THANKSGIVING DAY

The nation kneels as one, and offers thanks for gifts that all may share.

Ex-Senior Program

The Ex Senior's presented their program last Friday night at the high school auditorium before a large audience, and scored a decided success.

After string music by Rob Simmons and Bill Edwards was enjoyed, the program opened with "The Bachelor's Dream," Lloyd Leggett acting as the bachelor, with a supporting cast of about 22 young ladies and young men. The number was presented in a commendable manner. Then came the big laughs of the evening, in the womanless wedding. From the opening of the ceremony, with Cupid flitting gaily down the aisles, to the moment when Mr. Marshall and Miss Hunsucker were pronounced man and wife, the audience was in an uproar. Various men of the community in feminine costume added to the merriment.

The program was ably directed by Miss Myrtle Reeves, who is joined by the other Ex Seniors in appreciation of the help of the people of the community in making the program a success.

NOTICE

The play sponsored by the P. T. A., "Sky High," which was scheduled for Dec. 8, has been postponed. Instead, on Feb. 25 "Crashing Through" will be put on here. Watch for further announcements.

Mrs. Dannie Battle visited in Amarillo Friday and Saturday.

Hedley P. T. A.

Thursday night, Nov. 19, 1936, Parent and Teacher Association discussed public welfare for children. Mrs. Myrtle Tinsley was leader for the program.

Mr. Payne traced briefly the development of national and state legislation governing child labor and maintaining children whose parent did not or could not provide for them. He praised the State Parent and Teacher Conference for endorsing the Social Security Act and Child Welfare Division.

Mr. Trostle gave the parents some startling figures concerning accidents, caused chiefly by carelessness, which may be improved by education. Accidents caused a high percent of absences from school. He stressed the need of our cooperating with private and state authorities for safety of children.

Mrs. Tinsley closed the discussion by reading a very fitting poem entitled "What Is a Boy?" The theme was, "He is the man who will take your place; hence he is worth your attention."

During the business session, the committee reported on preparations for school carnival. This gala occasion is this Friday night. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. Again the Senior class was best represented in attendance.

Please do not forget that the next meeting will be Dec. 17, at 7:00 o'clock.

The Publishing Committee

New Pastor Pounded

The Methodist people and their friends tendered a reception on last Friday night in the basement of the church to the new pastor, Rev. B. J. Osborne and wife. This was in the nature of a get acquainted meeting, and consisted of songs, talks and refreshments of sandwiches and coffee. At the close of the services a table was uncovered and presented to the pastor and his good wife, which contained many varieties of good things to eat, which went in the form of a pounding to the culinary department at the parsonage.

Rev. Osborne is not a stranger to this part of the country, having served former pastorates at both McLean and Wellington. He filled the pulpit for the first time at the morning and evening services Sunday, to a large and appreciative audience.

Basketball

The Quail basketball team will play the Hedley boys here next Wednesday night. They defeated the Owls at Quail last Friday night, 25 to 12, and are said to have one of the best teams in the Panhandle. Come out and help the Owls win this one.

Social

The Senior girls class of the First Baptist Church entertained the Senior boys' class Thursday night, Nov. 19, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Wells, with a tacky party. The girls gave a style show, which was won by Imogene Bell. Numerous games were played, after which refreshments were served to about thirty guests, all of whom declared Rev. and Mrs. Wells splendid entertainers.

Practice Fields for Beginning Drivers

Cities Believe Street or Highway Is Poor Answer to "Where Can I Learn to Drive?"; Chicago Pioneers With Schools for Novices.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

"HEY, yuh crazy lug, why doncha learn to drive a car?" This irritable query, often springing from inspirations other than man's fellowship with man, habitually follows a little fender-denting in traffic or a "close shave" on the highway. But up to now there has been only one place to learn how to drive—in a street or highway.

Safety minded individuals and organizations are beginning to realize that this is about as sensible as teaching a person to swim by pushing him off the dock. Even less sensible, perhaps, for a man pushed off the dock would seldom be endangering the lives of anyone but himself. But a novice driver let loose in traffic has the lives of hundreds in his inexperienced hands.
 Now in the larger cities, notably Chicago, there is a movement under way to correct this error through the construction of practice courses and schools for beginning drivers. When beginners have finished the courses and passed all the tests they should actually be better drivers than millions who have piloted an automobile for years. And they will have had a lot of fun getting their education.

There are two of these fields now under construction in Chicago, one of them a great, 30-acre project on the lake front, designed to meet the needs of any citizen who wishes to learn, and another at one of the large high schools, designed primarily for instruction of youth.

Presents Realistic Situations.
 The lake front field, one of the finest examples of the movement in the nation, will be finished next summer. It is being built because for a period of months about 100 persons a week have been thoughtful enough of the safety of others to ask policemen, "Where can I learn to drive?" The school being built in response to their queries is made possible through the co-operation of the Works Progress administration.

Husbands and wives will be particularly interested if the driving-school idea becomes a national one, as indications are it may. Wives will no longer have to hear, "Tha-a-a-t's right! Strip the gears!" when their novice shifting is not timed just right. And the husbands will no longer squirm amid the tooting of impatient horns from behind when their spouses kill the engine.

Virtually every situation that might be met in actual driving can be rehearsed on the lake-front course when it is finished. Every hazard known to the street or highway can be reproduced.

There will be three miles of roadforget all their instruction until it is too late. Here the student will be able to see just what his car will do in a skid.

Few, fortunately, are acquainted with the terror that grips a beginner when a small child suddenly darts out in front of him on a busy street during his first or second time out alone with the car. In this school, there will be another mechanical device which will simulate a boy running across the street, or child darting out from behind a tree or car. Because it would happen when the student is not expecting it, he will be able to tell exactly how he would react under the real situation. He can then concentrate upon correcting his mistakes, if there have been any.

According to Otto K. Jelinek, the park district engineer who is in charge of the project, this will be one of the chief advantages of driving course instructions. The beginner will have to act under typical conditions that he will run into when he's out on his own.

Sixteen to Twenty Hours.
 Perhaps the most important aspects of these schools will be the attention which they will undoubtedly attract to the need for expert driving instruction which exists even among "experienced" drivers. It is designed to provide so much sport in learning that many will sign up just for the fun of it. If there's one thing the American public likes to do, that is take "tests." They can brag about their "reaction time" just as boringly as they can about their golf scores.

The Chicago lake front school will instruct persons more than sixteen years of age free of charge. The length of the course has been determined with the assistance of the National Safety council, which has aided with most of the plans. Beginners will take 16 to 20 one-hour periods of instruction.

Part of the time will be spent in classes in a building adjacent to the grounds. There the driving aspirants will be shown many hypothetical cases by the use of "dummy" cars. After that they will be turned into the field to put their lessons in to practice. For those not owning versally reckless behind the wheel—which they are not, safety statistics reveal—hope that driving lessons will become a nationally standard course in the schools.

Driving, the school feels, can't be taught from a text book, so a driving course similar to the one described above is being built. It will have a moving picture auditorium, dummy automobiles and real automobiles. There will be 1,000 feet of real macadam roadway, 20 feet wide. Along this drive, the pupil will meet many of the same things he would in the street or highway—signal lights, "S" curves, winding roads, intersections, alleys for backing practice, banked curves and all the rest.

"Courses in safe driving," says the National Safety council's magazine, Public Safety, "are being given regularly in hundreds of schools throughout the country. In many of these courses automobiles are used to give the students actual practice training. But this is the first time in the United States that high school students taking a course in safe driving will have an opportunity to learn on a practice field especially constructed and maintained for the purpose."

"Educational experts agree that the principle behind the method is Here the driver would encounter every type of street intersection, curve, highway sign and stop and go device that he would meet in actual driving conditions. The school will be designed to make competent drivers out of those who cannot operate cars.

way in all. There will be 2,650 feet—about half a mile—devoted to high speed road. A large field will accommodate those on their first or second lessons. "Parking on a dime" will be taught in a special area with all kinds of parking conditions reproduced.

Weather Conditions Simulated.
 Enrollees in the course will be shown how to make a grade railroad crossing, and there will be a real crossing for them to pass. Synchronized "stop and go" traffic lights will greet them at intersections. There will be a service station where they may learn to order what's needed to keep the bus going, and see that they get what they ask for.
 Not even the weather will escape being a lesson in the course. There will be a dark tunnel for the reproduction of night driving conditions. Mechanical devices will simulate fog and rain.

Beginning drivers are perhaps frightened by nothing so much as skidding on wet or icy pavements. They'll be given an opportunity to try a little skidding—under safe conditions—in the Chicago school. A "skid bowl" will produce all types of pavements for this purpose. Most drivers ordinarily are told what they should do when the car starts skidding, but skidding happens so quickly and unexpectedly that they their own cars, automobiles will be provided; it is the feeling of the sponsors that nearly every American, whether he owns a car or not, some time finds himself in a situation that would be improved if he knew how to drive. Students will of course be allowed to use their own cars if they prefer.

 After completing the course, the student is "graduated" and presented with a diploma which he may wave thenceforth in the face of any who belittle his driving skill.
 Exhibits of the developments in automotive and traffic engineering will be shown in the buildings at the school. These will also house a testing laboratory, a library of traffic and safety engineering and a public auditorium where accident prevention programs will be presented.
 In Lane Technical high school in the same city it was discovered that nine out of every ten students didn't really know how to drive a car. Some could shift gears, step on the starter and make a car move if necessary, but there were only about 10 per cent who might have been classified as good drivers.
High School Blazes Trail.
 As a result the high school this fall will begin to include in its instruction courses lessons in automobile driving. Those who are inclined to believe that youths are uni-

The basketball spirit is in the air at Hedley again. We played our first game of the season
Wednesday night.

Our boys won by a score of 20 which put the Owls ahead and aroused the spirit of what they could do. The boys proved that a five man defense could not bluff them, and they piled up the scores.

Even though the girls were de-

FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA: MORE POWER TO THEM

The girl—she weighed perhaps a hundred pounds, and was as pretty as a Shasta daisy—on that same afternoon had led a thousand-pound steer into the ring.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THE other night I sat at dinner between a girl of fourteen and a boy perhaps three years older. It was a large dinner; it was served in a magnificent club dining room, and attended by perhaps eight hundred; it had speeches and music and flowers and fine food to make it formal. Yet four-fifths of the guests were country-bred youngsters who had not yet reached their eighteenth year, and some were real little rustics. For example, the group that went up in the elevator with me had never been in an elevator before, and were in a great state of laughing excitement over it.

They came from several western states to California for an annual meeting; these eager, brown, unsophisticated happy children were appointed delegates to a serious convention. Just what that convention was anyone in the neighborhood of my little girl on the left and my tall boy on the right could not have been long in doubt.

They were cattle raisers; they were experienced stock hands at fourteen and seventeen. They leaned across me to discuss food and weight, and what steers lost in railway handling, and where they were going to get their calves or lambs or shoats to raise as possible prize-winners next year. The girl—she weighed perhaps a hundred pounds, and was as pretty as a Shasta daisy—on that same afternoon had led a thousand-pound steer into the ring, a magnificent prize-winning animal she had raised from a feeble little calf. The boy had reared the finest animal in all the show; a great Hereford whose horns had been hung with ribbons and whose mighty neck had been wreathed with roses. Bought for sixty dollars as a calf, groomed and fed and exercised by his owner, taken hot food on cold winter nights and guided to shady creekside meadows in the hot Yolo Valley summer, this tremendous brute had become as gentle as a kitten, and followed his owner into the prize ring without a halter—to a halter, by the way, these infants professionally allude to as a "hackamore."

And who are they and what do they do and what is it all about? Well, these were questions I had to ask myself on the occasion of my being their guest, and the answers are fresh in my mind. They are all members—indeed, they are only the delegates that represent unsee hundreds of members of an organization that calls itself "The Future Farmers of America." They have an emblem, a creed, a constitution; their purpose is the study of agriculture. Affiliated with it, or a part of it in this part of the world at least, is a society called the "Four H Club." The four branches of it are health, head, hand and heart, and these more than six hundred children certainly brought glowing, brown-cheeked bright-eyed health to this dinner, and brought their hands, heads and hearts as well.

Each of them had in some manner procured a young animal about a year, or ten months ago; a calf, a lamb, a suckling pig. Each had then assumed the responsibility of raising this animal for the meat market. Sometimes it was on Dad's stock farm, sometimes on a ranch given over entirely to fruit or wheat, sometimes on a three-acre place on the borders of a country town. Each studied government bulletins, wrote to authorities, mixed food, carried pails of water, watched carefully for symptoms of sickness, estimated carefully the values of weight, measurements, quality of coat and hoofs, the placement of flesh.

"There's where you want the weight," an eager girl of fifteen said to me, showing me a photograph of herself and her "pen" of three ribbon-winning yearling porkers. "I'm lucky with stock." "I was offered a job tonight by Burgenmaster!" he added proudly. "Burgenmaster's the biggest stock man up our way and he says he'll pay me a hundred a month to run his sheep business."

Two of the prize entries were made by orphan boys whose only home is the Salvation Army Shelter. This place is up in a particularly beautiful California valley, and I am shortly going to accept an invitation to visit it, because it sounds like a real home. Indeed, in many a home with a real mother and father in it these freckled, proud little stock-raisers wouldn't have found the freedom, the fresh air, the responsibility, the delight of having and raising their own fine farmyard animals. So score one more orchid up for the wonderful old Army, that keeps its feet so close to the good sound earth even while walking with its straw-bonnetted heads in Heaven.

We have a good many magnificent movements for child-saving and child-development in America; we have more of this sort of thing than has any other nation in the world. Our children are our wealth, and we know it, and from top-milk and scraped carrots, all the long way through struggles with tonsils, adenoids, teeth-straightening, posture, skin, hair we do our best for them. They have plunges and gyms and sport fields at school, they have folk-dancing to limber them up, harmonics and dramatics and drawing classes; they have clinics and libraries, Scout and Campfire clubs, outings and swims and picnics innumerable. Parents and teachers lie awake at night planning fresh advantages for the children.

But this junior livestock exhibition association is new to me. I wish it had been in existence when the many boys I have raised were small. For, while the boy thinks he is raising a steer, the little animal, dependent upon the child for care and food, grows strong and straight; but the boy gains the more important lesson of kindness, learns to accept responsibility, learns to remember feeding hours and stable regulations. In short, at an age when most children are unthinkingly taking everything and giving nothing to the world in return, these youngsters have already enrolled themselves among the producers, the givers to life, the builders of the great agricultural country that is farming America. With dignity, with enthusiasm, with intelligence and with real ideals of service this young army is growing in our midst—it has 83,000 members now, and branches in forty-seven states, beside Hawaii and Porto Rico. Which state isn't in, by the way?

And in these days when we hear so much half-baked un-American doctrine, when infants in High School babble admiringly of Russia and girls in their teens murmur that India and China, as older civilizations, have the real secret of philosophy it is as refreshing as a breeze right off the Rockies to meet these sun-burned, absorbed, loyal sons and daughters.

Stock raising has its tragedies, for these animals are raised for beef, for mutton, for pork, and they no sooner reach a point of perfection than they are killed. A one-ton steer, a two-hundred pound hog, will never make ideal household pets. Yet naturally the owners do make them pets, and even prizes and cheers don't immediately cure the heartache those owners feel when the big brutes are led trustingly away to the slaughter. Local butchers bid for the prime meats; the thousand-pound yearling steer brought his owner $750.

But the tall boy was very serious as he accepted praises, blue ribbons, silver cups. "They could have 'em all back again," he muttered to a fellow-farmer of seventeen. "If it'd put Blackie back in his shed tonight! I keep feeling as if I'd thrown him down."

However, by this time all the young stock-raisers are probably over the pangs of parting, and busily at work on new lambs, new shoats, new calves again. And my advice to all mothers of restless farm and small-town boys is to get them into this movement. No boy in the world would be hurt by adopting the slogan of the Future Farmers of America:

"Learning to do,
Doing to learn,
Earning to live,
Living to serve."

Wives, Know Yourself!

Accurate Analysis Will Do Much to Overcome Difficulty in Wedded Life

SPEAKING on the question of trial marriages, a well known writer said, "There should be no need for trial when two people know their own abilities and have measured themselves accurately. Two people who understand themselves will never, I believe, have any difficulty living happily together after marriage."

That is a new slant on the question of success in marriage, supplements a woman writer of national fame. Not "Know thy husband"—or "wife," but "know thyself!"

And, come to think of it, isn't most of the discontent and dissatisfaction in marriage traceable to ideas of ourselves—that may be misconceptions, no less than our illusions about the other person? How many women's dissatisfaction with their husband has as its source the thought of all they gave up to marry him, all they "might have had" if they had married a certain other man?

How many women's discontent with the role of wife and mother springs from the thought of how much more fascinating pastimes they might have had if they had followed that career?

How many girls' impossible expectations of a fulltime lover and Prince Charming originates in an exaggerated notion of their own devastating beauty and charm?

If all discontented wives would look deeply into themselves, measure themselves, stop fooling themselves, many might discover that the other man they might have married is a self-nurtured illusion; that the career of their dreams is not a soft snap and a joy forever; but a grueling, exhausting job which might have worn them out if they had qualified for it, which they probably would have been unable to do; that they themselves are neither devastating beauties nor always charming, but women who are frequently disappointing and difficult to live with. They might discover and admit to themselves that they are greatly in debt to their husbands for many things that make life easier and better and more worthwhile—that they would not get along so well without them.

Then they might think more of doing their part of trying to make those husbands happy. And that effort on the part of one must inevitably go a long way toward a mutually happy and successful marriage.

Thanksgiving—
An American Day
By RAYMOND FITZJARRALD
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Thanksgiving is recognized as one of the most characteristic and appropriate of all our American National Holidays.

Why? Probably because the American people, through the period of their nation's existence, have had more to be thankful for than the people of any other land.

Not in the material sense alone! The pioneers who celebrated our first Thanksgiving Day expressed gratitude not only for bountiful harvests, but also for the freedom with which Divine Providence had rewarded their courage and labors.

That spirit endures. Every Presidential proclamation of a Day of National Thanksgiving has sounded the same note of reverence.

Thus, through the years, Thanksgiving Day has become not only a national expression of gratitude, but a re-dedication to the spirit which lived in its strong and valiant founders.

The seeds of freedom sown by them have borne a harvest more bountiful than their own crops. Our reasons for national gratitude have grown—not diminished.

They gave thanks for fruitful harvests, we for a bountiful supply not only of the necessities of life, but of comforts far beyond their modest aspirations.

They gave thanks for liberty to worship as they chose. We give thanks not only for freedom of religion, but for freedom of speech and of action and of opportunity as well.

Many nations cannot do this today. The iron hand of Dictatorship or the red blight of Communism, the terrors of war, from without or within—all have robbed them of the security and the liberties which our fathers established as an American birthright.

Our duty is not limited to appreciation, however grateful, of these blessings. It involves their preservation as well.
