarette?"

"It was Bill Denison." Jane started imperceptibly. "He's living here now on his brother's hill ranch—brother's dead. Well, Jane, what in the world brought you "Why, because Father's so ill." Dector Carpy nodded. "You took care of him, Doctor, and recommended his going to Medicine Bend-" "It was pretty high for him here."

"-so he telegraphed for me to come out to look after the ranch-" "Small girl for big job, as the Indians would say." Jane laughed. "That's what Father said when he saw me. You know two years ago was the first time in his life he'd ever seen me." "I never knew till then the-your father had a family."

"Father was peculiar, you know. A little while after I was born he just disappeared. It was years before we even knew where he was. Then he began sending money back to Mother sometimes, but he never wrote a line. Then Mother died, and I went to live with my Aunt Lou."

"How old are you, Jane?" "Almost nineteen."

"Well, well!" mused Doctor Carpy still regarding his caller benevolently. "So you're Van Tambel's daughter. I guess you take after your mother. The doctor spoke evenly, but the implication did not pass unnoticed.

"Aunt Lou says I do," she returned with composure. "So Father said, too, when I went to see him at the hospital in Medicine Bend last month. And he told me, Doctor, to come to see you about his bill. I couldn't find one from you among the bills at the ranch. Did you ever send one?"

"Hell, Jane, I never sent a bill to anybody in my life."

"Doctor!" exclaimed his caller, startled both at the expletive and the statement. "I never heard of a doctor who didn't sent out bills !" Carpy laughed uproariously. "Why, that's nothing."

"But," she went on, "you took care of Father quite a while. He thinks you're the best doctor he ever had."

The sardonic note in the doctor's slight laugh as he suppressed an exclamation did not escape the girl. "But everyone out here says that or something just like it, so you must be used to it," she added. "Please tell me now, Doctor, what the bill is; I want to pay

. The doctor waved Jane off. When he sidestepped, she kept after him. He dodged, and she persisted. At last she drew from her purse two one-hundreddollar bills and laid them on the table in front of him. Carpy looked at them in astonishment, "Your father hasn't gone out of his mind, has he?"

"No," Jane retorted. "Why? That's eighteen or nineteen years of age, and not enough, is it?" she added shame-seemingly a stranger, facing him. Ob-facedly, "I didn't know."

"It's at least twice too much. Did Gus send this?"

Jane had to fib a bit. She had added hundred dollars herself to what her father had told her would be about right, if Carpy refused to name the "He told me he wanted you well paid," she answered evasively.

Carpy pushed one bill back to Jane. "That's plenty,"

"Doctor," she exclaimed, "I you'd take this other bill." He shook his head. "Put it back in your purse. How are things out at the "Mostly that," agreed Jane. "I can see I have plenty of work ahead." "And ; ou going on nineteen. And, school at fifteen." "What for?"

"Helping support Mother." Carpy flashed with anger. "Do you nean to tell me that old curmudgeon father of yours didn't support you and your mother?"

Jane's eyes fell. She crimsoned. Then. collecting herself, she said, "I did not mean to tell you, Doctor. It slipped out. We've nearly always had to look out for ourselves-but I hate to talk about it, Doctor. Father says he's sorry. When I telegraphed him about Mother's death, he was all broken up and sent me so much money for the ex-penses that I didn't know what to do with it—though it was too late to do poor Mother any good. I know Fa-ther's eccentric, Doctor," Jane contin-ued gravely. "But that doesn't explain, to me, why everybody out here hates him. And that's what I've want-ed to ask somebody like you, Doctor, somebody who would tell me the truth.

Why is Father so disliked? Is it because he is so rich?" Dr. Carpy was taken aback. Here was an innocent and charming girl budding into a lovely womanhood, the daughter of an unscrupulous criminal and thoroughly detested cattle king, asking him to tell her why her fa-

But if he thought he could get off with such a general observation he was mistaken. Jane pursued him. "Was that the case with Father?" she asked bluntly.

"Other rich men are hated," continued Carpy, unmoved, "not because they're rich, but because of the way they got rich!"

The force of his words was not lost on his listener.

"And if a man does get rich here or anywhere else, they don't lose any time hatching up lies about him, do they?" she said indignantly. "Father warned me when I saw him at the hospital that I'd hear stories about him. But there are always two sides to stories."

She spoke with a fire that surprised even her listener, who was seasoned to surprises. "There's a chip of the old block," he said to himself. He regretted he had insinuated so much. But while he tried to soften the impact of his words, he would not entirely retreat.

"I probably ought to say. Jane, that I myself didn't get on well with your father. So my verdict might not be a fair one. Another man might give a more favorable opinion."

"What other man, Doctor?" she asked so coolly that she upset the doctor again.

"Why, offhand, I couldn't say right

"Doctor," said Van Tambel's daughter, rising, suddenly; he thought her still angry, but she really wasn't-"may I come again, just to tall with you, perhaps get a little advice-ome without excuse at all to see you-just plain come?" she asked, stiffly but impulsively.

"Why, of course you may, Jane. Why not? Come any time, all times-my latchstring's always out for you," declared Carpy, swayed by an admiration he could not resist.

"And you won't harbor any feelings against me just because you don't like my father?"

"How could I?" Doctor Carpy almost gasped with surprise at her poise. "Jane," he said, taking her hand, "just feel I'm your friend-I mean it. Sick or well, I'll be with you. I don't care a damn who your father is or was-ts that plain, girl?"

"I'm awfully grateful, Doctor," she said collectedly. "If I get into a tight place, or into trouble, I'll know where I'll have a friend to turn to.' "Don't be afraid!" exclaimed Carpy emphatically. "You'll find you'll make plenty of friends out here just as soon as you get acquainted—don't be afraid!" he repeated.

Jane was at the door. She turned. "And Doctor," she said, with seeming innocence, "try to think of the name of the man who will give that more favorable opinion."

While Bull waited for his mistress during ber talk with Carpy, be dropped into Jake Spotts' barber shop for a shave.

"Is she anythin' like old Van Tam-

"Not .. bit. She's as nice and tidy a miss as you'd want to set eyes on." "Then there's one grand big mistake somewheres," declared Spotts, defini-tively. "That damned old critter couldn't be the father of a girl like that.'

"Tut, tut, Jake," interposed Paname, rising solemnly from the chair and reaching for his collar and tie. "You promised to give up swearing."

"Well, hell, I can't quit all at once. can I?" demanded Spotts testily. "Ain't I doin' better every day?" "Got to watch you, though, I guess," observed Panama shrewdly. Bull caught sight of the man out of the corner of his eye. He was almost gigantic in proportions. Tall, stout, erect, with leonine features, shaggy brows and a heavy mop of coarse, straight, black hair, worn long and cut flatly across the back of his neck.

"Go-to-School" Knits and Prints A Rural Scene in

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DING-DONG goes the bell that of the question is self-evident. The sounds the knell of vacation as it rings in "first day of school." And again doting mothers are confronted with the problem of planning practical and as attractive as practical school wardrobes for the children of the household, for as every mother knows much of the and happiness of little girls in the classroom depend upon the feeling of self confidence which a pretty frock inspires. To help in this matter of apparelling little daughter to a nicety here are two suggestions we have to offer-knits and prints. Perhaps'it would be more accurate to say crochets as well as knits for as much crocheting is being done these days as knitting. Simply a matter of choice. To emphasize the vogue for crochets and prints we are showing three as cunning classroom outfits as ever a fond mother might hope to include in a little girl's clothes collection.

See little Miss Twelve posing to the left in the picture arrayed in an ensemble that couldn't be prettier if it tried. It is crocheted in two shades of blue knit-cro-sheen. For the encouragement of would-be crocheters who feel the urge to copy this most attractive outfit we skirt has gores of the lighter blue and the blouse hidden by the scarf is in matching light blue. It has a stylish high neck that closes with a drawstring. There are crochet buttons to add glamor to the occasion The cutey-cute bag, the scarf and the hat are crocheted to match.

In a many-piece crocheted outfit as just described, the practical side blouse, the skirt and the jacket may be worn separately, which means that any number of changes are possible, being just what is a most needful virtue for school togs.

The simplicity and practicality of the blouse-and-skirt two-piece to the right is a big argument in its favor. This crocheted suit for the grammar school Miss is a real find when it comes to appropriate dress for play or for classroom. The blouse contrasts the dark skirt which is in keeping with the present style trend to bring out striking color effects. The wide sailor collar provides a nautical touch. The gay tassel tie gives a final flourish to this most attractive back-to-school dress which is so easily crocheted of mercerized knitting and crochet cotton. We almost forgot to mention the crowning glory of these crocheted garments — they wash perfectly and with as little trouble as a gingham, a pique or any wash fabric.

Picture for yourself little daughter clad in a cunning print such as the little girl centered in the picture is wearing. The grand thing about dresses made of the new prints this season is that it is perfectly safe to buy the correct size are telling you that the stitch is very simple and goes like light-ning when once you get started. The fabric is one of the newer prints that are sanforized shrunk. It means a great deal to know that little daughter's gay print frock will not shrink out of fit in tubbing.

In the washgoods sections one finds the cunningest classroom prints imaginable such as fashions the little girl's dress pictured,

SQUIRREL IN VOGUE By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A pleasing topic of conversation among fur stylists and one that is creating no-end enthusiasm, is in regard to the revival of the ever beloved youthful-looking and won-derfully flattering gray squirrel. When you go fur-coat shopping keep this in mind and look for the charming squirrel models that are making so welcome a re-appearance. Perfect for sports and for more formal wear also, is the stunning double-duty coat pictured. It brings back squirrel worked in the striking new split skin fashion.

ALIX SCULPTURES CLOTHES TO FIGURE

Outstanding among silhouettes for fall are those drawn by Alix. Her dresses are fashioned to display every curve of a rounded, feminine form through masterly manipulation and drapery of soft, clinging fabric. This season, last, her favorite is jersey, both silk and rayon.

Some of her skirts are so full and flaring that they resemble lampshades or parachutes, while others are caught under the hem like Turkish trousers. Fall coats are cut with a swirling flare. Evening clothes, particularly, would delight an ancient Greek sculptor. Fullness is concentrated in groups of folds or gathers directly in front or back, not obscuring, but, rather, emphasizing, lovely curving outlines.

Borders of four or five bright colors emphasize the flare at the hem of many evening dresses.

Luxury and Elegance to Dominate Fall Costumes

Elegance and luxury will domi-nate the mode this autumn if the costumes already appearing are any criterion. Magnificent fabrics, beautifully cut on exquisite lines, is the recipe for late afternoon and in-formal and formal evening clothes. Typical of this trend is a white dinner ensemble with a long slim skirt of white and silver blistered crepe and a simple surplice bodice of plain silver metal cloth. The shoulders, with double puffs and the tailored lapel collar, are smart notes on the short jacket that is fitted in back and open in front.

Among the novelty buttons that have made their appearance are those that carry the various road signs for motorists.

Pleasing Stitchery

The "Duck Pond" - a quiet, shady nook where graceful ducks float to and fro, is a charming subject indeed for a wall-hanging, the detail will prove fascinating to embroider. It's no time before it is done in wool or rope silk.

In pattern 5602 you will find a transfer pattern of a wall hanging 15 by 20 inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y.
