EVELYN DAW is going to play the lead in her very first picture, and as if that were not enough to make her Hollywood's Cinderella of the week, she tops it by being a girl who can keep a secret.

For six months she has known that she was going to be given a big screen opportunity and she hasn't told a soul. Even so, when she learned that her big chance was to be nothing less than prima donna opposite James Cagney in Grand National's "Something to Sing About" she nearly swooned.

Victor Schertzinger, well-known composer and the motion-picture director who gave Janet Gaynor her first chance and Grace Moore her second, is responsible for Evelyn's opportunity.

Two newcomers to Hollywood are setting Hollywood fashions and everyone is wondering just how far these new trends will go. Sigrid Gurie, the exquisite young Norwegian actress whom United Artists imported to play opposite Gary Cooper in "The Adventures of Marco Polo" goes in for simplicity. Louise Hovick, most famous of strip-tease artists in her burlesque days when she was known as Gypsy Rose Lee, goes in for conservatism. Grown-ups in Hollywood may plead for a chance to watch Robert Taylor or Joan Crawford or Luise Rainer at work, but children unanimously beg to be allowed to visit the Grand National lot. There is a reason, or rather a lot of them. Grand National is rapidly acquiring a zoo made up of the most talented animals in Hollywood.

STRIKES DON'T BOTHER THE SOUTH

Not As Much As the North and East, at Any Rate-Dixie Begins to Enjoy Results of Campaign to Attract Industries.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

CPECTACULAR strikes of reocent months in the North and East, with their accompanying publicity, have largely obscured from the public consciousness the industrial awakening that is taking place in the South. Yet southern industrial leaders feel that labor troubles outside Dixie will soon be reflected in increased southern migrations as industry spreads out to avoid the difficulties rooted in over-concentration.

Fortunately for the South, which in the last 18 months has pressed a determined campaign to attract new manufacturing plants, its compara-tively quiet labor conditions have stood out in serene contrast to the hectic scenes which have filled the northern stage.

Department of Labor reports show that the number of workers involved in strikes steadily increased in both the North and South during the last six months of 1936, the latest period for which official records are available. But the totals are heavily against the North, which suffered 894 strikes, involving 372,495 workers, as compared with 105 strikes, involving 29,134 workers in Dixie. The North had its greatest number of strikes in August and September, with 187 in each month, but 163 strikes in October involved the most workers-95,172. The South had 24 strikes in August, keeping 4,-563 from employment, but 11,596 were kept out by 16 strikes in Oc-

South Is Non-Union.

During the six-month period 40 to 60 per cent of all new strikes occurred in four states-New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Californiawith Illinois and Michigan accounting for a sizeable portion of the remainder. During the same six months only two important strikes took place in the South-one in the Chevrolet and Fisher bodies plants at Atlanta, and one in the plant of the Celanese Corporation of America at Cumberland, Md. Both were settled amicably.

Scarcity of strikes of either "sit-down" or "walkout" variety in the South is easily explained. The South is relatively non-union. With industry less concentrated than in eastern or middle western regions, it is less susceptible to strike epidemics. if "sit-downs" should appear, state | sion of industrial activity." and local governments should profit | Now the South has "gone out after end in a workers' revolt.

Southern states are now making it easier than ever before for industries to migrate to points within their borders. The first year of Dixie's industrial promotion drive—1936—brought $322,000,000 in new plants and equipment, the greatest one-year development in history. Leading the pack were paper companies with investments totaling $60,000,000 in new plants; petroleum refining, with $50,000,000 in new distributing plants and pipelines, and iron and steel manufac-turers with a $53,000,000 expansion program. During the first quarter of 1937 the pace was maintained, with $92,964,000 in industrial and engineering construction contracts awarded.

Prominent among the reasons for this sudden metamorphosis of a civilization that seemed destined to remain permanently agricultural, has been the extension of hydro-electric power to the most remote regions, resulting in an abundance of cheap energy in places which had been without it owing to lack of coal for generating or lack of distribution lines from hydro-electric plants. In addition, the South provided a ready market, lower construction and maintenance costs, and plentiful raw materials. Of it, trial engineer, said, "Nowhere is South can be effectively unionized; there likely to be a greater extenand middle western neighbors in handling them.

Wages and employment in the South have increased more rapidly than in other sections, while hours have not increased as much, and this undoubtedly has some bearing on the absence of strikes. The wage differential between the South and other sections was approximately 33.5 per cent in 1933; by December, 1936, it had narrowed down to 21.9 per cent. Since the southern worker, according to economists, can maintain the same standard of living as his northern counterpart at 20 per cent less cost, the South may Dixie Woos Industry. It is not hard to see why industry is attracted by the opportunity the South affords for decentralization. For instance, Detroit and Akron could be paralyzed in their production of automobiles and rubber if a single plant gets into difficulties with a vertical union; it would then ers to call out workers in all plants in a "sympathy" strike. Leche Revives Louisiana.

Louisiana was one of those which took the lead, capitalizing on underdeveloped natural resources and on new, man-made ones. It stressed the fact that "nowhere in the world is there a greater opportunity for the development of a chemical industry than Louisiana, where salt, sulphur and gas occur in close prox-imity." It advertised and "sold" its 4,700 miles of inland waterways, its 14,000-mile highway system, its 10 trunk-line railroads, its large percentage of native American white population. It aggressively promoted its mineral and timber wealths and its great basic crops of rice, cotton and sugar, supplemented by sweet potatoes, strawberries, soybeans and truck vegetables. Its port be within the power of union lead- of New Orleans was touted as the second largest in the United States,

Political interference with induscentralized industry, would be much 'try in the recent past, ccupled with more difficult to carry out and might | heavy industrial taxes, had prevented much industrial growth in the last decade. But when the new governor, Richard W. Leche, was elected he outlined a plan to revive the state industrially.

The plan, which was adopted, repealed the objectionable license tax on manufacturing establishments; effected a more equitable tax on oil refining; encouraged establishment of a livestock industry by removing the tax on cattle, sheep and hogs; created a board of commerce and industry to court industry; appropriated $100,000 for promotion, and proposed a constitutional amendment giving the governor permission to grant tax exemptions for tenyears to new plants and additions to existing plants.

Effects were not long in coming to notice. Building permits soared; so did department store sales, electric power consumption, manufacturing sales, post office receipts, wholesale grocery sales and other indices. Problems of state finance and legislative problems kept Governor Leche from starting his industrial program with the full gusto he would have liked, but his own personal efforts brought into the state 15 new industries ranging in value from $100,000 to $3,000,000, employing 3,000 in their construction and giving permanent employment to nearly 8,000.

Mississippi Follows Lead.

Florida is wooing industry with a tax exemption law and is granting municipalities permission to erect buildings for manufacturers. Cities are vying with each other to attract new factories, although insisting that they must be engaged in light manufacturing, such as garments, small housewares, etc.-no plant which emits objectionable fumes need apply.

Agricultural Mississippi, eager to replace the lumber mills that have left "ghost towns" along the railroads, has adopted a plan to "balance agriculture with industry," which was sponsored by Gov. Hugh White. In addition to tax exemption for five years, it offers free factories and free factory sites which, if the manufacturer maintains a specified payroll for a stated period of years, become his property in most cases. The factories are built by the municipalities in which they are situated, the cities issuing bonds to cover the cost.

Other states are proceeding along the same lines. Alabama offers ten years of freedom from taxes. Maryland's countries may grant permanent tax exemption on manufacturing machinery. Arkansas, with a population 70 per cent rural, has thrown its working cap in the industrial ring with a large fund to advertise the state's natural resources and manufacturing advantages. North Carolina has just appropriated $250,000 to herald its attraction as a field for industrial expansion. Texas is now considering an appropriation of $1,000,000 a year for the next five years to advertise the state's resources.

Southern Markets Grow. To date efforts have been concentrated upon attracting industries which could process the raw materials of the various regions. Louisiana, with its thousands of acres of rolling pine land, now leads the South in the securing of paper and pulp factories-largely a new southern activity. The textile industry has moved almost en masse to the Carolinas; the South now produces 52 per cent of the nation's textiles, while New England, for more than a century the seat of this industry, now produces only 38 per cent.

As industrial payrolls provide a constant stream of wealth for southern workers, the markets below the Mason and Dixon line are constantly gaining in importance.

Advised opinion of many industrialists and economists is that the North and East, as well as the South, will benefit from the greater prosperity of Dixie, with each section of the country supplying the products it can best produce.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL By Carter Field FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

nouse and senate are receiving an stonishing number of letters from lifelong G. O. P. voters insisting that practical expediency dictates the breaking up of the Republican party as a national institution.

The writers almost without exception take the ground that the important thing, both from their own selfish interests—which they generally construe as the good of the country-and the carrying out of the old Republican economic ideals, is not only to prevent the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1940 but to prevent the election of any one chosen by Roosevelt who will carry on the New Deal policies.

The only thing that holds the Democratic party together at the moment, many of these writers insist, is the presence on the field of battle of their enemy, the Republican par-Some of them make the point that the old truism that there are more Republicans in the United States than Democrats—that this is a Republican country—is no longer accurate. A new generation has come of voting age, which has no party ties rooted in the old tradition, they insist, and apparently a very large majority of the younger folks have very definitely affiliated with the Democratic party.

Even the often made statement by Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton about the tremendous number of Republicans who voted in the last election, nearly seven-teen million, is the bunk, many of these writers go out of their way to assert. They point to the fact that a tremendous number of these "Republican" votes were actually cast by Democrats who have no love whatever for the Republican party, its traditions or leaders. They instance Alfred E. Smith, John W. Davis, Bainbridge Colby, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, and though he never made a public statement that he was going to vote for Alfred M. Landon, many writers also mention Newton D. Baker.

Would Scrap G. O. P.

There is no way of telling how many Democrats, unhappy a b o u t the New Deal tendencies of their party, voted for Landon. But every one of the folks writing in recently and asking that the Republican party be scrapped in order to open a clear road for an effective conservative opposition to the New Deal seems to think a great many.

Yet the opposition to being classed as a Republican, or to giving aid and comfort to a revival of the G. O. P., the writers point out, deterred literally millions of Democrats from jumping party lines. Many of the letters mention such well-known Democratic leaders as Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, Millard E. Tydings of Maryland, Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina, and Walter F. George of Georgia as among the Democrats who supported Roosevelt, some tepidly and some strongly, merely because he was the Democratic nominee, running against a Republican. Without the national Republican party opposition to hold it together, many of these letter writers believe, the Democratic party would almost immediately split into two parties, giving the country the conservative and progressive division on economic lines to which it is entitled, and getting rid of bygone issues, labels and prejudices which should no longer be permitted to be-cloud our presidential campaigns.

Holding Corporations

Not many votes are involved, so there is no telling what congress will do about it, but there are a great many individuals on Capitol Hill who think the personal holding corporation, in many instances, is perfectly moral and justified. The best demonstration is one that did not happen. But let us take the case of the author of "Gone With the Wind."That book came out just over a year ago. It is generally estimated to have earned one million dollars for Margaret Mitchell. All of that million was earned in two calendar years, most of it in the first. And the government will take approximately half of that!

Now no one would object to the government taking fifty per cent of an income of half a million dollars a year-if the income came every year-if it was interest on invested capital or earnings from a going

But here is a case where an author, certainly from a comparative standpoint, eked out an existence during the ten or fifteen years in which this major opus was under construction. Furthermore, while this statement may be confounded later, most authors think it is extremely unlikely that the writer of 'Gone With the Wind" will produce another highly profitable work. As a matter of fact, there is no indication to date that she will attempt it.

Now to apply the corporation idea. If Margaret Mitchell had incorporated, the government would have taken fifteen per cent of that one mil-

Washington. - Republicans in the | lion dollars-the normal levy on corporation earnings. The rest could have remained in the surplus, savewhat part she drew out for spending. On that part drawn out in dividends she would have to pay in come taxes, of course, but she would escape the enormous sur-taxes that an income of half a million dollars rates. She could distribute the taxes over the rest of her natural life, and the government would be lucky to get $200,000 instead of the $500,000 it gets with Margaret Mitchell unincorporated.

How It Works

The point here is that there are a great many people who have brief periods of very high earning power, sometimes coming toward the end of a lifetime, and sometimes very early. It is just possible, for example, that Shirley Temple will never earn a dollar after she is ten years old. Or nine for that matter.

Often a comedian or more serious actor will struggle in comparative poverty for twenty years, as did. the late Frank Bacon, and then have a wonderful three or four years. Sometimes it is only one

There are other forms of occupation where the same thing works out, with plenty of ups and downs, mostly downs. But the only way to prevent the government taking half or more of the profits in good years, although not helping out in bad years, is to incorporate.

To hear the testimony of the government experts before the house committee, and to read the newspaper articles about their testimony, the casual reader might assume that the person thus incorporating actually dodged all taxes in that particular directon. Let's look at what the government actually does to corporations!

In the first place, it takes fifteen per cent of all net earnings. That is a fair sized tax in itself, more than one dollar out of eight. In the second place, the corporation pays two additional taxes to the federal government, on its capital stock and on excess profits. In the third place, when the corporation pays out dividends, they become the income of the person receiving them, and are subject to all income taxes, even including the normal tax, from which previous to the last March returns they were exempt. May Be Long Session

Only a surprise move by President. Roosevelt, which may come but is not expected, can prevent the present session of congress running into-October.

Actually congress can adjourn within two weeks of any Tuesday on which the President lets the leaders know that he is willing for certain legislation to go over until next session. This legislation includes of course the Supreme court. enlargement measure.

The legislation which would have to be put over until next session. also includes much of the government reorganization proposal made by the President. Mr. Roosevelt can. get part of this without any delay whatever, notably the half dozen additional secretaries he wants. But. certain phases of it would be fought. to the death by senators and representatives, some of whom are in entire sympathy with the President. on most of his proposals.

But if Mr. Roosevelt should take the advice given him by Vice President John N. Garner before that astute gentleman left for Texas, it. would amaze every one how quickly congress could clean up its odds and ends, clear its calendars of everything to which there is no real. opposition, and scatter.

It has been apparent to every one with the slightest interest in looking beneath the surface that congress has been stalling for months.

Time Not Wasted

But meanwhile the time is not being entirely wasted. There are reactions from the constituents of the congressmen. They gradually find out enough about home sentiment to determine whether they dare support or oppose certains measures. They can appraise the value of trades they contemplate making.

This year, however, this watchful waiting process has come pretty near to breaking all records, largely because of the two major pieces of legislation. One of them, the Supreme court proposal, is a major issue. The other, government reorganization, involves personal politics. And while they have hung back onthis, with the senate adjourning for British week-ends, and meeting only a few hours-sometimes minuteswhen it does actually convene, the labor issue has become more important than anything actually on the agenda.

In holding congress in session to break the filibuster that is certain if the President pushes his Supreme court plan, Mr. Roosevelt is acting against the advice of most of his friends and party colleagues.

SYNOPSIS

Preparing to close her summer home and spend the winter in France with a great-aunt, Anne Vincent, a middle-aged widow, accedes to the pleas of her adopted daughter Rachel, twenty and pretty, that she tell her about her real mother. Anne, an unselfish, understanding soul, finds the task difficult. Rachel learns that her real mother was beautiful eighteen-year-old Elinor Malloy, deserted by her young husband, before Rachel's birth. He was killed in the World war. In desperate financial straits, Elinor deserted by her young husband, before' Rachel's birth. He was killed in the World war. In desperate financial straits, Elinor had agreed to Rachel's adoption at birth by Anne, whose own baby had died. Elinor subsequently had married Peter Cayne, a wealthy New York business man, and had a son. To soften the story for Rachel, Anne omits telling her that her mother had been callous and selfish. Rachel goes fishing with Bob Eddis, a local boy who runs a library and does wood carving. She refuses his plea to stay in Rockboro and marry him instead of going to New York to look for a job. Anne decides that it is time for Rachel to learn more self-dependence. Rachel makes arrangements to stay in New York with "Pink," a keen, vivacious girl absorbed in her job. Anne leaves provision for Rachel's finances in case of need and leaves for Europe. Rachel, bent on seeing her real mother, looks up Elinor Cayne's number. Rachel learns the Caynes are not yet in town. Pink takes Rachel to dinner at Tom and Rhoda Steele's where she meets "Oliver Land, a shabby genteel young man out of work who suggests that she apply for a job as a photographer's model for advertising illustrations. He agrees to introduce her to the head of an agency. Rachel is not entirely happy with Pink Matthews. Her desire to see Ellnor Cayne Rachel is not entirely happy with Pink Matthews. Her desire to see Elinor Cayne increases. Through Oliver Land she meets increases. Through Oliver Land she meets Louis Vinco, is hired as a photographer's model and succeeds on her first assignment posing for furniture advertising. Oliver makes her feel her indebtedness to him. On an assignment, Rachel meets Curt Eiton, a young friend of Vnco's. She learns that he is a country newspaper man spending a year in New York. For experience he takes a number of different jobs, planning to return home later to edit the paper his father left. That evening she receives flowers from him. She phones Mrs. Cayne's home but is rebuffed because she will not give her name. not give her name.

"I can get almost anyone for anything, but this stumps me. It's a ticklish proposition, the girl's got to act the part perfectly and not let the other servants get on to her -don't lose any time, Miss Vincent, Rachel seized the card and her make-up bag and turned to go, but Curt ran after her. "Will you meet me for a bite of lunch before we go to the auto place? Where we had tea yesterday is handy—!'ll be waiting.'

Rachel nodded and almost ran out, for Vinco was looking at her sternly. He didn't, she knew, encourage friendships between his men and girl models, saying he'd prefer they hated one another. But she supposed Curt, as an old friend, had certain privileges.

After work he was waiting, as he had said he would be. "You were awfully nice to come," he said. "I went round to Vinco's early hoping I'd see you, but I didn't know I had such a friend in that photographer.

A swell guy, that."
"I was glad to come," said Ra-"I've been so bothered and worried about such a lot of things I need to be with somebody who can get along as easily as you do. But listen here—we must go Dutch on this lunch. We're both working people, it's not fair to-to-"

'To what? I asked you to lunch, didn't I? And I'm going to pay for

"But I mean-that's just a social convention-it really isn't fair." "I'll discuss that with you some other time. My Lord, do I look like the kind who invites a girl to lunch and tells her to pay her check? Don't annoy me, Rachel. You don't mind if I call you Rachel, do you? Because I'm going to do it whether you mind it or not. Here, what are you going to eat? Let's have minute steak and some mixed salad, and please don't tell me you're dieting, for if you do I'll order the biggest baked potato in the world and force it down your throat.'

"I'd like a minute steak. I didn't get any breakfast to speak of this morning and I'm worn out wearing

"That's the girl." He gave the order and put his elbows on the table and looked over at her straight. "What's bothering you? A man?"

"Among other things, but he's not the chief bother. Don't let's talk about it, I might cry, I feel so sorry for myself."

"All right. But if I can do anything, here I am and I mean it."

You can't do anything.' "No, it's an eternal truth of this crazy world that we've got to get ourselves out of our own jams." He dropped the subject there. "Vinco was telling me a queer thing this morning when you came in. One of the big private detectives asked him to find a girl who could go into a rich family as a maid to in it. It's this way. Somebody in the house is stealing the missis's but cleveh!" get some dope on what's going on jewelry-a piece now and then, things she doesn't wear much, and occasionally a piece of silver goes, a cigarette box or a candy dish. Her husband wants to plant a servant in the house without his wife knowing anything about it; it seems she's nervous and not very well and land it—" he thought a woman would be best. "Don't he thought a woman would be best. "Don't let's worry about that. sorbs it, and converts it into celluit straight in de eyes, 'specially if Gee, I wish they wanted a man. Will you speak to Vinco right away, lar substance. Meanwhile, a white it's a mule."

I'd hop to it like nobody's business. | today? Wouldn't I make a swanky butler!" He grinned over at her ingratiating-"Modom, the carriage waits. 'Ave a drop more Scotch, milord!"

"Who are these people?" asked Rachel, idly. "D'you know their name?"

"As a matter of fact, I do, though I don't suppose Vinco would want it noised about. They're fairly hot society numbers, very Park avenue and so forth. The old man's got plenty of what it takes, apparently. Cayne is the name—Peter H. Cayne

-why, what's the matter-"
"Say that again," cried Rachel.
"Say that name again!" Curt looked at her in surprise and did not answer, so she repeated her question: "What was their name-not Peter Holbrook Caynethe people who live at six-fortythree Park avenue?" "Do you know them?" asked

Curt, warily. "No, but I know of them-my mother knows them, at least she used to know Mrs. Cayne."

"Damn it, I ought to be kicked. As if I wasn't old enough never to mention names!" Rachel thought fast. She must convince him, but tell nothing. "Don't worry, it's all right. I was just surprised - mother was telling me something about Mrs. Cayne only a little while before she sailed. I won't say anything, hon-"I talk too much," said Curt Rachel laughed. "Please don't worry. I'll never mention it to a soul. But-I was just thinking-"

She wondered what was the best way to approach the sudden thrill-

"So beautiful girls do think! News Dead," He Said.

ing idea that had seized her. "Do you believe-do you think I might take the detective job?"

"You! Not a chance! You couldn't make up as a housemaid to save your life! And you-" Curt shook his head and repeated, "Not a chance."

"Look here, suppose I tell you something. I'm not so crazy about this modeling stuff and the girl I live with is pretty well fed up with me and I certainly am with herand-and there's a man who, that is, I'd just as soon make it impossible for him to see me-and this would be so exciting! Be sensible. You thought you'd be a good butler, why wouldn't I be a good maid? I know all about housework. Speak to Mr. Vinco, won't you?"

It was plain that this plea moved Curt, but he hesitated.

"Yes-but-they'll have to have girl who knows something about detective business, they wouldn't take a greenhorn who's simply looking for a little excite-

"You could put it up to Mr. Vinco and let them do the deciding.' "He won't want to lose you as model. "He probably wouldn't mind, temporarily. And he loves feeling he's important and can get anything for anyone who asks him, you know it."

"What makes you so anxious? You act as if it was jam on the cake. If it's this fellow that's bothering you, I can tell you a dozen catch and hold decaying leaves and ways to settle him without going to all this trouble."

"How very very clever we are

"Don't be fresh to your kind ol" Unc' Curtis. I suppose it would be starts in the coconut. A sweet, white sort of fun for you, a job like that. I tell you, I'll speak to Vinco, I'll say I spilled the beans to you and you want to try it. I don't think there's a Chinaman's chance you'll today? Don't dawdle, please, or somebody else will grab it." Curt looked at his watch. "You order dessert and I'll go phone to Vinco this minute."

"But what do you want for dessert?" "Anything you like, only I want a large cup of coffee."

Rachel ordered baked apples and the coffee and then waited, rigid with suspense, until Curt came "You were gone an age! What did he say, hurry, tell me?" she begged.

"He thinks you're crazy, but he's going to send for the head of the detective agency and talk it over with him. His name's Terriss, by the way, and a very good egg; runs the most reputable business in the city, won't touch scandar-sneed stuff. Baked apples, swell! For such a flossy-looking girl you have nice homely tastes. And listen, we've got to hurry or we'll be late at the auto shop. "When will I see the detective agency man?" 'Tomorrow morning, half past nine, at Vinco's. And Vinco says he wants you to finish up your next appointments for him, provided, of course, you land the other job." "Oh, but I will, of course. Oh, it was awfully kind of you, Curt. I'm so grateful. Wait till you see what happens before you go too grateful. I'm not a bit sure I ought to have done this. You may come up against something pretty disagreeable, but if you do and you need any co-operation, or connivance, you just remember that I'm on the doormat outside waiting for the signal. Now I'll pay the check and we'll push off." "I do wish you'd let me pay for me with such remarks." They had to work late, for the photographer was grimly set on making no mistakes this time, so there were takes and retakes and adjustments and checking up on each detail between poses. She had to change from the light sport costume needed in the picture to her own clothes, but Curt waited for her and was there in the shadows of the studio entrance. "You poor kid, I know you're dead," he said. "I've got to dash uptown or I'd take you home. Are you still set on this housemaid stunt?"

"Yes, at least I'm going to find out what it's all about." "Then if you don't mind I'll come round in the morning and join the conference. I want to know what it's all about, too, I feel responsible for getting you into it." "Oh, will you? That makes me feel heaps better-thanks ever so much, Curt! You're a lamb!" By the time she reached home she wasn't so tired, expectation had begun to come back and with Curt to stand by she would be surer of herself. The flat was empty, Pink had left a note saying she had gone to dinner with a man from her office, so Rachel put on house pajamas and foraged for bread and milk and fruit in agreeable solitude. Just as she sat down to eat the doorbell trilled.

"Oh damn!" she said aloud. 'Wouldn't you know that would happen!" It was Genie Moore from across the hall and Genie was in a great rush. "Isn't Pink here?" she asked. "What a nuisance! I wanted to borrow a hat, I've got a swanky date for the theater and Harlem and he said specially not to dress, this frock is all right but I haven't got a thing to put on my head that looks festive or eveningish."

"Neither have I," said Rachel, looking coldly at Genie's selfish blonde prettiness, "and I can't lend Pink's things when she's not here." "Oh, that's all right. I'll take what I want. Pink won't mind." She walked into Pink's room and began to rummage, coming out a moment later with Pink's new white beret. "This is just what I want, how lucky she didn't wear it.' "Lucky for who?" asked Rachel. Genie laughed. "Lucky for me, sweetness and light. Tell Pink I'll bring it back in the morning." "You can tell her yourself. Pink's not crazy about lending her hats."

"She won't mind," said Genie, undisturbed. "I'll tell her."

'That'll start another row with Pink, I suppose," thought Rachel, returning to her bread and milk. "She'll think I did it purposely be cause of my evening dress. A good thing I'm getting out of here. Genie's a horrid little moocher."

She ate slowly, thinking of the morning and her own mother, and with this came thoughts of Anne. How would Anne feel about all this, wouldn't it seem as if Rachel had been ungrateful and deceitful? Anne wouldn't want her to go into Elinor Cayne's house, Rachel was sure of that, and she began to wonder if she could avoid telling Anne. But that would be shameful, cowardly. A second ring of the bell startled

"I suppose Genie's come back for slippers and an evening coat," she thought, as she opened the door. But Genie was not there, it was someone below at the street entrance who was ringing. Rachel pressed the electric opening button and then went out on the landing to discover Oliver Land coming up.

"I was near by and thought I'd take a chance," he said. "It's been a grief's age since I saw you. Where's the girl friend-out? That's good, I always have a feeling she'd like to spit on me. Those are smart pajamas, very becoming - and look at you, sitting here alone eating bread and milk, funny!"
"What's funny about it?"

"The most beautiful model in the city ought to be out whooping it up.' His face was white, his queer gray eyes were bright and malicious and he didn't seem quite steady on his

"I'm hungry, too," said Oliver, "it's quite a while since I ate." He sat down suddenly, folding up, thin and broken.

Rachel was terrified, but she ran to his aid, pulled him back in the chair, held salts under his nose and as he stirred and coughed, she brought a glass of sherry, the only liquor in the apartment, and this she dribbled into his slack, halfopen mouth. As she did it she noticed how very thin he was, his collar loose on his neck, his arm a bone in a flapping sleeve. "He's starving," she thought. "He's starving! Oh, this is dreadful, dreadful!" She tried to lift him farther up in the chair, but he came alive and pushed her away.

"Sorry," he murmured apologetically, "I'm making a nuisance of myself. Don't bother-"

"Lie down on the sofa," begged Rachel, "I'll help you. Come along, it'll be better for you to lie down and I'll get you something hot to drink.

He staggered to his feet and with Rachel helping managed the half dozen steps to the sofa. "It's my head," he whispered, "it's queer." She left him and ran to the kitchen. Thank goodness she hadn't used all the milk. As soon as it was hot enough she brought him a cup of it. "Now try to drink this," she coaxed, "it's just what you need. Wait, let me hold it." She supported his head and he sipped the milk.

PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS — eight extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. This counteracts internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

> YOU GET EXT PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES - because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING — because the tread is scientifically

YOU GET LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread.

DON'T RISK YOUR LIFE ON SMOOTH WORN TIRES! DO YOU KNOW

THAT last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children? THAT a million more were injured? THAT more than 40,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding due to unsafe tires?
