C. N. Munn

We regret to report the death of C. N. Munn of Goodnight, who passed away there Wednesday, Dec. 2. He was the father of Bob Munn and Mrs. Roy Swafford of Amarillo, former Hedley residents. J. K. Caldwell and wife and T. E. Caldwell and family attended the funeral services at Goodnight Thursday.

Estlack-Scroggins

Miss Ruby Dell Scroggins and George Wayne Estlack, both of Clarendon, were united in marriage Saturday, Nov. 28. Wallace Layton pastor of the Church of Christ there, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Faye Scroggins of Pyote. She attended the Clarendon high school and West Texas College at Canyon.

The groom is the youngest son of Editor and Mrs. J. C. Estlack of the Donley County Leader. He is a graduate of the Clarendon high school and junior college, and is employed as advertising manager for the Leader.

While congratulating the happy couple, we might mention that this is the third son of Mr. and Mrs. Estlack to assume the "holy handcuffs of matrimony" this year. They are all good boys, and we think the brides, as well as the bridegrooms, might be complimented for their choices.

Gandy-Hammond

Mineral Wells, Dec. 5.—Miss Mary Hammond of Austin and Dr. Joe Gandy of Lipan and Mineral Wells will be married in Austin today at the home of the bride elect's aunt. The couple will be attended by Dr. Edward Yeager of Mineral Wells and Miss Clara B. Caldwell of Dallas.

After a trip to Mexico, Dr. and Mrs. Gandy will make their home in Lipan.

Miss Hammond is the daughter of Mrs. Lucy Hammond and attended the University of Texas and the University of Arkansas.

Dr. Gandy, who is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Gandy of Lipan, attended Texas Christian University and the University of Texas. He was house surgeon at the Southern Pacific Hospital in Houston for two years—Fort Worth Star Telegram.

Dr. Gandy is a nephew of Zeb Mitchell and has a number of friends here, having visited Hedley on several occasions.

Hedley friends will join the former in extending congratulations and best wishes to Dr. and Mrs. Gandy.

Everyone is cordially invited to be present. Come out and bring your book, no matter what kind you have, and we will use them if you wish.

We hope to have our visitors back again. Let's all be on hand and make this the best one yet.

Sanders-Burns

Miss Ora Lee Burns and Arthur Sanders were united in marriage Saturday night, Dec. 5, with Rev. M. E. Wells reading the ceremony. They were married at the former W. E. Luttrell place, where they will make their home. Only a few relatives and close friends witnessed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of R. L. Burns of Denton, and attended school at Kirkland. She has lived in Hedley about three years, and has for some time been employed at the Cooper Hotel.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reed Sanders of this city. He has spent most of his life in Hedley, and was a member of the 1931 graduating class of Hedley high school. He is at present engaged in farming.

The Informer joins their many other friends in extending best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Sanders.

Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man.
A three-quarter wife may be no wife at all if she nags her husband seven days out of every month.
For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three decades of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."
Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and go "Smiling Through."

WHEREAS, on the 13th day of October A. D. 1936, The State of Texas, for use and benefit of Hedley Independent School District as plaintiff in Cause No. 1913, recovered a judgment in the 100th District Court of Donley County against Mission Development Company, a corporation as defendant in the sum of Three Hundred Twelve and 02/100 Dollars, for taxes, together with the legal rate of interest, penalties and costs due on the lands, or lots, hereinafter described, and whereas, said judgment decree directs the foreclosure of the lien created, established and continued on and against the said property hereinafter described, by reason of the levy and assessment of taxes on and against the same and the delinquency thereof, and said taxes remaining unpaid and due to The State of Texas for use and benefit of Hedley Independent School District Donley County, and as the said lien now exists and at any time heretofore existed by reason of such levy, assessment and delinquency, and on the dates for the years 1930 to 1935 both inclusive against the said property as hereinafter described, the same lying and being situated in the County of Donley and State of Texas, to-wit:

All lot Number ten (10) block Number three (3) and all lots numbers Twenty three and twenty four (23 and 24) block Thirteen (13) of the town of Hedley, Donley County, Texas, according to the duly recorded map and plat of said town.

THEREFORE, YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED, that you seize, levy upon and advertise for sale as under execution the hereinabove described lands, lots, tracts or parcels of land, subject to the right of the defendant or any person having an interest in said property, to redeem the same at any time before said lands or lots are sold hereunder as provided by law, by paying to the Tax Collector of Hedley Independent School District Donley County all the said taxes due thereon, together with the legal rate of interest thereon, and penalty provided for by law, and all costs authorized by law; and that you sell said property to the highest bidder for cash to satisfy said judgment, penalties, interest and costs, as under execution in cases of foreclosure; and if there be no bidders for such lands or lots, the County Attorney of Donley County shall bid said property off to the Hedley Independent School District for the amount of all taxes, penalties, interest and all costs adjudged against said property, and in the absence of the County Attorney, the Sheriff of said Donley County is authorized to bid to the Hedley Independent School District where there are no bidders; but if the defendant, Mission Development Company, a corporation or its attorney shall at any time before the sale file with the Sheriff or other officer in whose hands this order of sale is placed a written request that the property herein described be divided and sold in less tracts than the whole, together with a description of said divisions or subdivisions, then you are commanded to sell the lands in such divisions or subdivisions as the defendant may request, and in such case you shall sell only as many of such divisions or subdivisions, as near as may be, to satisfy this judgment, interest, penalty and costs, and all court costs.

Christmas Book Shower

Basketball

The Hedley Owls welcomed the Quail Coons to the Hedley gym Dec. 3, to get revenge as Quail defeated the Owls over there. The girls lost to the Quail girls, a score of 21-9, but the boys played a much better game here than they did at Quail. The score was 7-7. The Quail coach did not want to play the tie off.

The games around the Hedley spirit. We would like to see you at every game we play.

The girls game started at 7 o'clock Friday night, Dec. 4. The girls played a good game the first half. The score was Hedley 9 Lela Lake 7. In the third quarter Sue Beth fouled out. In the fourth quarter the Lela Lake girls were pepped up and played circles around the Hedley girls. The game ended Hedley 10, Lela 19. The Owlets had two of their players out while caused a hardship for the rest of the team.

The lineup for the Hedley boys was: Fletcher Sharp, center, Craig Johnson, guard, Willis Thomas, forward, L. D. Messer, guard, Clay Plunk, forward.

Winfred McPherson was absent from the game because of illness. The team is built up around him. The boys played a good game the first half. The score was 5-5. The second half was sorry. The final score was Hedley, 6-Lela Lake, 14.

A Christmas Tree for the Library

How would you like to play Santa Claus to an eager boy or girl this yuletide? Then you may give him a book such as Tom Sawyer, Peter Pan, Abraham Lincoln, or one of your choice. You can not understand what a treat this would be unless you were a student trying to get a book to read to secure required points in English or to read for pleasure only to be told at the window of the library that your request was not on the shelf or the one copy was checked out!

Now, we have this suggestion to offer as a remedy for the above disappointment. With the aid of interested patrons and friends, the four classes of the high school wish to sponsor a campaign for our library which is in dire need of new reading material. Only a few copies have been added since the 1919 Study Club gave us their collection, and these copies were donated. None have been bought because of limited funds. With a minimum cost for each of us, our library can be made adequate if all will help as faithfully as they did with the carnival. You may give a book you have, buy a new one, or give the price of one, which is from fifty cents up.

This is our plan: During the week Dec. 14-18, pupils will be given blanks ready for donors to sign and these will be pasted in the books. These books or donations will be collected by students and checked to the class sponsors until Friday morning, Dec. 18; then a complete count of all books will be made and the class making the largest collection will receive a reward worth working for.

These are the regulations: All books must either be approved by librarian sponsor or named on the recreational reading lists issued by the State Department of Public Instruction.

Don't fail to give to a good cause, your school library, this Christmas!

Many of our high school boys celebrated Thanksgiving by journeying to neighboring cities.

Coach is some ball player. Say he even made a ringer.

Boy! that was some carnival, wasn't it?

James Smith, I think you will agree with Mrs. Owen when you have an argument with her.

I heard that commercial law doesn't meet holidays as that would not be legal.

Clay, I heard that some of our younger boys liked to whoopee up in town on Thanksgiving night. Were you stump speaking for your queen or were you playing Indians?

Is it true that Doyle Messer hards in messy papers to Mrs. Owen because he wishes to live up his name?

May we give you
six dollars?

NOT in cash, of course. We're speaking of its equivalent.

But here is something for you to consider: Every year this newspaper brings you at least three outstanding novels in serial form. Purchased as books each would cost not less than $2, making a total expenditure of at least $6 per year.

Like yourself, we could find plenty of uses for that $6. Some member of the family is always in need of a new pair of shoes or some other necessity. But at the same time your requirements for good reading material must be met. By accepting these three novels each year we feel you are treating yourself to real enjoyment, at the same time giving your purse a substantial boost.

These novels are a source of constant pride to us. Every year we select them from the season's most outstanding best sellers, offered in serial form by a large newspaper syndicate organization. We'd like to feel that you—as a subscriber—always look forward to reading the coming installment in the next issue. It gives us a great satisfaction to know that here is another reason why our paper is popular in the home.

You are invited to begin reading our novels now. These regular brief visits to fictionland will prove a delightful interlude from your work-a-day activities. And it will make us happy to know that you are getting enjoyment from them.

NEVER MIND ABOUT THE SMELL

Without Sulphur There Would Be No Automobiles, Movies, Air-planes or Telephones; War Clouds Increase Its Importance.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

MOST of us think of sulphur, if we think of it at all, as something with a bad smell, but useful for putting on a match to make it light when struck. And those who are old enough to remember when grandma administered sulphur and molasses as a spring tonic to spruce us up after the rigors of a hard winter (the winters, of course, were several times as severe in the Old Days) remember that it didn't taste so well, either.

Yet a world without sulphur would be a world without automobiles, newspapers, motion pictures, airplanes, telephones and countless other miracles which we now take as a matter of course. It is that important to industry, and is rapidly assuming comparable importance in agriculture.

Man has known about sulphur for 4,000 years, yet never before has it been as big news as it is today. One of the chief reasons for this is the ever-present war scare in Europe, and the trend among nations, especially those controlled by dictatorships, to strive for national self-sufficiency.

This self-sufficiency is particularly sought with respect to sulphur. For the golden-magic substance is all-important in the form of sulphuric acid, used in munitions, and the modern implements of transportation and communication which require it are even more important.

Shortage of sulphur, it is believed, was one of the prime causes of Germany's losing the World War; she has none in elemental form, but produces some as a by-product of smelter gas. Germany today is speeding up production to build reserve supplies of sulphur. So is Russia.

Foreigners Prize Mineral.

American sulphur producers are responsible for the statement that Italy is setting aside a fund of 30,000,000 lire to be used in promoting her sulphur industry. Since Italy has some of the world's largest deposits of sulphur on the island of Sicily, sanctions had little or no effect in depriving her of it, but sanctions did cut off her exports with consequent benefit to the other sulphur-producing countries.

Australia has decided to pay her producers a bounty of $7 a ton, and Chile, $5.15 a ton. Argentina seeks to reduce imports by charging a duty of $8.50 a ton; Mexico levies $4.20 a ton, and Spain and Turkey forbid sulphur imports altogether.

All these factors have of course affected the production of sulphur in the United States. The nation's chief commercial deposits of brimstone sulphur lie on the Gulf coast in Texas and Louisiana, where 40 per cent of the world's supply once was produced. This production has dropped to 26 per cent, as the United States has no tariff barriers on sulphur as the other nations do.

Large scale production will save the sulphur industry of this country from the hazards of foreign competition, so long as no additional burden such as excessive taxation is put upon them, the Texas and Louisiana companies claim.

An idea of the extent of the sulphur production today is gleaned from the fact that the nation's manufacturers used 1,400,000 tons of it last year. But of rapidly increasing significance is its use in agriculture, which consumed 275,000 tons for fertilizers, in soil treatments and in fighting insects.

facture of fire extinguishers; yet it is used in explosives because of its inflammability. Only 175,000 tons of sulphuric acid were used in the manufacture of explosives last year, incidentally, indicating that its peacetime importance outweighs its war value.

The memory of man does not hold the complete story of the romance of sulphur.

"Geologists believe the Texas and Louisiana formations were begun thousands of years before the first man walked on the globe," said Mr. Williams. "Egyptian artists knew and used sulphur in their pigments 1,600 years before Christ. Gebir, one of the earliest of alchemists, set forth the theory that sulphur was the constituent of all matter."

Even the smell we talked about earlier was known as early as 1000 B. C., Mr. Williams disclosed.

Color Lures Alchemists.

"For," he said, "Homer relates how Odysseus, having slain the suitors for his wife's hand, cleansed the air of evil and purified his house by burning sulphur."

And now 26 centuries later we still use it as a fumigant!

Pliny, the Roman historian, was one of the first to write of the medicinal properties of sulphur. The alchemists of medieval times believed that its golden hue was significant to their artless art, and futilely combined it with the baser metals in the search for a synthetic gold. If they only had known what "gold" they had at their fingertips!

For years the only known brimstone deposits were in Sicily, where sulphur was mined as early as the Fifteenth century. When, in 1735, the process of manufacturing sulphuric acid was discovered, it became the island's chief industry, employing 250,000 persons.

The French were responsible for the spread of sulphur production to other countries. In 1839 they negotiated with the Sicilians and managed to gain control of the island's sulphur, then raised the price from $25 to $75 a ton. Other nations secretly put their greatest scientists to work to find a way to extract the mineral from pyrites ore.

How Sulphur Is Mined.

The United States for a time was in a hard way to produce sulphur at home. Most of its sulphur lies in formations called salt "domes" from 800 to 1,500 feet between swampy, boggy land in an area about 75 miles wide, adjacent to the Gulf of Mexico. Finding it is a gamble for there are no divining rods to tell in advance whether the amount of sulphur in a dome is sufficient for commercial mining purposes. Of the 200 salt domes explored in the Texas-Louisiana field only nine have been found commercially practicable. But it was not until 1903 that the means for extracting this sulphur from its deep lair under the bogs was found.

A great scientist, Dr. Herman Frasch, who was prominent in the early history of our oil industry, solved the problem. In the Frasch process large quantities of superheated water at 315-320 degrees Fahrenheit are pumped into the earth. The water melts the sulphur, which is then drawn off and stored in huge vats, where it is allowed to solidify before being broken up for shipment.

Here is a rough outline of the process: With an oil-drilling rig a hole is sunk into the sulphur-bearing rock. A 10-inch pipe is then placed in the hole, and within this pipe an 8-inch pipe, with perforations extending about 35 feet from the bottom. A 4-inch pipe is placed within the 8-inch pipe and allowed to extend within a short distance of the bottom. Finally a 1 1/4-inch pipe is sunk within the 4-inch pipe and brought to within about 200 feet of the bottom of the deposit.

Air Forces Sulphur.

Superheated water, forced down the space between the 8-inch and 4-inch pipes, penetrates the sulphur deposits through the perforations in the larger pipe. The sulphur, which is of greater specific gravity than water, melts and sinks through the water to the bottom of the well, where the weight of the water forces it up the 4-inch pipe for several hundred feet. Compressed air, introduced through the 1 1/4-inch pipe forces it the rest of the way to the surface.

In a cylindrical tank at a relay station the air is removed from the sulphur, and it is sent along to a steam-heated, concrete and iron reservoir. Centrifugal pumps discharge it from the reservoir through heated pipes into storage vats out of doors. These are often 250 feet long, 60 feet wide and 30 feet deep. They are made of light wood and are taken away after the mineral solidifies.

Where the Frasch process must be used — and this includes virtually all of the sulphur deposits in the United States — capital expenditures are of necessity much greater than in countries where the deposits lie near the surface of solid land and may be mined in much the same fashion as iron, copper and other ores.

JEALOUSY THE PITFALL OF THE MARRIED THIRTIES

You've grown away from me, Harold," she presently finds opportunity to say to him tremblingly. "Oh, yes you have; don't try to deny it! You never want to do anything with me any more."

WHEN women speak of jealousy in marriage they usually think of that rather flattering and exciting condition of affairs when the adoring male smashes china and grinds his teeth while muttering: "You shan't dance with him again, you provoking little beauty, or I'll break every bone in your exquisite body!"

This is the jealousy of movies and novels. Many a wife of a quiet, reasonable, unjealous husband secretly wishes that something of this sort would break the calm of her domestic security. It might be rather fun to be married to a jealous brute for a while.

"He's insanely jealous!" reiterates the idiot girl in "June Moon" complacently. The audience suspects by this time that the man is completely done with her, but she goes on with her placid repetition. "He's insanely jealous!"

Women rather like to think their men are jealous; jealous in that exciting, dramatic way that is a tacit way of saying: "All the other men admire my wife. But not one of them can get her away from me!"

But this isn't real jealousy. This, like so many of the other things we take seriously when we are young and in love, is only one more mask held up before the deceitful face of Mother Nature. It is one more maneuver to make men and women attractive to each other. Courtship is full of these little deceptions; his sweetheart's stammer will enchant a man, her business inefficiencies amuse him, her tardiness seems to him just an indication that she is no more than a delightful baby. But in a wife, stammering and extravagance and tardiness somehow lose their charm.

And so with jealousy. A piquant sauce for the engagement, it proves much too hot a seasoning for the everyday fare of matrimony. It becomes tiresome, stupid, cumbersome, a continual annoyance—an unnecessary trial added to the real problems of life. The wives of jealous men carry a double burden—they have to give up much that would be pleasant and valuable in their lives; friendships, contacts, responsibilities, opportunities for self-expression and development must all be sacrificed. "Because you know how Harold is. It makes him perfectly WRETCHED to have me interested in anything but him."

But the husbands of jealous women have an even harder time. Women are more often jealous than men; they have more imagination when they are jealous, and they have more time to think about it. The result—or rather one result of this state of affairs—is the shoal of letters I receive from completely wretched wives.

Completely wretched because jealousy is really an insidious poison, actually affecting the body, causing a total upset of the digestive and eliminative functions and a sort of flurry of the brain. Women, seized by a jealous rage, temporarily go mad. They watch, listen, search for evidence in a sort of silent fury; everything the most incontinent man does or says is construed into a damaging admission. The woman loses all her charm, all serenity, all reason. She defeats her own ends by making herself homely, dull, unattractive.

Even worse than this occasional burst of sex-jealousy is that more subtle form the green-eyed monster takes when a wife becomes jealous of her husband's life. Not of any other woman, particularly, not of his mother or sister or old-sweet-heart friend; but of everything.

This phase usually comes along in the thirties. A woman's life is full of physiological and psychological crises, and this is one of them. Having had everything her own way for thirty-five years, she feels a sudden lull in her affairs, and when she realizes that that lull has not come to her husband she resents the situation, and acute and sometimes fatal jealousy is the result.

Her household is running smoothly, her children are in schools, her life is bounded by a comfortable home, a car, a club, buying heavy clothes in autumn, light clothes in spring, making club reports and hospital calls, selecting Christmas presents and ordering dinners, growing older every minute—good heavens, how boring it all is! Her friends are all doing the same thing. There's no escape; the joy and glamour and excitement of life are over, and she is just that nice Mrs. Harold Baker whose little girls are finishing grammar school.

Profoundly discontent, she looks at her partner, that pleasant young Harold Baker that she met at Rhoda's fifteen years ago, and perceives, to her resentment that he is just reaching the point when life is all pleasant and satisfying to him. The business that was for so many years a question of hard work and humiliations, is running more smoothly; Baker is one of our best men, Baker is the man for the promotion. The children, who used to cause such anxious consultations, whose coughs and measles and bumps and naughtiness broke in to so many plans by day and so many hours of sleep by night, are friendly little craft sailing their own waters now.

He plays good bridge, his golf at least provides endless hours of companionship with his kind in the open air, he goes on business trips, hunting, fishing week-ends. He goes to stag dinners at the club. Healthy and interested and busy, in his most, most invigorated mood, he comes down to a pale, fretted wife at breakfast. He's going to lunch with Smith and clinch that order, he's going up with Jones to look at that new club site; they'll get a bite of dinner at the club. He naps over the day's comic strip; he approves of the stock market; he has a little flirtation with his younger daughter, who ends it with an, "I love you, Dad," that sends him away humming.

His wife looks on at all this with a jaundiced eye. Stag dinners and lodge meetings and golf games and bridge clubs indeed!

"You've grown away from me, Harold," she presently finds opportunity to say to him tremblingly. "Oh, yes you have; don't deny it! You never want to do anything with me any more. You've always got plans of your own. I'm at home with the children, cooking and making beds."

"This goes on for a long time. It makes the man uncomfortable; he knows it isn't fair somehow, but he doesn't know what to do about it. It makes the woman even more miserable than she was, and, having manufactured the situation, she proceeds to enlarge upon it until she feels like an actual martyr because she is self-centered and jealous, and her husband happens to be a normal human being who has earned his freedom, earned his recreations and satisfactions, and is enjoying them."

The answer is that we women have to adjust ourselves to the changing conditions of our lives once in about every ten years. We have to examine our own souls severely, in the light of truth and common sense, and ask ourselves if we are behaving like women or like fools. We have to put gold into the bank of life before we can begin to draw upon it. No use, at thirty-three, to long to be the bride of twenty-three again, or the girl of thirteen, or the toddling baby of three. We have to go on!

What is that gold? Well, to some of us it seems more precious than ever the younger coin did. It is the gold of a ripely developed character, in the years that are the very bloom of womanhood. It is the gold of a life that sings; sings over garden work or the writing of poetry, sings over picnics with the dear brown, long-legged children who are growing up so fast; sings in contact with other lives—a mother's, sisters', friends' lives, and takes its part in helping them. Any woman, with the usual equipment of a child or two and a car and good neighbors, can become so busy that she will listen but abstractedly to her husband's planning; happy to be included when she is included, secretly a little grateful when she is left free for her own, all-important activities.

Why admit to a man that you want more of his time and interest than it is natural for him to give you? Why have so little pride? Why acknowledge that your happiness depends upon someone else, that you are not equal to solving the problem that each one of us must eventually meet alone?

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

IT'S said that Fred Astaire has been much upset over the fact that his radio programs haven't come up to expectations. In fact, it's reported that he wanted to drop the whole thing—but just try to get out of a contract to broadcast, once you're in it! He's continuing—and if they'll just give him the right scripts to work with there's no reason why he shouldn't be tremendously successful.

You may recall that Maurice Chevalier felt that same way about his broadcasts—but they were popularly considered fops right to the last, if the opinion of the great American public that stayed home and listened to them counts for anything. Al Jolson was pretty unhappy about his first programs, but he gritted his teeth and went right on.

Clark Gable abandoned his New York vacation after three days of being almost torn apart by autograph seekers and enthusiastic fans, and Carole Lombard didn't even start for the East after hearing what had happened to him.

Incidentally, during his brief stay in New York a girl who's part of the movie business there noticed a man on the street who looked very much like the famous Clark — face, figure, even clothes bore a strong resemblance. The only difficulty was that he was blacked up—she insists that the man was a white man who'd used burnt cork.

Clark Gable

There's a new radio program on a coast-to-coast hookup that ought to interest everybody who has ideas for such programs. It was originated by Octavius Roy Cohen, the famous story writer, and it's called "Agony Column." It is based on letters from people who write in giving problems they want solved.

For instance, here's an example. A boy wrote in, saying that for years he had been searching for the perfect girl. He met her on a cruise. They didn't even tell their names—just used silly nicknames. But—the ship was the Morro Castle, which caught fire at sea two years ago, causing the loss of so many lives. He doesn't know whether she was saved or not. They were to tell their real names when they landed. So he doesn't even know her name. And he wants to find her.

If you hadn't realized how rapidly Robert Taylor has climbed the rungs of the ladder leading to movie popularity, just consider the fact that he has signed a new seven-year contract which will bring him $2,000 a week at first, and during the last two years will add $5,000 to his bank account each week. All this as the result of a year's work—for until a year or so ago he was just a minor player. Small wonder that ambitious youngsters want to go into the movies!

Ruth Chatterton's buying a new plane; she just can't get enough of flying when she pilots her own. Incidentally, doesn't she do a grand piece of work in "Dodsworth"? Never has she given a better performance. And of course it's an exceptionally good picture—the kind that makes audiences applaud when it turns out the way they want it to.

It's reported that James Cagney has had so much difficulty with his first picture made under his new affiliations that he'd be glad to bury the hatchet and go back to working for Warner Brothers.

Which brings up the fact that Bette Davis has shown that she can take it. After losing her legal fight with Warner Brothers and being forbidden to make pictures in England, she announced that she'd come home and go back to work as if there had never been any trouble.

ODDS AND ENDS: . . . Greta Garbo certainly has changed; she goes to parties occasionally nowadays. . . . She may do a modern picture to follow "Camille," before she gets into costume for "Reverend," which is laid in the time of Napoleon. . . . If you think Colonel Stoopnagle and Budd sound a bit breathless when they begin their broadcasts, remember that they've probably been practicing jig steps to Don Voorhees' music by way of warming up. . . . Paramount plans to have Bing Crosby make pictures with plots and sing just incidentally, from now on. . . . At least one of the big motion picture companies has been signing up young actors and actresses on 30-day contracts—but paying them no money; just keeping them from signing with anyone else, while the company decides whether to use them or not.

League Speeches

Speeches are translated at the League of Nations meetings in Geneva through the use of a speech translator. Wires connected with a microphone in front of the speaker carry his voice to expert translators, each of whom can translate the language used into a second language. These interpreters speak into telephones connected with earphones on delegates' desks. By turning a knob they can hear the language they understand.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

The Chic New Princess Silhouettes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SO FAR as the silhouette of the autumn and winter frock, coat or ensemble, is concerned, anything in the way of startling innovations is apt to happen these days, in fact is happening. The whole scheme of things is changing. For one thing it is back to short wide-at-hemline skirts that current fashion has dared to go—fourteen inches from the floor if you care to follow the extreme. The present wide swing hemlines are indeed a radical departure from the sleek sheath skirts of past-season vogue. Take note of the word "swing," if you please, for it is a word that is a big word in connection with the newer fashions. Your costume to be chic must have "it" (meaning swing) and it is the new wide-at-hemline skirts that are giving exactly the style-right swing in demand.

To recount further the changing moods of the mode, comes now into the style picture high-waist, square-neck, puff-sleeve directoire trends, also quaint Victorian fashions, also Spanish theme, likewise picturesque Tyrolean costumes and that which is perhaps making the greatest impression of all—the very charming new princess "lines." The princess influence is as everywhere present in daytime clothes as it is in formal evening clothes. From the formal evening angle the message is of regal black velvet gowns cut exquisitely in a la princess, the long unbelted lines of classic simplicity sweeping out into expansive hemlines. The very beautiful moire silks so favored for dinner and dance gowns yield gloriously to princess styling, as do also the fashionable metal cloths and brocades.

With all due recognition of the importance of the princess silhouette in the evening mode, it is in the daytime fashions that the most exciting events are taking place. The youthful, flattering little princess gowns tailored of swanky wool weaves, preferably broadcloth, duvetyne or suede cloth are fashion "firsts" for day wear. The majority of them button down the front from neckline to hemline and they are enlivened with dramatic touches of color—perhaps a banding at the throat and on the sleeves and about the wide hemline of braid in the now-so-much-talked-of coronation colors or in the vivid Tyrolean reds, greens, blues and yellows.

As to the new coats styled along princess lines, you will agree that the accompanying illustration conveys the message more eloquently than words. The models pictured also exploit the use of Persian lamb in ways that are most attractive. The coat to the right goes extreme in the matter of the new princess lines. It is made of beige broadcloth. The buttons and young-looking collar of Persian lamb are typical of the manner in which designers are handling supple and thin fabriclike furs. Developed either in gray or beige there is no smarter coat to be found in all fashions.

The "swing" model to the left of black broadcloth is just the gentle type that makes best dressed women look better dressed. As we all know by his time the all-black costume leads the style parade. Note the binding all about the edges of Persian lamb that is a favorite for treatment this season. To complete the costume—ideal the hat must have a touch (if not all fur) of Persian lamb to match the trimmings.

NEW COAT LINES
By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Prepare for something different in the newer evening coats. The latest models are apt to have a Napoleonic look and there is also a trend to borrow lines from the dignified mannish frock coat and similar cut-away effects with long coat tail at the back. Formal types of town suits are also taking on coats of this new influence. For these black broadcloth is the favored material. The coat pictured is typical of the new movement. It is designed for evening wear and tops in this instance a light gray gown embroidered in rhinestones. The coat is of slate gray velveteen.

CONTRAST OF COLOR CHARACTERIZES HAT

Contrast in color continues to characterize the fall hats. Dashes of bright color on black hats are frequent. Other color contrasts gaining favor in millinery are: Cocoa felt with ivy green faille; dark Araby brown felt with royal blue faille contrast; dark deep green in felt with ribbon in soft rusty wine.

Tailored Suit With Fur

Is Ideal for Autumn Days
If you don't have to worry about a budget and can go ahead and buy an outfit for now and a warmer one for later, a tailored or dressmaker suit with fur is ideal. It may include slim skirt and jacket with fur collar and cuffs or a plain jacket and skirt with fur-trimmed topcoat, swaggar or fitted.

The most popular version of the formalized variety comes in black broadcloth with Persian lamb or silver fox; brown broadcloth with mink or brown Persian. The sports types are finished with wolf, lynx or raccoon collars and are made from the new rough, nubby woolsens.

Utilities Company
 Silver Anniversary

Abilene, December 9.—The West Texas Utilities Company, soon after declaring preferred stock dividends totaling over $109,000, announced it will observe its Silver Anniversary this week, choosing the Christmas season for the event. This pioneer utility organization had its origin 25 years ago 1911—at Abilene. It has since expanded to include 160 communities in 49 counties, stretching across Central West Texas from Kimble County on the south to Dallam County in the Panhandle. General offices are in Abilene; District offices are located in McCamey, San Angelo, Ballinger, Cisco, Stamford, Quanah, Childress and Dalhart, as well as in Abilene. It has provided Hedley with electric power for many years. Publication of an anniversary souvenir in the form of a newspaper magazine section is one of the main features planned by the company to celebrate the birth-year. Over 50,000 copies were sent out to customers and stockholders in the 45,000 square-mile territory. President Price Campbell announced that intensified efforts will be made during the forthcoming years to multiply the uses of electricity, and spread the benefits to more users, declaring that "the greater the benefits" the greater the consumption, and in turn the lower the steps in unit costs of electric service thereby all four interested parties profit (1) this "Land of Opportunity" West Texas territory, (2) the customers, (3) the employees, and (4) the stockholders." The quarter million profits received by the company that "average rates have been lowered 70 percent during the last 15 years never raised." The recent dividend, he said, was declared in the face of government interference and increased taxes, amounting the last three years to 1.7 times—nearly twice as much, for government tax expenditures as has been paid to all shareholders—owners of the company. This preferred stock dividend was made possible by unusual operating economies and intensive new business efforts of the organization. No earnings are yet possible for the common stockholders and none have been for five years. While gross revenue remains 30 percent below 1929's peak figures due to rate reductions and sale of gas property, kilowatt-hour sales have reached a new all time peak during the last 12 months, he announced. Large increased industrial power usage together with some increased domestic service usage was credited with the hike. This dividend, equivalent to quarterly requirements of $1.50 a share, is the first full dividend basis since July, 1933, partly paid then from reserves, and the stock is now $9.50 per share in arrears. Seventy percent of preferred stockholders are West Texans.

Sawdy pulled a moment at his mustache. "No hurry," he said reflectively. "It's early yet for him. If he's our man, he's got a pocketful of money to blow." He thought a minute further. "Look here, Scotch! Tell our boys over there at the bar to string out quiet and meet back of the barn. Watch your chance. Speak around to the hitch rack and get the sorrel down to the barn on an old feed-bill claim. I'll tackle Barney in the saloon and see what chance there is to gettin' him down here. Got a rope ready?"

"I have."

"Vamos!"

McAlpin joined the men at the bar. Sawdy slipped out the back door and, half a block down the alley, walked out into River street and down to the Red Front saloon.

But from the moment the big adventurer stepped out of the back door of one saloon and in at the front door of the other, a curious change took place. He had left Spotts' place sober—Sawdy was in fact a very moderate man. He strode into the Red Front reeling.

The bar was well filled. Sawdy saw at a glance that among the men lined up there were a number of town loafers who never drank except at somebody's expense. When Sawdy caught sight of Rebstock with the loafers around him, inference was swift and correct. Barney had money.

The saloonkeeper, Harry Boland, foxy-eyed and alert at the head of the bar, saw Sawdy stagger in through the green haze; he watched the big fellow closely. Sawdy zigzagged back towards the loafers among whom Barney was holding forth.

Boland, a man of ripe experience in appraising all stages of intoxication, was suspicious, since Henry Sawdy was no drunk; Boland had never before seen him intoxicated. But Sawdy was an artist and did not make the mistake of the actor who plays the sober man trying to appear drunk. Sawdy was the drunken man trying to appear sober.

He greeted Barney gravely, then ordered drinks for everybody in Barney Rebstock's honor. Having lingered over the round, Sawdy cast his eye approvingly upon the thirsty crowd, passed the forefinger of his right hand thoughtfully under each wing of his mustache in turn, drew from a vest pocket a gold double eagle, and made a general proposal.

"I'll match any man here for twenty-dollar gold pieces." It was a fairly safe offer, because he well knew all the loafers put together could not raise twenty dollars. But he had an object in view.

Barney, after some shilly-shallying, accepted the challenge. He asked Boland to lend him a gold piece. When Boland produced a twenty-dollar coin and tossed it out to Barney, it did not take Sawdy long to figure out that Barney had money and that it was in the keeping of the saloonkeeper. Sawdy, notoriously lucky at matching, lost out after several trials; he quit forty dollars to the bad. But he had Barney greatly inflated by his triumph, with the whole room crowding eagerly around the contestants.

After a round of drinks at Barney's charge, Sawdy brought the talk around to a fine-looking sorrel outside at the hitch rack. Barney claimed it. Sawdy wanted to buy it. Barney demurred—it wasn't for sale.

Boland heard the talk. He drew Barney to the rear end of the bar. "Sell it to him, you fool," whispered Boland. "Don't you see he's drunk as a fiddler? You can get twice what the horse is worth."

Thus encouraged, Barney stepped out of doors with Sawdy, followed by a lithe circle of the curious.

The horse was gone. This fact caused no great excitement; Sawdy suggested he had got loose and strayed up or down the street and that they take a look around to find him. The curiosity of the crowd weakened, and they re-entered the saloon, hoping for another chance to get a drink. Sawdy and Barney walked down the street together, wrangling as they went over the mischance and the merits of the missing horse. As the pair passed McAlpin's barn it occurred to Sawdy they had better look in and ask for information.

CHAPTER X

A hanging lantern lighted the barn gangway dimly. Sawdy's call for a hostler was answered by McAlpin himself, who, lantern in hand, ambled in his peculiar gait briskly forward.

"Hello, Mac," exclaimed Sawdy, waving like a tall tree in a number four breeze. "We're looking for Barney's horse." He continued gruffly—"got loose up the street just now—seen anythin' of a stray?"

McAlpin, raising his lantern looked at Rebstock. "Why, yes, I seen a stray," he admitted sulkily.

"Was it a sorrel?" asked Sawdy with some hope.

"It was a sorrel, Sawdy; saddled and bridled. What about it?"

"It's probably Barney's horse. Let's see it. Where is it?"

McAlpin jerked his head back over his shoulder. "In the box stall. Your horse, Barney?"

"Sure, it's my horse."

"Right this way, Barney," returned McAlpin. "Put out your cigars, boys, and come along with me," he added, astern in hand. He scuttled down the gangway. Rebstock and Sawdy after him, stopped at the stall box, hung his lantern on a high gangway hook, unlatched the stall door, and pointed within. "There's your horse, Barney. Maybe I better give him a bit of oats before you go. . . . No? Water then?"

Rebstock and Sawdy had stepped into the stall with McAlpin. The liveryman led the horse out. Rebstock started to follow; Sawdy laid a hand on his shoulder. "Just a minute. I want to talk to you, Barney. We'll join you in a minute, Mac. Get out the black bottle. But leave the lantern."

"What's up?" asked Rebstock, eyeing Sawdy closely, and always suspicious.

Sawdy was standing backed against one side of the box stall. "Barney," he said in confidential fashion, "I'd like to have just a little horse-to-horse talk with you."

"What'd you mean, horse-to-horse talk?" snapped Rebstock.

"Just this: Do you feel just exactly right, leavin' your money with Harry Boland?"

"What do you mean?"

"Do you feel safe? I ask you as man to man, Barney, and an old friend, do you feel safe, leavin' a roll with Boland?"

Barney fumbled mentally. "Why shouldn't I?" he countered bluntly.

"I'd hate to see you, after this trouble you're had, lose your money with Harry Boland," persisted the cowman. "I'll tell you honest—and you can tell the critter himself if you like—I wouldn't never leave five hundred of my money with Harry Boland."

"Never had it to leave, did you?"

"Well, no foolin', Barney, wouldn't do it. So that's what I say, as man to man—keep your money in the bank, not in a dive. Have you got a receipt for your money?"

"No."

"How much money are you leavin' with him?"

"None of your damned business, that's how much. I'm headin' up the street. Get out of the way."

"Don't get sore, Barney. I'm meanin' the best for you. Just wait a minute an' I'll walk up the street with you—gettin' kind of thirsty myself. Did you and lighter, could strike and spring like a wildcat, but he faced a foe who, though larger and heavier, was esteemed among his fellows as one hard to corner. Sawdy held the door side of the stall with his back to the light. He could see Rebstock's eyes flashing green. Rebstock wanted to get close enough to Sawdy to cut him and jump through the door; but he feared the terrific grip of the cowman's fingers on his wrists before he should get the knife into play.

Sawdy carried his gun—Rebstock had left his own with Boland—but he disdained to use it on a partly unarmed man. It was no part of his program to get himself embroiled with him by shooting the criminal; what he and his cronies wanted from Rebstock was information.

It took only an instant for Sawdy to perceive that he could not safely hold his stand in front of the stall door. The lantern light was too uncertain—he could not follow Rebstock's eyes—part of the time he could hardly follow his jumpy steps.

In a moment, both men, one big, the other small, were jumping about the stall like boxers stripped for the ring. But Sawdy, though big, was the fastest on his feet among the cowmen that rode the Gunlock ranges. He had little alcohol aboard, was naturally as quick as a flash, and knew he was facing the most dangerous man with a knife among the Spanish Sinks. Ten youthful years spent among Mexican bandits, together with a lean and lumpy physical make-up, had given Barney Rebstock the name of a mean man with a knife, and Sawdy had no intention of adding to the outlaw's reputation as a killer, if he could help it.

The fight was in the lap of the gods. A misstep or a foot slip might end it any second. Sawdy was hoping his comrades secreted out in the corral would hear the scuffle and come in. But he was just stubborn enough not to call for help.

Barney, enraged at his plight, was breathing hard, and wind was too precious to waste in words. This silent struggle for the one slight advantage that would end the fight went on to the music of jerky breaths and stilted footing. It was soon a question as to whose wind would give out first—Sawdy, heavier, was at a disadvantage in endurance. While they feinted and jumped about, his foot slipped.

Barney saw the opening. He lunged forward. Sawdy instinctively whirled aside and threw up his knee to save his stomach. The savage thrust of Barney's knife caught the calf of his leg. As the cowman went down, his fingers gripped Barney's wrist. With a mere twist of the deadly grip learned long ago in Panhandle knife fights, he snapped like matches the two bones of Barney's forearm.

The wiry outlaw screamed. He was through; the rear gangway doors were flung open, and the confederates came running in from the corral.

From the darkness of the box stall came only the swish of hard breathing and the oaths and cries of Barney. Lefever grasped the ball of the lantern and threw the light rays within.

"Henry!" he yelled in alarm. "What's a matter, pard? What's wrong?" He unlatched the gate of the stall as he called and hastened inside with Scott and Page at his heels. McAlpin ran down from the office. It was a moment before Lefever could make out just what was happening on the floor, as Barney, half choked, writhed under the remorseless grip that closed his windpipe. Sawdy, spread out on his stomach, lay, a huge bulk, with one arm over his antagonist. Only his heavy breathing indicated life. "Henry!" exclaimed Lefever. "What the hell's happened?"

"Nothing's happened yet, John. Look at my leg. Where's his knife?"

"God a-mighty! It's in your leg, Henry."

Lefever started to draw it out. "Hold on, John! Don't touch that till you get a tourniquet on. Who's here?" His heavy bloodshot eyes turned on Scott. "Bob! Look—see whether he's slit an artery or a vein. Hold the lantern there, John."

Scott found blood spurting from the wound. He fashioned a tourniquet from a thong of rawhide.

"Get up and get Carpy, quick!" muttered McAlpin to Page. "What you moonin' about? Henry's had cut. Eup, Ben!"

Turning to the prostrate cowman while Scott twisted the tourniquet, McAlpin, gripping Rebstock, gave orders to Sawdy; the liveryman always took the stage. "Henry!" he shouted, in his excitement. "Lay right where you are. Don't stir till Carpy comes. Why didn't you call for help?" he thundered at Sawdy.

"Ain't never learned how yet," retorted the wounded man majestically.

Carpy reached the box stall ten minutes later.

The doctor held up the lantern. "Hell's bells!" he exclaimed to McAlpin and the hostler. "Don't leave the man lying in this dirt. Henry,—he knelt at Sawdy's head—"what have they been doing? Who stuck you?"

"Doc," declared the notorious back elevator, "you might say I stuck myself. Sew me up and send the bill to my father-in-law after I get married, will you?"

"The Man Who-O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

FRANK E. HAGEN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A CANDIDATE "ANNOUNCES" ON THE morning of April 4, 1900, the New York World printed what has been described as "one of the most curious announcements of a presidential candidacy ever made, one of the most naive declarations ever given out by any man who had even the briefest parts in American politics."

Admiral George Dewey, the "Hero of Manila," had given an interview in which he said in part: "If the American people want me for this high office, I shall be only too willing to serve them. . . . Since studying this subject I am convinced that the office of the President is not such a very difficult one to fill, his duties being mainly to execute the laws of Congress. Should I be chosen for this exalted position I would execute the laws of Congress as faithfully as I have always executed the orders of my superior."

"Not such a difficult office to fill!" indeed! That was a jolt to the hero-worshipping American public. Already it had begun to suspect that its idol had feet of clay. It had gone wild over his victory in the Philippines. Upon his return to America, it gave him the reception such as few conquering heroes had. It had built a triumphal arch in his honor in New York and had raised money to buy a house in Washington for him. Not long after his return, he had taken a second wife who was much younger than he was and he had deeded the gift house to her. That didn't sit so well with his worshippers, nor did the social ambitions of his new wife. Moreover, a matter of religious prejudice was injected into the gossip about the Deweys.

Dewey had been approached on the subject of being a candidate for President and had disclaimed any such ambition. But a "Stop Bryan!" element in the Democratic party had persisted in promoting his candidacy and at last he yielded to the temptation.

Then he made his amazing announcement and the public immediately turned against him. Where he had been previously praised, he was now ridiculed. His candidacy was generally characterized as the "climax to a series of unfortunate mistakes." As quickly as that candidacy had blossomed, it withered. America apparently would elect a military hero President, as witness William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor and Ulysses S. Grant. But, as for a naval hero,—George Dewey was the first, and so far, the last, to find out that a sea dog isn't wanted in the White House!

A STURDY CAMPAIGNER THERE is a physical side to this business of campaigning for the presidency.

In the earlier days, candidates went personally into the hinterlands, making, not one-night stands but brief pauses interrupted to move on to a newer and perhaps more fertile field. It was a tremendous strain on them physically.

Today, with improved travel accommodations and the help of radio, campaigning is not the arduous task of former years, but it has its moments.

William Jennings Bryan, torch bearer of extraordinary record in politics, doubtless is the man who proved the sturdiest campaigner of them all. And even he almost broke down.

Bryan was physically fit and energetic when he first stumped the country in 1896, bearing his cross of gold. He insisted on patronizing the local trains, riding in the day coaches at the outset of his tour.

In that campaign, Bryan delivered as many as 20 speeches a day, a great part of them from the rear of his slow-moving train. In Tennessee, his throat began to balk. When this was known, many curatives were pressed upon him. One bottle of a remedy for hoarseness was tested by Benton McMillen of Tennessee and found to contain a caustic fluid, which might have injured Bryan permanently.

It was toward the end of that campaign that Bryan began to approach exhaustion. He had completed a three-days' series of speeches in Chicago. Despite his splendid physique, the strain began to tell. He was scheduled to travel north of Chicago when his "loop" engagements were ended. But so trying had been the requirements of his tour that it was necessary to delay the start of the party for more than two hours.

Earliest Settlements Newport and Portsmouth share with Providence the distinction of being the earliest settlements. After Roger Williams settled at Providence in 1636 another band of religious "outcasts" from Massachusetts, under the leadership of William Coddington and Anne Hutchinson, settled at Portsmouth in 1638. When dissension broke out in this colony William Coddington and a group moved on to Newport in 1639.
