Weddings

B. E. Stotts and Miss Aline Abernathy were united in marriage Saturday evening at Memphis, the Justice of Peace there performing the ceremony

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Abernathy of Hedley, and has lived here about two years. She attended school at Hedley and Hollis Okla.

The groom has lived at Giles for many years, and has attended school at Giles, Hedley and Memphis.

The couple will make their home at Giles.

Vinoka Holland and Miss Mabel Maness were married Saturday night at the Methodist parsonage in McLean with Rev. Sharpe, pastor, officiating. The bride wore a dress of royal blue and crepe, with grey accessories.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Maness of Paradise, former Hedley residents. She graduated from Hedley high school with the class of 1933 and attended college at Canyon. She has been teaching school at Liberty for the past three years.

The groom is the son of Mrs. J. L. Holland of Hedley. He graduated from the Hedley high school in 1931, and also attended college at Canyon. He is employed by the Coltexo Carbon Co at Pampa.

Both couples are popular among the younger set here, and have a wide circle of friends in this community, who will join the Informer in extending best wishes for a happy future.

It's a Good Start
He who puts his best foot forward stands the best chance of getting there with both feet.
There is always a right way to settle our problems, but most of our troubles are caused by trying to avoid that way.
A strict mother often makes an indulgent grandmother.
Marriage has been defined as when a girl exchanges the attentions of a dozen men for the inattentions of one.
Where the Praise Belongs
A self-made man never ceases to praise his maker.
Anyone who doesn't like his job will stretch a holiday into three.
Hard work is the yeast that raises the dough.
We love "The Star-Spangled Banner" because we can't get too familiar with it. It is too hard to sing for that.

Every man has a rainy corner of his life out of which foul weather proceeds and follows after him.—Jean Paul Richter.

Gas, Gas All the Time, Can't Eat or Sleep

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adierika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."
—Mrs. Jas. Miller.
Adierika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adierika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.
Dr. H. L. Shub, New York, reports "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adierika greatly reduces bacteria and colonic bacilli." Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adierika and see how good you feel. Just one spontaneous relief GAS and constipation. At all Leading Druggists.

Spelling Contest Close

How important in the needs of every individual is the skill of plain writing and spelling. To stimulate this practice, the Interscholastic League of Texas has placed plain writing and spelling in the second group of major literary events, being superceded only by debates. The words the students must learn to spell are taken from three sources: the state spelling leaflet, school text books and readers. From this extensive list of words, a list of one hundred twenty words will be sent to the County Director to be pronounced at the rate of six words per minute to high school students, and those below a hundred word list. All perfect papers will receive an award from the University Interscholastic League.

Those who have been faithfully working in this activity in the grade schools are: Mary Frances Meeks, who made a one hundred percent paper in the try out; Joe Ann Shaw, who missed only one; and Travis Bailey, who missed three. The county representatives will be Mary Frances Meeks and Joe Ann Shaw. We are hoping these girls will bring back a blue ribbon.

The high school contestants were Clay Plunk, who missed eight words; he, however only studied half the time the other candidates studied; Ione Wall, who missed three words; Della McLaughlin missed two; and Jo Wells missed one. Jo Wells and Della McLaughlin are the county representatives. V. A. Hansard and Jessie Plunk are the representatives for the sixth and seventh grades.

Art Appreciation

Children should be given an opportunity to study pictures of great artists of the different nationalities. The child's ideals are patterned after these thoughts which are most constantly in his mind. "Seeking the beautiful", then, is the keynote of art appreciation.

To further the appreciation of art in our public schools, there is conducted each year in the Interscholastic League of the county a picture memory contest. Children of the 4th and 5th grades of public schools are eligible to enter this contest. Throughout the year children are encouraged in the study of art appreciation by the use of pictures to enrich the other studies in the school program. Their use in connection with language, history, or geography tends to increase the child's capacity for art appreciation.

Choral Singing

The one phase of music separated from music memory is the choral singing. Boys and girls are trained to blend their voices together to make them sound as one voice. In this the students learn to work together, with a group. They are taught how to sing the songs expressively, to put feeling into what they are singing, to give the words a meaning, and to leave with their audience some thought or mood.

May we give you
six dollars?

NOT in cash, of course. We're speaking of its equivalent.

But here is something for you to consider: Every year this newspaper brings you at least three outstanding novels in serial form. Purchased as books each would cost not less than $2, making a total expenditure of at least $6 per year.

Like yourself, we could find plenty of uses for that $6. Some member of the family is always in need of a new pair of shoes or some other necessity. But at the same time your requirements for good reading material must be met. By accepting these three novels each year we feel you are treating yourself to real enjoyment, at the same time giving your purse a substantial boost.

These novels are a source of constant pride to us. Every year we select them from the season's most outstanding best sellers, offered in serial form by a large newspaper syndicate organization. We'd like to feel that you—as a subscriber—always look forward to reading the coming installment in the next issue. It gives us a great satisfaction to know that here is another reason why our paper is popular in the home.

You are invited to begin reading our novels now. These regular brief visits to fictionland will prove a delightful interlude from your work-a-day activities. And it will make us happy to know that you are getting enjoyment from them.

THERE'S GOLD IN KENTUCKY'S HILLS

But Woe to Crook Who Tries to Take It Out! Uncle Sam May Eventually Store 11½ Billions at Fort Knox.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

A CROOK has about as much chance of stealing some of the gold out of Uncle Sam's new depository fortress as a tourist has of stealing the Grand Canyon—and as much chance of converting it into ready cash. An armed enemy force would fare little better.

The federal government's storehouse for bullion, which overlooks the military reservation at Fort Knox, Kentucky, 31 miles from Louisville, is perhaps the most impregnable guardian structure ever created by man. And well it might be, for Uncle Sam now owns more than half the gold in all the world! So fast is foreign gold rushing into the United States that despite our already tremendous holdings we are continuing to absorb every year more of the precious yellow metal than the entire world produces in new supplies—more than a billion dollars a year. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and other government money experts have been busy conferring of late in an effort to find something that can be done about it.

The United States today owns more monetary gold (as reckoned by value) than there was in all the world in the boom year 1929; our present holdings approach 11½ billions as compared with the world's supply of 10 billions at that time. At the start of the World War in 1914 we held one billion 600 millions of the total of four billions in the world; by 1929 we were holding four billions. Since the world's currencies have been devalued the world's total now nears 22 billions.

Seek Safety Here.

About four years ago the rapid flight of capital from our shores was shrinking the nation's gold reserves and the banks were in a panicky state. But since the devaluation of the dollar on January 31, 1934, our gold has increased by seven billion 400 millions. To be sure, two billion 800 millions of this was the immediate result of the devaluation.

Since the United States now has a currency which is about the nearest to a stable gold-standard in the world, capital has consistently fled countries of less stable currencies for the safety of American securities and banks. As an example, during 1936 until France went off the gold standard in September, nearly 600 million dollars came into this country from France.

There are several evil aspects of such a condition. As the President has said, much of this influx of foreign capital may do an about-face and leave as quickly as it came. And the enormous supply of gold in the treasury and the excess reserves in the banks could, if stories deep. It is hinted 11½ billions may eventually be stored here.

The only part of the entire building which has not some air of mystery about it is the upper structure, unavoidably open to view. This is 121 feet long and 105 feet wide. It is surrounded by a high steel picket fence which could be electrified to repulse prowlers. There is only one gate in the fence and only one entrance to the building. No one is allowed to enter either who has not official business inside.

Secrecy in the construction was maintained almost fanatically by the company which was awarded the contract, being sworn to do so. Each workman was permitted to work from only a small fragment of the blueprint, which he had to turn in at the end of the day. None was allowed to see the plan as a whole.

Some facts have leaked out, perhaps under the winking eye of the government. It is said, at least, that the underground vault is capable of storing 19 billion dollars worth of gold—nearly all that exists. It is suspended, with spaces 18 inches wide above the roof and below the floor. Varying reports place the walls, floor and ceiling at two or three feet thick. They are said to be reinforced with interlaced steel coils, held together by steel rods running through them. Theory has it that all the concrete could be chipped or blown away, and the steel would still hold.

Soldiers Protect Exterior.

In all of that part of the depository lying underground, there is strong light at all times. Woe be unto the criminal who attempts to soften these hard walls with an acetylene torch! The first lick of trigue from within, but that has not been forgotten. The steel door to the gold vault can be opened only by the co-operation of three men. Three different combinations must be executed before the door will open. The three men know only one combination apiece. Whenever the door is opened other guards are summoned to stand by and see that there is no funny business. Only in the secret files of the Treasury department is the complete combination known; this is necessary because of the possibility of death of one of the three who knows a part of the combination.

Very few persons have a blanket pass to enter the depository. The chief of the depository has, of course, and so have the secretary of the treasury and the President of the United States. No one else, regardless of official position, can enter without the permission of the depository chief.

Thief's Load Heroic.

About the only possibility left, then, of thieves making away with some of the gold, would require a conspiracy which would involve necessarily, just about everyone having anything to do with the depository.

If a thief or a band of thieves had cunningly discovered some way of beating the virtually indestructible walls, the multiple locks, the electrical safety devices, the flood waters and the poisonous gases, he would, upon leaving, have to pass the machine gunners outside, and finally the soldiers of the army post.

But suppose he did all these things. An ounce of gold is worth only $35. If he made away with all the gold he could carry—and this could hardly be more than 100 pounds—he would have only about $50,000 worth. And he would have to be an extremely strong man, for a 100-pound load requires superb effort if it is in the shape of gold bars.

There is no standard, but gold bars for monetary purposes weigh about 400 ounces each. Each is 6¼ inches long, 3½ inches wide and 1½ inches thick.

Once he has the gold out of the depository, the criminal is faced with the perplexing problem of converting it into spendable wealth. He would have to change it to dollars some way or other or it would be of no use to him. The only alternative would be to smuggle it out of the United States and convert it into foreign currency. This in itself would be something of a job, customs officials being what they are.

How Shipments Arrive.

Readers will perhaps recall the great to-do which was made over the first shipment of gold bullion into the new depository January 13. And an interesting spectacle it certainly was. From Philadelphia, 200 million dollars worth of the bullion was sent to Fort Knox aboard a special fourteen-car train. There was approximately 200 tons in the shipment, since, at the present value of $35 an ounce, a million dollars in gold weighs about a ton.

Machine gun muzzles stuck out from the sides of the gold train like quills from an angry porcupine's back. A dummy train went ahead of it down the track to decoy any evil-doers along the right of way. The load was relayed to armored cars and trucks of the mechanized cavalry unit bristling with a ferocity guaranteed to defy the attacks of any pirate bands which might be in waiting. But the entire load was passed through the doors of three-inch steel and lowered in the 20-ton elevators to the subterranean vault without anybody turning a hair. Reporters and photographers were on hand, but were not admitted inside.

A week later the second shipment, this one of about 120 million dollars in bullion, arrived at the Fort Knox stronghold, once more accompanied by Uncle Sam's fighting men and their full equipment, but minus the convoy of photographers. It was safely deposited with the same lack of event as the first shipment.

 ***By VIRGINIA VALE***

IF YOU enjoy yourself most at films that make your hair stand on end, your spine tingle, and your hands grow damp in terror, Gaumont-British has brought over just the ideal evening's entertainment for you. It is "The Woman Alone," with Oscar Homolka and Sylvia Sidney.

If you take my advice, you will see it in the afternoon, so you will have a few hours before bedtime in which to recover from the sheer terror it inspires. But by all means see it, even if it does mean loss of sleep for a few days, for it is one of the smoothest and most gripping pictures you will ever have a chance to see.

Speaking of Sylvia Sidney, she and Ann Dvorak are running a neck and neck—or I should say test and test—race for the leading role in Samuel Goldwyn's film of "Dead End."

Sylvia Sidney

Each girl has made several tests of the big scenes in the play and both are so good, Mr. Goldwyn is having a hard time choosing between them. Hollywood sort of hopes Ann Dvorak will get the role, because Sylvia Sidney has had so many triumphs lately, she really doesn't need another as much as the lovable Ann does.

When Jean Sablon sang on the Rudy Vallee hour recently, all the film scouts were listening. Immediately studio heads telegraphed their New York offices to take a look at him and put him under contract if his appearance was half as romantic as his voice. They reported that he was every studio's dream of a matinee idol, but none have succeeded in getting him under contract yet. Mr. Sablon is twenty-nine years old and has been singing in operettas in Paris ever since he was sixteen.

Everyone who enjoys madcap comedy will be pleased with the forthcoming "Love Is News." Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, and Loreta Young play the leading roles, but there is another member of the cast who may interest you even more. Playing opposite Tyrone Power is a young lady named Carol Tevis who is an old, old friend of yours. Never heard of her? Maybe not under that name, but surely you will recall that you have loved and cherished her for years when I tell you that she used to be the voice of Minnie Mouse. This is not her first appearance before the camera; she played a small part in "Sweepstake Annie."

All Hollywood is rejoicing because W. C. Fields is so far on the road to recovery that he is able to have a few visitors now, walk around the sanitarium grounds, and even think about coming back to Paramount to work. During his illness he became one of the country's leading radio fans. All day and far into the night he was listening, and he thinks that curiosity about the next punch in the Jack Benny-Fred Allen feud helped to keep him alive. His other favorites are Easy Aces and Lum and Abner.

Zasu Pitts has come back from England where she made two pictures, paused in New York a short time and hustled into Hollywood to go to work at RKO. She loved sightseeing in England, particularly as her guide was the mellow-voiced Charles Laughton of innumerable film triumphs, including "Ruggles of Red Gap" in which she appeared. Laughton not only showed her around London, he gave her a pair of exquisite French antique vases for her new home. Incidentally, a radio sponsor is trying to get Zasu to devote all her time to radio programs.

ODDS AND ENDS—John Barrymore looked at himself on the screen and was so shocked that he went off to the desert with a physical trainer and went in for regular hours and exercise. After two weeks he emerged looking healthy and about ten years younger. . . . Gertrude Michael, fully recovered after a long hospital stay, is starting work in "There Goes My Girl," a newspaper story in which Lee Tracy, as usual, plays the star reporter. . . . Paul Muni grew a beard for his part in "The Woman I Love" and was longing for the day when he could shave it off when he got the bad news that he will have to keep it months longer for his role in "The Life of Emile Zola." . . . Shirley Temple has been promoted to the fourth grade, but she can console herself that she would be rated a senior in any singing, dancing or dramatic school.

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DINE

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"Yes, yes. So I understand. And I want to hear more about this affair." The tension in his voice was patent. "Floyd told me that Woodie's death had all the appearance of suicide, but that you do not accept that conclusion. Would it be asking too much if I requested further details with regard to your attitude in this respect?"

"There can be no doubt, sir," Vance returned quietly, "that your nephew was murdered. There are too many indications that contradict the theory of suicide. But it would be inadvisable, as well as unnecessary, to go into details at the moment. Our investigation has just begun. By the way, doctor, may I ask what detained you this afternoon?—I gathered from your son that you usually return home long before this time on Saturdays."

"Of course, you may," the man replied with seeming frankness; but there was a startled look in his eyes as he gazed at Vance. "I had some obscure data to look up before I could continue with an experiment I'm making; and I thought today would be an excellent time to do it, since I close the laboratory and let my assistants go on Saturday afternoons."

"And where were you, doctor," Vance went on, "between the time you left the laboratory and the time of your arrival here?"

"To be quite specific," Professor Garden answered, "I left the university at about two and went to the public library where I remained until half an hour ago. Then I took a cab and came directly home."

"You went to the library alone?" asked Vance.

"Naturally I went alone," the professor answered tartly. "I don't take assistants with me when I have research work to do."

"My dear doctor!" said Vance placatingly. "A serious crime has been committed in your home, and it is essential that we know—as a matter of routine—the whereabouts of the various persons in any way connected with the unfortunate situation."

"I see what you mean." "I am glad you appreciate our difficulties," Vance said, "and I trust you will be equally considerate when I ask you just what was the relationship between you and your nephew?"

The man turned slowly and leaned against the broad sill.

"We were very close," he answered without hesitation or resentment. "Both my wife and I have regarded Woodie almost as a son, since his parents died. He was not a strong person morally, and he needed both spiritual and material assistance. Perhaps because of this fundamental weakness in his nature, we have been more lenient with him than with our own son."

CHAPTER VII

Vance nodded with understanding. "That being the case, I presume that you and Mrs. Garden have provided for young Swift in your wills."

"That is true," Professor Garden answered after a slight pause. "We have, as a matter of fact, made Woodie and our son equal beneficiaries."

"Has your son," asked Vance, "any income of his own?"

"None whatever," the professor told him. "He has made a little money here and there, or various enterprises—largely connected with sports—but he is entirely dependent on the allowance my wife and I give him. It's a very liberal one—too liberal, perhaps, judged by conventional standards. But I see no reason not to indulge the boy. It isn't his fault that he hasn't the temperament for a professional career, and has no flair for business."

"A very liberal attitude, Doctor," Vance murmured, "especially for one who is himself so wholeheartedly devoted to the more serious things of life as you are. . . . But what of Swift? did he have an independent income?"

"His father," the professor explained, "left him a very comfortable amount; but I imagine he squandered it or gambled most of it away."

"There's one more question," Vance continued, "that I'd like to ask you in connection with your will and Mrs. Garden's: were your son and nephew aware of the disposition of the estate?"

"I couldn't say. It's quite possible they were. Neither Mrs. Garden nor I have regarded the subject as a secret. . . . But what, may I ask, — Professor Garden gave Vance a puzzled look—"has this to do with the present terrible situation?"

"I'm sure I haven't the remotest idea," Vance admitted frankly. "I'm merely probin' round in the dark, in the hope of findin' some small ray of light."

Hennessey, the detective whom Heath had ordered to remain on guard below, came lumbering up the passageway to the study.

"There's a guy downstairs, Sergeant," he reported, "who says he's from the telephone company and has got to fix a bell or somethin'."

He fussed around downstairs and couldn't find anything wrong there."

Heath shrugged and looked inquiringly at Vance.

"It's quite all right, Hennessey," Vance told the detective. "Let him come up."

Hennessey saluted half-heartedly and went out.

"You know, Markham," Vance said, "I wish this infernal buzzer hadn't gone out of order at just this time. I abominate coincidences."

"Do you mean," Professor Garden interrupted, "that inter-communicating buzzer between here and the den downstairs? . . . It was working all right this morning—Sneed summoned me to breakfast with it as usual."

"Yes, yes," nodded Vance. "That's just it. It evidently ceased functioning after you had gone out. The nurse discovered it and reported it to Sneed who called up the telephone company."

"It's not of any importance," the professor returned with a lackadaisical gesture of his hand. "It's a convenience, however, and saves many trips up and down the stairs."

"We may as well let the man attend to it, since he's here. It won't disturb us," Vance stood up. "And I say, doctor, would you mind joining the others downstairs? We'll be down presently, too."

The professor inclined his head in silent acquiescence and, without a word, went from the room.

Presently a tall, pale, youthful man appeared at the door to the study. He carried a small black tool kit.

His Eyes Peering Cautiously Into the Garden.

"I was sent here to look over a buzzer," he announced with surly indifference. "I didn't find the trouble downstairs."

"Maybe the difficulty is at this end," suggested Vance. "There's the buzzer behind the desk."

The man went over to it, opened his case of tools and, taking out a flashlight and a small screw-driver, removed the outer shell of the box. Fingering the connecting wires for a moment, he looked up at Vance with an expression of contempt.

"You can't expect the buzzer to work when the wires ain't connected," he commented.

Vance became suddenly interested. Adjusting his monocle, he knelt down and looked at the box.

"They're both disconnected—eh, what?" he remarked.

"Sure they are," the man grumbled. "And it don't look to me like they worked themselves loose, either."

"You think they were deliberately disconnected?" asked Vance.

"Well, it looks that way." The man was busy reconnecting the wires. "Both screws are loose, and the wires aren't bent—they look like they been pulled out."

"That's most interestin'," Vance stood up, and returned the monocle to his pocket meditatively. "It might be, of course. But I can't see why anyone should have done it. . . . Sorry for your trouble."

"Oh, that's all in the day's work," the man muttered, readjusting the cover of the box. "I wish all my jobs were as easy as this one." After a few moments he stood up.

"Let's see if the buzzer will work now. Any one downstairs who'll answer if I press this?"

"I'll take care of that," Heath interposed, and turned to Snitkin.

"Hop down to the den, and if you hear the buzzer down there, ring back."

Snitkin hurried out, and a few moments later, when the button was pressed, there came two short answering signals.

"It's all right now," the repair man said, packing up his tools and going toward the door. "So long." And he disappeared down the passageway.

Vance smoked for a moment in silence, looking down at the floor. "I don't know, Markham. It's dashed mystifyin'. But I have a notion that the same person who fired the shot we heard disconnected those wires. . . ."

Suddenly he stepped to one side behind the draperies and crouched down, his eyes peering out cautiously into the garden. He raised a warning hand to us to keep back out of sight.

"Deuced queer," he said tensely. "That gate in the far end of the fence is slowly opening. . . . Oh, my aunt!" And he swung swiftly into the passageway leading to the garden, beckoning to us to follow.

Vance ran past the covered body of Swift on the settee, and crossed to the garden gate. As he reached it he was confronted by the haughty and majestic figure of Madge Weatherby. Evidently her intention was to step into the garden, but she drew back abruptly when she saw us. Our presence, however, seemed neither to surprise nor to embarrass her.

"Charmin' of you to come up, Miss Weatherby," said Vance. "But I gave orders that everyone was to remain downstairs."

"I had a right to come here!" she returned, drawing herself up with almost regal dignity.

"Ah!" murmured Vance. "Yes, of course. It might be, don't y' know. But would you mind explainin'?"

"Not at all. I wished to ascertain if he could have done it."

"And who," asked Vance, "is this mysterious 'he'?"

"Who?" she repeated, throwing her head back sarcastically. "Why, Cecil Kroon!"

Vance's eyelids drooped, and he studied the woman narrowly for a brief moment. Then he said lightly: "Most interestin'. But let that wait a moment. How did you get up here?"

"That was very simple. I pretended to be faint and told your mention I was going into the butler's pantry to get a drink of water. I went out through the pantry door into the public hallway, came up the main stairs, and out on this terrace."

"But how did you know that you could reach the garden by this route?"

"I didn't know." She smiled enigmatically. "I was merely reconnoitering. I was anxious to prove to myself that Cecil Kroon could have shot poor Woody."

"And are you satisfied that he could have?" asked Vance quietly.

"Oh, yes," the woman replied with bitterness. "Beyond a doubt. I've known for a long time that Cecil would kill him sooner or later. And I was quite certain when you said that Woody had been murdered that Cecil had done it. But I did not understand how he could have gotten up here, after leaving us this afternoon. So I endeavored to find out."

"And why, may I ask," said Vance, "would Mr. Kroon desire to dispose of Swift?"

The woman clasped her hands theatrically against her breast.

"Cecil was jealous,—frightfully jealous. He's madly in love with me. He has tortured me with his attentions. . . . One of her hands went to her forehead in a gesture of desperation. "There has been nothing I could do. And when he learned that I cared for Woody, he became desperate. He threatened me."

Vance's keen regard showed neither the sympathy her pompous rhetoric called for, nor the cynicism which I knew he felt.

"Said—very sad," he murmured. Miss Weatherby jerked her head up and her eyes flashed.

"I came up here to see if it were possible that Cecil could have done this thing. I came up in the cause of justice!"

"Very accommodatin'," Vance's manner had suddenly changed. "We're most appreciative, and all that sort of thing. But I must insist, don't y' know, that you return downstairs and wait there with the others. And you will be so good as to come through the garden and go down the apartment stairs."

He was brutally matter-of-fact as he drew the gate shut and directed the woman to the passageway door. She hesitated a moment and then followed his indicating finger.

When we were back in the study Vance sank into a chair and yawned.

"My word!" he complained. "The case is difficult enough without these amateur theatricals."

Markham, I could see, had been both impressed and puzzled by the incident.

"Maybe it's not all dramatics," he suggested. "The woman made some very definite statements."

"Oh, yes. She would. She's the type," Vance took out his cigarette case. "Definite statements, yes. And misleadin'. Really, y'know, I don't for a moment believe she regards Kroon as the culprit."

"But she certainly has something on her mind," protested Markham. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Sermons in Stone

In the Regional Museum in Aberdeen, Scotland, are many sermons exhibited in stone. These sermons are gathered from all over the British Isles, particularly Scotland, and represent both social and natural history, and are more impressive than textbooks. As an illustration, Carlyle's life is not only exhibited by his library of books, but from scenes associated with his life from his castle visits to his fishing haunts. Axe weapons, windmills and other paraphernalia of man's early history in Scotland are shown as processes of evolution. Geological specimens are shown amid flowers, fishes and birds and give a natural setting to the scene seldom witnessed in completion.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Safe Reducing Diets.

SOME of our overweight friends tell us in a profound manner that they have studied the matter of weight reduction and have come to the conclusion that so far as they are concerned, they are not eating more than they should. They have estimated that for their height and weight (some like to include the idea of age also) they are getting just the proper number of calories or heat units. Thus they feel that if they ate less they would become weak and consequently they might collapse.

Now what these overweight friends fail to remember is that the amount of food—calories or heat units—that their body requires should not be estimated for their present weight but for their proper or ideal weight.

The average adult man doing office or light factory work needs 2,500 to 3,500 calories daily, and the adult woman doing house or office work requires 2,000 to 2,500 calories. This is for a man 5 feet 7 inches tall weighing 150 pounds, and a woman 5 feet 4 inches tall weighing 125 pounds. In most overweight cases it will be found that from 25 to 35 per cent more than these amounts is being taken. "If less than this amount of food is taken daily a demand will be made upon the fat deposited in the body. If the food is properly chosen it is easy to take as little as twelve to fifteen hundred calories and yet have a sufficient amount to eat so that the appetite is fairly well satisfied and the individual does not have a feeling of emptiness."

Safe Menus.

Menus that are safe for overweight persons who want to lose weight are suggested by Prof. E. V. McCollum, Johns Hopkins university:

Breakfast: stewed prunes without sugar; small dish of oatmeal with skim milk; one slice of toast; coffee with small amount of milk.

Lunch: chicken soup, two soda crackers, lettuce and cottage cheese sandwich, one muffin, buttermilk or skim milk.

Dinner: small steak with onions, small serving of mashed potatoes, string beans, lettuce salad, one roll, baked apple.

Breakfast: grape fruit, plain omelet, two slices of crisp, lean bacon, one slice of toast, coffee with milk or a dash of cream.

Lunch: fruit salad, one roll, skim milk.

Dinner: broiled halibut with lemon, mashed potato (small serving), spinach with hard boiled egg, tomato salad, one roll, fruit jello.

Breakfast: orange, poached egg, two slices of lean, crisp bacon, one slice of toast, coffee with a small amount of milk or a dash of cream but no sugar.

Lunch: vegetable soup, two soda crackers, lettuce and tomato salad with a small amount of French dressing containing but a small amount of oil; or salt, pepper and vinegar; one roll with butter (but one cube of butter allowed per day); buttermilk.

Dinner: one small lamb chop, small baked potato, Brussels sprouts, celery and cabbage slaw, one roll, skim milk, grape fruit.

The Mental Patient.

When a patient consults a physician, the physician is not satisfied with what the examination reveals, but asks the patient a number of questions and encourages him to tell all about his symptoms—where the pain is located, whether the pain is sharp or dull, just when it comes on, what seems to make it worse and what seems to relieve or at least make it easier to bear. If it is not a pain then it may be a "heaviness," a discomfort or other feeling that should not be present.

By putting together the objective symptoms, the symptoms he found by the examination—the temperature, the pulse, any sounds that shouldn't be present, any lumps that are not normal, the blood pressure, the richness of the blood in iron or lime or both, and then learning the subjective symptoms from the patient, as mentioned above, the physician makes up his mind just what ailment is present, and treats the patient accordingly.

But this, until recently, has not been the method of examining a mental patient. The usual physical examination was made but if the patient were shy, did not like to talk about his fancies, his difficulties, his desires, he was not encouraged to any extent to tell everything that was on his mind. Today, however, the physical examination is made as usual but the patient is encouraged to tell everything. If he seems to be "side-stepping" or avoiding a certain subject he is kindly but firmly questioned along these subjects.

This means that the patient really does most of the talking and once started will "let loose" and speak about conflicts, difficulties, and other subjects he has heretofore kept hidden.

Easter was a day of great blessing to our people. It pleased the Heavenly Father to pour out his Holy Spirit on us during the praise and testimony meeting and deep conviction settled on the people which resulted in an altar service and the salvation of one soul. We are indeed glad to see people get old time religion in the old time way.

Our Sunday School rendered a beautiful Easter program at the evening service and had a goodly number of people who enjoyed the program very much. Easter was a record attendance for this assembly year. Our subject for next Sunday morning will be the Book of Esther in Symbols, and for the evening hour, Second coming of Christ.

In Memory of Mrs. Bozeman

Another mother has been called home. The death angel took her away. Leaving dear ones sad, 'tis true, Yes, mother has gone to stay.

Loved ones, you'll not see her face on earth. Her footsteps you will not hear again. Perhaps you are beginning to realize her worth. But she has now unit the walks of men. She stayed with you many years. Ministering to your wants and needs. She soothed and wiped away your tears. And for her own and others did kind deeds.

She was a wife tender and true, A mother who loved and cared For her children, and others too, And your joys and sorrows she shared. Now her body lies in the tomb, Silently resting in her new made bed, No more pain and sorrow to bear, And she does not know of the tears you shed.

Your sympathetic friend,
 Mrs. O. R. Culwell
